Provided, That the said superintendent of Indian schools shall spend at least one-half of each year, to be directed by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in the field in the actual inspection of Indian schools; and he shall make full reports of the condition of all such schools, and especially of the schools on Indian reservations, to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, together with suggestions for the improvement of such schools.

Mr. ROGERS. I reserve the point of order upon that amendment.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I desire to be heard briefly, and then the question of the point of order can be made.

Mr. Chairman, the history of this office of superintendent of Indian schools is very peculiar. Its duties have never been defined except as defined by a paragraph in the Indian appropriation bill in the Forty-seventh Congress. There will be found upon page 70 of volume 22 of the Statutes at Large this paragraph, which first created this office, and which is the only definition of the duties of this office that has ever been made in any law or statute. It is this:

The President is authorized to appoint a person to inspect all Indian schools, who is hereby required to report a plan for carrying into effect, in the most economical and efficient manner, all existing treaty stipulations for the education of Indians, with careful estimates of the cost thereof; also a plan and estimates for educating all Indian youths for whom no such provision now exists, and estimates of what sums can be saved from existing expenditures for Indian support by the adoption of such plan, whose compensation shall not exceed $3,000, which sum is hereby appropriated for that purpose, and also a further sum of $1,500 for his necessary traveling expenses.

That was in the first session of the Forty-seventh Csngress.

Mr. PEEL. If the gentleman from Michigan will excuse me, a point of order has been made, and I think perhaps that had better be disposed of before he proceeds.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I think if the gentleman will listen to me the point of order will not be insisted on. The point is reserved.

Mr. PEEL. I know the duties of superintendent of Indian schools are not defined as well as they might be, but there is an effort here to determine what shall be the duties.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Mr. Chairman, some of the most valuable legislation we have has been put upon appropriation bills in this way, even when subject to a point of order. In the second session of the Forty-seventh Congress, Mr. Chairman, there is no other definition of those duties. I find an appropriation for a superintendent of Indian schools, $3,000, and following that I find in each successive session since the Forty-seventh Congress a simple appropriation in a single line, $3,000 for a superintendent of Indian schools.

I do not find that the title of superintendent of Indian schools has ever been created or defined by any other statute than that which I have just read. It says:

Provided, That the President shall appoint a person to inspect all Indian schools.

Upon that slender basis the present Indian school system has been built. We have a so-called Indian superintendent of Indian schools, whose duty has never been defined, although I did again in the Forty-eighth Congress attempt to have it defined, but it was ruled out on a point of order. Instead of doing the work he should do—go into the field and inspect the schools, and see that the education of the Indians is built up—the so-called superintendent, instead of traveling through the reservations and inspecting these schools, sits in his office here at Washington and runs a bureau.

Now, the purpose of my amendment to the bill is simply this: To restore the office of superintendent of Indian schools to its original purpose, and make him what the law originally made him—an inspector of Indian schools—and to require that at least one-half of each year, under the direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, he shall actually go into the field and inspect the schools and report upon their condition, and especially upon the condition of the schools upon the Indian reservations.

Now, I find by looking over this bill that there is a good deal subject to a point of order. This item may be subject to a point of order, but I think not. I do not really think it is subject to a point of order, but that it is in order. At any rate, under that law, which is the only statute defining the duties of that office, he should not be confined to his office in the city of Washington, but he should do what the law originally intended that he should do—go out into the field, go on to the Indian reservations and make reports on these schools, in order that we may have information upon which we may intelligently legislate.

I do not desire to consume time, but I think this is a sensible and reasonable amendment, against which the point of order ought not to be made.

Mr. PEEL. I would suggest to the gentleman from Michigan that it would be better to withdraw this amendment and withhold it until we get to the last section of the bill, which provides for the superintendent. This merely provides the salary. His amendment could go in better at the last section of the bill, where it is endeavored to define the duties of the superintendent.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I did not know that there was a section defining the duties of the superintendent.

Mr. PEEL. There is in the last section of the bill.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Then I will withdraw the amendment for the present. I did not observe that the duties of the superintendent had been defined.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee rose informally to receive a message from the Senate, and Mr. McMILLIN took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that body had passed bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 285) for the relief of the legal representatives of H. Corths, deceased;

A bill (H. R. 329) for the relief of Chambers & Brown;

A bill (H. R. 565) for the relief of Mary A. Howse and Lula H. Howse;

A bill (H. R. 766) for the relief of H. L. Newman;

A bill (H. R. 948) for the relief of William H. Tabbarrah; and

A bill (H. R. 4489) for the relief of J. M. Hogan.

It also announced the Senate had passed a bill and joint resolution of the following titles; in which concurrence was requested:

A bill (S. 508) to empower Robert Adger and others to bring suit in the Court of Claims for rent alleged to be due them; and Joint resolution (S. R. 83) for the relief of the Venezuela Steam Transportation Company.

It also announced that the Senate had passed the bill of the House (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery, with amendments; requested a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. PADDOCK, Mr. COCKRELL, and Mr. BERRY.

It further announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the House (H. R. 6896) to require the United States circuit and district judges to instruct the jury in writing in certain cases, with amendments; requested a conference on the bill and amendments, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. WILSON of Iowa, Mr. EVARTS, and Mr. VEST.

It further announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the House (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River in the State of Louisiana, with amendments; requested a conference on the bill and amendments, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. PLUMB, Mr. TELLER, and Mr. WALTHALL.

It also announced that the Senate had passed the bill (H. R. 11165) for the relief of John Gray with amendments, requested a conference on the bill and amendments, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. DAVIS, Mr. STEWART, and Mr. BATE.

It further announced that the Senate had passed the bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883, with amendments, requested a conference on the bill and amendments, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. HARRIS, Mr. SPOONER, and Mr. FARWELL.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay the expenses of transportation of two hundred and seventy-four Creek Indians at $30 each, and subsistence for twelve months at $25 each for one hundred and sixty Creek Indians, said Indians being named and described in a list appended to the letter of A. B. Upshaw, Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs, dated 19th of June, 1888, set forth in Executive Document No. 198, Fiftieth Congress, first session, and being entitled to the sums per capita due them under the treaty of ——, 1826, and the treaty of ——, 1832, with the Creek Indians, the sum of $12,220, to be paid to the person authorized to receive and pay out the same to the persons entitled thereto by the legislature of the Creek tribe of Indians; and said sum shall be distributed only to the Indians named in said list, or their legal representatives, and the payment under this act shall be a full and final discharge of the United States from all further liability to any Indian of said tribe on account of any claim for transportation or subsistence under said treaties or under any act of Congress relating to said treaties.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the gentleman having charge of this bill to the fact that there are certain blanks in this paragraph.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Before that question is discussed I want to reserve a point of order upon the paragraph.

Mr. PEEL. The paragraph does not state the month. That is the only omission.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Arkansas from what fund this appropriation comes, whether it is from a fund now due to this tribe of Indians.

Mr. PEEL. No; it grows out of treaty obligations, and it would not be subject to the point of order.

Mr. MCMILLIN. That is what I wanted to know, whether we would be under any obligation to pay it under existing treaties?

Mr. PEEL. Oh, yes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope there will be an explanation of this item, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. PEEL. I will explain it. Under the treaties with these Indians, and also with the Cherokees, the Government bound itself to remove them to the West. It agreed not only to remove them, but also to subsist them for twelve months after they got there.

Mr. HOLMAN. What treaty was that?

Mr. PERKINS. The treaty of 1826, and also the treaty of 1832.

Mr. PEEL. Yes. The Government further agreed that if any of these Indians should choose to remove and subsist themselves a certain amount of money should be allowed to them in lieu of the expense which the Government would have incurred in removing and subsisting them. This appropriation is to pay those who did remove themselves and subsist themselves for twelve months, as ascertained by the Commissioner.

Mr. HOLMAN. How did it happen that so long a time elapsed before this item was presented?

Mr. PEEL. I do not know that I am able to answer that. This matter has been pending quite a while. The Cherokees had a similar appropriation years ago, and under that a number of them were removed and the balance was covered back into the Treasury, and we have had to reappropriate for that. I can not say exactly why the Creeks have been so long about getting the amount due them, but any man who is familiar with the history of our legislation here will not think it very strange that a claim, no matter how meritorious, has been a good while in securing attention.

Mr. MILLS. How long are these treaties to continue by which we are bound to pay these Indians annuities?

Mr. PEEL. There is no limitation in this case at all. The gentleman will notice that generally the treaties run for twenty or thirty years; that is, there are twenty or thirty installments, and the bill making the appropriation generally specifies that this is the twentieth or the twenty-first or the twenty-second installment, or whatever the number may be, but in this treaty there is no such limitation. The Government obligated itself to remove these people and subsist them for twelve months, as I have stated, with a further proviso that if any individual Indians saw fit to remove themselves and subsist themselves for twelve months, there should be a commutation allowed them in money instead of the expense which the Government would have incurred in removing and subsisting them.

Mr. PERKINS. If the gentleman from Arkansas will permit a suggestion, in June last the Senate of the United States called upon the Interior Department for information concerning these Indians, and in response to that resolution a statement giving the full history of this case was transmitted to the Senate, and we have it here now as an executive document. The letter of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs is quite brief, and as it gives clearly the history of the transaction, if any gentleman desires I think it would be well to have it read.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope that letter will be read.

The letter was read, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, D. C., June 19, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to be in receipt, by your reference of the 7th instant for early report, of the following Senate resolution, dated June 6, 1888:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior send to the Senate a copy of a report made by R. L. Owen, United States Indian agent for the Union agency, relating to the claims of Indians of the Creek tribe for reimbursement of expenses of travel and for a year's support when said Indians were emigrated to the Indian country west of the Mississippi River, and any other facts shown on the records or files of the Indian Bureau bearing upon the justice of such claims."

In compliance with the requirements of said resolution I submit herewith a copy of Agent Owen's report, together with copies of emigrating list and twenty-three affidavits taken by him in support of the claims examined by him. I also inclose a list of the self-emigrating families, showing that two hundred and seventy-four individuals claim reimbursement for transportation expenses and one hundred and sixty for subsistence for twelve months after arrival in the Indian Territory.

These claims arise under the seventh article of the treaty with the Creeks of 1826 (7 Stats., 287), which provides that—

"The emigrating party shall remove within twenty-four months and the expense of their removal shall be defrayed by the United States."

By article 12 of the treaty of 1832 (7 Stats., 367), under the provisions of which nearly all of the Creek emigrants were transported to the West, it is provided that—

"As fast as the Creeks are prepared to emigrate they shall be removed at the expense of the United States, and shall receive subsistence while on their journey and for one year after their arrival at their new homes."

The greater part of said Indians emigrated in 1836, 1837, and 1838, and parties of them continued to remove from year to year until 1852, at the expense of the Government or their own resources.

Those providing their own transportation and subsistence were subsequently paid the sum of $55 each by the United States as commutation therefor.

The last payment to self-emigrating Creeks was made in 1882, from the appropriation for "expenses of removing and subsisting Creeks, act of March 3, 1839," and a balance of $4,586.51 was carried to the surplus fund in September of that year.

The list now forwarded comprises, as before stated, 274, who claim transportation expenses at $30 per head, $8,220, and 160 subsistence for twelve months, at $25 per head, $4,000; total, $12,220.

Very respectfully,

A. B. UPSHAW, Acting Commissioner.

HON. SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to my friend from Arkansas the propriety of inserting, after the word "list," in line 3, on page 16, the words "and shall be paid to them personally;" so as to read "and shall be paid to them personally or to their legal representatives."

Mr. PEEL. I believe it is already specifically provided that this money shall be distributed among the Indians named in the list, or their descendants; but I see no objection to the amendment which the gentleman suggests.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I wish to ask whether all the items from line 9, on page 16, down to line 23, on page 17, are for the payment of obligations arising under treaty stipulations.

Mr. PEEL. All of them.

Mr. HOLMAN. Not including the last?

Mr. PEEL. All of them are under treaty stipulations.

Mr. PERKINS. They are a duplication of the appropriations made last year.

Mr. MILLS. How long are these payments to continue?

Mr. PEEL. They run for different terms, and some of them are to be perpetual.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I will state my reason for making the inquiry. We go on year after year making appropriations to support and educate Indians, to buy farming implements for them, etc. I am in favor of keeping every treaty stipulation; that I do not complain of. If the bargain we have made is a hard one for us, that is a reason we ought to stand by it the more closely. But it has seemed to me sometimes that we were overstepping what was required by the treaties, and were going out to engage in a great charitable work which, however laudable it might be for the churches or for humanitarians in general, is not particularly the duty of the Government. It has seemed to me that the sooner we let these Indians shift for themselves and rely upon their own exertions the more readily in all probability they will become self-sustaining. I therefore called attention to these items to ascertain whether they were embraced in our treaties with these Indians. The gentleman has informed me that they are.

The Clerk read as follows, under the head of "Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes:"

For pay of physician, two teachers, two carpenters, one miller, two farmers, a blacksmith, and engineer, per seventh article of same treaty, $9,000; in all, $21,000.

Mr. NELSON. I offer the following amendment, to come in after the paragraph last read:

For subsistence and civilization of the Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes, as per agreement with the Sioux Indians, approved February 28, 1877, $35,000.

Mr. Chairman, I desire to explain that this item has been omitted from the bill by oversight. It is found at the foot of page 135 of the Book of Estimates; it is conformable to treaty obligations, and it is urgently required. I offer this amendment at the instance of members of the committee.

Mr. PEEL. The gentleman's statement is correct.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For this amount, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for agricultural assistance and subsistence of the Poncas, $3,000; in all, $18,000: Provided, That the foregoing sums shall be divided pro rata among all the members of said tribe in the Indian Territory and in Dakota Territory.

Mr. McMILLIN. Reserving a point of order on this paragraph, I wish to inquire of the gentleman from Arkansas, as I did a few moments ago in reference to some other items, whether there are treaty stipulations requiring this appropriation or whether it is merely a matter of charity.

Mr. PEEL. It is for the purpose of fulfilling treaty stipulations. I will say to the gentleman that the provisions having that purpose in view are all grouped together in this part of the bill. When we reach provisions of another class that will be manifest by the terms of the items.

Mr. McMILLIN. Down to what point does this group of appropriations continue?

Mr. PEEL. At this moment I can not indicate the exact point; but there will be no trouble about that; when we reach another class of items I will give the gentleman notice.

The Clerk read as follows:

Fulfilling treaty stipulations with the Pottawatomie Nation:

For this amount, to fulfill the stipulations of the second clause of article 10 of the treaty of August 7, 1868, with the Pottawatomie Nation of Indians and the award made thereunder, the sum of $178,953.43, with 5 per cent. per annum interest thereon from the date of award, approved January 28, 1869, of which sum there shall be paid the Pottawatomies of Huron, Mich., the sum of $9,400, with interest at 5 per cent. from date of award; and the balance of said sum, less whatever sums may be legally and equitably due the delegates of said Indians by virtue of recognized powers of attorney and contracts on file in the Departments of the Treasury or Interior, shall be distributed per capita, as follows: Fourteen hundred twenty-one hundred and eightieths to the Citizens' band and seven hundred and eighty twenty-one hundred and eightieths to the Prairie band of Pottawatomies of Kansas.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I move pro forma to strike out the last word, for the purpose of putting a question to the gentleman from Arkansas, who has charge of this bill. I see it is provided in lines 6 to 10 of this paragraph that—

The balance of said sum, less whatever sum may be legally and equitably due the delegates of said Indians by virtue of recognized powers of attorney and contracts on file in the Departments of the Treasury or Interior, shall be distributed, etc.

I would like to ask the meaning of this provision and the reason for it.

Mr. PEEL. I think I can explain this matter to the gentleman's satisfaction. Some of these Pottawatomie Indians are in the Indian Territory and some are in Kansas. They have not an organized government of their own. They have executed a power of attorney to one of their own number to come to Washington and look after their matters; that power of attorney is placed on file and recognized in the Department; without that these Indians could not pay their delegates anything for the trouble and expense they incur. The object of this provision is to authorize the Secretary of the Interior, who will make these disbursements, to ascertain what is legally and equitably due to these delegates who are acting under powers of attorney from their own people.

Mr. PERKINS. And who are members of the tribe.

Mr. BUCHANAN. May I ask the name of the attorney and the amount that the contract gives him?

Mr. PEEL. He is not an attorney. He is one of the tribe. His name is Navarre. He is the only one of the delegates now here, though there are three.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And what is the amount which the contract gives him?

Mr. PEEL. I have never examined into that matter at all. The contract is on file in the Interior Department with the power of attorney.

Mr. BUCHANAN. There seems to be a new provision as to these Indians, which does not apply to any of the others named.

Mr. PEEL. Because nothing has become due like that yet.

Mr. PERKINS. I will say to the gentleman from New Jersey that Mr. Ellis is the attorney for the Indians, and he has a contract, but we refused to put any provision in the bill for the purpose of compensating the attorney. This is only to pay the representatives of the people, their own delegates, whatever the Department finds to be due to them.

Mr. BUCHANAN. In order to make the matter entirely safe, I will offer this amendment to come in on page 24, after the word "Interior," in line 10:

And approved by the Secretary of the Treasury and Interior, respectively.

Mr. ROGERS. I reserve the point of order upon that for the present until I know its purpose.

Mr. PEEL. I think the language says already "upon powers of attorney recognized by the Interior Department."

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes, but it does not say "approved by the Department."

Mr. McMILLIN. The Department would simply under the language of the bill take cognizance of contracts on file in the Department made by these Indians; whereas the amendment of the gentleman from New Jersey would give the Department power to supervise contracts, and affirm or reject them, and thus prevent injustice to be done the Indians.

Mr. PEEL. But these are the delegates of the Indians themselves.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And they are the attorneys for these people.

Mr. PEEL. Better let the Department arrange that with them.

Mr. BUCHANAN. That is precisely what I want to provide for, and this amendment gives the power to do exactly that.

Mr. PERKINS. There is a bill reported from the committee covering the same item before the House. This bill was submitted to the Interior Department and approved by it, and I have the letter here from the Indian Office recommending it.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But what objection is there to the amendment?

Mr. PERKINS. Because we do not know whether the contract has been formally approved or not.

Mr. BUCHANAN. If the contract is right it can be approved; if not right, it ought not to be approved.

Mr. PERKINS. If the language is "such contract as has been or may be approved" I think there is no objection; but we submitted it to the Interior Department, and it was indorsed by the Department.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But it applies to the contracts on file whether approved at this moment or not. It only requires that before the payment is made and the money is disbursed the Secretary of the Interior must be satisfied that the contract is right.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would suggest to the gentleman from New Jersey that he should make it read "the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary of the Interior."

Mr. PEEL. The Secretary of the Interior controls this.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And yet your bill provides for contracts on file in the Departments of Treasury or Interior. But I have no objection to accepting the gentleman's suggestion and making it read "contracts approved or hereafter approved."

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. I would like to ask my colleague how much the fee of Mr. Ellis is supposed to be?

Mr. PERKINS. We have not been advised. It is only the compensation coming to the delegates who have been sent here by the Indians. This provision of the bill does not cover attorneys' fees or anything of that kind whatever.

Mr. PEEL. Let the amendment be read as proposed to be modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 24, line 10, after the word "Interior," insert "and which have been or may be approved by the Secretary in whose Department the same is filed."

Mr. BUCHANAN. That will make it read:

By virtue of recognized powers of attorney and contracts on file in the Departments of the Treasury or Interior, and which have been or may be approved by the Secretary in whose Department the same is filed, etc.

Mr. PEEL. The Interior Department approve all of these things with the Indians, not the Treasury.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Very well; I have stricken that out. I tried to follow the reading of the bill as nearly as possible, and thereby it seems was misled.

The amendment as modified was adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest the insertion of this language: "To be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury or of the Interior in whose office the said contract is filed." For if the contract should be filed with the Secretary of the Treasury it should not be approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will submit his amendment in writing, and if there be no objection this portion of the bill will be passed over for the present, to be recurred to hereafter if the gentleman wishes to offer an amendment.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will be glad to have the second article of this treaty read.

The Clerk read as follows:

And it is further agreed that the claims of the Pottawatomies heretofore examined and reported on by the Secretary of the Interior, under the act of Congress of March 2, 1861, shall be submitted to two commissioners to be named by the President of the United States for examination, and said commissioners, after being sworn impartially to decide on said claims, shall make report of their judgment in the premises, together with the evidence taken, to the Secretary of the Interior, and the same shall be communicated to Congress at its next session: Provided, That no part of the money reported due by the said commissioners shall be paid until the same shall be appropriated by Congress.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to inquire of my friend from Arkansas whether when the award was made this question was considered, and this provision is in conformity with it?

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, I will state I examined the award very carefully, and I will say that it is in strict conformity with the award as I found it. I will furthermore state to my friend it is exactly in keeping with the awards of 1862, as they are shown in the act of Congress. We referred the matter for more safety to the Department of the Interior before we placed it on the appropriation bill; and we have a recommendation of the Department having charge of the matter in its favor. It was on that we have incorporated the proposition. So that it is strictly in conformity with the article of the treaty.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I now have my amendment shaped in accordance with the suggestions of the gentlemen on the Committee on Indian Affairs, and offer it in lieu of that which I had previously offered.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 24, line 10, after the word "Interior," insert "and approved by the Secretary in whose Department the same may be filed."

Mr. PEEL. I would suggest "or may be approved by the Department where filed." I think you had better have it "is" or "may be."

Mr. PERKINS. I would suggest to the gentleman from New Jersey that it read this way: "Has been or may be approved by the Secretary in whose Department the same is filed."

Mr. BUCHANAN. I accept that.

The Clerk reported the amendment as modified:

And which has been or may be approved by the Secretary in whose Department the same may be filed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

To carry out and fulfill the first clause of article 10 of said treaty of August 7, 1868, and the awards made thereunder, the sum of $48,338.80, to be distributed in names and amounts to those members of the Citizens' band of Pottawatomie Indians or their legal representatives named in the communication of J. H. Morris, agent of said Indians, to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, of date November 9, 1871, and transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior on December 20, 1871, there being ninety of said names and amounts, the said sum to be subject to such amount as may be due the delegates of said Indians by virtue of contracts or powers of attorney on file in the Departments of the Treasury or Interior; and that the clause in the act approved March 3, 1885, 23 Statutes, page 372, referring said claim to the Court of Claims, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I offer the following amendment to that clause, in precisely the same words as the amendment which was adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 25, line 5, after the word "Interior," insert:
"And is or may be approved by the Secretary in whose Department it may be filed."

Mr. PERKINS. That is all right.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the following paragraph may be read—the first part of article 10.

The CHAIRMAN. There is nothing before the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

ART. 10. It is further agreed that upon presentation to the Department of the Interior of the claims of said tribe for depredations committed by others upon their stock, timber, or other property, accompanied by evidence thereof, examination and report shall be made to Congress of the amount found to be equitably due, in order that such action may be taken as may be just in the premises.

Mr. HOLMAN. Now, this claim, if it has any legal existence, rests upon that paragraph, and I should be very glad to have the gentleman from Arkansas explain when the award was made and the cause of the delay in making the payment of it.

Mr. PEEL. I will state to the gentleman from Indiana that as he formerly served on the Committee on Appropriations, he may remember that upon examination of that award, which was made by the special agent, Mr. Morris, under the article of the treaty, it would seem that the evidence was not considered to be satisfactory to the Department, and therefore they detailed a special agent to make a re-examination, and he made it considerably less and with the names of fewer Indians. That was approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

I know of no reason why it has not been appropriated for. It has been estimated for by the Department of the Interior to the Committee on Appropriations, and I know of no reason why it was not paid, except one—that is, that at one time, in the Forty-sixth or Forty-seventh Congress, an effort was made to refer this and other claims to the Court of Claims, but through an error in the engrossment it was left out. It was estimated for on several occasions, but why the Committee on Appropriation, having charge of the bill, did not put it in the bill I do not know. But year after year the usual item was referred to the committee by the Interior Department, and they recommend again that it be paid. That has been long years ago, and as there is no interest accruing, we thought it had certainly waited long enough.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sioux, Medawakanton and b:
For the support of the full-blood Indians in Minnesota heretofore belonging to the Medawakanton band of Sioux Indians, who have resided in said State since the 20th day of May, A. D. 1886, or who were then engaged in removing to said State, and have since resided therein, and have severed their tribal relations, $12,000, to be expended by the Secretary of the Interior as follows: Ten thousand dollars in the purchase, as in his judgment he may think best, of such lands, agricultural implements, cattle, horses, food, or clothing as may be deemed best in the case of each of these Indians or family thereof; $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to defray the expenses of expending the money in this paragraph appropriated; and $1,000 for the completion and furnishing of the school-house for said Indians authorized by the act of June 29, 1888: Provided, That if the amount in this paragraph appropriated, or any portion of the sum appropriated for the benefit of these same Indians by said act of June 29, 1888, shall not be expended within the fiscal year for which either sum was appropriated, neither shall be covered into the Treasury, but shall, notwithstanding, be used and expended for the purposes for which the same amount was appropriated and for the benefit of the above-named Indians: And provided also, That the Secretary of the Interior may appoint a suitable person to make the above-mentioned expenditure under his direction; and all of said money which is to be expended for lands, cattle, horses, implements, food, or clothing shall be so expended that each of the Indians in this paragraph mentioned shall receive an equal amount in value of this appropriation and that made by said act of June 29, 1888: And provided further, That as far as possible lands for said Indians shall be purchased in such locality as each Indian desires, and none of said Indians shall be required to remove from where he now resides and to any locality or land against his will.

Mr. NELSON. I offer the following amendment to that paragraph:

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 34, line 8, insert the word "seed," after the word "implement."

Mr. BUCHANAN. I reserve the point of order on the paragraph beginning with the sixteenth line. I may not desire to make it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLS. This seems to be a provision that is not covered or authorized by treaty stipulation. We are making expenditures for these Indians to build houses, to pay for cattle, horses, farm implements, and everything of that sort, and also for seed, which has just been put on my amendment. Now, we have been going on with this kind of legislation for a number of years, and I would like to know what progress has been made in the way of teaching them to support themselves by agriculture or agricultural labor? Will some gentleman inform me what progress has been made in that direction?

Mr. PEEL. I desire to say to the gentleman from Texas that the Committee on Indian Affairs has pursued one uniform course since they have had charge of the Indian appropriation bill, to this effect: We have gradually decreased the appropriation for the support of the Indians; that is, where we were not tied up by treaty stipulations on the part of the Government. We have decreased the appropriations to support the Indians and increased the provision to enable them to support themselves. That has been the rule of the committee. Gentlemen may notice that in the paragraph just passed in regard to the Sioux.

Turning to the treaty with the Sioux, it is very remarkable to find that the Government obligated itself to support those Indians until they should be able to support themselves. There was no limit at all. Therefore after twenty years and an expenditure of $30,000,000 trying to teach them to support themselves we find them still drawing rations at the public crib, and we have inserted a provision here requiring the Secretary to cause a census to be taken to ascertain which of these Indians, taking into account their critical condition and all their circumstances, are able to support themselves, so that hereafter those may be left out and we may provide simply for the others.

Mr. MILLS. Can the gentleman from Arkansas give us any statement as to whether these Indians are making progress in agriculture—whether they are learning to make corn and wheat and other things that are necessary for their subsistence?

Mr. PEEL. It depends entirely upon the locality and upon the policy that is being pursued. As I have said upon this floor on other occasions, so long as the Government allows the Indians to keep their large reservations, to go together in large bands, to have their chiefs on the old Indian system, and to cultivate and exercise their old savage instincts, you may pay out a hundred million dollars and keep it up for a hundred thousand years and they never will be civilized. There is only one way to civilize the Indian, and that is to break up their tribal relations, individualize them, and teach them to support themselves.

Mr. PERKINS. Teach them to work and let them understand that they have got to work.

Mr. PEEL. Yes.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I will say to my friend from Texas [Mr. MILLS] that some of the Sioux are learning the way of civilization, as they have been lately resisting the collection of taxes. [Laughter.]

Mr. McMILLIN. I can give another instance of the progress they are making toward civilization. When our committee was out some years ago examining into the condition of the Indians one of the agents, with a great deal of just pride in the progress they had made, suggested to the committee that he wished them to go out some distance and see an Indian for whom he had built a house and whom he was teaching the ways of civilization.

The committee went out some miles to see this evidence of civilization springing up in the wilderness, and when they got in sight of the house they noticed that the roof of it was gone and that a tent was spread at some little distance from the house, and, on getting nearer, it was discovered that the Indian had moved his family into the tent, and probably burned the boards of the roof or otherwise disposed of them, and had his horses stabled in the house! [Laughter.]

Mr. WEAVER. The Sacs and Foxes do that in Iowa now.

Mr. McMILLIN. The gentleman from Iowa says that the Sacs and Foxes do that in Iowa now. I know, Mr. Chairman, that this is a troublesome problem to deal with, especially in view of the way we have started. I think we have started wrong to a very great extent. I agree, however, with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] that it is time to begin to cut loose from the existing system and let the Indians swim a little for themselves, and we shall never make any progress in civilizing them until we do that.

If I had my way I would stand by every treaty stipulation; I would even stand by the treaty by which we have agreed to support these Indians until they learn to support themselves. I would stand by every treaty stipulation, but I do think we ought to stop with that; I think we ought not to go beyond the treaty stipulations. There is no more reason why the Government of the United States should become a paternal institution for the Indians than why it should become one for the white man, and there is absolutely no reason why it should ever become such an institution for the white man.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, my experience has shown that whenever a small band of Indians commence struggling for independence and desire to become self-supporting there is always somebody here to object lest they should starve and the Government should have to come to their relief later. I have known several instances of that kind, and there is never a case where everybody is satisfied that any of these Indians are ready to become self-supporting. Now, so long as that course is pursued we shall never get them ready. My doctrine has been all along, wherever you find a lot of Indians who want to become self-sustaining, in God's name give them a chance. But, as I have said, there are always men in Congress who get scared at such a proposition and come to the conclusion that if you turn the Indians loose they will all be starving directly.

There are no two bands of these Indians exactly alike. Some are very low down in civilization, and others are quite advanced. The trouble, however, is that when you speak of the Indian in Congress some gentlemen always look at him through one pair of spectacles; he has always got a blanket on, and carries a tomahawk, and has paint all over his face. Now there are a great many Indians in this country to whom that description does not apply. I can point to many who are well advanced in civilization and doing well, and who are begging the Government to give them their lands in severalty and make them citizens. But it is very hard to get anything of that kind done here.

Mr. McMILLIN. Is it not the observation of my friend from Arkansas that the less we meddle or interfere with the affairs of the Indians the better they get along?

Mr. PEEL. That is the case, provided we put them in a position to take care of themselves. They can not live independently if they are huddled together in a gang with no government over them. It would be impossible for white people to live in that way.

Mr. MILLS. I will state my reason for asking this question. During the sixteen years I have been here we have been steadily pursuing the policy of teaching the Indians to become self-sustaining, teaching them agriculture, teaching them how to plow, how to drive wagons and do everything of that sort. In all our Indian appropriation bills will be found appropriations for blacksmiths, carpenters, millers, etc., for the education of the Indians: appropriations for school-houses and school teachers; for agents, and preachers, and police, and judges.

We have been making every sort of expenditure for the advancement of the Indians; we have been trying to teach them everything that could promote their civilization and make them self-supporting. Now, after we have pursued that policy for a long period of time, I would like to know what are the fruits of this persistent teaching? I want to know how many of these Indians can now plow a straight furrow? I want to know how many bushels of corn they raise for their support? I want to know how many of them drive wagons; how many go over to the depots to get supplies and bring them back; how many of them build cabins; how many of them can put a roof or a floor on their cabins? I want to know what progress is shown as the result of the policy which we have been pursuing for the civilization of the Indians?

I remember that a few years ago there was an Indian agent, and from what I heard, I think one of the best, though I did not know him, who was killed because he was trying to teach the Indians how to plow. When he told the Indians that he had been sent to them by the Great Father—that the Government that was supporting them, building their school-houses, sending teachers to them to Christianize them, and doing everything of that kind, had sent him to them to teach them how to plow they killed him. I have not heard anything further in relation to this matter since; I would like to know what progress has been made in the way of civilizing the Indian?

Mr. PEEL. I can only say to the gentleman from Texas that in the limited time which we have to-night it is impossible to answer fully the question which he propounds. If he will examine the reports of the different Indian agents located at the various agencies—of which there are fifty-eight or sixty—he will find the details as to which he inquires. I will say to him, however, that I could mention a number of Indians who are almost self-sustaining, some absolutely so. The Navajoes up in Arizona are, as my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] knows, almost self-supporting; they are a pastoral people. The Flatheads on the Montana reservation are almost or quite self-supporting. The same may be said of the Miamies and Peorias in the Indian Territory, the Quapaws, the Osages, and many others.

A MEMBER. And the Pottawatomies.

Mr. PEEL. Yes; and the Pottawatomies. I was on the reservation of the Miamies and Peorias some time ago; and were it not for the waste country which could be seen around I would not have known that I was not in Missouri or Kansas or Arkansas. Those Indians had large farms, good barns, plenty of cattle, wagons, and buggies. There has been a great deal of progress made, but the work of civilization is a slow process and we must be patient.

Mr. HOLMAN. In answer to the inquiry made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] I would say that as a general rule, so far as the Indians have been permitted to remain in the same country for any long period of time, and have been under good agencies, they have made fairly good progress, everything considered. For instance, take the Yakamas, on the eastern slope of the Cascade range of mountains, in Washington Territory. They have remained for a long period of time in one location, under the charge of a very benevolent Methodist clergyman. They have made good progress. They have built good churches; their lands are well cultivated; their children are at school. On the other side of the Cascade range, on the Puyallup River, the Puyallup Indians have made still greater progress, under the charge of different denominations. Their lands are well cultivated. Enormous forests have been cut down and good fields have been opened up.

I repeat, that wherever the Indians have been permitted to remain in a given locality undisturbed for any considerable period of time, with a good, benevolent agent looking after their interests, they have made fair progress. My friend from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL] speaks of the Navajoes. Those Indians are a very striking instance. Some years ago we had some trouble with them and they were removed down to Texas, I believe. But they pined for the rocks and the apparently barren wastes of Arizona and New Mexico. The Government permitted them to go back, and they have not only increased in numbers, but they are extremely prosperous. They have flocks and herds. Great flocks of sheep and goats and large droves of ponies can be seen on all sides. Their condition exhibits a state of great prosperity. They ask nothing from the United States except to be permitted to develop their capacities for civilization and self-government by the processes natural to the Indian tribes.

Mr. MILLS. Do they own those sheep and goats and other property in common or as individuals?

Mr. HOLMAN. As individuals exclusively; and perhaps they are the only Indians of their class who have a perfect idea of the ownership of property. They not only own their own herds separately but occupy their lands in severalty. They have made steady and marked progress. Their general condition is admirable, and gives promise of a prosperous future. They will no doubt in the progress of time by natural development become an intelligent people, perfectly competent and able to take care of themselves and their own interests. Indeed they do that now.

The Apaches, of which so much has been said, of the White Mountain region, are prosperous Indians, as well as those upon the San Carlos and Gila Rivers. They have constructed irrigating ditches, and irrigated every acre of the valuable farming lands upon the southern boundary of the reservation along the San Carlos River and Gila River, raising in large quantities barley, enough indeed to supply the Government forces in that country.

So, Mr. Chairman, it may be said that, upon the whole, where the Indian has been protected and permitted to remain at home, not moved around from reservation to reservation, but where he has had a fair chance to make a home for himself, he has got along better than could be expected, considering that he is still a savage and that it requires ages for man to progress from that condition to the condition of civilization. The Government has moved the Indian around from place to place. It has driven him everlastingly westward, and has rendered his progress by reason of that absolutely impossible. But we have now reached a period when all of this will change, when it must change, for there is no farther west that the Indian can go. They must remain upon their present reservations as a rule, and with kind treatment, such as they are entitled to receive at our hands, for we have despoiled them of their grand possessions, they will progress to be in time not only self-supporting, but will reach a very high order of intelligence and civilization.

The Flathead Indians, I might mention also, on a reservation not very large, but they have made it quite valuable. They have dug great drains miles and miles in length, and have raised fine fields of grain. They are generally prosperous Indians, with facilities established for education amongst themselves; they have organized courts of justice; in fact, it is a well-organized community. They have remained there for a great many years. In 1850 or 1851, perhaps, a very humane gentleman by the name of Stevens, Col. Isaac Stevens, afterwards a Delegate to Congress from one of the Territories, was sent as governor to the Territory of Washington, and was made commissioner of Indian affairs of that Territory.

His duties extended beyond the limits of the Territory in assigning territorial possessions to the Indians. He secured for them good and valuable lands. They settled down upon them and had a promise of the lands to be assigned to them in severalty in the progress of time or as soon as they were able to cultivate them and take care of themselves. Three years ago, when the House committee went through there, they found these Indians settled upon good lands and eager to obtain titles to them in severalty. On one side the Catholics had control for many years, and on the other side the Presbyterians, but yet they had made equal progress. We found the women to be well clad, the men thrifty and industrious, driving wagons and engaged in the work of the field—a self-sustaining people.

So I think the people of the United States can feel assured that within a reasonable time the progress of the Indians will be such as to make them self-sustaining. They have made good progress up to this time. The great trouble is that too small a percentage of the millions appropriated goes to their benefit. The Indian agent should be not only a man of good character and standing, but he should be a benevolent man, having the care and interests of the Indians under his charge closely at heart. We do not place a large number of such gentlemen in our positions unfortunately. It is not always possible to get them. We do the best we can, and the progress has been encouraging.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SHIVELY. Mr. Chairman, I have thus far been quite content to defer discussion of the Indian question to those of longer public service and larger experience, but I am tempted on the present occasion to detain the House briefly with an expression of individual judgment on certain phases of the subject suggested by this bill.

Should the House of Representatives be engaged two generations hence, as to-day, in the consideration of an annual Indian appropriation bill, will it not be because our Indian policy in the mean time had been a dismal failure? Are the two centuries of checkered expedients which mark the history of the relations between the Indian and Caucasian races on this continent to suggest no termination of the struggle against forces which government may in a measure direct, but which it can never control? What is the ultimate purpose of all legislation on the Indian question? Are we to contemplate for a moment the permanency of the relations out of which proceed these annual expenditures of public money? Can these appropriations from year to year be justified on any ground other than that this is the most economical and humane process of solving a vexed problem and eliminating the Indian question from our national legislation?

This, sir, in my judgment, is the only justification consistent with the best interests of the Indian, the rights of other races in this country, and the honor of the Government. The system destroys a people that induces them to idleness or tempts them to mendicancy. There exists no fundamental principle peculiar to the history of any race which relieves it from the operation of the doctrine that—

In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.

The right of the Indian to the benefits of this sacred curse should be neither neglected nor restrained. Self-reliance and self-sustenance are the quality and habit of a strong people. While these have never been created by paternalism in government, they have often been destroyed by it. The relation of guardian and ward, as between the nation and the Indians, is anomalous and inconsistent. This relation, associated, as it has been, with a treaty-making power, has led to countless controversies, and settled none beyond dispute.

Again, sir, the tribal relation is a barbarous relation. In it is scrupulously preserved a more or less complicated scheme of laws, customs, and usages peculiar alone to barbarous life. There is no kindness, nor wisdom, nor justice in appropriating public moneys to preserve that relation. The habits, customs, and usages peculiar to such relation should be discouraged at every step. There should be an early allotment of lands in severalty, with a limited restriction on the power of alienation. The relation of guardian and ward should be dissolved. The Indian should be treated as having come of age, given his patrimony, and then left to his own resources. Property and responsibility are civilizing forces. Besides this, government is not an insurer of perpetual and unqualified success and happiness to any class of people. The acquirement of personal success and happiness is an individual, not a public function. Congress can and should choose between civilization and barbarism, and appropriate money only to advance the former, never to preserve and foster the latter.

Speaking for myself, Mr. Chairman, I believe these general principles have been observed in the preparation of this bill, so far as the discretion of the committee over the subject-matter involved extended. Liberal appropriations are made for educational purposes. Liberality is observed in the appropriation for agricultural implements and the tools and utensils employed in the trades and arts of civilized life. The allowance for subsistence, which more than any other tends to breed idleness and mendicancy, is reduced. Preference is given to the Indians who have abandoned their nomadic habits, while the roving bands receive less consideration.

Thus, Mr. Chairman, are habits of industry, thrift, and economy encouraged and rewarded, and self-reliance and self-respect inspired, so far as the discretion of the committee in maturing this bill could accomplish such result. This, I take it, is in pursuance of a policy that contemplates the earliest possible dissolution of all dependent and tribal relations, and the reception of the last Indian into the body of American citizenship, his assimilation with our institutions, and the total abolition of the annual Indian appropriation bill, the Indian Office, and all branches of the so-called Indian service.

The mistaken philanthropist may hesitate on the one hand, and the complacent sinecurist may object on the other, but that policy is the best policy which will in a just way at the earliest moment relieve us of the need of any policy at all. Many thousand Indians have ceased to be wards of the nation, and are law-abiding, self-respecting and self-sustaining citizens. It is the state-fed Indian who is most helpless. Give the Indian fair educational facilities, inculcate habits of industry, give him his land, and leave him to take his chances of success or failure in life in common with other races. Did I not believe this to be the early and final solution of the Indian problem I should not vote for the appropriation of a single dollar of public funds beyond the sums guarantied by treaty.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I know that the chairman of the committee is very anxious to finish the consideration of this bill, and so am I as a member of the committee. I shall therefore occupy but little time, as I want simply to say that I appreciate the suggestion of the gentleman from Texas as to the want of information in Congress, and by the people generally, of the progress the Indians have been making. The fact is that we have not information enough as to their treatment and progress, expending as we do millions of dollars annually in this service. But progress has been and is being made amongst them; and while it is costing some money, yet for every dollar we have given we have taken unjustly at least one hundred. So that we are yet largely their debtors and have little cause to complain.

And it will be many years before we fully pay that debt which we honestly owe him. The only way we can do it with advantage to ourselves and to him is to make him more and more like an American citizen. The time will speedily come when the blanketed Indian must go; when Indians, negroes, white men, and all others in this country must look to themselves for support, and look to the Government only for protection while they are making an honest livelihood. That is the point towards which we must all to-day strive. In doing it we must not be niggardly in our treatment of the Indian, but honest in our treatment. I must say to my friend from Indiana, whose honesty is unquestioned and whose judgment I highly respect, that at his door may be laid somewhat of the failure of the Indian policy in many respects.

I have been familiar with his position on this and other questions for many years, and to the cheese-paring that he has always stood up for relative to pay of Indian agents and others engaged in this work is due the failure of our efforts more than any other of the thousand reasons which have been given. Why, the gentleman from Indiana knocked me out of $300 when I was Indian agent. [Laughter.] He did it honestly, but "the laborer was worthy of his hire." As soon as the Democratic Administration came into power it proceeded on the theory that one of two things was true, either that I did not get pay enough or else that I had not capacity to earn what I did get, and they let me out.

Mr. HOLMAN. If my friend from Michigan [Mr. ALLEN] will permit me to interrupt him a moment I will say that when I found how so excellent and valuable an officer could be retained in the service as my friend of the northern peninsula of Michigan, and saw the admirable manner in which he looked after the Indians under his charge, as well after as before the salary was reduced, I felt that the removal of a mercenary motive from office secured the public good, for my friend, with great efficiency, still performed the duties of the officer. So public interests did not suffer.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I am entirely satisfied with the explanation. [Laughter.] I want to say to my friend from Indiana if he knew as well as I did at the time what an Indian agent was worth, he would have been willing for him to have more. This bill contemplates making a census, and putting the Indian more in a condition to depend on himself; and it is a thing that ought to have been done years and years ago. When we do this we shall not have a car-load of Indians coming down to Washington as representatives of an independent nation telling this great country what it must do in order to placate them; but they will have to do as you and I have to do, and as our children must do, and what everybody who is a citizen of the United States in the near future must do—take care of themselves and not depend upon the Government. They must look to the Government to see that their rights are preserved, and that is as far as they can go, and the quicker that time comes the better for us and them.

Mr. MACDONALD. I do not wish to occupy the time of the committee very long, but I would suggest that it would have been better to have selected another paragraph in this bill on which to make general observations on the measure, for this is one of the most meritorious appropriations on the bill. It is not an appropriation given as a charity at all, but an appropriation given for the benefit of full-blooded Indians belonging to this tribe who separated themselves from their tribal relations, have gone to reside among the whites, who are teaching them to support themselves by agricultural pursuits. There are about two hundred of them, and they are nearly all in my district.

By the Indian war of 1862 the tribe to which they belonged violated the treaty under which they were receiving annuities. Very soon afterwards Congress declared that treaty abrogated, making no discrimination in the act of forfeiture, and thereby excluded from the benefit of the treaty these Indians as well as the others. These particular Indians belong to a class that remained friendly to the whites and fought for the whites. This I know myself, as I was there and passed through all of that crisis. We are compelled to come in here and ask Congress for the beggarly appropriation which has been made in the last two or three years for the purpose of securing to them agricultural implements and seeds. If we succeed in getting the appropriation made we do not expect to get more than one fourth of what these Indians would be entitled to. The treaty gave the band for fifty years $58,000 a year. They do not get any of it to-day. It has been confiscated, and we have not complied with their treaty rights.

Mr. NELSON. I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 2, page 35, so as to conform with the prior amendment, insert the word "seeds" after the word "implements."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the desk. It comes in on page 37, between lines 11 and 12. It was inadvertently omitted from the bill.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Second of ten installments of $150,000 each, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for the support and civilization of the Indians attached to the Blackfeet agency, Montana, as per act approved May 1, 1888, $150,000.

Second of ten installments of $115,000 each, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for the support and civilization of the Indians attached to the Fort Belknap agency, Montana, as per act approved May 1, 1888, $115,000.

Interest on $69,120, at 5 per cent. per annum, being value of 54 sections of land set apart by treaty of June 2, 1825, for educational purposes, per Senate resolution of January 9, 1838, $3,456.

Mr. McMILLIN. I reserve the point of order on that amendment in order to hear an explanation from the gentleman in regard to it.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, it will be remembered that at the last session of Congress a bill was passed to ratify an agreement between the Government and these Indians at Fort Belknap and Blackfeet and the Assinaboine Indians in Montana, by which they ceded to the Government some 17,000,000 acres of land. The Government agreed to pay for that land in ten annual payments. At the time the Indian appropriation bill passed the House the usual appropriation as a gratuity was in the bill, but knowing that the other bill had passed the House to ratify the agreement by which the regularly stipulated amount would be paid to them, and not knowing whether or not it had passed the Senate and become a law, we incorporated the usual amount in the regular Indian appropriation bill, with a proviso that in case the other bill became a law that appropriation should not be used. The bill ratifying the agreement did become a law, and this amendment provides for the second installment in payment for those lands. By some means or other unknown to the committee it was omitted from the printed bill. The amendment is taken from the regular estimates and is strictly in accordance with the agreement.

Mr. MORGAN. It is a part of the purchase-money for the land.

Mr. PEEL. Certainly; it is a part of the purchase-money for the land.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McMILLIN] desire to submit a point of order?

Mr. McMILLIN. No, sir. I simply wanted to elicit the statement which the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs has just made.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to my friend from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL] that this should come in among the treaty provisions where it properly belongs.

Mr. PEEL. I suggest it come in between lines 11 and 12.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to enter into contracts with such tribes, bands, nations, or individual Indians as in his judgment have sufficiently advanced in civilization to be competent to transact their own business affairs for the purpose of making final settlement and payment of such sums as may be due them from the United States either as permanent or limited annuities, or otherwise, and that said contracts be by him reported to Congress for its consideration and action.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order on the words "and directed," in the second line. The whole paragraph is subject to the point of order, but I make it only upon these words.

Mr. PEEL. I have no objection to striking out those words.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

For subsistence and civilization of the Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Apaches, Kiowas, Comanches, Wichitas, and affiliated bands, who have been collected upon the reservations set apart for their use and occupation, $250,000.

Mr. MILLS. I will ask the gentleman in charge of the bill whether this is in conformity to treaty stipulations?

Mr. PEEL. No.

Mr. MILLS. These are very troublesome neighbors of ours and I would like to know what progress they are making. I would like to hear a good report from my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] in relation to the progress of the Kiowas and Comanches.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Arapahoes are doing pretty well. [Laughter.]

Mr. MILLS. But what about the Kiowas and Comanches?

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend knows that those Indians were removed there at a comparatively late period of time.

Mr. MILLS. Twenty years ago.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, the old ones were born and raised elsewhere. The young ones of course are natives of the Territory. The Indians, however, who have made progress are those who have been permitted to remain stationary. These Indians have been moved from one place to another, driven back before our advancing civilization, and they have made no progress. The Indians in the western portion of the Territory can not be said to have made much progress.

Mr. MILLS. I think the reservation on which the Kiowas and Comanches were located was selected by General Sheridan about 1866, and we have been making large appropriations for their subsistence from year to year ever since, and now I would like to hear some good testimony as to their progress.

Mr. HOLMAN. But at the same time those Indians have been shifting about a great deal. A portion of the Kiowas went back into Dakota. There has been an unsettled condition of things all around them and they have made no such progress as you will find among other Indians.

Mr. PERKINS. Let me remind the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] that in the last annual appropriation bill there was an appropriation of $275,000 for this purpose, while this year we have cut it down to $250,000. The policy of the committee has been, as stated by the chairman awhile ago, to cut down the appropriations for the subsistence of the Indians. We have in some instances increased the educational fund, but we have in every instance decreased the subsistence fund, upon the idea of teaching the Indians that they had got to take care of themselves, and, like any other American citizen, have to work to earn their bread.

Mr. MILLS. I am not at all criticising the course of the committee. I think they have done very well. My remarks are directed to the general policy we have been pursuing.

Mr. PERKINS. Well, we are getting away from that as fast as we can.

Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order upon this paragraph. I know of no obligation that we are under to appropriate this quarter of a million of dollars, and I think we can get away from the policy that is objected to a little faster than we are doing here without any injustice to the Indians.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, the paragraph is not subject to the point of order, because the committee have the power to report an appropriation for the subsistence of these Indians.

Mr. HOLMAN. That has been the law for many years.

Mr. PEEL. It has been the law in regard to appropriations for years and years. Certainly this provision is not subject to a point of order. The only question is a matter of judgment as to how much we should appropriate each year. We are gradually reducing the amount.

Mr. PERKINS. We have made a cut of $25,000 this year.

Mr. McMILLIN. And how many of these Indians have made any progress in civilization? Not any, I presume.

Mr. HOLMAN. Oh, yes. The Arapahoes have made some progress. There is some land being cultivated in the western portion of the Indian Territory. The Arapahoes are doing very well; and some of the Comanches.

Mr. PERKINS. Yes; and the Kiowas and Apaches.

Mr. HOLMAN. And the Sacs and Foxes, still further east.

Mr. PERKINS. Yes; they are well advanced in civilization.

Mr. HOLMAN. They are as well advanced as any Indians you will find anywhere.

Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether a point of order will lie against this provision. Therefore I move to strike it out. There is no doubt about my right to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can make that motion.

Mr. McMILLIN. In support of that proposition, I wish to say that here are a number of tribes of Indians who, so far as we are able to find, have not made any progress; certainly nothing definite can be stated in regard to it. We are called upon to appropriate a quarter of a million dollars of the money of the people of the United States for the support of these Indians. Now, I am willing enough to do charity in the proper way; but the Government of the United States is not intended under the Constitution to be a great eleemosynary institution, however laudable charitable effort may be on the part of individuals.

I think it will be agreed by all—in fact, the committee concede—that this policy must ultimately be abandoned. If it is a failure the sooner we abandon it the better. I believe in teaching self-reliance to every human being who has the demand made upon him for his support. The sooner we teach this to the Indians the better it will be for them and for us.

Mr. PERKINS. In answer to my friend from Tennessee [Mr. McMILLIN] I wish to say that but a few years ago these were blanketed Indians upon the Western plains. Being whipped by our soldiery, they were taken to the Indian Territory and this reservation set apart for them by Executive order. During the time they have been there they have made considerable progress. Last year we appropriated $275,000 for them. This year the Department asked $260,000; but we have cut down the appropriation to $250,000.

The policy of the Government, the policy which the committee has endeavored to follow, has been to teach these Indians to work, to advance them just as rapidly as circumstances would permit. If we should now withhold this entire appropriation, we would not only take from them their means of support, but would expose the citizens of the States adjacent to the Indian Territory to the danger of incursions from these Indians, who, the assistance of the Government being withdrawn, would be unable to maintain themselves.

Mr. McMILLIN. And we are to keep them on their reservation by contributing to their support. Is that it?

Mr. PERKINS. They have very little ground under cultivation, and can not without the assistance of the Government maintain themselves.

Mr. McMILLIN. Are we annually to make this appropriation of a quarter of a million for their support, as we have been doing for the last twenty-two years, without any effort on their part?

Mr. PERKINS. As I have suggested, they are making some progress. They are getting a little more ground under cultivation each year. As I have stated, they were a few years ago blanketed Indians, who were taken from the "war-path" and placed on this reservation. They were the Apaches, the Comanches, the Cheyennes, the Arapahoes, who were engaged in murdering the settlers upon the frontier. Being reduced to subjection by the Army of the United States they were taken to the Indian Territory. It has been necessary for the Government to clothe and feed them at least in part; to guard them against warlike excursions, and to advance them as rapidly as possible. With this object in view we have made these appropriations from year to year.

Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to be misunderstood as to my sentiments concerning the Indians. I think that there are many tribes that have been robbed, robbed outright, under the semblance of treaty stipulations, under pretense of engagements that we have entered into with them. I think that our policy in regard to a number of these tribes has not been creditable to us. Hence I stated in the beginning that where we had made treaties with the Indians I thought we ought to keep them. But I have doubted the propriety of continuing the policy which we have been pursuing; and that is the reason I have offered my amendment.

Mr. NELSON. I move to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee by striking out the last word. It has been suggested here this evening by several gentlemen that the Indians are not making suitable and proper progress. It is my pleasure to state that among my numerous constituents there are between seven thousand and eight thousand Chippewa Indians, and they have made remarkable and wonderful progress.

Mr. Chairman, as an illustration I can refer among my constituents to young Hole-in-the-day. His grandfather was one of the most savage Chippewa Indians. He got his right of chieftain among the Chippewas because he had crept upon and taken a sleeping chieftain of the Sioux and scalped him while he was yet only a boy. His son, Hole-in-the-day, the famous Chippewa chief, the son of that savage boy, became civilized and came to this city to attend to the business of his tribe. And here he had the good taste to woo and win one of our white sisters in the city of Washington and took her back to the Chippewa reservation. It is his son who is to-day the head of the Chippewa Indians and who is one of my constituents. On one side his father was the celebrated chieftain, Hole-in-the-day, and on the other his mother one of the finest young damsels in the city of Washington, who was induced to go upon the reservation and make her home there.

This, of course, Mr. Chairman, is an isolated instance, but if you go on the White Earth reservation in my district you will find two or three thousand of these Chippewa Indians engaged in agriculture. Not only have they become successful farmers, but they have also become Christians. There are no Universalists and no Unitarians among them. They are none of your milk-and-water Christians. [Laughter.] My Chippewa constituents, Mr. Chairman, if I may be allowed to say so, belong to two of the best churches; they are either Catholics or Episcopalians. If any of you were to visit that reservation in the fall you would find one body, and perhaps the largest, wending their way to the Catholic chapel, while another body, equally dignified, but a little stoical, you would find wending their way to the Episcopal chapel.

More than that, not only are they Christians, but they are making rapid progress in civilization. They have established a newspaper which is equal to any country newspaper in Minnesota, for I was honored last week with half a column of good abuse. [Laughter.] I wish to say further, Mr. Chairman, they have to fight for the right to use that paper. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs issued an order to prevent the publication of that paper. It is a creditable production. They brought suit in the United States court and recovered a verdict against the Indian agent.

Mr. HOLMAN. What did they do that for?

Mr. NELSON. Because the agent thought he would lose his power unless the paper was stopped. He thought the Indian knew already too much. He thought they would meddle with his wayward tricks. Be it known, sir, while the Indians up in that country are all saints the Indian agent is very far from being a saint. [Laughter.]

I am loath to take up the time of this committee, but I assure the gentleman from Tennessee and other gentlemen my Chippewa Indians are making rapid progress in civilization and in the ability to take care of themselves.

Mr. McMILLIN's amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and civilization of the Navajo Indians, including pay of employés, $7,500.

For continuing the work of constructing ditches and reservoirs for the Navajo Indians, $7,500, to be taken from the funds now in the Treasury belonging to said Indians.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would like to suggest to my friend from Arkansas that inasmuch as none of this money covered by these two items is to be used for the schools of the Navajo Indians perhaps it would be better to allow it all to be used for the work of constructing ditches embodied in the second paragraph of the appropriation. What they have most need of there at the present time is water, and as the effort is being made to procure it for them I think it would be better to allow the whole appropriation to go that way.

Mr. PEEL. I have no objection to this. What amendment would the gentleman suggest?

Mr. PERKINS. Perhaps the gentleman has not observed that some portion of this appropriation is for the pay of employés. The appropriation is made not only for the civilization of the Indians, but for the pay of the employés as well.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, not for the schools or agent, as I understand it. There is nobody there but the school teacher and the agent.

Mr. PERKINS. I think there are several employés.

Mr. WEAVER. Yes, and there are some Indian police. I think this had better remain as it is.

Mr. HOLMAN. When the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. RYAN], and myself and others were there I think we found but one Indian family living near the agency. They are very much separated. But they need water. I wish to mention, however, one very interesting fact which I had from the agent there. He said that these Indians, under the great disadvantages which they labored from an arid country, had raised corn that year, and on an average 5 bushels to each man, woman, and child of the nation, comprising some twenty-two thousand people of this tribe. It seems to be an exaggerated statement, but it was vouched for by this gentleman.

Mr. CANNON. I think my friend from Illinois will find that some employés are necessary for conducting this very work that the latter part of this appropriation is for; that is, the ditches, etc.

Mr. PEEL. I suggest to my friend to let the reading proceed, and he can examine this, and if he desires to offer an amendment I will not object to recurring to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill to line 11, on page 42.

Mr. PEEL. That ends the miscellaneous matter, and here I wish to offer, by the instruction of the committee, the following amendment, which, when read, I desire to ask to have printed in the RECORD, and then the committee can proceed with the other portions of the bill if they desire, letting this remain until morning.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Before that I would like to ask the chairman whether it is his purpose to attempt to finish the bill to-night?

Mr. PEEL. Oh, no; I wish to pass from these miscellaneous items, however, and then the committee can rise.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Then that amendment can be printed in the RECORD and go over for consideration to-morrow.

Mr. PEEL. Let it be read and then I will make a brief explanation in regard to it.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the sum of $1,912,942.02 be, and the same hereby is, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay in full the Seminole Nation of Indians for all the right, title, interest, and claim which said nation of Indians may have in and to certain lands ceded by article 3 between the United States and said nation of Indians, which was concluded June 14, 1866, and proclaimed August 16, 1866, and which land was then estimated to contain 2,169,080 acres, but which is now, after survey, ascertained to contain 2,037,414.62 acres, said sum of money to be paid as follows: $1,500,000 to remain in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of said nation of Indians and to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from July 1, 1889, said interest to be paid semi-annually to the treasurer of said nation, and the sum of $412,942.20, to be paid to the treasurer of said nation, or to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized by the laws of said nation to receive the same, at such times and in such sums as shall be directed and required by the legislative authority of said nation; this appropriation to become operative upon the execution by the duly appointed delegates of said nation, empowered so to do, of a release and conveyance to the United States of all the right, title, interest, and claim of said nation of Indians in and to said lands, in manner and form satisfactory to the President of the United States, and said release and conveyance, when fully executed and delivered, shall operate to extinguish all claims of every kind and character of said Seminole Nation of Indians in and to the tract of country to which said release and conveyance shall apply.

That the lands acquired by the United States under said agreement shall be a part of the public domain, and sections 16 and 36 of each township, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, are hereby reserved for the use and benefit of the public schools, as provided in the act organizing the Territory of Dakota; and whether surveyed or unsurveyed, said sections shall not be subject to settlement or entry under the provisions of this act or any of the land laws of the United States; that the lands acquired under said agreement, except the 16th and 36th sections, shall be disposed of by the United States to actual settlers only under the provisions of the homestead law (except section 2301 thereof), and under the law relating to town sites: Provided the rights of honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors in the late civil war, as defined and described in sections 2304 and 2305 of the Revised Statutes, shall not be abridged. It is hereby made the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to carefully examine each claim taken under the provisions of this act before issuing a patent to the claimant, and the entryman shall be required to make full proofs; and unless it shall appear that the claim was taken in good faith and that there has been full performance of all the terms and requirements under this act, he shall refuse a patent and declare the prior proceeding before had in such case to be null and void; and all persons settling on land under the provisions of this act shall be required to select the same in square form as near as may be, and to maintain continuous personal residence as required by law on the land and to improve and cultivate the same for that period in the manner required by the homestead laws, and to break up and plow not less than 40 acres of the land filed upon before obtaining title thereto: Provided, That any person who having exhausted his right under existing law, but who is not the owner of a home elsewhere, shall be qualified to make one additional homestead entry upon said lands; and all of the provisions of this section shall apply and be in full force as to the lands included in the recent cession of the Muscogee (or Creek) Nation of Indians heretofore ratified by the present Congress. Any person who may enter upon any part of said lands, in said agreements contained, prior to the time that they are opened to settlement by the proclamation of the President, shall not be permitted to occupy or to make entry of such lands or lay any claim thereto.

Mr. PEEL. I desire to say for the information of the committee that it is a well-known fact from all the discussion of the Oklahoma bill that for many years the great problem and question has been how we were going to acquire title to the Indian Territory—I mean the land ceded to the Government by the Creeks and Seminoles and Cherokees for the purpose of locating other friendly Indians and freedmen upon. The Oklahoma bill when under discussion met with serious opposition from some members upon the sole ground that we were creating a Territorial government over a country to which we had not perfect title. In the appropriation bill of 1885 there is a clause incorporated authorizing the President to appoint a commission to negotiate with the Creeks and Seminoles for a full and complete cession of their lands free from the trust, and also with the Cherokees. That has never been executed until recently in part.

During this discussion or before the five large tribes met in council and unanimously, I believe, by their international council, declared that they would not part with the title. That has been a source of great obstruction. Since this Congress has been in session, or during this session, the Creek Indians, through their proper delegates—and I want to emphasize that by saying the noble Creeks, under the leadership of General Pleasant Porter, a gentleman of unquestioned integrity and ability—came to the President and agreed upon terms under which they would relinquish all their rights to lands amounting to two million six hundred and some odd thousand acres at $1.25 per acre, less what has already been paid. That is exactly what we have been offering for years. That agreement of cession the President sent to Congress with a message. The Senate promptly acted and the House promptly acted. A bill passed the Senate and passed the House ratifying the agreement with the Creeks. It is now before the President for approval. That is disposed of.

Immediately upon that the Seminoles, by their proper authorized delegates, are here. They came for that express purpose. There has been this understanding between the delegates of the Creek Nation that if they ceded their interest to this country in the Oklahoma part at $1.25 per acre, less what has been paid, the Seminoles were to be treated in the same manner. As soon as the ratification of the Creek cession was made the Seminoles came, and their matter had been presented to Congress in a message from the President, and is now before the Committee on Indian Affairs. It is also before the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate. The Senate committee have acted promptly and have reported a bill which is simply in accordance with this amendment. They have a bill on the Calendar to appropriate this amount of money to be paid to these Indians upon the relinquishment of their title to the satisfaction of the President.

The Committee on Indian Affairs have not formally met since the House has been meeting at 10 o'clock, but by personal conference with members of the Committee on Indian Affairs I find they are unanimously of the opinion that this appropriation ought to be made giving to the Seminoles exactly the same amount of money that has been given to the Creeks, less what has been paid heretofore, and that is the exact amount as estimated by the Department. A bill of that kind is now on the Calendar of the Senate, and this amendment has been offered at this late hour in the House on this bill because if it is not put upon this bill it will be impossible to complete the cession during this term of Congress.

It will be observed that the appropriation there incorporated is not to be available and not to be paid until the Seminoles execute a full and complete release and convey to the United States all their right, title, and interest to this land, which release is to be satisfactory to the President. Then the provision is operative. The further amendment in regard to the disposition of the land is a matter for the judgment of the committee. If I understand the theory of this House in relation to protection of homesteads, it complies with the rules and answers to the declarations of the House upon questions of that character. This, I believe, is all I desire to say.

Mr. MACDONALD. I would ask the gentleman from Arkansas if this amendment does not provide for giving parties who have exhausted their homestead right the right to make another entry?

Mr. HOLMAN. I would suggest to my friend from Arkansas, in view of the importance of this provision, that it be printed in the RECORD; that it be passed over now, and go on with the bill and finish it.

Mr. PEEL. That is all right.

Mr. CANNON. As to these lands that we obtained under the treaty of 1866 from the Seminoles, has any part of them been assigned to any other tribe, or are they held under Executive order by the Cheyennes and Arapahoes?

Mr. PEEL. They are not in that part. They are on a part of the Creek reservation.

Mr. HOLMAN. We paid the Seminoles 15 cents an acre for something like 300,000 acres that they ceded under the cession of 1862.

Mr. PEEL. The gentleman from Indiana is mistaken about that. We got from the Creeks 1,300,000 acres.

Mr. HOLMAN. We got from the Creeks 1,300,000 acres.

Mr. PEEL. We got from the Creeks three million four hundred and odd thousand acres, and from the Seminoles over 2,000,000 acres.

Mr. CANNON. What portion of the land that we got from the Creeks under the treaty—being obtained for the purpose of settling friendly Indians and freedmen upon—were assigned or sold to certain Indians? We did not pay $1.25 for these lands, but we do pay $1.25 for all these lands that we get which form a portion of the Oklahoma country and that portion of the Creek lands which formed a portion of what is known as the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation that is held under Executive order.

Now, I do not recollect what the fact may be; but I ask whether any of these lands for which we propose to pay the Seminoles by this appropriation have been sold to other tribes?

Mr. WEAVER. Not at all.

Mr. CANNON. And the proposition is to pay $1.25 an acre.

Mr. PEEL. Less what we have paid.

Mr. ROGERS. In order that this matter may go into the RECORD correctly as to the amount derived from the Seminoles, I will state that artice 3 of the treaty shows that the amount was estimated at $2,169,088.

Mr. PEEL. I believe, Mr. Chairman, that I do not desire to say anything further.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no doubt that the statement as to the number of acres is correct, and yet I do not understand how it can be, because the comparatively small body of land known as Oklahoma contains about 1,800,000 acres, part of which belongs to the Creeks and part to the Seminoles.

Mr. PERKINS. The gentleman is clearly mistaken as to the amount. Notwithstanding the lands sold the Sacs and Foxes, the Poncas and others, we got by the recent cession about 2,800,000 acres.

Mr. HOLMAN. Is it understood that these lands extend beyond the northern branch of the Canadian River?

Mr. PEEL. It is all the west half of their lands.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does it extend as far west as the northern branch of the Canadian River?

Mr. PEEL. Yes, and further.

Mr. WEAVER. It runs clear to the western line.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, I feel not inclined to press this matter, but I want to say to my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] that the bill ratifying the Creek agreement passed both Houses, I believe, without a dissenting voice, and if the committee are satisfied I do not see why we should not vote upon it to-night.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would not ask to have it go over if that course were going to result in any delay.

Mr. PEEL. Well, it may.

Mr. McMILLIN. It will not result in any delay to let this go over until morning.

Mr. WEAVER. It may. The filibustering spirit is very strong just now. [Laughter.]

Mr. McMILLIN. It would not interfere with this.

Mr. WEAVER. It might.

Mr. McMILLIN. If anybody wanted to filibuster could not they do it as well to-night as to-morrow?

Mr. PEEL. The filibusters are not here.

Mr. CANNON. We are the good ones here to-night.

Mr. McMILLIN. We not only appropriate the money for these lands, but we also go outside of that and determine how they shall be disposed of.

Mr. WEAVER. We make the usual provision about the homestead law.

Mr. McMILLIN. I hope the gentleman [Mr. PEEL] will permit it to go over until to-morrow.

Mr. PEEL. I hope gentlemen will let us vote upon it to-night.

Mr. SPRINGER. This is in accordance with the recommendations of the President, of the Interior Department, and of the Indian Committees of both Houses.

Mr. WEAVER. And in exact conformity with the homestead law also.

The question was taken on agreeing to the amendment; and there were—ayes 10, noes 3.

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Chairman, I think there ought to be more members present to vote upon so important a provision, and I shall have to make the point of no quorum.

Mr. PEEL. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. McMILLIN having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. DOCKERY reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 12578) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. PEEL. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolution of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. HEARD: A bill (H. R. 12648) for the relief of Frederick Smith—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12649) for the relief of Mary Jane Pritchett, widow of William R. Pritchett, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MAISH: A bill (H. R. 12650) for the extension and widening of Sheridan street, in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL (by request): A bill (H. R. 12651) for a system of water supply in the city of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 12652) granting a pension to Mrs. Frederika B. Jones—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TAULBEE: Joint resolution (H. Res. 267) providing for a survey of the Ohio River, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

The following bills have been handed in at the Clerk's desk without indorsement:

A bill to amend "An act to incorporate the Georgetown and Tennallytown Railway Company of the District of Columbia," which was received by the President August 10, A. D. 1888, and became a law without his approval.

Also, a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to convey to Anson Rudd, of the State of Colorado, certain real estate in the county of Fremont, in said State.

Also, a bill for the relief of T. F. Riley.

Also, a bill granting a pension to the widow of Michael C. West.

Also, a bill to remove the charge of desertion from the record of John Ryan.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Terrel Hamlin.

Also, a bill for the relief of Sarah Eichelberger.

Also, a bill for the relief of William Craft.

Also, a bill for the relief of Stephen Butler.

Also, a bill for the relief of Samuel F. Eugs.

Also, a bill for the relief of Frederick Ford.

Also, a bill for the relief of Willis N. Arnold.

Also, a bill for the relief of Napoleon B. Giddings.

Also, a bill for the relief of James C. Harrison.

Also, a bill for the relief of the estate of Nathaniel H. Sawyer.

Also, a bill for the relief of the heirs of Myra Clark Gaines.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Dorcus Alford.

Also, a bill granting a pension to George W. Fosdick.

Also, a bill granting a pension to John Lamb.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Mrs. Mary C. McPherson.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Nancy Hamilton.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Rose Goodwill.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Christian Kemback.

Also, a bill granting a pension to William B. Bishop.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Thomas B. Arnold.

Also, a bill granting a pension to James M. Page.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Martin Haas.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Augustus G. Wyeth.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Frederick P. Hardy.

Also, a bill granting a pension to Crolina Thompson.

Also, a bill granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Lapham.

Also, a bill granting an increase of pension to Andrew Casey.

Also, a bill granting an increase of pension to Charles Harding.

Also, a bill to place the name of Edwin L. Drake on the pension-roll.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BOOTHMAN: Petition of William H. Durline and 72 others, ex-Union soldiers of Williams County, Ohio, in favor of the per diem service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Bishop Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Defiance, Ohio, for the publication of the Records of the Rebellion—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. J. E. CAMPBELL: Resolutions of Milliken Post, No. 228, Grand Army of the Republic, of Oxford, and of Granville Thurston Post, No. 213, Grand Army of the Republic, of Lebanon, Ohio, for publication of the official records of the war—to the Committee on Printing.

Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Washington Territory, for prohibition in the District of Columbia—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. CLARDY: Petition of the heirs of Mary A. McGehee, for reference of claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MACDONALD: Memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, in favor of granting pensions to all Union soldiers and sailors who were in rebel prisons—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McKENNA: Petition of farmers of Danville, and of Florin, Cal., for protection to agriculture—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MORROW: Resolution of the Legislature of California, for an appropriation for Eel River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. O'FERRALL: Joint resolution declaring the retirement of Capt. Charles B. Stivers, of Dayton, Ohio, to be legal—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. OSBORNE: Petition of Anna Moore, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROGERS: Petition of L. D. Cain, for a bath-house privilege at Hot Springs, Ark.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. STEPHENSON: Petition of the Turn-Verein of Milwaukee, Wis., against the Blair Sunday-rest bill—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, resolutions of the Chicago Live Stock Exchange, protesting against the enactment of certain laws—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, resolutions of the Farmers' and Labor Unions of Wisconsin, for a just representation of the agricultural interests—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. WHEELER: Petition of Riley Sparks, of Franklin County, Alabama, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Jesse Isbell, of Lauderdale County, Alabama, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. THOMAS WILSON: Petition for the opening of the Sioux reservation—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The following petitions for a national Sunday-rest law were received and severally referred to the Committee on Labor:

By Mr. A. R. ANDERSON: Of Mrs. Lizzie A. Boyd and many other citizens of Grand River, Iowa.

By Mr. A. R. ANDERSON: Of 696 citizens of Iowa.

By Mr. ARNOLD: Of citizens of Providence, R. I.

By Mr. BAYNE: Of citizens of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. KERR: Of citizens of Clinton, Iowa.

By Mr. PERKINS: Of James J. Hartwell and others, citizens of Kansas.

By Mr. WEAVER: Of 633 citizens of Iowa.

The following petitions, praying for a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage, were received and severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. MACDONALD: Of 16 citizens of Willmar, Minn.

By Mr. McKENNA: Of 59 citizens of Alameda, of 53 citizens of Grafton, of 87 citizens of Woodland, of 26 citizens of Yolo, and of 20 citizens of Yolo, Cal.

By Mr. C. A. RUSSELL: Of 84 citizens of Griswold, and of 25 citizens of Killingsly, Conn.

By Mr. SHAW (by request): Of citizens of North East, of Rising Sun, and of Port Deposit, Md.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 27, 1889.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask that the further reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent that the further reading of the Journal be suspended. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. If there be no motion to correct or amend the Journal it will stand approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 3737) for the relief of Sterling H. Tucker and others; and

A bill (S. 3751) for the relief of certain settlers in Hettinger County, Dakota.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House of Representatives to the following bills:

A bill (S. 751) for the relief of the estate of J. J. Pulliam, deceased; and

A bill (S. 3864) granting a pension to Sue B. Johnson.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery;

A bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6896) to require the United States circuit and district judges to instruct the jury in writing in certain cases; and

A bill (H. R. 11165) for the relief of John Gray.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1974) for the erection of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex., with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12383) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. TOWNSHEND, Mr. MAISH, and Mr. STEELE managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes, asked a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CULBERSON, Mr. ROGERS, and Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR managers at the further conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 2070) for the relief of Arno Voss; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 314) for the relief of Henry M. Rector;

A bill (S. 751) for the relief of the estate of J. J. Pulliam, deceased;

A bill (S. 1283) for the erection of a light-house on or near Diamond Shoal, off Cape Hatteras, North Carolina;

A bill (S. 1488) granting an increase of pension to Louisa V. de Kilpatrick, widow of Maj. Gen. Judson Kilpatrick, United States Volunteers;

A bill (S. 3778) to establish the Lincoln land district, in the Territory of New Mexico;

A bill (H. R. 285) for the relief of the legal representatives of H. Corths;

A bill (H. R. 329) for the relief of Chambers & Brown;

A bill (H. R. 341) for the relief of John Farley;

A bill (H. R. 565) for the relief of Mary A. Howse and Lulu H. Howse;

A bill (H. R. 766) for the relief of H. L. Newman;

A bill (H. R. 948) for the relief of William H. Tabarrah;

A bill (H. R. 2688) for the relief of Alfred Breuer;

A bill (H. R. 4489) for the relief of J. M. Hagan;

A bill (H. R. 4581) for the relief of Thomas Matthews and others;

A bill (H. R. 5336) for the relief of George B. Hansell;

A bill (H. R. 5690) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell block of land 108, in the city of Houston, Tex.;

A bill (H. R. 5888) for the relief of William H. Boyd;

A bill (H. R. 6394) for the relief of Hayem & Taylor;

A bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of S. Dillinger & Sons;

A bill (H. R. 7801) for the relief of William F. C. Nindemann, formerly a seaman in the Navy;

A bill (H. R. 7864) to reappropriate to pay for alley condemned in square numbered 493;

A bill (H. R. 7924) for the relief of A. J. McCreary, administrator of the estate of J. M. Hiatt, deceased, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 8053) to extend the time for the redemption of school farms in Beaufort County, South Carolina;

A bill (H. R. 8272) to provide for the payment of F. H. Bates as military instructor at Washington High School, District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9464) for the relief of Hudson G. Lamkin;

A bill (H. R. 10082) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of the widow and orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, late of Lexington, Ky.;"

A bill (H. R. 10481) for the relief of Rev. William Gregston;

A bill (H. R. 10652) to encourage the enlistment of boys as apprentices in the United States Navy;

A bill (H. R. 11658) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; and Joint resolution (S. R. 137) providing for additional telegraphic facilities in the city of Washington during the inaugural ceremony on the 4th day of March, 1889.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12383) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, and asking for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments to the bill and assent to the proposition of the House of Representatives for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. ALLISON, Mr. PLUMB, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PLUMB. I report from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments the bill (H. R. 12490) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890. I give notice that at a later period to-day, if the bill shall be returned from the Printing Office, I shall ask the Senate to consider it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Meanwhile the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PLUMB submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12485) making an appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 5, 9, 12, 13, 18, and 35.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 37, 38, 40, and 41, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$1,400;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named insert "$83,060;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

In line 17, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$2,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,500."

In line 18, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$3,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,500."

In line 20, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$2,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,500."

In lines 21 and 22, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$3,200" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,700."

In lines 1 and 2, page 4 of the bill, strike out "two clerks of class four, $3,600" and insert in lieu thereof "one assistant statistician, $2,000; one clerk of class four;" and in lieu of the sum named in line 7, page 4 of the bill, insert "$34,500."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$10,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 28: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 28, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$7,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of "$50,000" named in said amendment insert "$25,000," and insert after the word "Congress," in said amendment, the following: "On or before the 1st day of February, 1890;" and the Senate agree to the same.

P. B. PLUMB,
C. B. FARWELL,
WILKINSON CALL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

W. H. HATCH,
A. C. DAVIDSON,
E. H. CONGER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate proceed to the consideration of the report of the committee of conference? The Chair hears no objection. Will the Senate agree to the report?

The report was concurred in.

COURT IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. VEST. I notice that the House of Representatives has sent a message refusing to concur in the conference report on House bill 1874. I ask that the action of the House be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes, and asking for a further conference on the amendments of the Senate thereon.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate still further insist on its amendments and agree to the further conference asked by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. WILSON of Iowa, and Mr. EDMUNDS were appointed.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in compliance with the provisions of section 194 of the Revised Statutes, a list embracing the names of the clerks and other persons employed in the several bureaus of his Department during the calendar year ended December 31, 1888, and showing the time each was actually employed and the sums paid to each; which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 25, 1889, a report from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs furnishing information asked for touching the bribery of the Cherokee Council by cattle-men and their agents for the purpose of obtaining leases and a renewal of leases of the lands of the Cherokee Nation; which, with the accompanying papers, was, on motion of Mr. STEWART, ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney-General, transmitting an additional estimate of deficiencies for services rendered in connection with the United States courts for the present and prior fiscal years; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in compliance with law, the reports of heads of bureaus of the War Department showing the condition and character of such papers, etc., as are not needed or useful in the transaction of the current business and which have no permanent value or historical interest; which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting supplemental estimates of appropriations required by the various Departments of the Government to complete the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for prior year; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in compliance with a resolution of the 22d instant, schedules of claims allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department since the allowance of those embraced in House Executive Document No. 59 of the present session; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIAL.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I present the petition of William Syphax, William H. Bruce, and others, being a committee for lot-owners in Columbian Harmony Cemetery, in the District of Columbia, praying for the protection of their rights to the same extent as is assured to lot-owners in other cemeteries in the District of Columbia. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and printed as a document, as it is a very clear and concise statement of the case.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY presented the petition of J. W. Dolph and 158 others, citizens of Essex County, praying for the proposal of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented the petition of P. J. Maverty and 220 others, citizens of Ovid, Mich., and the petition of J. W. Sloan and 28 others, citizens of Tekonsha, Mich., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. VEST presented a memorial of citizens of Missouri, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill or any similar legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. VOORHEES presented a memorial of a large number of citizens of Indiana, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill or any similar legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. BERRY presented resolutions of the Southwestern Lumber Manufacturers' Association, in session at Texarkana, Tex., in favor of the passage of a bill providing for the opening of the Indian Territory for settlement; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PLUMB presented a petition of the mayor and city council of Beaver, Ind. T.; a petition of citizens of Beaver, Ind. T., and a petition of citizens of Council Grove, Kans., praying for the passage of what is known as the Oklahoma bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. DOLPH presented a petition of citizens of Whitman County, Washington Territory, praying for the passage of the bill authorizing the board of commissioners of Whitman County to issue bonds for the construction of a court-house in that county; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MORRILL presented the petition of A. A. Wyman and 26 others (10 voters and 17 women), citizens of Cambridgeport, Vt., and the petition of Joseph Bartlett and 162 others (71 voters and 91 women), citizens of Barton, Vt., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, presented the petition of O. B. Grant and 848 others (391 voters and 457 women), citizens of Frederick, Montgomery, Talbot, and Washington Counties, in the State of Maryland, praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SABIN presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, favoring the passage of a law placing prisoners of war confined in rebel prisons on the pension-roll, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DAWES presented two memorials of citizens of Massachusetts, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill or any similar legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. EVARTS presented a petition of members of the New York bar and of practitioners in the Federal courts, praying for the passage of the bill authorizing corporations to become sureties in certain cases; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PALMER presented two petitions of citizens of Fremont and Harbor Springs, in the State of Michigan, praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of citizens of Dowagiac and Ortonville, in the State of Michigan, and a petition representing over 1,500 citizens of Michigan, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Finance, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3960) granting a pension to Mary B. Hunt, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PLATT, from the Committee on Territories, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3708) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Idaho, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2445) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. PLATT. I desire to say that I shall endeavor during the day to submit a report detailing the facts upon which the claims for the admission of these Territories are based, and that as soon as the amendments are printed I shall ask the Senate to consider the bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bills will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. TELLER, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported two amendments intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SPOONER. On the 20th of February the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] introduced an amendment proposed to be offered by him to the deficiency appropriation bill "to pay the claims for interest of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company of Bremen, the Hamburg-American Packet Company of Hamburg, and the Norse American line of Sweden a sufficient sum to pay said lines interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on such moneys as were exacted from such companies in contravention of treaty provisions and heretofore refunded under the act of June 19, 1878," which was referred to the Committee on Claims. I am instructed by the committee to report the amendment back favorably with an amendment, and with a recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations. I simply want in doing this to commend the consideration of the amendment to that committee. It is not fairly to be considered a private claim. It is being pressed by the German Government and the Swedish Government. The President in his last annual message recommended the payment of this claim, and the Secretary of State, in a communication to the Committee on Claims, has also stated that he regards it as important to the future diplomatic interests of this Government that the claim should be paid.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the Senator who reports the amendment what papers there are accompanying it to go to the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. SPOONER. The Committee on Claims will send to the Committee on Appropriations a report which has been adopted once by the Senate, a very elaborate report, giving the history of these claims, and the communication of the Secretary of State.

Mr. HALE. I think it important that all those papers should go to the committee, because it is now considering the bill.

Mr. SPOONER. All of those papers will go to the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, with the accompanying papers, and printed.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill, providing for an appropriation to pay PHILIP S. POST for reimbursement for expenses incurred in defending his title to a seat as a member of the Fiftieth Congress; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2598) for the relief of William Whitehouse, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on Privileges and Elections to report an amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill, and I am directed to say that it is the report of a majority only of the committee. A minority of the committee dissented from the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed.

Mr. PUGH. I desire to state that the Democratic members of the committee totally dissent from the amendment reported by the Senator from Massachusetts to be made a part of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask that the amendment reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections proposed to be offered to the deficiency appropriation bill be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections will be read.

The amendment was read, as follows:

To enable the President of the United States to offer suitable reward for the detection and conviction of the persons, or either of them, who unlawfully carried away and destroyed the poll-books and ballot-box of Plummerville, Howard Township, Conway County, in the State of Arkansas, on the day of the last election in that State for Representatives in Congress and electors for President and Vice-President, the sum of $25,000, and said reward is hereby authorized.

SALMON FISHERIES OF ALASKA.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. I am directed by the Committee on Fisheries, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3993) to amend section 1963 of the Revised Statutes, and to provide for the better protection of the fur seals and salmon fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes, to report it with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. It is a short bill and a very important one to the fisheries of Alaska. It is very strongly urged by the Fish Commissioner. I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan asks unanimous consent that the bill reported by him may be now considered. It will be read at length for information.

The bill was read.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Fisheries was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the erection of dams, barricades, or other obstructions in any of the rivers of Alaska, with the purpose or result of preventing or impeding the ascent of salmon or other anadromous creatures to their spawning grounds, is hereby declared to be unlawful; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to establish such regulations and surveillance as may be necessary to insure that this prohibition is strictly enforced and to otherwise protect the salmon fisheries of Alaska; and every person who shall be found guilty of a violation of the provisions of this section shall be fined not less than $250 for each day of the continuance of such obstruction.

SEC. 2. That the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries is hereby empowered and directed to institute an investigation into the habits, abundance, and distribution of the salmon of Alaska, as well as the present conditions and methods of the fisheries, with a view of recommending to Congress such additional legislation as may be necessary to prevent the impairment or exhaustion of these valuable fisheries, and placing them under regular and permanent conditions of production.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Fisheries.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DAWES. The title should be amended. I call the attention of the Senator from Michigan to the fact that the bill does not relate to the fur seals, as amended.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. No, sir; it relates to the salmon fisheries of Alaska. The title should be amended.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska."

Mr. PLATT. Does the section of the Revised Statutes which is referred to relate to salmon fisheries?

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. STEWART. I should like to have the bill lie over so that I may look at it. I do not know that I shall want to object to it after I examine it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada moves to reconsider the vote by which the Senate passed the bill.

Mr. DAWES. I wish to say to the Senator from Nevada that unless the bill goes to the other branch immediately it will be entirely useless. It is the result of an investigation of a committee in the other branch with reference to the salmon fisheries only. It has nothing to do with the fur-seal fisheries.

Mr. STEWART. I will enter a motion to reconsider and look at it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada enters a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. STEWART subsequently said: I should like to withdraw my motion to reconsider the bill in regard to the salmon fisheries of Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the motion to reconsider is withdrawn. The bill stands passed.

FISHERIES OF ALASKA.

Mr. HAWLEY. From the Committee on Printing I have several reports to make, mostly concerning current printing, and I should be glad to have immediate action upon them. I submit first a House concurrent resolution relating to the investigation of the fur-seal and other fisheries of Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The concurrent resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That 10,000 extra copies of the testimony taken and the report made by the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries upon the investigation of the fur-seal and the other fisheries of Alaska be printed, to be distributed as follows: To the Senate, 2,000 copies; to the House of Representatives, 4,000 copies; to the Fish Commission, 1,500 copies, and to the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Treasury, each, 1,250 copies.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask the Senate to proceed to the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

EULOGIES ON REPRESENTATIVE BURNES.

Mr. HAWLEY. I also report favorably, from the Committee on Printing, the joint resolution (H. Res. 266) to print the eulogies on James N. Burnes, of Missouri, and I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FISHERIES REPORT FOR 1887.

Mr. HAWLEY. I also report, from the Committee on Printing, a concurrent resolution to print extra copies of the report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for 1887.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the year 1887 be printed, and that there be printed 11,000 extra copies, of which 3,000 shall be for the use of the Senate, 6,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, 1,500 for the use of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries, and 500 for sale by the Public Printer, the illustrations to be obtained by the Public Printer under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing.

INDIAN EDUCATION AND CIVILIZATION.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution submitted by Mr. MANDERSON February 13, 1889, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States (the House of Representatives concurring), That 5,000 copies of the report on Indian education and civilization, by Alice C. Fletcher, be printed; 1,000 for the use of the Senate, 2,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 for distribution by the Commissioner of Education.

INAUGURAL ADDRESSES OF PRESIDENTS, ETC.

Mr. HAWLEY. From the Committee on Printing, to whom was recommitted the joint resolution (S. R. 132) to print 10,000 copies of a compilation of the inaugural addresses of the Presidents of the United States, from George Washington to Benjamin Harrison, for the first century of Presidential inaugurations, with authenticated incidents connected therewith, biographical sketches of the Presidents from official sources, together with steel-plate portraits of the Presidents and steel-plate illustrations of the Capitol and White House, I report a substitute which may be considered as an original bill, the committee makes so many changes in it to meet the objections and include the matter that Senators desired to add. I ask for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (S. R. 141) to print 10,000 copies of a compilation of the inaugural addresses of the Presidents of the United States, from George Washington to Benjamin Harrison, inclusive, for the first century of Presidential inaugurations, and for other purposes, was read the first time by title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there be printed, under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing, 10,000 copies of the inaugural addresses, in chronological order, from George Washington to Benjamin Harrison, inclusive, covering the first century of the inaugurations of the Presidents of the United States, together with certain historical data connected with the inauguration ceremonies, brief biographical sketches of the Presidents; the Declaration of Independence; the Constitution of the United States; the farewell addresses of Presidents Washington and Jackson; a steel engraving of the Capitol; steel portraits of the Presidents; and a suitable index by subjects.

SEC. 2. Three thousand of said copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 6,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 copies for the use of the compilers and editors of the work; and the sum of $5,130, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of printing the illustrations at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, which is hereby directed to do that work.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senate joint resolution 138, having been disposed of by the resolution reported from the Committee on Printing, and passed, will be indefinitely postponed, if there be no objection.

STATISTICS OF MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Commissioner of Labor transmits a special report relating to marriage and divorce. I report from the Committee on Printing a joint resolution to print it, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The joint resolution (S. R. 142) to print 20,000 copies of the special report of the Commissioner of Labor on the statistics of and relating to marriage and divorce, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there be printed 20,000 copies in brown cloth binding of the special report of the Commissioner of Labor on the statistics of and relating to marriage and divorce in the several States and Territories and in the District of Columbia; 10,000 copies for the use of members of the House of Representatives, 5,000 copies for the use of members of the Senate, and 5,000 copies for the use of the Department of Labor.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $9,249, or so much thereof as may be necessary to defray the cost of the publication of said report, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALIEN MINING CORPORATIONS IN THE TERRITORIES.

Mr. STEWART. I am directed by the Committee on Mines and Mining, who were instructed by a resolution of the Senate adopted October 9, 1888—

To ascertain and report to the Senate at the beginning of the next session of Congress the number of aliens, foreign companies, and corporations owning or working mines in the Territories of the United States, together with the length of time they have been so engaged, the amount of capital invested by them in mining operations, as near as practicable, the amount of dividends paid, and the amount of money expended by them in such mining operations, and what effect the owning and operating of mines by aliens, foreign companies, and corporations has had upon the growth and prosperity of the Territories—to submit a report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be received and printed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 143) to equalize the distribution of hot water at Hot Springs, Ark.; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. VOORHEES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Post-Office appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying communication from the Postmaster-General, referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. GORMAN and Mr. VOORHEES submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

CALIFORNIA, OREGON, AND NEVADA CLAIMS.

Mr. STEWART. I have here a resolution which I offer, and I desire its present consideration. It is the substance of a bill that was reported to the Committee on Military Affairs and passed here and which has been reported favorably in the other House. It requires the investigation of certain matters by the board of war commissioners now in session. I am informed at the War Department that a resolution of the Senate will answer the whole purpose. It is not probable that the bill will get through, and I should like to have the resolution passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War, through the Board of War Claims Examiners, appointed under section 2 of the act of Congress entitled "An act for the benefit of the States of Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Nebraska, California, Kansas, and Nevada, and the Territories of Washington and Idaho, and Nevada when a Territory," approved August 4, 1886, be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to examine all accounts, papers, and evidence which heretofore have been, or which hereafter may be, submitted to him in support of the war claims of the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada, and Nevada when a Territory, growing out of the war of the rebellion, and in suppressing Indian hostilities and disturbances during the war of the rebellion, and in guarding the overland mail and emigrant routes during and subsequent to the war of the rebellion, and to ascertain and state what amount of money each of said States and Nevada when a Territory actually expended, and what obligations they incurred for the purposes aforesaid, whether such expenditures were made or obligations incurred in actual warfare, or in recruiting, enlisting, enrolling, organizing, arming, equipping, supplying, clothing, subsisting, drilling, furnishing, transporting, and paying their volunteers, militia, and home guards, and for bounty, extra pay, and relief paid to their volunteers, militia, and home guards, and in preparing their volunteers, militia, and home guards in camp and field to perform military service for the United States.

The Secretary of War is also directed to ascertain what amount of interest has been paid by each of said States and Nevada when a Territory on obligations incurred for the purposes above enumerated. The Secretary of War shall report to Congress the amount of money which may be thus ascertained to have been actually paid by each of said States and Nevada when a Territory on account of the matters above enumerated, and also the amount of interest actually paid or assumed by each of said States and Nevada when a Territory on moneys borrowed for the purposes above enumerated. And the Secretary of War shall also report the circumstances and exigencies under which, and the authority by which, such expenditures were made, and what payments have been made on account thereof by the United States.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move to strike out the clause "report to Congress." The Senate has no power to ask that a report be made to Congress.

Mr. STEWART. It should be a direction to report to the Senate.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let it read "report to the Senate." It is a resolution, I understand, for information.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the words "to Congress" and insert "to the Senate;" so as to read:

The Secretary of War shall report to the Senate the amount of money, etc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be so modified. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

OFFICE OF SUPERVISING ARCHITECT.

Mr. SPOONER submitted the following resolution, which was read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds is hereby authorized in pursuing the investigation ordered by the resolution of the Senate of December 21, 1888, to employ a stenographer and a messenger, to send for persons and papers, and have leave to sit during any recess of the Senate prior to December next, and to take testimony at any place in the United States.

That all the necessary expenses of said committee or of any subcommittee thereof be paid out, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of said committee or subcommittee, of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The committee is also authorized to cause its proceedings and the testimony taken before it to be printed from time to time as it may see fit.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the resolution go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 11197) for the removal of the political disabilities of Henry A. Ramsay. There are special reasons why I want to get the bill through to-day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there further morning business?

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois rise to morning business?

Mr. CULLOM. No, sir; I do not. But I ask for the consideration of a conference report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there is no further morning business, the Chair will recognize the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN].

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent to call up House bill 11197, which is merely for the purpose of removing political disabilities. There is reason why it should be passed to-day.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on Senate bill 2851. If that motion is in order I should like to have the question put.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senator from Illinois to yield until this bill may be disposed of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the conference report in that case has been agreed to. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Maryland, if there be no further morning business.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senator from Maryland will allow me, I will state that there are two provisions reported as disagreed to by the conferees of the two Houses.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conference report was agreed to. The question is upon the disagreeing votes between the two Houses, which is not a matter of privilege.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of those provisions about which the conferees disagreed. If there is any way of getting the matter before the Senate I should like to do it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair had recognized the Senator from Maryland first to make a motion.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senator from Illinois to give way.

Mr. CULLOM. I have no objection to the Senator having the bill passed if it will take no time.

Mr. HARRIS. Do I understand the Senator from Illinois and the Chair to say that the conference report heretofore made on the interstate-commerce bill has been agreed to by the Senate?

Mr. CULLOM. Those provisions of the conference report about which the conferees agreed were agreed to by the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. Has either House asked for a further conference?

Mr. CULLOM. Yes, sir.

Mr. HARRIS. Which House?

Mr. CULLOM. The House of Representatives asked for it.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I think the only thing for us to do is to grant the conference asked for by the House of Representatives and let the Chair appoint the conferees. I do not think it is a proper subject for discussion before the Senate in the present stage.

Mr. PLATT. May I ask permission of the Senator from Maryland to state my recollection of the matter?

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT. The Senate conferees disagreed with the House conferees as to two propositions, agreed with them as to the other propositions, and reported accordingly. In the House the report of the House conferees was agreed to. When the message came to the Senate the conference report was presented by the chairman of the conference committee, the Senator from Illinois. Pending the discussion as to whether the report should be agreed to the Senator from Ohio moved to instruct.

Mr. SHERMAN. I moved that the Senate recede from its disagreement to one amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. And agree to the same with an amendment.

Mr. PLATT. And pending that, as I understood, other business intervened and the whole matter went over. I do not know what the record will show.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the Journal be read and let us see exactly what the status of the conference report is.

Mr. REAGAN. The Senate adjourned upon the motion of the Senator from Ohio that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the third amendment of the House.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senate was considering the question of receding from its opposition to the House amendment when the Senate adjourned.

Mr. HARRIS. The Journal must fix the status of the report. Let us see what the Journal shows.

Mr. CULLOM. That is very proper to be done. My impression was that the conference report was regularly before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is no conference report before the Senate. The conference report was made to both Houses and agreed to. The conferees reported a disagreement between the two Houses upon amendments numbered 3 and 7 to the bill. Those are open questions between the two Houses. The Senator from Ohio has moved that the Senate recede from its disagreement to amendment numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment. That matter was pending before the Senate, and was superseded by the resumption of the consideration of the unfinished business when the Senate adjourned.

Mr. CULLOM. Does the Chair hold that if the conference report was agreed to that motion was regularly before the Senate and could be considered?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was regularly before the Senate, but was superseded before the adjournment by the resumption of the consideration of the unfinished business, being the resolution offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], which comes up at 2 o'clock.

Mr. CULLOM. If I knew what motion to make to get this bill before the Senate——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to move the consideration of a bill.

Mr. REAGAN. The motion of the Senator from Ohio, that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the House amendment numbered 3, with an amendment, is the pending motion, and to that I propose to add another motion, that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the House amendment numbered 7.

Mr. CULLOM. The important thing is to get a motion before the Senate that will enable us to consider the subject at all. That is what I am for.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. CULLOM. He yielded to the Senator from Illinois.

HENRY A. RAMSAY.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 2764, being House bill 11197.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there further morning business? If there be none, the Calendar under Rule VIII being in order, the Senator from Maryland moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill named by him.

Mr. REAGAN. Before passing from the interstate-commerce bill, if the Senator from Maryland will allow me——

Mr. GORMAN. It will take but a second to pass the bill I wish considered if the Senator will allow it to go on.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill referred to by the Senator from Maryland? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11197) for the removal of the political disabilities of Henry A. Ramsay.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in the affirmative.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CULLOM. I move to take up the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, for the purpose of getting before the Senate the question of the consideration of the disagreement between the House of Representatives and the Senate on that bill.

Mr. REAGAN. If the Senator will make his motion to proceed to the consideration of the conference report, it seems to me it would be the motion in order.

Mr. CULLOM. The Chair holds that that report is not before the Senate.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think I have the floor on the pending question whenever it is taken up.

Mr. CULLOM. So the Senator has.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois moves to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio is entitled to the floor on the pending bill.

Mr. CALL. I object to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question then recurs on the motion.

Mr. REAGAN. On what motion?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is not debatable. Let the bill be taken up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not a debatable question.

Mr. REAGAN. Is not a conference report a privileged question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion made by the Senator from Illinois is that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill, the morning business having been concluded and the Calendar under Rule VIII being in order.

Mr. CULLOM. That brings up the whole subject.

Mr. REAGAN. The question I asked is whether the consideration of a conference report is not a privileged question that supersedes other questions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the committee of conference have reported and the report has been acted on.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator will allow me to say that if the bill is taken up, that brings the whole question before the Senate as to the disagreement between the two Houses.

Mr. REAGAN. Is that question debatable?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is debatable when taken up. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Illinois.

The motion was agreed to.

ROBERT M'NUTT.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I ask the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Illinois to yield to me, that I may call up a bill that will take but a moment.

Mr. CULLOM. If there is any debate I shall object.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. There will be no debate.

Mr. CULLOM. I will yield if it takes no time in discussion.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I ask unanimous consent to call up Order of Business 2784, being House bill 157.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the Senate may now proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 157) correcting the military record of Robert McNutt. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. REAGAN. That is merely temporarily laying aside the interstate-commerce bill.

Mr. CALL. I ask consent to say that there was unanimous consent given yesterday that at the conclusion of the three hours devoted to the Calendar the bill known as the bill to reimburse the State of Florida for expenses incurred in suppressing Indian hostilities should be taken up for consideration. I do not desire to lose the advantage of that unanimous consent, and I will ask the Senator from Ohio, who has given way to the Senator from Iowa, if he will not allow this bill to be considered now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON]?

Mr. CULLOM. I do not object if it takes no time.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 157) correcting the military history of Robert McNutt.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the third and seventh amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, the third amendment of the House disagreed to by the Senate seems to me so manifestly just that if I can get the attention of the Senate directed to the point in controversy I believe it will approve of the amendment and in that way secure the immediate passage of this important bill.

There are two amendments to this bill not disposed of by the conference committee, one of which I shall comment upon in a moment, and the other gives to the State courts jurisdiction in certain cases of matters arising under the interstate-commerce law. I am not prepared to give any opinion upon the second amendment except to express the general belief that in all questions of internal commerce local in character the State courts may properly be intrusted with the enforcement of national law.

There never has been any difficulty growing out of the jurisdiction given to the State courts in suits in which national banks are interested, and I do not believe there will be any serious difficulty in conferring upon the State courts jurisdiction in respect to the matters of interstate commerce, reserving, however, the right to appeal to or transfer those cases to the courts of the United States.

But the amendment I have to deal with seems to me manifestly just. This amendment put on by the House of Representatives declares:

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, to carry refined oils and other petroleum products, cotton-seed oil, and turpentine for any shipper, in tank or cylinder cars, who shall own, lease, or control the same in any manner, except upon the condition that said carrier shall charge the same rate for the transportation of said products in wooden packages or barrels, in car-load lots, as in said tank or cylinder cars, the said tank and cylinder and said wooden packages and barrels being carried free in each case.

So simple a proposition as that, one would suppose, would be acceded to without question, because it only prescribes a rule of equality, a rule of equity that whether oil is carried in cars called tank-cars or is carried in barrels in box-cars on the same railroad train, the cost of carrying it whether in the one kind of vehicle or the other should be the same, and the shippers should have equal rights and facilities in the transshipment of oil.

But it has so happened—perhaps my State is more deeply interested than any other—that a powerful corporation has grown up, which I have nothing to say against, that desires and seeks to obtain a monopoly of the oil-carrying and oil-producing trade. One of the methods by which it seeks to accomplish that purpose is by building tank-cars of an expensive character in which oil is transported.

Those tank-cars are furnished by the oil company, owned by it, and organized as an equipment company to furnish different railroads, but to be used only by the oil company. In this way the oil company get such an advantage over all other producers and shippers of oil as to defeat the general purpose of the interstate-commerce law, which declares that all shippers shall be treated alike.

This company, under the name of the Standard Oil Company, has such means that it is able to provide not only cars but if necessary to buy railroads outright, to absorb and monopolize all kinds of industries connected with oil producing and oil refining. It associates itself with other corporations and other monopolists in various forms, combining in one great management or trust probably fifty or one hundred different corporations. Some of these become equipment companies to furnish cars for railroads, and as they alone can build these cars they are furnished to a common carrier upon the condition that no other shippers shall use them.

They have the complete and absolute monopoly of this business as perfectly as any monopoly that can exist. I do not complain of this company. I have no desire to arraign them simply because they seek to get by their superior management and capital an advantage in trade and in this way absolutely to crush out and break down all forms of opposition.

Mr. President, in the first place I say that no railroad company is authorized by the general principle of the law of common carriers to hire any car or mode of transportation that is not free and open to all alike. This is opposed to the very basis and foundation of our interstate-commerce law.

If that can be violated in one case it may break down the rule of equity in all cases. I am in favor of the general principle asserted in this law, that every railroad company shall be required to furnish the same facilities and the same cars and the same mode of transportation to all alike, whether it be to a poor shipper or a rich shipper, that it shall treat them alike, and that it shall not give to a corporation having unbounded and unlimited capital the right to furnish it with cars, and in this way escape from the universal law applicable to all common carriers; that they must treat all alike, and carry for the rich and for the poor upon precisely the same terms and conditions.

But by this device of organizing companies outside of the common carrier, calling themselves equipment companies or shipping companies or shippers, they are enabled by their patents or superior wealth to furnish to the railroads cars upon condition that those cars shall only be used for them. There is no rule of equity in this; there is no rule of justice in it. It breaks down the whole law of common carrier from turret to foundation-stone. If this principle can be adopted as the law, then every shipper will seek to gain an advantage by furnishing his own car, a duty which the law imposes upon the common carrier.

Now, with regard to express companies and the like, this amendment does not affect them in the least, because the express companies when they put their car upon a line of transportation are bound by the law of common carriers to carry for all alike, and neither the Adams Express Company nor the United States Express Company nor the American Express Company can violate that law any more than a railroad company can.

But, sir, if the principle I am contending for is not correct, then the Adams Express Company can put on their special cars and can discriminate in favor of shippers, although that is now denied to them. If the great and powerful corporation to which I allude is able to furnish to the railroad companies cars specially adapted for its use and upon condition that they shall be exclusively used for the work of this one shipper, then there is established a monopoly which crushes out everybody that is engaged in the same trade.

Mr. President, just that state of things is existing in the State of Ohio. It exists also in several other States. The Standard Oil Company, by its various machinery and its organized associated companies, does furnish what are called tank or cylinder cars for the transportation of its own oil and nobody else's. The railroad companies do not furnish to other shippers the same facilities, and why? They say, "We can better afford to give this business to the Standard Oil Company because that company is strong enough and powerful enough to hire its cars, and it saves us the expense of building cars," and therefore it gives a great advantage to one shipper—it practically gives a monopoly to one shipper.

It is not for the railroad to say, "We can not afford to buy these cars." It is the business of the railroad not only to furnish the track but to furnish the car. Nobody denies or doubts that. The railroad companies acknowledge that duty. They do furnish cars and they furnish cars to various persons. This amendment as it now stands declares that where any company ships oil on tank or cylinder cars owned by themselves on which nobody else can carry oil, if a railroad company transports oil in that kind of cars, it shall furnish the same facilities in other cars furnished by the same railroad to carry the oil of other shippers.

The railroad company may say, "We can not afford to buy tank-cars or cylinder-cars." Then all that this amendment says is, "If you can not do it and furnish to the small shippers the same cars the large ones furnish to themselves, you shall transport the same number of gallons in barrels over your road for the same price and upon the same terms and conditions that you charge a shipper who furnishes his own exclusive car"—the same price for the same quality of oil, the same kind of property.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. I will, sir; certainly.

Mr. HARRIS. Suppose the carrier does carry the same number of gallons of oil for the one company and the other at precisely the same rate, but in one case it uses rolling-stock that does not belong to the carrier but does belong to the shipper; does the Senator think that it is not just and proper that a reasonable allowance should be made to the owner of the rolling-stock for the uses that the railroad company is making of it?

Mr. SHERMAN. I can answer that question. I do not deny it, and the courts, in a case to which I will refer after awhile, say that a reasonable allotment should be made to the shipper who furnishes cars for the use of those cars, but it must be a reasonable allotment, and not a discrimination.

Mr. PLATT. The amendment does not permit that.

Mr. SHERMAN. It does. Here is the fact. Do you desire fair play between all shippers alike? The principle of the interstate-commerce law and the reason why I voted for it and have thus far supported it in all its meanderings is that it does provide one uniform rule for all alike; but if it can be evaded or avoided by one favored shipper furnishing his own peculiar car, giving him the advantage of that peculiar mode of transportation, as a matter of course it makes an absolute, conclusive, and a perfect monopoly. If you allow a powerful company like the Standard Oil Company—governed by some of the ablest men in the country; I know them and respect them, and have not a word to say against them; they are doing business to advance their own interest, as all other people do——

Mr. BLAIR. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. I should rather not be interrupted in the middle of a sentence.

Mr. BLAIR. I will wait until the Senator concludes his sentence.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have forgotten it now; go on.

Mr. BLAIR. I would ask the Senator if he believes the Standard Oil Company or the corporations it deals with have any right to permit them to place rolling-stock upon the railroads at all? Are they transportation companies? Have they any right to transport property upon the transportation lines of the United States and thus to transfer themselves and the business of the Standard Oil Company, which is to manufacture oil, into a transportation corporation of the United States, and thus become really a railroad corporation of the United States?

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me answer that.

Mr. BLAIR. If the Senator will permit me, there is the radical difficulty about all this business, and I should be very glad to see the Senator's great powers of mind directed towards it.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator had been here he would have heard me in the outset of my remarks state distinctly that I did not believe that any company ought to be allowed to furnish rolling-stock for a railroad company, that it defeats the object of the law. I do not wish to be interrupted in my argument. I have already prepared, and it is lying on the table of the Senate, a proposition that cuts this thing up by the roots, and I tender it to the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce. If he will take this general, broad rule contained in my amendment and put it on as a substitute for the House amendment it will correct all these evils. I will read it:

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to transport cars for any shipper who shall own, lease, or control the same, except upon the condition that said carrier shall carry upon said cars the property of all shippers without discrimination or favor, or shall furnish similar cars to all shippers upon the same terms and conditions.

Now, let us take a case. In this particular case there is a company organized as one of the subordinate agents of the Standard Oil Company. It is really what is called an equipment company. It furnishes a peculiar kind of car to the railroad company, which is a common carrier bound by law to treat all shippers alike, and yet this car is leased to this common carrier upon the express condition that nobody shall use that car running over the highway of the nation except one particular person or corporation.

I say that practice ought to be pulled up by the roots, and that no company, whether it is called a construction company, an equipment company, or by any other name, ought to be allowed to furnish any vessels or cars to a railroad company unless they are dedicated to the common use of the whole people.

Mr. MITCHELL. May I ask the Senator from Ohio a question in reference to this proposed amendment?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. MITCHELL. If this were adopted and should become part of the interstate-commerce law, I ask if it would not place it in the power, by the permission of law, of any railroad company to refuse to carry cars not owned or controlled by that company.

Mr. SHERMAN. Not at all.

Mr. MITCHELL. Why not under the conditions specified in this amendment?

Mr. SHERMAN. It does not read so at all. There are equipment companies formed all over this country. There are hundreds of them now. It is a favorite way by which railroad companies seek to evade and avoid their duty of furnishing cars, sometimes, it is said, because they are not able to do it. Sometimes some of the strongest companies in the United States that command millions and hundreds of millions of dollars of capital hire their cars from equipment companies. If they hire their cars and run according to the common law of carriers to treat all people alike, nobody would object.

It does not make any difference to the shipper whether his load is carried upon a hired car or a car owned by the railroad company, but when the car is placed upon the railroad tracks it is then placed upon a government institution, either of the State or the nation, and the railroad is an agency of government, built by permission of the government, and ought to be controlled by the government; and then when a private company or any corporation puts a car on that track it is subject to the law of the road. Suppose under the old stage-coach system——

Mr. STEWART. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Ohio——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAWLEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. SHERMAN. I prefer not to do so. I merely read the amendment for information. I have not offered it yet, but I think it is the right thing to do.

All I want now is to secure to my own constituents, men who are engaged in an humble way in trying to develop the oil industry of the country, a chance to refine their oil; men who are comparatively small shippers and who want the use of the common roads of the country on the same terms and privileges that their rivals and competitors have. All they ask is not injustice, not inequality, but they demand that they shall have the same facilities.

If this oil must be carried in tank-cars let them have the same use of these cars put upon the common highway as the Standard Oil Company. Do not give to the Standard Oil Company because it can buy cars and buy railroads—sometimes it is said they can buy everything——

Mr. GEORGE. And buy railroad decisions, too.

Mr. SHERMAN. I say it is not fair, it is not just, it is not right to give to these men on account of their power to become construction companies or equipment companies, or anything else that you may call them, to control the ordinary law of the road and to give an advantage and a privilege to oil carried in their tank-cars or in their cylinder cars as against the common transportation furnished by men engaged in the same business in a more humble way in barrels made by the coopers of the country.

Why, Mr. President, it seems so plain and clear a proposition that when it was adopted by the House I supposed it would be at once adopted here. The principle of justice underlying this proposition has been maintained by the Interstate Commerce Commission in a very valuable decision made by them in the first volume of their reports, a decision of marked ability by the chief of that commission, Judge Cooley.

I do not intend now to quote it, except to state the syllabus of it. I find it better stated in their report recently sent to us than I could state it, and I will give the syllabus of the decision, the substance of which I should like to see carried out and applied in this amendment. The English law is much more perfect and much more broad and comprehensive than our law, but I have no doubt we are progressing in the same direction.

In the case of George Rice against the Illinois Central Railroad Company and others the commission says:

When for a special traffic, e. g., the transportation of petroleum oils, a carrier provides rolling-stock for one method, but does not provide it for another for which it publishes rates, but the shippers are expected to provide the same, the terms on which such rolling stock is to be provided should be uniform and be published with the rate-sheets, and can not lawfully be left to be the subject of bargain and of different terms in the case of different shippers.

It is properly the business of a carrier by railroad to supply the rolling-stock for the freights he offers or proposes to carry; and if the diversities and peculiarities of traffic are such that this is not always practicable, and consignors are allowed to supply it for themselves, the carrier must not allow its own deficiencies in this particular to be made the means of putting at unreasonable disadvantage those who make use in the same traffic of the facilities it supplies.

There is the nut and germ of the whole thing. Here these railroad companies furnish to the Standard Oil Company certain rates and charges if they carry oil in their own cars furnished by them, upon an agreement that no other company and no other shipper shall have the use of these cars, and the rate furnished by shippers who have to ship in barrels is higher.

But it is sometimes said, "Why do not these other shippers furnish their tank-cars?" We might as well say, if complaint is made against a railroad, "Well, then, why do you not build a railroad?"

It is just as bad for a man worth $20,000, carrying on a reasonable business, to say to him, "Well, why do you not furnish tank and cylinder cars?" He will answer you that he can not do it, and the actual evidence shows that when some of these men undertook to get tank-cars of their own construction to carry oil in competition with these great rivals, they found that their rivals were protected by patents in some cases, and in some cases that manufacturing companies could not afford to get the ill-will of this great and powerful corporation by building cars for anybody but the company who furnished the demand for the greater number.

These commissioners have touched the very kernel of this proposition. It is the duty of the railroad companies to furnish cars. If they do not do it it is because they want to have cars furnished to them for nothing, and thus enable a particular shipper to have an advantage over all other shippers.

The other men, the smaller dealers, manufacturing oils, etc., have to buy barrels; they have to go to the cooper and buy them. Each barrel would probably have 50 gallons in it. They have to use them, and they roll them on the car.

It is sometimes said that when more business is done for one shipper the railroad company should be allowed to charge more favorable rates. I admit that as a general rule, unless this discrimination is caused by the neglect of a common carrier to furnish cars alike to all, they can not take advantage of their own wrong because they neglect to perform this primary duty of a common carrier. They should, therefore, impose such terms and conditions as will make the shipment in any other kind of car impossible.

Mr. President, this amendment of the House of Representatives simply says that if they carry oil in tank-cars, well and good, they may allow to the shipper a reasonable rate for the use of the car, or if the tank-cars are furnished by the railroad company they must furnish them to all persons alike, and on the other hand if in competition with the Standard Oil Company the other shippers are compelled from the necessities of the case and their inability to buy tank and cylinder cars, so that they may stand as equal rivals with this great corporation, then the common carriers must carry the oil in barrels as cheaply as they carry oil in tanks. The tank on the car or above the car or part of the car weighs more than all the barrels containing the same number of gallons of oil. That is shown by the testimony in this particular case.

Sometimes it is said that it is more costly to handle the oil in barrels than the oil in tanks, but that is avoided by the railroad company requiring all shippers who hire a car and transport by car-loads to load and unload, and if the transportation is carried in the form of barrels, the shipper must load and unload if he charters a whole car. That is the law of all the railroads, and the same law applies to the tank-cars.

Mr. President, there is that justice at the bottom of this proposition, placed here by the House of Representatives. that, if disregarded, will practically give to a single corporation in this country the absolute control not only of the exploring and obtaining and refining in all its various parts of the petroleum of our country, but give them the absolute monopoly in transporting it to every part of our country.

It is sometimes said still the price goes down. So it does. I believe that this great corporation is managed with as much ability and as much care for the public interests as any such corporation could be; but, after all, the only safety in this country is to have plenty of competition, to invite and encourage this competition by the humbler and feebler persons engaged in this traffic, and this amendment will tend to do that.

If this amendment is not adopted and the principle that is now carried out and must be carried out without the aid of some legislation shall be continued, then it must be expected that the entire traffic in this great product of nature, one of the most remarkable discoveries of modern times, will be absolutely controlled by five or six men. Then when the control is absolute, they are better than human nature has ever furnished if they do not then begin to advance the price and add to the enormous profits that have been confessedly made by this great corporation.

I have no purpose to interfere with them if they will only treat other shippers fairly and put them on a footing of perfect equality. If they want to become an equipment company and will put their tank-cars on and allow everybody else to use them on the same terms and conditions which they themselves do on the payment of a fair and reasonable charge, I have no objection; but when their overgrown and overpowering wealth is the means to drive out of this humble competition such men as those represented in these lawsuits, then I say it is unjust, and my sense of equity rebels against it.

I do think, therefore, that the adoption of this amendment would be wise in every sense of the word. If they choose to furnish cars let them furnish to all alike.

Sometimes it is said, "Why, it is unreasonable to ask these shippers to furnish these cars for somebody else to compete with them." When this shipper becomes a manufacturer of machinery for railroads, a manufacturer of cars, it then is no longer an oil refiner or an oil transporter, but it becomes then a manager of railroads, an owner of railroad cars, and stands on a different footing; and when the shipper puts his cars on a road they ought to be subject to the law of the road. There is no other rule which can be adopted.

Now, Mr. President, give to these shippers the enormous advantages of wealth, the great power that has gradually stricken down one after another of all those engaged in the competition, and what will be the result? Without these special privileges furnished by the construction of the law they have advantages enough, God knows, in the struggle for trade in this great product of nature. Let them have it. I see no way to avoid it. Capital and skill and power and organization will tell in any business, and in that way no doubt many of these great business firms are built up, but the law should see that the impartial scale should be held up in the eye of the world, and if the advantages come by capital and skill that the law at least is blind to wealth and power.

Give all an equal chance. If they want to furnish their cars and become an equipment company, let their cars obey the law of the road and be hired out by a common carrier to any man who wants them.

Besides that, here is another great advantage they have. They cross railroads and county roads and township roads; they cross farms, invade the whole community for 300 miles to build a pipe-line running from one point to a great city 300 miles away. They use the land of thousands of farms, the highway of every passenger, to build these pipe-lines, and then they use these tank-lines for their sole and only use, excluding their competitors from the use of the same privileges, although these privileges are the grant of a corporation under State law.

That ought to be corrected among the various things that are coming from time to time in this country that ought to be attended to. When any man or any set of men build a pipe-line to transport their products from one point to another they should be required to transport anybody else's products over that same line at a reasonable rate and price. That is not any part of their business. Their business is producing and refining oil, not transporting it; and when they engage in the business of transportation, although they call themselves an oil company, they must be subject to the laws of transportation, which always are just and equal and fair and will give to the cart of the poor laborer going by the roadside on Pennsylvania avenue or on any of the great streets of our cities the same right of way that is given to the most gorgeous equipages found in our streets, and so it must be given in all these great commercial transactions, especially in transportation where it is from State to State over roads that owe their life and existence and all their privileges to corporative power and to legislative will.

There must be justice, there must be equity in these transactions between the rich and the poor, between the great corporation and the humblest dealer in oil, the poor refiner who disposes of eight or ten barrels a day in his humble occupation and hauls it in home-made cooper barrels to the railroad to be transshipped to some distant place, must be treated on the same plane of equality as this giant corporation now dealing with some thirty millions of barrels a year.

Mr. STEWART. The problem of civilization depends upon organized effort. Individuals can do but little. Government is an organized effort, and all partnerships and corporations must necessarily be organized efforts. Co-operation is the foundation of all efforts for developing the resources of the country and contributing to the happiness and comfort of man.

We are very liable to confound legitimate associations, which do so much to bless mankind, with the inconveniences that grow out of them in the way of monopolies.

This amendment affords a very good illustration of the dangers of interfering with enterprise. It is proposed to require railroad companies to carry oil freights as cheaply in barrels, where they have to load and unload, as they carry them in tank-cars prepared especially for the purpose. These tank-cars are a great improvement. They greatly cheapen the product to the people. There is no doubt about that.

It is complained that in using tank-cars the price of oil is reduced so low to the consumer that competition is destroyed. It seems to me that if this is so others should combine and have organized effort and still further bring down the price; but to destroy this organization (the Standard Oil Company) and prevent it from enjoying the advantages of its enterprise without building up any others, will greatly increase the price to the consumer. This must be looked after.

The amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio which he thinks will cure all the difficulties seems to me subject to many objections. The amendment provides:

> That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to transport cars for any shipper who shall own, lease, or control the same, except upon the condition that said carrier shall carry upon said cars the property of all shippers without discrimination or favor, or shall furnish similar cars to all shippers upon the same terms and conditions.

If this were passed into a law and enforced it might and probably would be construed to require the railroad companies to convey oil or any other product as cheaply on its own cars as it would carry it on cars furnished to it, which would be a great injustice and allow nothing for the making and furnishing of the cars.

Mr. SHERMAN. The shippers can use the cars, but when they go on the road they must be subject to the law of the road.

Mr. STEWART. There is no difficulty about others going on the roads and combining to furnish their own cars. It may have made a few men rich, but in becoming rich they have undoubtedly reduced the price of oil to the consumer beyond what anybody ever anticipated.

Then there is another suggestion made by the Senator from Ohio, that the pipe-lines should be used in common. That is a practical impossibility. It would undoubtedly mix the oil passing through the same pipe-lines. It does not appear to me that they could belong to different companies and avoid confusion.

Mr. SHERMAN. My friend will allow me to suggest that they take all the oil in their neighborhood and convey it in the pipe-line just like putting wheat into a warehouse.

Mr. STEWART. These pipe-lines certainly go very far and are very useful in reducing the price of oil to the consumer, and have been a great boon and have accomplished a great purpose. There is no difficulty in others doing the same. Whenever a combination is formed which is exclusive and prevents others from doing the same thing, then it ought to be looked into. In the case of a railroad company that occupies the entire space, and where there is no chance for another railroad company, if it discriminates it is necessarily a monopoly; but I do not see any difficulty in any number of persons having oil combining together and furnishing cars, and thus further reducing the price.

It seems to me that would be enterprise, and it is improper and unnecessary to legislate for the purpose of destroying enterprise. It ought rather to be encouraged, and I should favor legislation that would encourage it. If there is any difficulty in others combining and having these cars, and the railroads refuse to treat them all precisely alike, then that ought to be met speedily by legislation; but to break down the enterprises that exist without providing for others is a step in the wrong direction.

I know nothing about the Standard Oil Company except the general fact that they have accomplished a great good for the country in reducing the price of oil, and by their enterprise it is reported that they have gotten very rich. If they have done so, it seems to me the other oil producers would do well to do likewise.

The more restrictions you put upon enterprise the more difficult you make it, the more you enhance the price of commodities to the consumer. It seems to me this is going too far, and that if this matter is to be dealt with, if the railroad companies are not acting fairly, if they do not treat all shippers alike, give them the same privilege to put their cars upon the line and carry them—if there is any discrimination of that kind it ought to be speedily met; but to say that these privileges shall not be granted to enterprise because others are not willing to combine and be enterprising likewise it seems to me is going too far.

I do not sympathize with legislation that trammels business, makes it criminal, and punishes it with fines and imprisonment. I think there is too much of a tendency that way, and there is not sufficient tendency to pass laws under which new enterprises may be organized and the country benefited. I believe in co-operation. The productive power of co-operation is immense. The production of labor and enterprise in each year replaces all the fixed capital. The fixed capital of this country would not support the inhabitants of the United States for a single year, and those who have the art to combine for the purpose of cheapening the necessaries of life to the people, it seems to me, ought not to be prevented, and there should be further laws passed to allow others to do it, and if there is anything in the law which hampers enterprise and prevents others from competing let it be amended and let the attention of Congress be directed to that purpose.

I think the provision of the amendment under consideration, if passed into a law, will work great injustice and is a step in the wrong direction. If a proper bill can be prepared which will give all producers of oil the same chances that these have, which will open the door of enterprise to them the same as it is to the Standard Oil Company—if there is any discrimination in our laws in their favor—I would vote for such a bill very gladly; but to tear down this without providing to build up any other, and force the oil producers to carry their oil in barrels and casks, as they formerly did, at a great additional expense, and break up the pipe-lines and double or treble the price of oil, it seems to me it is not the province of Congress to do. It is not just, it is not called for, and it is not legislation for the benefit of the people.

There are many monopolies in this country which ought to be abolished, but they must be abolished by the people and not by Congress. No combination can be formed in this country the power of which can not be limited by the power of the people if they will co-operate. For example, the great beef combination which makes that necessary article of food so dear in many cities, and particularly in Chicago, is entirely within the power of the people to abolish or limit so that this combination may be useful instead of oppressive. Suppose one thousand consumers of beef in Chicago would form a co-operative association and each contribute $10, making a capital of $10,000 to start with, and one or more of their number would buy and supply them with beef, what power would the monopoly have to injure these contributors? This can be done in every business or trade, and the attention of the people ought to be directed to this mode of restraining monopolies. Co-operation and competition are the remedies. I prepared and introduced a co-operation bill at the last session of Congress which is now pending before the Committee on Education and Labor. I believe if it could be enacted into law it would do more to mitigate the evils of monopoly than all the criminal statutes against enterprise which can be invented by the genius of man.

COMMITTEE ON ENROLLED BILLS.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I ask leave to make a report. I am instructed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to report favorably and with an amendment a resolution yesterday submitted by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. BOWEN], which I send to the desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Enrolled Bills be, and are hereby, authorized to employ a clerk during the remainder of the present session at a compensation of $6 per diem, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of said committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAWLEY in the chair). Does the Senator desire immediate action on the resolution?

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I ask for present action.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendment of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate was, before the word "clerk," to strike out the article "a" and insert "an additional;" so as to read: "An additional clerk."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 483) for the relief of Elizabeth Jones, widow of John Jones, deceased;

A bill (H. R. 834) for the relief of the heirs of John H. Newman;

A bill (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery;

A bill (H. R. 6612) to grant right of way through the Indian Territory to the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6896) to require the United States circuit and district judges to instruct the jury in writing in certain cases;

A bill (H. R. 11165) for the relief of Mary Gray, widow of John Gray; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 266) to print the eulogies on James N. Burnes, of Missouri.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 2070) for the relief of Arno Voss was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT FORT WORTH, TEX.

Mr. COKE. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the message from the House of Representatives in regard to the bill for a public building at Fort Worth, Tex.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1974) for the erection of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex., which were, in line 9, to strike out "one hundred and thirty" and insert "seventy-five," and in line 12, to strike out "twenty" and insert "forty."

Mr. COKE. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the amendments of the House of Representatives numbered 3 and 7 to the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I desire to submit some observations in support of the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the House amendment numbered 3.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAWLEY). The Chair does not know that two motions of that character can be pending at the same time. The Senator from Ohio has moved that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3. If no Senator makes objection——

Mr. CULLOM. I suppose the Senator can make the motion after this is disposed of.

Mr. HARRIS. The pending motion is to recede from the disagreement to House amendment numbered 3 and agree to the same with an amendment. Now, it is perfectly competent for the Senator from Texas to debate both amendments that he suggests, but not more than one motion can be pending at the same time.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator is proposing to debate the question in relation to the jurisdiction of the State courts as well as the one pending.

Mr. HARRIS. It is legitimate for him so to debate, but that motion is not pending at this time.

Mr. REAGAN. I will submit the motion at the proper time.

The amendment under consideration is to add to section 6 of this bill:

Provided, however, That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, to carry refined oils and other petroleum products, cotton-seed oil, and turpentine for any shipper, in tank or cylinder cars, who shall own, lease, or control the same in any manner, except upon the condition that said carrier shall charge the same rate for the transportation of said products in wooden packages or barrels, in car-load lots, as in said tank or cylinder cars, the said tank and cylinder and said wooden packages and barrels being carried free in each case.

The proposition submitted by the Senator from Ohio I ask permission to read now. It is as follows:

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to transport cars for any shipper who shall own, lease, or control the same, except upon the condition that said carrier shall carry upon said cars the property of all shippers without discrimination or favor, or shall furnish similar cars to all shippers upon the same terms and conditions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the regular order, being the resolution submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] authorizing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate alleged election outrages in certain States.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask that that be informally laid aside until the pending matter is disposed of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GORMAN. I hope the Senator will move to postpone the consideration of that resolution.

Mr. CULLOM. Let it be laid aside until this bill is disposed of.

Mr. GORMAN. I think it interrupts the business of the Senate, and it is due to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] that the resolution should not be taken up in this way. The Senator from Virginia has the floor upon it, and I move that it be postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not hear the Senator, and he supposes that the Reporters can not hear him.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the resolution be postponed.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator will not insist upon that motion now. The mover of the resolution is not in the Senate, and I think it will lead to discussion, and perhaps to delay, in the consideration of this bill.

Mr. GORMAN. I have no objection if there can be an understanding that the resolution shall not come up in the absence of the Senator from Virginia. It is due to him that it should go over to-day. Let us have that understanding and not keep him waiting here. He has the floor on the resolution. If it can be understood that it shall not come up to-day I will not object.

Mr. FRYE. I do not think there is the slightest danger of it coming up or of any further discussion on it very soon.

Mr. GORMAN. With that understanding I shall not object.

Mr. SPOONER. What is the resolution?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution, which is the regular order, is the one submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] authorizing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate alleged election outrages in certain States.

Mr. SPOONER. In the absence of the Senator from Massachusetts that resolution ought to be informally laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the suggestion of the Senator from Illinois. There is no motion pending.

Mr. GORMAN. I have no objection, with the understanding that the resolution shall not come up in the absence of the Senator from Virginia during the remainder of the day, as he is entitled to the floor.

Mr. CULLOM. I have no objection to that. I have no idea it will come up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no objection, the regular order is informally laid aside during the pendency of Senate bill 2851.

Mr. REAGAN I also read a paragraph from page 93 of the ruling of the Interstate-Commerce Commission in the case of Rice against the railroads bearing on the principle in question, as follows:

In the case against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company order will be entered that the defendant do forthwith cease and henceforward abstain from the unjust discrimination found to exist in its charges for the transportation of petroleum oils as between shipments in barrels and in tanks, and from making any higher charge by the hundred pounds for the transportation of the oils in barrels, including the barrels, than it makes or shall make, contemporaneously, for the transportation of the like weight of the oils in tanks.

What are the facts on which this ruling depends for its correctness?

The product of petroleum in this country is about 27,000,000 barrels, 4,000,000 tons weight, per annum—equal to 1,350,000,000 gallons.

An average barrel of oil is 50 gallons, and weighs 400 pounds, the oil 325 and the barrel 75 pounds.

The Standard Oil trust, by reason of its great wealth, makes and owns the tank-cars in which it transports its oil, and it provides at great cost its terminal facilities.

Without stating exact amounts the Standard Oil trust refines, it is supposed, more than three-fourths of all the petroleum of this country. It owns anequal proportion at least of all the tank-cars in the country. The smaller refiners are not able to build and supply themselves with tank-cars and costly terminal facilities. An equal rate per 100 pounds for oil in tanks, excluding the weight of the tank and in barrels, including the weight of the barrel, is to require the shipper in barrels to pay as much for the transportation of 325 pounds of oil as the shipper in tanks pays for 400 pounds, thus making a discrimination of about 20 per cent. in favor of the one who ships in tanks. The justice of the proposed amendment and the necessity for the modification of the rule on this subject, as given by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the case of George Rice against the railroads, will appear more fully as I proceed.

The necessity for legislation to prevent discriminations of this kind was shown by the Interstate Commission on page 15 of its first annual report, in which it is said:

It is well known also that the transportation of mineral oil is already to a very large extent in tank-cars owned by parties who are not carriers subject to regulation under the act to regulate commerce. A willingness to disregard the rules of equality and justice as between shippers when it can be made for the interest of the carriers to do so is as likely to make its appearance in the action of the managers of any one of these outside organizations as in that of the managers of the railroads, for the temptations will be the same and the same class of persons will be bidding for special privileges and advantages which before the act was passed prospered so unfairly upon railroad favors. The act has not changed the nature or the grasping disposition of individuals; it has only interposed certain restraints, which it is reasonable to assume will be evaded if the opportunity shall be presented.

These facts are noted for the purpose of placing the whole subject distinctly before the national legislature. If it is the will of Congress that all transportation of persons and property by rail should come under the same rules of general right and equity, some further designation of the agencies in transportation which shall be controlled by such rules would seem to be indispensable.

To attain the ends of justice and fairness the legislation of the country ought to require the railroad companies to adopt one of two lines of policy. First, that they should furnish the means of transporting over their roads all the merchandise presented on equal terms; or, second, that they should cease to be common carriers, and should allow all who would do so to run cars and carry freight and passengers on their roads.

I may observe here that it was the policy adopted in the very early stage of the construction of railroads, to lease to carriers the privilege of running their own cars over the lines, but that policy has been discarded.

The companies should not be permitted to carry for some and allow others to carry their own products over their roads.

That is simply a restatement in another form of the position stated by the Senator from Ohio which is fully warranted by the best opinion on this subject and by the legislation of different States and countries. The first is the plan adopted in this country. The second has been discarded, and our American railroads are, by law and in common practice, common carriers for hire, and charged with all the duties of common carriers.

The railroads provide only one method for the shipment of oil, that is, in box-cars, for the smaller refiner of oil, thus forcing him to accept barrel rates, with which he is unable to compete with the Standard Oil trust, using tanks. On this subject I read from the opinion of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the case of Rice against the railroads, page 43. It is said, and I beg the attention of the Senators to it, because it bears directly upon this question, that—

The most important question that arises upon the assumptions made as the basis for this argument is, whether there are in fact two different modes of transportation which are offered, with their corresponding rates, equally and impartially to all shippers alike, and which it is possible for the class of persons usually engaged in the traffic freely to choose between. If no such offer is in fact made we have no occasion to follow the reasoning of the argument.

Unless we wholly misapprehend the real situation, when the rate sheets of these defendants are presented to the class of persons usually engaged in the traffic, the assumption that two different modes of transportation are offered to them equally and impartially is baseless.

It is to this point that the minds of a number of Senators turn, and hence I beg their attention to the statement of the commission on that subject:

No one of these defendants offers two modes of transportation in the same sense in which it offers its facilities for transportation to shippers of other commodities. Each of them supplies rolling-stock for one method only, and that one is shown to be the method on which, by their rate-sheets, the heaviest burdens are imposed. No such choice is given to adopt the other mode as would be implied from the language used in stating the question; on the contrary, an applicant for that method of transportation would be told he must furnish his own rolling-stock; and this means very much more than might seem to be indicated by this statement; it means, if he would make his business a success, that he shall supply himself with a very considerable number of cars, costing perhaps $700 each, and that he shall also have stationary tanks at the points to which his shipments are to be made.

The cost of the necessary terminal facilities which he must supply for himself we have no means from the evidence in these cases of comparing with the cost of making provision for the storage of barrels by one who adopts that method. It was testified that the terminal facilities of the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky at Selma, Ala., cost about $2,000, and at New Orleans about twenty thousand. The vice-president of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company estimates the average cost of putting up stationary tanks to accommodate tank shipments, including side-tracks, etc., to be from $1,000 to $50,000, according to the requirements of the station, except at St. Louis, where he estimates it at $250,000.

It is obvious, we think, from the facts stated, that instead of the defendants offering two methods of transportation which are open to the acceptance of all, they offer only one which is so open. The other is offered on such terms that it can by possibility be accepted only by parties who can control a considerable capital, and who will supply for themselves an important part of the means of transportation, and also supply terminal facilities. The man of small means who adopts the method of transportation in barrels cannot be said to do so of choice when the failure of the carrier to supply for the other the customary means of transportation compels him to do so.

On this point I will read further from the opinion of the commission in the case of Rice against the railroads, pages 50, 51, and 55. The extracts are somewhat lengthy, but they state the matter with perhaps more conciseness and fullness than I should be able to do, and certainly more clearly than I could do in a running argument, and the views are so important upon the point involved as to whether this amendment, or one having the like object in view, should be adopted that I feel it is worth while to trespass upon the patience of the Senate to call their attention to what the commission say upon the subject.

The fact that the owner supplies the rolling-stock when his oil is shipped in tanks in our opinion is entitled to little weight when rates are under consideration. It is properly the business of railroad companies to supply to their customers suitable vehicles of transportation—and then to offer their use to everybody impartially. If the varieties of traffic are such and their requirements of rolling-stock so numerous and diversified that this becomes impracticable or burdensome, so that the aid of their customers becomes essential or convenient, the supply obtained by their assistance can not with any justice be utilized by the carrier in such manner as to establish discriminations which would otherwise be inadmissible. The carrier has no right to hire rolling-stock and then allow it to be used exclusively by one class of persons on such terms as will drive out of business those who are compelled to use its own rolling-stock in a competitive traffic. This, however, is precisely what takes place in this traffic if the rates for the transportation in barrels are considerably in excess of those which are charged for the transportation in tanks.

They refer here to the case of Railroad Company vs. Pratt, in 22 Wallace, pages 123, 133, supporting this view—

I have already shown that when the railroads charge for a barrel of oil of 400 pounds carried in a tank the same that is charged for a barrel of oil containing 325 pounds of oil and 75 pounds of barrel they discriminate 20 per cent. in favor of the tank transportation.

The tank cars which are furnished to the carrier by shippers, whether the use is paid for or not, ought properly to be held for the use of all; but if this is found impracticable, it is very certain and very obvious that proprietorship of the car for the use of which the carrier pays, as it generally does, can fairly entitle the owner to no special consideration in the making of rates.

And as I proceed I shall show after a little that not only this discrimination is practiced but that the owners of the tank cars are paid mileage, what the commission call trackage, at three-fourths of a cent per mile for their cars, besides getting 400 pounds of oil transported for the same price that a man transporting in barrels can transport 325 pounds of oil.

He has an advantage, arising from his ownership, in being able to control the use, but that circumstance can be no reason for extending to him exceptionable consideration which will make the advantage specially oppressive to competitors. It is, on the other hand, a very forcible reason why the carrier should see to it that its patrons who are forced to make use of such facilities as it provides for them shall not find its own want of proper rolling-stock made a ground of discrimination against them. On this point the misapprehension of the situation is very apparent in some of the arguments which have been made for the defense. The complainant, it is said, asks the railroad companies to relieve him from the consequences of his own lack of capital to carry on his business to the best advantage. He can not choose the best method, because that method requires a large outlay in capital. His competitor in business can choose it, and it is for that reason that complainant is driven out of the market. He must blame his want of capital, it is said, and not the railroad companies, for his failure.

The commission proceed:

A statement of the situation differing a little from this will more nearly present the actual facts. The railroad company not having supplied itself with the necessary rolling-stock to enable one branch of its traffic to be carried on in the way most advantageous to those who engage in it, suffers parties who have the capital which will enable them to supply the defect to put cars of their own upon the road, for the use of which it pays, and at the same time gives to such parties the exclusive use of what they supply, and also such preferential rates on the merchandise carried for them as will put successful competition quite out of the question. It is not the lack of capital to carry on the business that then proves fatal, but it is the lack of capital, in addition to what is needed in the business, to supply rolling-stock to the railroad company for his use. It would be the height of injustice for the carrier to make such a lack a ground for discrimination in rates, and then to say that the party suffering from it has no reason for complaint since the rates which are named are offered to all. The offer is exclusive in fact, whatever it may be in terms or in theory.

If a carrier of passengers were to make a uniform rate of 3 cents a mile to all who rode in the cars it provided, but, being deficient in rolling stock, were to allow owners of private cars to fill them with passengers at 2 cents a mile and be paid for the use of the cars in addition, we should not expect any one to attempt a defense of the discrimination based upon the ground that the rates were equally open to all, and that if one, by reason of lack of capital to supply himself with a private car, was unable to take the benefit of the most favorable rate, he should blame his fortune for it, not the common carrier.

The wrong in such a case would be as plain as it would be gross; but such a discrimination in the carriage of persons would be far less injurious than a similar discrimination in the transportation of property; the one would involve a small sum of money only; the other might be destructive to a business. We hold, therefore, that the fact that one consignor furnishes a car for hire to the railroad company for the transportation of his oil is no ground whatever for a discrimination in rates in his favor as against another consignor who must ship in the cars the carrier supplies. It may be a reason for limiting to himself the use of the car he furnishes, but the discrimination can not justly or lawfully go any further.

Mr. President, I call attention to the very marked manner in which these opinions of the Interstate Commerce Commission sustain the position laid down a few moments ago by the distinguished Senator from Ohio, and I call attention further to the fact that what I have just read from the opinion of the commission entirely answers and overthrows the idea that because all men are not able to build tank-cars, the smaller refiners, who are unable to build them, should be placed at a disadvantage by discrimination which results in driving them out of business and leaving a monopoly of the transportation as well as the refining to the Standard Oil trust.

If we accept the correctness of the statements I have read from the first annual report of the commission as to the necessity of legislation, and what I have just read from their opinion in the case of Rice against the railroads, describing what they term the real situation, it will be found difficult to resist the conclusion that the proposed amendment numbered 3 or some other provision should be adopted to prevent the Standard Oil trust, in combination with the railroads, from crushing out of existence all the small refiners and securing to themselves a complete monopoly of this immense business of refining, transporting, and selling mineral oils.

It may be as well here as elsewhere to discuss the question of the relative danger of transporting oil in tank-cars and in barrels. One of the arguments used against this amendment is that the danger of transporting oil in barrels is much greater than the danger of its transportation in tanks, and there is some evidence to that point, but evidence, I submit, that when the circumstances are fairly taken into consideration may subject it to the suspicion of coming from interested witnesses.

On that subject I read from a pamphlet entitled "Railway Discriminations as given to the Standard Oil Trust," pages 7 and 8 and on page 19:

John S. Wilson, general freight agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company (the highest authority we have), testifies before the commission on January 23, 1888, that he would rather carry powder than oil in tank-cars, and that the shipment in barrels is preferable. Hear him:

"I think, altogether, it is the most undesirable business we do, the carriage of oil in tank-cars. There is no stopping it when it once starts. We had a smash up at New Brunswick. We came in collision there with a line of tank-cars, the oil got on fire, and I think it ran two squares, got into a sewer, ran burning a square or two more, ran on the canal, which was then frozen over, followed the ice a square or two beyond, and besides our own losses we have already paid nearly $500,000 for the destruction there. I regard it as worse than powder to carry. The bridge at New Brunswick was burned down, which cost us two or three hundred thousand dollars, besides nearly half a million paid out for outside destruction.

"We might run for ten years and by good luck have no serious accident, whereas on the other hand we might strike another case like that at New Brunswick and lose more money than we would make on carrying oil for ten years. I would rather carry anything else than oil in tanks.

"The movement in barrels I have always considered preferable for two reasons. First, we load barrels in a car that will carry a return cargo. There are no back loads for a tank-car. For stock and box cars we can load back and get an increased earning for the round trip. Secondly, if there comes a collision or fire, the packages being separate, we are enabled to save some of the tonnage. There is no hope of saving the contents of a tank-car if it once gets on fire. Barrels you can sometimes scatter and roll off and break them up."

These casualties and fires, picked up from the press, have occurred since Wilson's testimony, January 23, 1888:

"FREIGHT-CARS BURNED.

"PHILADELPHIA, May 4.

"An east-bound freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, consisting of three oil-tanks and fourteen loaded freight-cars, was almost totally destroyed by fire at Wayne Station at noon to-day. The accident was caused by the derailing of one of the oil-tank cars, which immediately caught fire and spread to the others. Some of the freight was saved, but, on account of the fierceness of the flames, a large portion was destroyed, and the total loss to the railroad company is estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000. Brakeman H. M. Chromister, of Harrisburg, was terribly burned about the face, hands, and body, and will probably die."

"A CAR LOADED WITH NAPHTHA EXPLODES.

"DENVER, COLO., May 14.

"Train No. 7, known as the 'Thunderbolt,' arrived at Fountain at nineteen minutes to 3 a. m., and had only been standing a few minutes, when a caboose and some cars, the brakes of which had got loose in some way, ran down from a side-track and struck the train with terrific force. One car was loaded with naphtha, which exploded, throwing the oil over everything and setting the train on fire. The trainmen shoved the uninjured cars back from the wreck and were trying to save the depot, when it was discovered that two cars were standing on the main track that were not wrecked. The nearest one was burning and was tagged 'powder.' Shortly afterward the car exploded, completely demolishing the depot, several dwellings, and a number of cars. Three persons, one woman and two men, were killed by the explosion, and some twelve or fifteen persons were wounded, but none very seriously. There is a hole in the ground where the car stood about 30 feet in diameter and 15 feet deep. Two cars were burned, and sixteen more, together with the locomotive, were more or less wrecked. It is supposed that tramps let off the brakes from the cars."

"FIRED BY FRICTION—TEN OIL CARS SET IN A BLAZE BY A RUBBING TRUCK.

"PHILADELPHIA, PA., August 27.

"At an early hour this morning a serious accident occurred on the east-bound track of the Pennsylvania Railroad's main line, by which ten cars loaded with crude oil were totally destroyed by fire.

"Two tramps who were stealing a ride were so seriously burned that one at least will probably die, while the other will be disfigured for life.

"The accident occurred a short distance east of Wayne Station, and was caused by a truck under one of the oil-cars becoming loose and chafing against the body of the car until it created a blaze, which at once enveloped the oil-tank cars of the train. Travel with east-bound tracks was delayed several hours, but west-bound trains were not seriously interfered with."

Seventeen tank-cars of oil were totally destroyed and a bridge burned up on the Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore road, and the road paid the Standard the loss of same, although one of its officers swore, in answer to a complaint in quo warranto (after the fire had occurred), that one of the reasons of giving the Standard low rates was because they stood all such losses.

When we hear arguments, as we shall in this case, in favor of the tank-cars because of their safety and security, I beg that this testimony from the highest authority be remembered as showing that there is more danger in the transportation of oil in tanks than in barrels.

Mr. President, as showing the great disadvantage at which the smaller refiners of mineral oils are placed by the combination of interests of the Standard Oil trust and the railroads, I propose to read an extract from a letter of Murray, Dougal & Co., addressed to Mr. George Rice, at Marietta, Ohio, and dated Milton, Pa., December 6, 1887, in which it is said:

Our financial friends state—

This seems to be in reply to a proposition to a company engaged in building tank-cars to build cars for Rice of a similar kind.

Our financial friends state that they have declined to do this mainly on account of some supposed controversy which they claim you have had with the Standard Oil Company and various railroads in the West. They feared you could not use these cars to advantage if the railroads should be hostile to your interests.

I present this to show that the makers of these cars understood it was the purpose of the Standard Oil trust and of the railroad companies to refuse to allow them to be made for the benefit of Rice and other small refiners, so as to give them the opportunity of transporting their oil on equal terms with the Standard Oil trust. It is very striking testimony that should not be forgotten in this connection.

I had intended—but I find I am occupying more time than I expected—to call attention to the ownership of the tank-cars as it appears in the evidence of several witnesses in their testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is sufficient perhaps for me to state generally that I understand from this testimony and from such information as I can get that the Standard Oil trust owned about four thousand tank-cars, and perhaps owns more now. The next owner of any considerable number of tank-cars is the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which owns about twelve hundred of these cars. Then there are a few cars owned by some other associations, but in comparison to the whole the number is very limited and unimportant. So I shall pass from that, but I have the evidence before me showing the numbers.

This question can not be rightly understood without considering, to some extent at least, the history, the business combinations, the wealth, the power, and the practices of the Standard Oil trust. A mere taking up of isolated facts and speaking on them gives no adequate conception of the real question which is intended to be met by this amendment. It takes a more comprehensive view, and that view, to some extent as best I can, I propose to state.

Reasoning which applies to ordinary regular business methods is not applicable to this stupendous association whose briarean arms embrace a large part of the commerce and transportation of a continent.

On the 18th of January, 1872, John D. Rockafeller, William Rockafeller, H. M. Flagler, and others, holding a majority of the stock of "The South Improvement Company," made a secret contract with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the Erie Railroad Company, the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Companies, the New York and Hudson River, and the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad Companies, which contained the following extraordinary provisions. One of them is: They agree—

To pay and allow to the party hereto of the first part, on all petroleum and its products, transportation for it over the railroads of the party of the second part and its connections, the following rebates, and on all transported for other parties, drawbacks of like amounts, as the rebates from the gross rates, the same to be deducted and retained by the party hereto of the first part, for its own use, from the amounts of freights, payable to the party of the second part.

That is, it would not only make rebates on the transportation of oil to the South Improvement Company while charging others full rates, but would pay over to that company the difference between the amount of their reduced rates and the tariff rates in general.

They agree further:

To charge to all other parties (excepting such as are referred to in article 3) for the transportation of petroleum and its products rates which shall not be less than the gross rates above specified, and should at any time any less rate be charged, directly or indirectly, either by way of rebate, commission, allowances, or upon any pretext whatsoever, the same reduction per barrel shall be made to the party hereto of the first part, from the net rates provided for them, on all transportation for them during the period for which such reduction shall be made to others.

And it is hereby further covenanted and agreed by and between the parties hereto that the party hereto of the second part shall at all times co-operate, as far as it legally may, with the party hereto of the first part against loss or injury by competition, to the end that the party hereto of the first part may keep up a remunerative and so a full and regular business, and to that end shall lower or raise the gross rates of transportation over its railroads and connections, as far as it legally may, for such times and to such extent as may be necessary to overcome such competition; the rebates and drawbacks to the party of the first part to be varied pari passu with the gross rates.

It is further mutually agreed by and between the parties hereto that this agreement shall continue and remain in force for the period of not less than five years, and shall not then nor thereafter terminate until one of the parties shall have given twelve months' written notice to terminate it.

While this arrangement has now ceased to exist, I read it as evidence of the character of arrangements entered into by that corporation by which it absolutely controlled the transportation of petroleum by the five great trunk railroads and has given itself a monopoly of the transportation of mineral oil.

The freight rates and rebates allowed this South Improvement Company per 45 gallons crude were as follows:

Route.	Freight.	Rebate.
From Oil City, Union, Corry, or Irvineton to—
Cleveland	$0.80	$0.40
Pittsburgh	.80	.40
New York	2.56	1.06
Philadelphia	2.41	1.06
Baltimore	2.41	1.06
Boston	2.71	1.06

And probably it was not only a rebate of $1.06 on the freight but an equivalent to that paid over and extorted from shippers to this Standard Oil Company.

Refined, per 47 gallons.

Route.	Freight.	Rebate.
From Pittsburgh to—
New York	$2.00	$0.50
Philadelphia	1.85	.50
Baltimore	1.85	.50
From Cleveland to—
Boston	2.15	.50
New York	2.00	.50
Philadelphia	1.85	.50
Baltimore	1.85	.50
From Oil City, Union, Corry, or Irvineton to—
New York	2.92	1.32
Philadelphia	2.77	1.32
Baltimore	2.77	1.32
Boston	3.07	1.32

On all the western shipments from the points named and on all shipments either east or west from any points intermediate to those named the ring was to receive a rebate equal to one-third of the gross rate.

By order of the executive committee Petroleum Producers' Union.

The charter of this company was repealed at the instigation of the exasperated oil producers and refiners of the country, and in its place was substituted the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, which got increased rebates and drawbacks, but which were kept better concealed or were more adroitly covered up.

I am advised that these same gentlemen were among the original directors of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio.

The following statement was published by Mr. F. B. Thurber, a prominent merchant of New York, in Scribner's Magazine for December, 1880:

The testimony in the Pennsylvania Legislature showed that the trunk-lines of railroads paid in rebates to the "Standard Oil Company," within the period of eighteen months, $10,151,218, which was contributed by the roads in the following proportions, namely:

Total shipments, from October 17, 1877, to March 31, 1879, 18,556,277 barrels.

Total rebates during that time, at 55 cents (average) per barrel, $10,151,218.

Of which there was paid to "Standard Oil Company" by Baltimore and Ohio Railroad 11 per cent., as per contract, October 17, 1877	$1,116,633.48
Paid by New York Central and Hudson River Railroad 21 per cent., as per contract, October 17, 1877	2,131,755.76
Paid by Erie Railway 21 per cent., as per contract, October 17, 1877	2,131,755.78
Paid by Pennsylvania Railroad 47 per cent., as per contract, October 17, 1877 (17½ months)	4,771,072.46
Total rebates, October 17, 1877, to March 31, 1876	10,151,218.00

On the subject of the power and evil effects of this monster corporation I desire to read a passage from an address delivered by Judge Cooley, the president of the Interstate Commerce Commission, at a meeting of Boston merchants, published in the Buffalo Express January 14, 1889. He says:

A few things can, nevertheless, be said of trusts without danger of mistake. They are things to be feared. They antagonize a leading and most valuable principle of industrial life in their attempt not to curb competition merely, but to put an end to it. The course of the leading trust of the country has been such as to emphasize the fear of them—and the benefits that have come from its cheapening of an article of commerce are insignificant when contrasted with the mischiefs that have followed the exhibitions in many forms of the merciless power of concentrated capital. And when we witness the utterly heartless manner in which trusts sometimes have closed manufactories and turned men, willing to be industrious, into the streets in order that they may increase profits already reasonably large, we can not help asking ourselves the question whether the trust, as we see it, is not a public enemy; whether it is not teaching the laborer dangerous lessons; whether it is not helping to breed anarchy. One thing would seem manifest: There are some trusts whose members are estopped from complaining of organized laborers when, by strikes, or boycotts, or any kindred means, they seek to force compliance with their demands.

He undoubtedly refers to this Standard Oil Company—

They are estopped because their own methods have been of a like nature, and having been employed with greater skill and power have been generally more effective and mischievous. Anything in the nature of a trust that should bring the railroads of the country or of any considerable portion of the country under a single head, with irresistible power to divide business and make rates, would be more to be dreaded than any other trust ever formed or proposed. The reason is obvious—it would control more property, have more power of controlling and coercing the action of individuals and of the public authorities. It would, besides, if formed now, in all probability fall to the control of that class of managers who in handling railroad property do not hesitate to subordinate law to corporate interests and rivalries. No prudent man would give assent to a railroad trust until he was first shown that effective legal restraints had been put into it.

I read the following from a pamphlet published by Mr. George Rice, over his own signature, entitled "Railway Discriminations as given to the Standard Oil Trust:"

In a report to the New York Chamber of Commerce, the committee on railroad transportation of that body alludes to this subject as follows:

"How oblivious of their obligations as common carriers, and how regardless of public rights are the great trunk lines is illustrated by their making an agreement with the 'Standard Oil Company' (article 4), to protect them against loss or injury by competition. What has happened in the case of the 'Standard Oil Company' may happen in other lines of business. With the favor of the managers of the trunk lines, what is to prevent commerce in the rest of the great staples from being monopolized in a similar manner? Already, indeed, it is taking this course. One or two firms in Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, with their branch houses in the West, are, by the favor of the railroads, fast monopolizing the export trade in wheat, cattle, and provisions, driving their competitors to the wall with absolute certainty, breaking down and crushing out the energy and enterprise of the many for the benefit of the favored few."

It further says:

"If a true history of the 'Standard Oil Company' could be written, it would read more like a romance of the middle ages than a statement of commercial facts possible in the nineteenth century.

"This is the organization to which the Hepburn committee alludes as 'this mysterious organization, whose business and transactions are of such a character that its members decline giving a history or description of it, lest their testimony be used to convict them of a crime.'"

In October, 1879, these same six gentlemen were directors in the Standard Oil Company of Ohio. On February 5, 1880, these same six gentlemen entered into a "most solemn" agreement with the Petroleum Producers' Union, as follows:

"First. That the said parties of the first part shall and will make no opposition to an entire abrogation of the system of rebates, drawbacks, and secret rates of freight in the transportation of freights on the railroads.

"Second. That the said parties of the first part further agree that the railroad companies make known to the other shippers of petroleum on their several roads all their rates of freight, and that said parties of the first part, or any of them, will not receive any rebate or drawback that the railroad companies are not at liberty to give to other shippers of petroleum."

This system of unjust discriminations in the transportation of oil to tide-water was stopped temporarily in 1880 in consequence of legal proceedings instituted by those injured, and probably in deference to the condition of society in Pennsylvania which resulted from the discovery of the outrage.

In that year, 1880, by solemn agreements signed by the members of the Standard Oil Company and the railroad company, it was agreed that for the future rates should be the same to all. And thereupon the Standard Oil Company, in order to avoid paying the same as others, laid pipes from the oil region to tide-water with the rebate-money received, took the business from the railroads by means of this capital which the railroads had themselves unjustly given to them, and were enabled to transport their oil in pipes at a cost of about 5 cents per barrel, while their competitors were compelled to pay railroad freights of ten times that amount.

After the Standard had laid their pipe-lines to tidewater, they then negotiated with the roads, and entered into a contract by which they gave them 26 per cent. of their transportation to the seaboard in order to have rates maintained against their competitors, this 26 per cent. to include the shipments of all others, and now being carried out.

In January, 1882, these same six gentlemen comprise two-thirds of the trustees which organized the Standard Oil trust.

After this noble band of six had made this "solemn compact" with the producers to discriminate no more, or to abrogate the system of rebates, drawbacks, and secret rates of freight, they turn about and inaugurate a system that discounts several times over the notorious South improvement scheme and all previous efforts, as I will show.

The highest percentage of discrimination to the South Improvement Company, as per rates above, is 127 per cent., while in one of my own cases, which occurred in 1885, in the transportation of crude oil to my refinery, there was a discrimination of 320 per cent., as the following will figure out:

"Take the case which Judge Baxter decided. The case of Handy et al. vs. The Cleveland and Marietta Railroad Company, 31 Federal Reporter, 689, where the receiver of a railroad company was removed because he had made this unjust discrimination. In that case your honors will see that the Standard Oil Company went to the receiver and said to him, 'If you do not do what we want you to do, we will construct a pipe-line and take the oil off your railroad; but if you give us a rate of 10 cents a barrel and charge George Rice 35 cents a barrel, and out of that 35 cents pay to us 25 cents in cash for every barrel George Rice ships, we will give you our business; but if you do not we will lay the pipe-line.'

"Such was the contract they made. What would have been the result if Mr. George Rice had shipped over that railroad as much oil as the Standard Oil Company? Why, the Standard Oil Company would have received for every barrel they shipped 15 cents in money more than they paid for the shipment. That is, they would have been refunded the 10 cents and been given 15 cents as a bonus besides."

Dan. O'Day, manager of the Standard Oil Company, compels Phineas Pease, receiver of this road, to discriminate against me 320 per cent. in their favor, per extract of a letter written by Pease, as follows:

"Mr. O'Day, manager of the Standard Oil Company, met the general freight agent of the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad and our Mr. Terry at Toledo about February 12, and made an agreement (verbal) to carry their oil at 10 cents per barrel. But Mr. O'Day compelled Mr. Terry to make a 35-cent rate on all other oil going to Marietta, and that we should make the rebate of 25 cents per barrel on all oil shipped by other parties, and that the rebate should be paid over to them (the Standard Oil Company), thus giving us 10 cents per barrel for all oil shipped to Marietta, and the rebate of 25 cents per barrel going to the Standard Oil Company, making that company, say, $25 per day clear money on Mr. George Rice's oil alone."

In this same year, July, 1885, the roads doubled their rates of freight on me to New Orleans and Memphis, where I had agencies, and not one iota on the Standard Oil Company.

It was also shown in August, 1887, suits in quo warranto, State of Ohio vs. The Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore Railroad and the New Orleans and Texas Pacific (Cincinnati Southern), to forfeit their charters on account of gross discriminations, that the roads south of the Ohio, in July, 1886, raised the rates on me from 10 to 160 per cent., and not any on the Standard Oil Company. In five months the effect was to shut up fourteen of my agencies out of twenty-four, and thirty-nine other towns out of seventy-three.

As a sample of the many items brought out was, that the Standard had twenty-one tank-cars of oil carried from Cleveland to Atlanta, Ga., on which the gross freight was $3,307.50, on which the Standard received a rebate of $1,505.70; also that the Standard had a rate on barreled oil to Chicago of 33.6 cents per barrel, and I was charged 60 cents. The Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore Railway makes tariff rates from Marietta the same as those from Parkersburgh—12 miles distant—which is the headquarters of the Camden Consolidated Oil Company (Standard Oil trust). It is also developed that R. M. Fraser, the general freight agent of the road, gave notice to said company on July 14, a full and complete list of all of my advanced rates, which were to go into effect the next day, 15th, but did not send me a duplicate list until August 23.

Of any changes or advances made on me thereafter this company was promptly advised, although they were not using or shipping at my rates, but this information was most important to them in order to shut me out of the markets. This company also asked Fraser to advance barrel rates.

The Southern Railway and Steam-ship Association as late as November 27, 1888, sent me their general tariff of rates, now in effect, in which this occurs:

"Special rates on various articles issued from this office are not affected by this publication."

In reference to these discriminations I read further from pages 77, 78, and 79 of the opinion of the commission in the case of Rice vs. The Railroads. I prefer reading from this opinion because it is testimony direct and strong and such as ought not to be overlooked in the consideration of this amendment.

Referring to recent correspondence and quoting rates to the points named in your letter of the 11th instant, I beg to inform you that the following rates on coal-oil are obtainable from Cincinnati to points named:

Points.	In car tanks.	Car-loads per 100 pounds in barrels.
Lexington	$26.00	$0.13
Chattanooga	50.00	.33
Atlanta	61.80	.46
Birmingham	60.00	.47
Meridian	60.00	.45
Vicksburg	60.00	.34
Knoxville	50.00	.33
Huntsville	*.37
Shreveport	118.00	.64
Montgomery	112.00	.47

* Per 100 pounds.

As bearing upon this table a list of shipments was given, some of the figures in which require notice. The rate—barrel rate—to Lexington was soon reduced to 10 cents per 100 pounds, the tank rate remaining the same. The average shipment in tank-cars to that point seems to have been of 31,223 pounds weight, which would make the rate on tank-car shipments about 8.32 per 100 pounds, and the barrel rate about 20 per cent. higher. The only shipper to this point in either mode was the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky. In contrast to these the shipments from Cincinnati to Chattanooga were in tank-cars varying from 25,000 to 43,815 pounds. The barrel rate was 33 cents per 100 pounds. The tank rate was $50 per car. At 33 cents per 100 pounds the rate on the oil carried in the smallest car would have been $82.50; on that carried in the largest it would have been $144.50. On an average of the two it would have been $113.54. The average makes the rate on barrel shipments 125 per cent. in excess of the rate on tank shipments, instead of 20 per cent. excess, as at Lexington.

A similar vast discrepancy was shown in the rates from Cincinnati to Meridian. The tank rate was $60, which, if the tanks averaged 24,000, would make the rate per hundred pounds 25 cents; or, if they averaged 30,000, 20 cents; but while this charge remained, the rate on barrel shipments was raised to 56 cents per 100 pounds—probably not less than 175 per cent. excess over the tank-car rate.

May 30 complainant sent the following letters:

"Please name rate on oil, tank-cars and barrels, car lots, to Mobile and New Orleans."

Also:

"Yours 28th, inclosing rates, finally to hand, after several applications. These rates are prohibitory on my shipments, as you know full well, and the device or method of the tank-car shipment in bulk is purposely used against me (who ships entirely in barrels) in order that I can not compete with the Standard Oil Company in the sale of my products.

I give this for the double purpose of showing, first, the enormous discriminations against shipments, and second, the combination between the Standard Oil trust and the railroads.

"By these rates thus given me to nine prominent points in the South you discriminate against my shipments not less than 67 per cent. and as high as 213 per cent., while to one—Huntsville, Ala.—you make the rate the same per 100 pounds for both barreled oil and that in tank-cars. I will here show you how I arrive at this comparison.

"All the bulk oil carried in tank-cars from the Pennsylvania oil regions to the seaboard pays the same amount for 50 gallons in bulk as for 50 gallons (including the barrel), or the empty barrel is carried extra to compensate for the return of the empty tank-car, and can not bring back freight as against a box-car that can. I maintain and assert that the tank-cars of the Standard Oil Company hold at least 100 barrels of 50 gallons (or 5,000 gallons each), on an average, while some of them hold over 6,500 gallons (or 130 barrels); but for a fair and equitable basis I will call it 100 barrels, and herewith give you the results and the amount of discrimination you dare impose on me in the face and eyes of the interstate act:

From Cincinnati to—	Per car, tanks.	Per barrel.	Per 100 pounds in barrels of 400 pounds.	Per barrel.	Discrimination.
			Cents.		Per ct.
Lexington, Ky	$26.00	$0.26	13	$0.52	100
Chattanooga, Tenn	50.00	.50	33	1.32	164
Atlanta, Ga	61.80	.62	46	1.84	196
Birmingham, Ala	60.00	.60	47	1.88	213
Meridian, Miss	60.00	.60	45	1.80	120
Knoxville, Tenn	50.00	.50	33	1.32	164
Shreveport, La	118.00	1.18	64	2.56	117
Montgomery, Ala	112.00	1.12	47	1.88	67
Vicksburg, Miss	60.00	.60	34	1.36	126
Huntsville, Ala			(*)

*37 cents per 100 pounds for both.

This table shows discriminations running, as alleged, from 67 per cent. to 213 per cent. against the smaller refiners transporting in barrels and in favor of the Standard Oil trust with its monopoly of tank-cars and railroad assistance.

One of the methods by which railroads discriminate in favor of the Standard Oil trust and against the smaller refiners and shippers is, after fixing the rates of transportation, to repay to the owners of the tank-cars (the Standard Oil trust) mileage at the rate of three-fourths of a cent a mile each way.

I read from pages 32 and 33 of the opinion of the commission in the case of Rice vs. The Railroads, and I beg to call the attention of Senators to this statement by the commission:

If, however, the owner of oil at Louisville should desire to send a consignment of oil in tanks to Memphis, and should apply to have cars furnished him for the purpose, he would be told at once that the company did not supply tank-cars to its customers; that if they desired to avail themselves of that method of transportation they must not only pay the rate prescribed, but they must also furnish the company with the cars. This is obviously a most important qualification of the rate itself; and if the shipper must furnish the car at his own expense, the actual cost to him of the transportation will very much exceed the published rate. This, however, does not seem to be generally expected; on the contrary, there seems to be a general, though not a universal, understanding among railroad companies in the Southwest, including the defendants, that the party furnishing a tank-car shall be paid trackage for its use at the rate customary among railroad companies, namely, three-fourths of a cent a mile going and returning, with the privilege on the part of the railroad company of loading the car with return freight when any is offered or is procurable.

This carries out the statement I made some time ago about the Standard Oil trust supplying cars for the use of the railroads and receiving pay for them while the railroads gave it other advantages for discriminating against shippers by other modes.

One difficulty with this understanding is that it does not appear in the rate sheets. The sixth section of the act to regulate commerce provides that "every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall print and keep for public inspection schedules showing the rates and fares and charges for the transportation of passengers and property which any such common carrier has established, and which are in force at the time upon its railroad, as defined by the first section of this act. The schedules printed as aforesaid by any such common carrier shall plainly state the places upon its railroad between which property and passengers will be carried, and shall contain the classification of freight in force upon such railroad, and shall also state separately the terminal charges, and any rules or regulations which in any wise change, affect, or determine any part of the aggregate of such aforesaid rates and fares and charges."

I am reading here from the sixth section of the act which is now a law. Then they proceed:

The purpose of this provision is very manifest and is well understood. It intends that every person desiring to avail himself of the facilities afforded by the railroads of the country should be enabled to tell for himself, without being under the necessity of calling in the aid of any railroad agent or other person, what charges he must pay for the transportation of his person or his property, and also have in the published rate-sheets an accurate test of the correctness of any exaction. The rate-sheets introduced by the defendants in these cases can hardly be said to give this information. They omit to give a rule, regulation, or understanding which has a very important bearing on the rates, and they wholly omit to notify the owner of oil that the carriers making them do not furnish him with cars for one of the methods of transportation which in terms they offer to him.

I beg that Senators will note throughout this decision everywhere the combination is presented between the Standard Oil trust and the railroads for the crushing out of the smaller refineries. The commission proceeds:

The rate-sheets, therefore, require to be supplemented by other information, and it is from this fact that some part of the controversy between these parties has arisen.

It was said on the argument that the railroad companies were under obligation to furnish tanks no more than they were to furnish barrels; that tanks and barrels were only different kinds of caskets for holding the property which was to be conveyed, and it was matter of course that the shipper should furnish them for himself.

This might be quite true if the tank, like the barrel, was received from the consignor and taken for delivery to the consignee, as packages usually are; but it is not. It is, on the other hand, a part of the car itself, as much as are the sides to an ordinary box-car; it is provided only to hold the oil for transportation, while the barrel holds it both before and after shipment, as an article of merchandise, and is bought and sold with it. The shipper in barrels, it is quite true, is expected to deliver his merchandise in that form of package, and the rate-bill informs him what he must pay upon it. The party proposing to ship in tanks does not receive from the rate-sheets equivalent information; and if outside the rate-sheets he learns that he must furnish the tank-cars, he is still unapprised upon what terms this is to be done, and must seek the information from the officers or agents of the carrier.

But when he seeks this information he learns immediately that the matter is or may be the subject of private negotiation, and perhaps of different terms in different cases. Thus the evils at which this provision of the statute was aimed make their appearance immediately. He is not informed by the rate-sheets what he will be charged for the service to be rendered him, and when he seeks the information he finds the terms are to be the subject of bargain; but a bargain implies a difference in terms in different cases.

In the testimony of Mr. Thomas L. Kimball, general traffic manager of the Union Pacific Railroad, appears the following:

Q. Have you the Standard Oil accounts ready?

A. I have here a memorandum of the car mileage paid the Standard Oil Company from 1882 to 1886 inclusive, $15,487.81.

This is paid by that railroad company to the Standard Oil Company for the use of its tank-cars in transporting its own oil.

Mr. John C. Gault, of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railroad, in answer to Mr. Rice's inquiry as to the terms on which he could get oil carried in tank-cars, replied:

Tank-cars to be furnished by shippers and to be returned empty at 5 cents a mile.

He did not propose to pay Mr. Rice three-fourths of a cent per mile for the use of his car in going and returning, but he must furnish the tank-car and ship his oil and pay 5 cents a mile for the return of it. Such conduct is monstrous and needs the correction of law.

In some cases the tank-cars of the Standard Oil trust are returned free; in others that company is paid trackage by the road on return of cars at three-fourths of a cent a mile. But Rice was to be charged 5 cents a mile for return of tank-cars.

I will not read the whole of the testimony of Mr. Dow, engaged in the oil business at Memphis, but I will read a question and an answer:

Q. Does that same condition exist in Covington and Obion?

A. Except they reduced the freight a little more in Covington than other places. You might haul it by wagons. In fact I haul it in wagons now.

Q. Over what length of distance do you haul oil in wagons in order to compete with the railroads?

A. Forty miles south of Manito. All the oil I sell there is in the town of Manito, on the Illinois Railroad.

Here a person engaged in the business of selling oil is so discriminated against by railroads and the Standard Oil trust that he can only compete with them by hauling his oil in wagons along the line in the same direction with the railroad for 40 miles in order that he may be able to carry on his business.

One of the reasons assigned for charging more for carrying oil in barrels than in tanks is that the tanks get return freight in cotton-seed oil and in turpentine, while the box-cars, in which barrels are carried, come back empty. This may be so in a few instances of shipments from the South. But the cotton-seed oil made there is not all, perhaps not generally, shipped in tanks. A large cotton-seed-oil factory at the town near which I live sends its oil off in barrels. I am not able to state what the practice generally is, and I only state as to that within my own knowledge.

The greater part of the petroleum product of this country is sent from the oil regions (Pennsylvania, New York, West Virginia, and Ohio) to the Eastern cities, part of it for consumption and part for export. Box-cars carrying barrels of oil there will generally find return freights of merchandise, while tank-cars can carry nothing back, but must be returned empty. Box-cars carrying barrels of oil to the Southern States get return cargoes of cotton, much more of which is shipped North on cars than of cotton-seed oil, besides tobacco, rice, sugar, and other merchandise, which furnish return cargoes for box-cars, and can not be carried on tank-cars.

In reading the opinion of the commission in the case of Rice against the railroads it would seem it was to some extent influenced by this notion that tank-cars could get return freight while box-cars could not. The commission ought not to have been misled by such representations. An examination of the statistics of the railroads in the Southern States, as shown by Poor's Manual, will show that generally the freight on them going north is considerably greater in bulk than that going south.

It seems here as in other points in considering this matter, that the view was a limited, narrow view, not taking in the whole case. The value of cotton shipped in cars from the South and the bulk that it occupies is infinitely greater than that of oil. Besides, the oil shipped from the South in barrels is brought in box-cars. But why dwell on this? Any one familiar with the commerce of that country knows that this argument is unsubstantial and sophistical.

In reference to the wealth and power of the Standard Oil trust and the manner in which it exercises that power over the commerce of this country, I submit that in addition to the millions of dollars' worth of property it owns in oil, land, and wells, in oil refineries, in buildings, in tank-cars, in terminal facilities for the storage and sale of oil, etc., its eight trustees and their subordinate officers are interested as presidents, directors, etc., in about one-seventh of the railways of this country. Poor's Manual mainly, and other sources of information, disclose the fact that the trustees of the Standard Oil trust are presidents and directors in 9,498 miles of railroad, with assets amounting to $418,773,833.75, while the subordinate officers of the various corporations merged into and belonging to said trust are shown to be presidents and directors of 9,646 miles of railway, with assets amounting to $394,076,333.49, making a total of 19,144 miles of railway, with assets aggregating $812,850,167.24.

It is also shown that H. M. Flagler and Benjamin Brewster (trustees) are directors in the Minnesota Iron Company, with a capital of $20,000,000 (which own the capital stock of the Duluth and Iron Range Railroad).

H. M. Flagler, secretary of the Standard Oil trust, is a director in the Western Union Telegraph Company, capital $80,000,000.

The Standard Oil trust has issued $90,000,000 of stock, probably more, worth about $173, $155,700,000, showing $1,068,550,167.24 in which these trustees and their subordinates have part or entire control.

I present this to show the wonderful combination of capital concentrated in the Standard Oil trust and the railroads co-operating with it and using their power to crush out the smaller refiners and shippers, and to give the Standard Oil trust and the officers of these railroads the entire and exclusive control of this vast business of refining, shipping, and selling 27,000,000 barrels of refined oil a year.

The manner in which the interests of the Standard Oil trust are mixed up with the railroads of the country, and the enormous amount of that interest, if my information is correct, shows that when the people of this country deal with the Standard Oil trust they are dealing also with the railroad companies; and that unless a separation of these interests can be compelled there can be no hope of healthy competition in the refining, transportation, and sale of mineral oil. Under such circumstances, unless we can compel the railroads to furnish their own transportation and to furnish tank-cars to other refiners on the same terms on which they are furnished to the Standard Oil trust, the other refineries must go out of existence and that trust be allowed an absolute monopoly of this vast product.

We are told that trust, by its capital and improved facilities, has cheapened oil to the people. Improvements in the process of refining, in the means of transportation, and in the facilities for handling oil, has, of course, very much reduced its price. Competition has also had its influence in reducing its price to the people.

To show how competition has caused the lowering of the price of oil I submit the following table, showing the prices at which oil was sold by the Standard Oil trust at the places named before the oils of George Rice came in competition with them, and the prices at which they sold oil after Rice commenced to compete with them:

Names of towns.	Kinds and how delivered.	Prices.
		Before entry.	After entry
Paris, Tex	110° fire test, in barrels.....per gallon...	$0.15	$0.10
Do	175° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.20	.13
Corpus Christi, Tex	110° fire test (two 5-gallon cans in boxes), per case.	2.30	1.40
Laredo, Tex	.....do.....per case...	2.40	1.65
San Antonio, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.30	1.75
San Marcos, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.60	1.50
Calvert, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.50	1.50
Weatherford, Tex	110° fire test, in barrels.....per gallon...	.18	.10
Do	110° fire test, two 5-gallon.....per case...	2.20	1.80
Victoria, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.30	1.50
Athens, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.20	1.50
Flatonia, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.20	1.50
Jacksonville, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.40	1.70
Whitesborough, Tex	(No competition.)
Do	110° fire test, two 5-gallon.....per case...	2.40	.....
Clarksville, Tex	110° fire test, in barrels.....per gallon...	.15	.....
Do	(No competition; same freight rate as Paris.)
Cleburne, Tex	110° fire test, two 5-gallon.....per case...	2.20	1.70
Austin, Tex	175° fire test, two 5-gallon.....do.....	3.20	1.50
Do	175° fire test, barrels.....per gallon...	.22	.10
Galveston, Tex	110° fire test, barrels.....do.....	.13½	.10
Do	110° fire test, two 5-gallon.....per case...	1.60	1.40
Round Rock, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.30	1.70
Do	175° fire test, two 5-gallon.....do.....	3.30	2.20
Honey Grove, Tex	110° fire test, two 5-gallons.....do.....	2.20	1.80
Jacksonville, Tex	110° fire test, barrels.....per gallon...	.20	.15
Ennis, Tex	110° fire test, two 5-gallons.....per case...	2.20	1.50
Tyler, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.20	1.30
Navasota, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.20	1.50
Hubbard City, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.20	1.60
Gilmer, Tex	.....do.....do.....	2.30	1.75
Little Rock, Ark	150° fire test, in bulk.....per gallon...	.16	.05
Morrilton, Ark	150° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.18	.08
Searcy, Ark	.....do.....do.....	.15	.11½
Selma, Ala	115° first test, in barrels.....do.....	.15	.08
Birmingham, Ala	.....do.....do.....	.13	.09
Anniston, Ala	.....do.....do.....	.14	.09½
Mobile, Ala	110° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.12½	.09
Huntsville, Ala	.....do.....do.....	.16	.08½
Memphis, Tenn	150 fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.16	.08
Union City, Tenn	.....do.....do.....	.16	.12
Nashville, Tenn	.....do.....do.....	.16	.08½
Jackson, Tenn	.....do.....do.....	.15	.10
Knoxville, Tenn	.....do.....do.....	.16	.09½
Chattanooga, Tenn	.....do.....do.....	.13	.09
Jackson, Miss	110° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.16½	.13
Vicksburg, Miss	.....do.....do.....	.11½	.09
Holly Springs, Miss	150° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.17	.12½
Winona, Miss	.....do.....do.....	.16	.12
Grenada, Miss	150° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.14	.10
Aberdeen, Miss	150° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.13½	.11
Natchez, Miss	110° fire test, in barrels.....do.....	.11	.08½
Meridian, Miss	.....do.....do.....	.14	.09
Water Valley, Miss	.....do.....do.....	.15	.11
Paducah, Ky	150° fire test, barrels.....do.....	.10½	.07½
Atlanta, Ga	120° fire test, barrels.....do.....	.15	.09
New Orleans, La	110° fire test, barrels.....do.....	.12	.08½
Shreveport, La	.....do.....do.....	.14	.08

The table is a long one and a very interesting one, showing that as soon as competition was introduced it reduced their rates at the fifty-one places named in the table. It will be seen that at all these places the price of oil was reduced by the competition thus produced.

If we allow the Standard Oil trust to crush out all rivals in this business it will then be in the power of that association to compel the people to accept poorer oil and to pay whatever price it chooses to demand for these oils, and it will be sure to put the price so as to cause oppression.

The idea of presenting an argument to anybody, much less to the American Senate, to prove that to make a monopoly is to cheapen rates is so absurd that I should feel ashamed to argue the question here.

The ruling of the commission is a recognition of the binding force of an artful device for combining the Standard Oil trust and the railroads, which, if continued, can not fail to crush out rival refineries of oil and establish a dangerous monopoly.

And if its reasoning in the extracts I have read from its first annual report and its opinion in the case of Rice against the railroads is correct, its final ruling can only be justified by the fact that Congress has not conferred on it power to enable it to require the railroads to furnish their own tank-cars to meet the requirements for transportation. However this may be, certainly its reasoning calls for and would justify the adoption of the proposed amendment.

Many petitions have come to the Senate from the people of different parts of the country, asking for such legislation as is proposed by this amendment. They are entitled to respectful consideration. The friends of the Standard Oil trust say this is the work of George Rice. He may well have had some agency in getting them sent here. This should stand to his credit rather than to the discredit of these petitions. The courage and persevering constancy he has shown, and the great sacrifices he has made in the courts, before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and in Congress to protect the oil refineries which compete with the Standard, and to give the country the benefit of that competition, and to bring a giant monopoly under the restraints of law, and to compel it to observe the rules of right, make his course worthy of all commendation and honor, and mark him as of the best type and representatives of American manhood and independence.

If the union of this Standard Oil trust and the railroads shall be permitted to continue it will outrage public sentiment, it will discourage enterprise, it will demoralize the people and cause them to lose faith in the wisdom and justice of Congress, and it will give renewed and increased strength to a monopoly which may even now be too strong to be subordinated to law or controlled by the Government.

This much I have said, Mr. President, upon the third amendment, and while I am on the floor I desire to say a few words upon the seventh amendment made by the House of Representatives, which I will read. It is as follows:

That in all civil actions and proceedings of whatever nature arising under an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and under all acts amendatory thereof, concurrent jurisdiction with United States courts is hereby conferred upon State courts of competent jurisdiction.

In matters of litigation which now arise between shippers and railroad companies in the transaction of their ordinary business under the influence of the common law, the State courts have jurisdiction of such cases. In the "act to regulate commerce," to which this is an amendment, jurisdiction in civil as well as in criminal cases is retained in the Federal courts. So far as the criminal jurisdiction is concerned, we can not by law take that from the Federal courts, but we have many statutes, many acts of Congress to which I must call some attention, which confer jurisdiction upon the State courts. On the subject of the power of Congress to confer jurisdiction on the State courts over controversies of this kind, I prefer, as the shortest method in which I can present that subject, to read an extract from some remarks delivered on the 4th of January in the House of Representatives by Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, which contain a sufficient statement on that subject:

I have given this matter some attention, and I find that in the matter of remedy for the deprivation of Federal office that the State courts are granted the same jurisdiction as the Federal courts, in section 2010, page 353, of the Revised Statutes. Again, in section 2177, page 381, United States marshals may qualify before the State as well as Federal judges. Again, I find that in suits and prosecutions in State courts under the postal laws where the trial of claims and demands of as great value and of prosecutions where punishments are as great in extent as under the State laws in like cases, jurisdiction is given to the State courts, as will be found in section 3833, page 750, of the Revised Statutes. Again, in section 4522 of the Revised Statutes, penalties for omitting to begin a voyage by seamen, the jurisdiction is conferred on State courts; and again, in section 4599, for the arrest of seamen for desertion without warrant, and under section 4063 jurisdiction is conferred as to process against foreign ministers and their domestic servants upon State courts.

Then we come to the national-bank act, which, in plain language, provides:

"That suits, actions, and proceedings against any association under this act may be had in any circuit, district, or Territorial court of the United States held within the district in which such association may be established, or in any State, county, or municipal court in the county or city in which said association is located having jurisdiction in similar cases."

And, Mr. Speaker, under that provision there have been decisions by the United States Supreme Court sustaining the power of Congress to thus confer jurisdiction on State courts, one of which I shall refer to. It is the case of National Pahquioque Bank vs. The First National Bank of Bethel, Conn., reported at page 383, 14 Wall.

I read from that case the statement of facts:

"The First National Bank of Bethel, in Connecticut, on the 21st of February, 1868, failed to redeem some of its circulating notes. They were protested, and on the 26th of February a receiver was appointed under the above-quoted fiftieth section of the currency act, who immediately entered on the duties of his office.

"The National Pahquioque Bank of Danbury, Fairfield County, in the same State, asserted that it was a creditor of the Bethel bank and presented its claim to the receiver. The receiver, however, disallowed it.

"The Pahquioque bank thereupon, on the 30th day of May, 1868, brought assumpsit in the superior court of Fairfield County, a court of Connecticut having jurisdiction in similar cases, against the Bethel bank. The bank of Bethel defended itself against the claim on these, in substance, among other grounds:

"1. That the courts of the United States alone had jurisdiction after the appointment and acceptance of the receiver."

Mr. Justice Clifford, in delivering the opinion of the court upon this point, says:

"Support to the first proposition is supposed to be derived from the conceded fact that such associations are created by an act of Congress and that they are instruments of the National Government intrusted with the power of carrying on the business of banking and of employing and circulating Treasury notes as a national currency, subject to the supervision and direction of the Comptroller of the Currency and of the Secretary of the Treasury. Banking associations, it is said, were established as instruments by which the Government may perform the trust of furnishing and regulating the national paper currency; and the argument is that inasmuch as they are instruments of the Government to carry into effect a national purpose they can not be impleaded in a State court. Confirmation of that view is also attempted to be drawn from the fact that such associations are controlled by the Treasury Department; that all the notes which they circulate as money are received from the Comptroller of the Currency, and that they can not issue any instrument for circulation or use as money except the notes intrusted to them by the Comptroller of the Currency, as authorized by the act of Congress.

"Beyond all doubt such associations are created by an act of Congress and for the purposes assumed by the defendants, but the conclusion attempted to be drawn from those facts can not be sustained, as express provision is made by the fifty-seventh section of the act that suits, actions, and proceedings against any such association may be had 'in any State, county, or municipal court in the county or city in which said association is located having jurisdiction in similar cases.' Commenced, as the action was, in the proper court of the State where the association is located, and in a court having jurisdiction in similar cases, which is not denied, it is quite clear that the objection to the jurisdiction of the court founded upon the character of the association as an instrument of the National Government must be overruled.

"Jurisdiction in such suits is unquestionably vested in any circuit, district, or Territorial court of the United States held within the district in which such association may be established; but the decisive answer to the objection of the defendants is that the same section of the act of Congress gives authority to creditors to prosecute such controversies in 'any State, county, or municipal court in which said association is located' in all cases where it appears that such courts have jurisdiction under the State laws in similar controversies. Proceedings to enjoin the Comptroller of the Currency under that act must, it is true, be instituted and prosecuted in a circuit, district, or Territorial court of the United States, but the act allows creditors to sue in the proper State courts in all suits, actions, and proceedings against the association, as specifically provided in the fifty-seventh section of the act. Authorities to support the proposition are not necessary, as it rests upon an express provision in the act of Congress."

I suppose I need not have read this, as I judge that no question as to the right of Congress to confer jurisdiction on the State courts to hear and determine civil suits under this law will be raised.

Now, Mr. President, a word upon the expediency of extending this jurisdiction. In many States, and especially in the larger States, litigants must of necessity in a great many cases have to go a great way to reach a Federal courts, involving large expense in travel and hotel bills, and large expense in procuring and carrying witnesses. So in truth by limiting the remedy to the Federal courts we exclude the poorer class of litigants from the benefit of this law.

If we extend this jurisdiction to State courts of competent jurisdiction, it brings the forum for adjudication nearer to the litigants, places it more convenient to them. It will cheapen litigation. It will make it possible for men of moderate means, men injured in smaller amounts, to prosecute their rights and have them protected by the courts of the country when they could not for want of pecuniary means go to a great distance and take their witnesses and bear the expense of prosecuting their claims.

If the law is right in providing for civil suits for wrongs done by transportation companies, then it follows as a logical consequence that justice requires that the trial of those causes should be in the courts most convenient to the parties injured. It is illogical and unjust to say that parties shall have a legal remedy and then to place the remedy so far from them as to make it unavailable to them.

I have occupied the attention of the Senate so long, Mr. President, that I do not feel warranted in pursuing this argument. What I have said suggests the argument which it seems to me is conclusive in favor of the Senate receding from its disagreement to the third and seventh amendments of the House, and when we reach the proper time for that if no other Senator does it I shall make that motion.

Mr. CULLOM obtained the floor.

COURT IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

During Mr. REAGAN'S speech as given above,

Mr. VEST. Will the Senator from Texas yield to me that I may make a conference report?

Mr. REAGAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. VEST. I am instructed to make a conference report on the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. REAGAN. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

Mr. VEST. I wish to state that it is hardly necessary to read this report. It was read yesterday in full, and the House refused to concur in the report. The present conference report simply changes a single provision.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I know it, but it ought to be read.

Mr. VEST. Very good. I was merely speaking in favor of the economy of time.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I signed that report myself, but I think it ought to be read.

Mr. ALLISON. I quite agree with that.

Mr. VEST. I will not ask the Senator from Texas to give way. I will submit the report and ask that it be read when the Senator from Texas concludes his remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri, from a committee of conference, submits a report and asks that it now be read.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes, he submits it for action.

Mr. VEST. I submit it for the action of the Senate. I will hardly ask the Senator from Texas to give way for so long a report, for it virtually destroys his speech. I would like to submit the report.

Mr. CULLOM. Is it a long report?

Mr. VEST. It is a long report.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator from Texas will not be interfered with in his speech, if he desires to go on.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator from Texas yields for the presentation of the report, the question of its consideration can be raised on its presentation, and if raised must be decided without debate.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think if the Senator from Texas wishes to go on, the report had better be withheld.

Mr. VEST. I will withhold it.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE AT SIOUX CITY.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I ask leave at this time to submit a conference report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conference report will be received and read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at Sioux City, Iowa, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same.

G. G. VEST,
PHILETUS SAWYER,
JAMES F. WILSON,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

CHAS. F. CRISP,
A. R. ANDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. RANSOM. I ask the Senator from Illinois to give way to me for a minute while I ask unanimous consent to call up a bill that it will not take more than a minute to pass.

Mr. CULLOM. Is it a short bill?

Mr. RANSOM. It is a very short bill, and if it gives rise to one moment's debate I will withdraw it.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President——

Mr. RANSOM. I hope the Senator from Missouri will give way.

Mr. VEST. I would of course give up the floor with pleasure if I had any right to it, except for the fact that there is a conference report here of very great importance, and unless it be acted upon to-day the result may be the defeat of a measure in which a large number of persons are interested.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri has the right to submit the report of the committee of conference as a matter of privilege.

Mr. VEST. I now submit the conference report, and ask for action upon it.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the Senator from Missouri if there is any danger of the report not being concurred in, or if he will not wait till morning?

Mr. VEST. There is not the slightest danger. The report has been acted upon substantially.

Mr. CULLOM. Of course I have no right to interfere, but I am very anxious that the pending matter shall be disposed of to-night.

Mr. VEST. I assure my friend from Illinois that this report will simply take up the time that is consumed in reading it. It has been once read and acted upon.

Mr. CULLOM. Very well.

COURT IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. VEST submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

"That a United States court is hereby established, whose jurisdiction shall extend over the Indian Territory, bounded as follows, to wit: North by the State of Kansas, east by the States of Missouri and Arkansas, south by the State of Texas, west by the State of Texas and the Territory of New Mexico; and a judge shall be appointed for said court by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall hold his office for a term of four years, and until his successor is appointed and qualified, and receive a salary of $3,500 per annum, to be paid from the Treasury of the United States in like manner as the salaries of judges of United States district courts.

"SEC. 2. That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an attorney and marshal of said court, who shall continue in office for four years, and until their successors be duly appointed and qualified, and they shall discharge the like duties and receive the same fees and salary as now received by the United States attorney and marshal for the western district of Arkansas. The said marshal may appoint one or more deputies, who shall have the same powers, perform the like duties, and be removable in like manner as other deputy United States marshals; and said marshal shall give bond, with two or more sureties, to be approved by the judge of said court, in the sum of $10,000, conditioned as by law required in regard to the bonds of other United States marshals.

"SEC. 3. That a clerk of said court shall be appointed by the judge thereof, who shall reside and keep his office at the place of holding said court. Said clerk shall perform the same duties, be subject to the same liabilities, and shall receive the same fees and compensation as the clerk of the United States court of the western district of Arkansas; and before entering upon his duties he shall give bond in the sum of $10,000, with two or more sureties, to be approved by the judge of said court, conditioned that he will discharge his duties as required by law.

"SEC. 4. That the judge appointed under the provisions of this act shall take the same oath required by law to be taken by the judges of the district courts of the United States; and the oath, when taken as in such cases provided, shall be duly certified by the officer before whom the same shall have been taken to the clerk of the court herein established, to be by him recorded in the records of said court. The clerk, marshal, and deputy marshals shall take before the judge of said court the oath required by law of the clerk, marshal, and deputy marshals of United States district courts, the same to be entered of record in said court as provided by law in like cases.

"SEC. 5. That the court hereby established shall have exclusive original jurisdiction over all offenses against the laws of the United States committed within the Indian Territory as in this act defined, not punishable by death or by imprisonment at hard labor.

"SEC. 6. That the court hereby established shall have jurisdiction in all civil cases between citizens of the United States who are residents of the Indian Territory, or between citizens of the United States, or of any State or Territory therein, and any citizen of or person or persons residing or found in the Indian Territory, and when the value of the thing in controversy or damages or money claimed shall amount to $100 or more: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to give the court jurisdiction over controversies between persons of Indian blood only: And provided further, That all laws having the effect to prevent the Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, Chickasaw, and Seminole Nations, or either of them, from lawfully entering into leases or contracts for mining coal for a period not exceeding ten years are hereby repealed; and said court shall have jurisdiction over all controversies arising out of said mining leases or contracts, and of all questions of mining rights or invasions thereof, where the amount involved exceeds the sum of $100.

"That the provisions of chapter 18, Title XIII, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall govern such court so far as applicable: Provided, That the practice, pleadings, and forms of proceeding in civil causes shall conform, as near as may be, to the practice, pleadings, and forms of proceeding existing at the time in like causes in the courts of record of the State of Arkansas, any rule of court to the contrary notwithstanding; and the plaintiff shall be entitled to like remedies by attachment or other process against the property of the defendant, and, for like causes, as now provided by the laws of said State.

"The final judgment or decree of the court hereby established, in cases where the value of the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other competent witnesses, exceeds $1,600, may be reviewed and reversed or affirmed in the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of error or appeal, in the same manner and under the same regulations as the final judgments and decrees of a circuit court.

"SEC. 7. That two terms of said court shall be held each year at Muscogee, in said Territory, on the first Monday in April and September, and such special sessions as may be necessary for the dispatch of the business in said court at such times as the judge may deem expedient; and he may adjourn such special sessions to any other times previous to a regular term; and the marshal shall procure suitable rooms for the use and occupation of the court hereby created.

"SEC. 8. That all proceedings in said court shall be had in the English language; and bona fide male residents of the Indian Territory, over twenty-one years of age, and understanding the English language sufficiently to comprehend the proceedings of the court, shall be competent to serve as jurors in said court, but shall be subject to exemptions and challenges as provided by law in regard to jurors in the district court for the western district of Arkansas.

"SEC. 9. That the jurors shall be selected as follows: The court at its regular terms shall select three jury commissioners, possessing the qualifications prescribed for jurymen, and who have no suits in court requiring the intervention of a jury; and the same persons shall not act as jury commissioners more than once in the same year. The judge shall administer to each commissioner the following oath:

"'You do swear to discharge faithfully the duties required of you as jury commissioner; that you will not knowingly select any one as juryman whom you believe unfit and not qualified; that you will not make known to any one the name of any juryman selected by you and reported on your list to the court until after the commencement of the next term of this court; that you will not, directly or indirectly, converse with any one selected by you as a juryman concerning the merits of any cause or procedure to be tried at the next term of this court; so help you God.'

"SEC. 10. That the jury commissioners, after they have been appointed and sworn, shall retire to a jury-room, or some other apartment designated by the judge, and be kept free from the intrusion of any person, and shall not separate without leave of the court until they have completed the duties required of them; that they shall select from the bona fide male residents of the Territory such number of qualified persons as the court shall designate, not less than sixty, free from all legal exception, of fair character and approved integrity, of sound judgment and reasonable information, to serve as petit jurors at the next term of court; shall write names of such persons on separate pieces of paper, of as near the same size and appearance as may be, and fold the same so that the names thereon may not be seen. The names so written and folded shall be then deposited in a box, and after they shall be shaken and well mixed, the commissioners shall draw from the said box the names of thirty-seven persons, one by one, and record the same as drawn, which record shall be certified and signed by the commissioners, and indorsed 'List of petit jurors.'

"SEC. 11. That the said commissioners shall then proceed to draw in like manner twelve other names, which shall be recorded in like manner on another paper, which shall be certified and signed by the commissioners, and indorsed 'List of alternate petit jurors.' The two lists shall be inclosed and sealed so that the contents can not be seen, and indorsed 'List of petit jurors,' designating for what term of the court they are to serve, which indorsement shall be signed by the commissioners, and the same shall be delivered to the judge in open court; and the judge shall deliver the lists to the clerk in open court, and administer to the clerk and his deputies the following oath:

"'You do swear that you will not open the jury-lists now delivered to you; that you will not, directly or indirectly, converse with any one selected as a petit juror concerning any suit pending and for trial in this court at the next term, unless by leave of the court; so help you God.'

"SEC. 12. That within thirty days before the next term, and not before, the clerk shall open the envelopes and make a fair copy of the list of petit jurors and of alternate petit jurors, and give the same to the marshal, who shall, at least fifteen days prior to the first day of the next term, summon the persons named as petit jurors and alternate petit jurors to attend on the first day of said term as petit jurors, by giving personal notice to each, or by leaving a written notice at the juror's place of residence with some person over ten years of age and there residing.

"That the marshal shall return said lists with a statement in writing of the date and manner in which each juror was summoned; and if any juror or alternate legally summoned shall fail to attend he may be attached and fined or committed as for contempt.

"That if there shall not be a sufficient number of competent petit jurors and alternates present, and not excused, to form a petit jury, the court may compel the attendance of such absentees or order other competent persons to be summoned to complete the juries.

"SEC. 13. That if for any cause the jury commissioners shall not appoint or shall fail to select a petit jury as provided, or the panels selected be set aside, or the jury-list returned in court shall be lost or destroyed, the court shall order the marshal to summon a petit jury of the number hereinbefore designated, who shall be sworn to perform the duties of petit jurors as if they had been regularly selected; and this provision shall also apply in the formation of petit juries for the first term of the court. The want of qualification of any person selected as juror under section 10 of this act shall not necessarily operate as cause of challenge to the whole panel.

"SEC. 14. That the fees of the jurors and witnesses before said court herein created shall be the same as are provided in the district court of the United States for the western district of Arkansas.

"SEC. 15. That in all criminal trials had in said court in which a jury shall be demanded and in which the defendant or defendants shall be citizens of the United States none but citizens of the United States shall be competent jurors.

"SEC. 16. That the judge of the court herein established shall have the same authority to issue writs of habeas corpus, injunctions, mandamus, and other remedial process as exists in the circuit courts of the United States.

"SEC. 17. That the Chickasaw Nation and the portion of the Choctaw Nation within the following boundaries, to wit: Beginning on Red River at the southeast corner of the Choctaw Nation; thence north with the boundary line between the said Choctaw Nation and the State of Arkansas to a point where Big Creek, a tributary of the Black Fork of the Kimishi River, crosses the said boundary line; thence westerly with Big Creek and the said Black Fork to the junction of the said Black Fork with Buffalo Creek; thence northwesterly with said Buffalo Creek to a point where the same is crossed by the old military road from Fort Smith, Ark., to Boggy Depot, in the Choctaw Nation; thence southwesterly with the said road to where the same crosses Perryville Creek; thence northwesterly up said creek to where the same is crossed by the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway track; thence northerly up the center of the main track of the said road to the South Canadian River; thence up the center of the main channel of the said river to the western boundary line of the Chickasaw Nation, the same being the northwest corner of the said nation; thence south on the boundary line between the said nation and the reservation of the Wichita Indians; thence continuing south with the boundary line between the said Chickasaw Nation and the reservations of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Indians to Red River; thence down said river to the place of beginning; and all that portion of the Indian Territory not annexed to the district of Kansas by the act approved January 6, 1883, and not set apart and occupied by the five civilized tribes, shall, from and after the passage of this act, be annexed to and constitute a part of the eastern judicial district of the State of Texas for judicial purposes.

"SEC 18. That the counties of Lamar, Fannin, Red River, and Delta of the State of Texas, and all that part of the Indian Territory attached to the said eastern judicial district of the State of Texas by the provisions of this act, shall constitute a division of the eastern judicial district of Texas; and terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for the said eastern district of the State of Texas shall be held twice in each year at the city of Paris on the third Monday in April and the second Monday in October; and the United States courts herein provided to be held at Paris shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of all offenses committed against the laws of the United States within the limits of that portion of the Indian Territory attached to the eastern judicial district of the State of Texas by the provisions of this act, of which jurisdiction is not given by this act to the court herein established in the Indian Territory; and all civil process, issued against persons resident in the said counties of Lamar, Fannin, Red River, and Delta, cognizable before the United States courts, shall be made returnable to the courts, respectively, to be held at the city of Paris, Tex., and all prosecutions for offenses committed in either of said last-mentioned counties shall be tried in the division of said eastern district of which said counties form a part: Provided, That no process issued or prosecution commenced or suit instituted or offenses committed before the passage of this act shall be in any way affected by the provisions hereof.

"SEC. 19. That the judge of the eastern judicial district of the State of Texas shall appoint a clerk of said court, who shall reside at the city of Paris, in the county of Lamar.

"SEC. 20. That every person who shall, in the Indian Territory, willfully and maliciously place any obstruction, by stones, logs, or any other thing, on the track of any railroad, or shall tear up or remove, burn, or destroy any part of any such railroad, or the works thereof, with intent to obstruct the passage of any engine, car, or cars thereon, or to throw them off the track, shall be deemed guilty of malicious mischief, and, on conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for any time not more than twenty years: Provided, That if any passenger, employé, or other person shall be killed, either directly or indirectly, because of said obstruction, tearing up, removing, burning, or destroying, the person causing the same shall be deemed guilty of murder, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished accordingly.

"SEC. 21. That any person aforesaid who shall, in the Indian Territory, willfully and intentionally destroy, injure, or obstruct any telegraph or telephone line, or any of the property or materials thereof, shall be deemed guilty of malicious mischief, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not more than $500 and imprisoned for any time not more than one year.

"SEC. 22. That every person aforesaid who shall, in the Indian Territory, maliciously or contemptuously disturb or disquiet any congregation or private family assembled in any church or other place for religious worship, or persons assembled for the transaction of church business, by profanely swearing or using indecent gestures, threatening language, or committing any violence of any kind to or upon any person so assembled, or by using any language or acting in any manner that is calculated to disgust, insult, or interrupt said congregation, shall, upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to imprisonment for any time not exceeding sixty days, or to a fine not exceeding $100, or both such fine and imprisonment.

"SEC. 23. That every person aforesaid who shall, in the Indian country, feloniously, willfully, and with malice aforethought assault any person with intent to rob, and his counselors, aiders, and abettors, shall, on conviction thereof, be imprisoned at hard labor for a time not less than one nor more than fifteen years.

"SEC. 24. That every person who shall, in the Indian Territory, knowingly mark, brand, or alter the mark or brand of any animal the subject of larceny, the property of another, or who shall knowingly administer any poison to or maliciously expose any poisonous substance, with the intent that the same shall be taken by any of the aforesaid animals, or shall willfully and maliciously, by any means whatsoever, kill, maim, or wound any of the aforesaid animals, shall be deemed guilty of malicious mischief, and, on conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to imprisonment for a period of not more than six months, or a fine of not more than $200, or both such fine and imprisonment; and in case the animal shall have been killed or injured by said malicious mischief, the jury trying the case shall assess the amount of damages which the owner of the animal shall have sustained by reason thereof, and, in addition to the sentence aforesaid, the court shall render judgment in favor of the party injured for threefold the amount of the damages so assessed by the jury, for which said amount execution may issue against the defendant and his property.

"SEC. 25. That if any person, in the Indian country, assault another with a deadly weapon, instrument, or other thing, with an intent to inflict upon the person of another a bodily injury where no considerable provocation appears, or where the circumstances of the assault show an abandoned and malignant disposition, he shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisoned not exceeding one year.

"SEC. 26. That if any person shall maliciously and willfully set on fire any woods, marshes, or prairies in the Indian Territory, with the intent to destroy the fences, improvements, or property of another, such person shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $500, or be imprisoned not more than six months, or both, at the discretion of the court.

"SEC. 27. That sections 5, 23, 24, and 25 of this act shall not be so construed as to apply to offenses committed by one Indian upon the person or property of another Indian.

"SEC. 28. That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to establish a United States court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes."

And the Senate agree to the same.

G. G. VEST,
JAMES F. WILSON,
GEO. F. EDMUNDS,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
D. B. CULBERSON,
JNO. H. ROGERS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection to the present consideration of the report, the question is on concurring in the same.

The report was concurred in.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 26th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 781) granting a pension to John Fagan;
An act (S. 1822) granting a pension to Ann E. Cooney;
An act (S. 1831) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary Heap Nicholson;
An act (S. 2091) granting a pension to Frances H. Plummer;
An act (S. 2275) granting a pension to Mary Calvert Truxton;
An act (S. 2314) granting a pension to John B. Covert;
An act (S. 2439) granting a pension to Charlotte T. Alderman;
An act (S. 2993) granting a pension to Margaret A. Hillard;
An act (S. 3540) granting a pension to Mary P. Myers;
An act (S. 3634) granting a pension to Mrs. Nancy Smith; and
An act (S. 169) granting an increase of pension to Abby J. Slocum.

The message also announced that the President had this day approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 3560) for the relief of William S. Rosecrans; and An act (S. 3423) granting a pension to Irene Rucker Sheridan, widow of General P. H. Sheridan.

SUE B. JOHNSON.

Mr. DAVIS submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3364) granting a pension to Sue B. Johnson, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment to said bill, and agree to the same.

C. K. DAVIS,
JAMES L. PUGH,
A. S. PADDOCK,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
J. LOGAN CHIPMAN,
W. GODFREY HUNTER,
CARLOS FRENCH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report requires no action by the Senate.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the Senate, information in regard to the disposition of certain moneys devoted to the allotment of Indian lands; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The Senate resumes the consideration of the third and seventh amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, the pending question being on the motion of Mr. SHERMAN that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, it is with some reluctance that I consent to say anything and thereby detain the Senate from the consideration of other business. I am, however, pressed into the service to occupy the attention of the Senate for a few minutes.

The bill, referring to the whole bill which has been under consideration, passed the Senate many months ago, during the last session. The bill went to the other House and passed that body with numerous amendments. It came back and the Senate disagreed to the amendments as a whole and asked for a conference, which was agreed to. Conferees were appointed on the part of both Houses, and certain of the amendments pending between the two Houses were settled by the conferees on the part of both Houses. The two amendments which are now under consideration were disagreed to and are therefore pending to-day. Those two amendments I believe, as I have always believed ever since I have had anything to do with this subject, are not amendments that it is desirable to have made to the general act.

The act which was passed two years ago regulating commerce among the States was general in its provisions. It was substantially an enactment into statute law of the common law of the country, so far as it was applicable to the subject under consideration.

There has never before, that I know of, been any effort on the part of any Senator to introduce into legislation amending the general act any provision that might be termed special legislation. It seems to me that the amendment the Senator from Ohio has so ably advocated does attempt to introduce into the general act to regulate commerce among the States special legislation, and the result of its enactment would be that whenever any individual thought he was aggrieved in any way and did not at once secure justice from the courts or the commission, he would be encouraged to come before the Senate or before Congress and ask such legislation as would exactly fit his case.

It seems to me that it is akin to such legislation as we see once in a while attempted in State Legislatures. When a lawyer has a case and he fears he is going to be beaten, he goes to the Legislature and undertakes to get an act passed to enable him to win his case. While I am not by any means intimating that any Senator is doing or attempting to do that sort of thing, yet it does seems to me that the provision the honorable Senator from Ohio is insisting upon is that kind of legislation.

Not only so, but the Senator from Ohio, in his general declamation here, has stated that he is in favor of the poor man; that he is in favor of exact justice; that he is against standard oil companies; that he is against monopolies, and that generally he wants exact and even justice to all the people; all of which I agree to. Yet, if I understand the amendment, the result of the enforcement of it would be that it would enforce unjust discrimination instead of carrying out even and exact justice to all the people of the country.

I submit to the Senator from Ohio, who is so earnest in behalf of this amendment, whether he does not believe, whether he does not know, that cases might arise where unjust discrimination would be the result of the enforcement of that provision if it was placed upon the statute-book. Therefore I am against it. While it looks very easy, and very nice, and very fair, and very just in its terms, yet, as the Interstate Commerce Commission have already decided more than once, I believe, it would be an unjust discrimination to do exactly what the amendment proposes to do. In other words, the commission have decided that every case must stand upon the facts connected with the case, and that there may be a state of facts under which in carrying oil in barrels, if you please, and in tanks, the charge should be exactly the same. There may be a state of facts, I say, under which if that was the law and enforced, the result would be an unjust discrimination. So it seems to me that no such provision of law ought to be incorporated in the bill.

Ever since I have had anything to do with this subject I have tried in legislation to go just as far as we could afford to go consistent with the interests of the commerce of the country and the protection of the people carrying it on, but in my judgment if we were to enact that provision the result of the enactment would be that either the men who are furnishing oil to-day at the price the people are buying it for would be compelled to put up their price, if the provision the Senator from Ohio insists upon as to the tanks should be enforced. If the cars furnished by any outside company are to be subject to use by everybody, the result would certainly be that such companies or shippers would not furnish cars for themselves or anybody else, and we would go back to the old-fashioned and more expensive methods of transportation that formerly prevailed, the increased cost of shipment being ultimately paid by the consumer.

So it seems to me that this is an impracticable proposition. I do not believe in the declaration the Senator announced as the law, that if one shipper comes to a railroad company and says that he wants a given number of cars, and the railroad company says, "I am not able to furnish them," and then the shipper says, "If you can not do it, I will," that when the shipper does it those cars are under the law to be taken and used by everybody else. It does not seem to me that that is the law on common law principles or that it ought to be in the statutory law.

I agree that in so far as a railroad corporation can it should furnish to all the people doing business exactly the same facilities; yet if a railroad company can not furnish tank-cars, if you please, and the man or company carrying on the business determines to furnish them, he has to allow everybody else to use his cars and break up his business, and put him where perhaps he would not have cars enough in order to carry on the business that he is undertaking to carry on and that he has provided facilities for. Such an arrangement would certainly be very unjust.

So it seems to me that the proposition of the Senator from Ohio is that if any business man or company makes an application for cars and the railroad company is unable financially to furnish them, you have either got to say to the railroad company that it shall not furnish any cars or allow anybody to build their own cars, or else you have got to require that the company which does build the cars shall put them subject to the use of the railroad for anybody else. Is that right? I submit in all candor, is that right, or is there any common-law principle involved in it?

I do not believe there is; but taking it as a matter of practice in business in this country, as the Senator knows, there are coal-cars furnished by companies mining and transporting coal, there are lumber-cars furnished by lumbermen for the purpose of getting out their lumber, there are fruit-cars furnished by individuals for the shipment of fruit when the business perhaps would not justify a railroad company in furnishing such cars or when perhaps the railroad company was not able to furnish them. Does the Senator pretend to say that because the railroad allows the lumber company or the fruit company or the coal company to furnish its own cars, therefore the cars furnished by any of these companies shall be subject to the use of everybody else?

Mr. HARRIS. And refrigerator cars.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes, sir; refrigerator cars.

Mr. GRAY. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CULLOM. Certainly.

Mr. GRAY. I have been much interested in the argument made by the Senator from Ohio in favor of his amendment and in the subject as it has been presented to the Senate. I know that the Senator from Illinois has given great attention to this general subject, and I have been listening to him and intend to listen to him with attention. Inasmuch as it appears from the argument made by the Senator from Ohio that there is a contest between two sets of producers of oil, one who seem to be able to own tank-cars, and another who seem to be unable to own them, I should like to know what, in the opinion of the Senator from Illinois, the interest of the great body of consumers of oil in this country is in this contest between these capitalistic corporations and the producers?

Mr. CULLOM. Of course it is the interest of the people generally that no one corporation should own the country or its business. That I agree to. But, after all, the great purpose of regulating interstate commerce, or having anything to do by legislation with the subject, is to protect the great body of the people against extortion or unjust discrimination or preference, as is expressed in the general act of Congress.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator a question for information, for I have not had time to examine the amendment? Does not the amendment practically undertake to regulate freight traffic by Congressional action or interference? I have not had time to examine it, and I ask for information.

Mr. CULLOM. I will read the amendment so that the Senator may know exactly what it is:

Provided, however, That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, to carry refined oils and other petroleum products, cotton-seed oil, and turpentine for any shipper, in tank or cylinder cars, who shall own, lease, or control the same in any manner, except upon the condition that said carrier shall charge the same rate for the transportation of said products in wooden packages or barrels, in car-load lots, as in said tank or cylinder cars, the said tank and cylinder and said wooden packages and barrels being carried free in each case.

That is the provision.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator of course will tell me if I am interrupting him.

Mr. CULLOM. Not at all. I should have gone further in answer to the Senator from Delaware if the Senator from South Carolina had not asked me the purport of the amendment.

Mr. GRAY. I wanted to pursue my inquiry to this point, whether the result of the amendment of the Senator from Ohio will not be to raise the price of oil to the consumers of the country?

Mr. CULLOM. I have not the slightest question but that it will. While I am upon that branch of the subject I desire to make one allusion to another remark of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from Illinois will allow me, I beg to suggest that it will produce the very inequality the committee has struggled to prevent.

Mr. CULLOM. Of course, exactly. Now, I want to say a few words to the Senator from Ohio in answer to the suggestion he made in regard to pipe-lines. The Senator complains that certain persons, I do not know who they are, have gone through people's farms and over the highways and byways from some oil region, I suppose, in his State, until finally they have got the pipe-line from that region into the city of Chicago, and he complains about that. Mr. President, if there is anything that the people of Chicago and the West ought to be grateful for it is that whatever company has put down that pipe-line is giving to the people of Chicago on that account cheap oil for manufacturing, for fuel, or for whatever purpose the oil may be used.

While the Senator may have an idea of some principle of law that would prevent that sort of thing, or that would require a regulation of it, I do not know of any provision of the common law or any other, if any individuals or corporations shall put down a pipe-line from Ohio to the city of Chicago for their own use, by which we are going to be able to interfere with it under any general common law principle or any other.

So far as I am concerned I have no particular affection for the Standard Oil Company, because we all know that that company has extorted from the people in years gone by to the amount of millions of dollars. Yet because of that fact and because of the possible unpopularity of that institution in the country, while I have any responsibility whatever for the control of legislation on the subject of regulating commerce, I shall not allow any amendment, if I can help it, to get into the general act which will result in producing an unjust discrimination, and in the end break down the whole effort that we are making in protecting the people against extortion and unjust discrimination.

Mr. DAWES. I wish to ask the Senator a question, because I have not been able to be here during the discussion. Somewhere in the elementary books it is said that you must understand the mischief before you undertake to apply a remedy. Therefore, I should like to know whether the complaint is that the railroads make a distinction between producers who offer the same facility? That is to say, do they make distinctions in favor of one company furnishing tank-cars, for instance, as against another company offering the same kind of cars?

Mr. CULLOM. Not at all.

Mr. DAWES. Now, another point. Do they make a distinction between those furnishing tank-cars and those offering to furnish another kind of car equally safe?

Mr. CULLOM. There have been two ways of carrying oil, one by tank-cars, which the Senator has referred to, and the other in what are called stock-cars. There have been cases brought before the Interstate Commerce Commission, in one instance against the Lake Shore road, the allegation being, in the first place, that the railroads were making too great a discrimination between the price charged for carrying part of a car-load and a whole car-load. Then again complaint is made that the railroad charges a different rate, and it is alleged that there ought to be no difference between the carrying of oil in stock-cars by the car-load and a car with a tank as a part of the car, the tank being full of oil. Those cases have been before the Interstate Commerce Commission and they have given those subjects their attention, and in two cases or more have decided as to what they thought was substantially right as between the two modes of carrying a car-load in a stock-car and a car-load in a tank-car.

Right here, before I refer to that decision, I will state what the point is. While the Interstate Commerce Commission had decided just what they thought was right as between the two modes of transportation, which was based upon matters of fact, the people representing the stock-car mode of transportation insist still that the railroads give the advantage to the tank-car mode of transportation.

Mr. DAWES. I should like to make one other inquiry.

Mr. CULLOM. Go on.

Mr. DAWES. That is, whether the tank-car is a car that nobody can use except this company?

Mr. CULLOM. Not at all. Anybody can build a tank-car, as I understand, who has got the money to build it.

Mr. PLATT. It is furnished by other companies.

Mr. CULLOM. It is furnished by a good many other companies than the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. DAWES. Is it the answer of the railroad company that the other method is not as safe?

Mr. CULLOM. Of course there is a difference of opinion on that question. The fact is, as I gather from all the information that I have been able to get, that the tank-car system is safer, and I have no doubt myself that it will be but a very brief period of time before there will be no other mode of carrying oil from one portion of the country to another than in tank-cars, because it is the cheaper mode and it is certainly the best mode of transporting it from one section of country to another.

Let me read for a moment what the decision of the commission has been. The last decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission was in the case of William C. Scofield and others against the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company, decided July 19, 1888. In that case just what I have stated was the complaint. The parties to it, and there is a large number of them, alleged that the railroads were extorting from them or unjustly discriminating against some of them because they charged too much for a part of a load in comparison with the charge they made for a full car-load of barrels in a stock-car. The other complaint was that there was too much discrimination or difference in the charge between the transportation of a stock car-load of oil in barrels and that in a tank-car.

The commission delivered a long opinion, reciting all the facts and summing up with a statement of the facts in the case, which is entirely too long for me to read, but I will read a paragraph or two simply to show that everything the Senator from Ohio is anxious to secure is being secured by the decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission as the cases come before them, and that the rights of the parties are being secured, not by an attempt to make special legislation here and to put into the act a statement of what the rate shall be by comparison in every instance, but they do it upon the examination of all the facts before them, and then render a decision just as any court would do, or as a jury would do if the case was submitted to a jury. They use this language. They say:

There is no just and substantial ground for this difference—

That is to say, the difference that existed in that particular case as between the charges by the car-load in barrels and the tank-cars.

There is no just and substantial ground for this difference, so far as we can see. By this arrangement the carrier hauls in one tank-car 90 barrels of oil, etc.

I am reading this to show the view of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which we must trust if we do not abolish it and let the people take their opportunities in the courts, as they have the right to do under the law to-day. If a railroad company that fails to furnish tank-cars to the honorable Senator's friend or anybody in his State or anywhere else refuses to furnish those cars he has a right under the common law, as well as under the act of Congress, in my opinion, to bring a suit. I am sure he has under the common law a right to bring a suit and punish the railroad for its failure to do its duty as a common carrier under the common law.

Mr. PLATT. If it has failed.

Mr. CULLOM. I say if it has failed to do its duty. I am not saying that it has. So there is the remedy the Senator seeks when he undertakes to make an appeal for one class of men as against another. If a railroad has been derelict in its duty and violated the common law of the land in furnishing or allowing, if you please, tank-cars to be built and used by one company, or if the railroad has furnished tank-cars to one company and has not furnished them to another, he can test the question as to whether under the common law the company was liable because of failing to do its duty by one customer as well as another.

Now I come back to the original proposition. The only point in this, it seems to me, is whether we are going to say by legislation that we will not allow a commission or a court to settle the questions of difference that may exist between a railroad and a shipper, or whether we shall allow the question of fact to be settled by a lawsuit or by a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission. I say that the Interstate Commerce Commission are trying—whether they have reached the point of exact justice between the parties or not I am not prepared to say, but they appear to be trying to reach the exact point that the Senator from Ohio alleges he desires, and that is exact justice between the parties. That is all I want.

Now, let us see what the commissioners say in this same opinion:

> The preference thus given to oil shipped in tank-cars as against oil shipped in stock-cars in car-load lots is, we think, unlawful, and must be regarded as forbidden by the act to regulate commerce.

If they were committing an unlawful act, if the railroad was charging too much to the man or the company shipping in stock-cars, or unjustly discriminating in favor of the tank-car, the commission have the absolute power to ascertain the facts existing in the case and render their decision, going to any length that they see proper to go to secure exact justice to the party shipping oil in barrels.

Mr. President, I might stand here and read by the hour arguments that have been furnished to me by parties interested in this subject on both sides, but I do not think I ought to take up the time in talking about this feature of the case any longer. While I am up I desire to say a word as against the other amendment that is insisted upon on the part of the House and the House conferees, although technically it is not before the Senate at this moment.

Mr. FRYE. Will the Senator kindly read that other amendment?

Mr. CULLOM. I will. The other amendment which is pending as a difference between the two Houses is as follows:

> That in all civil actions and proceedings of whatever nature arising under an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and under all acts amendatory thereof, concurrent jurisdiction with United States courts is hereby conferred upon State courts of competent jurisdiction.

In the first place, the Congress of the United States, as I understand it, can not confer jurisdiction upon the State courts and require the State courts to take jurisdiction.

Mr. REAGAN. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. CULLOM. Yes, sir.

Mr. REAGAN. I, a short time ago, called attention to a number of acts of Congress conferring jurisdiction upon State courts for various purposes.

Mr. CULLOM. So I understand. But if we could confer jurisdiction on State courts, the State courts can not take the jurisdiction unless the Legislatures or some other authority in the State gives them the right to do so. That is the point I make.

But aside from any technical question in criticism of the language used in the amendment, I say that it is not in the interest of the commerce of this country that there should be given to the State courts jurisdiction in the administration of a national law if we had the power to give it. What would be the result of it? Suppose we confer, if you please, jurisdiction upon the State courts of the country. The result of it would be that in every State there would be different decisions.

Mr. HISCOCK. I ask the Senator if he concedes that we can confer jurisdiction upon the State courts?

Mr. CULLOM. I do not, but I say, waiving the question of the technical language of the amendment or of the constitutional power to grant it, if we were to conclude that we have the power to do it, it would be unwise legislation on the part of the Congress of the United States to enact such a provision as that. We already see a disposition on the part of local commissions and judges, even of the United States, to differ one with another in different localities.

Mr. HISCOCK. Do I understand that there has been any authority whatever cited tending to prove that we can give this jurisdiction to the State courts?

Mr. REAGAN. If the Senator will allow me, I have cited a number of acts of Congress. I call the Senator's attention especially to the national-bank act, which expressly conferred jurisdiction on the courts of any county, city, or parish to try cases arising.

Mr. HISCOCK. To try what case? I did not understand the Senator.

Mr. REAGAN. Cases arising under the national-bank act.

Mr. HISCOCK. Does not the Senator know that those cases may rest upon an entirely different principle? There is there the creation of an artificial person, a corporation.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President——

Mr. HISCOCK. If the Senator will allow me, I desire to get this point in right here. There is the creation of an artificial person by Congressional statute, and jurisdiction is given to the State courts in reference to an action by or against that person. Here, on the other hand, and I call the Senator's attention to it, is a provision of the Constitution that "the judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States," etc. Every action under the interstate-commerce law arises under a statute of the United States, whereas every action or nearly every action brought against or by a bank in a State is either an action on contract or an action at common law.

Mr. REAGAN. But arising under the act of Congress which created the corporation.

Mr. HISCOCK. Oh, no; it does not arise under the act of Congress. The act of Congress merely creates the person that brings the action. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Illinois, who has charge of this measure, to that manifest distinction.

Mr. REAGAN. I desire to say that I can find acts of Congress conferring jurisdiction on the State courts.

Mr. DAWES. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Texas if he means to say that a contract made with a national bank can not be enforced in a State court.

Mr. REAGAN. I have said that the express authority was to enforce it.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Mr. President, pending that inquiry ——

Mr. CULLOM. I have the floor, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. HISCOCK. I beg the Senator's pardon for interrupting him.

Mr. CULLOM. That is all right.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Pending that inquiry, I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator has no right to the floor for that purpose or any other.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can not recognize the Senator from Virginia, the Senator from Illinois being on the floor in his own right.

Mr. CULLOM. I shall detain the Senate but a very few minutes longer, because I am very anxious that this subject shall be disposed of to-night.

I was about to say that upon the question in issue I entirely agree with the honorable Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK]. The fact is that this question of the State court authority has been before the committee from the very beginning of our attempt to get together and pass some act upon this question. I have never believed that we had such authority, and I have never believed that if we had it it would be a wise thing for the Congress of the United States to allow State jurisdiction to be taken of a national law of this kind.

As I was about to say when I was interrupted, there is no interference at this moment with the jurisdiction under the common law in the administration of justice in reference to the rights of the people under the common law by State courts, and there will not be by this act, even after these amendments are acted on; but I think it would be unwise that the Congress of the United States should undertake to give State courts jurisdiction if we had the power to do it, to administer the national law upon the question which touches the very life of the great commerce of this country.

Mr. President, it is very easy for Congress to pass acts, and let me say that it is very easy for us to break down commerce if we are not exceedingly careful in our attempt to legislate upon this great subject. The millions and millions of commerce that is being carried on every day, the internal commerce of this country, can be thwarted, can be hindered, can be injured, can be broken down by a mistake in our legislation here in dealing with this delicate subject.

So far as I am concerned, as I have said before, I am very anxious to go just as far as I can in my judgment go consistently with law and the Constitution and duty in protecting the great body of the people of this country by legislation; but I am not willing to go so far as to take a step that is even of doubtful propriety, because already the railroads of the country are staggering under difficulties that have come upon them, not from State legislation, as I understand, not by any action of Congress, but by the conditions that prevailed before the act of Congress was passed.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I ask the Senator from Illinois if he will not now allow me to make a motion to go into executive session?

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator will not attempt to make that motion until we dispose of this subject.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I ask this because it was agreed yesterday that at 3 o'clock to-day we would go into executive session.

Mr. CULLOM. I can not yield, however much I should like to accommodate the Senator.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Then I will not yield any more either.

Mr. CULLOM. All right.

Mr. President, I say that my judgment is that every Senator should be careful in determining what legislation should be had upon this delicate and important subject lest we injure the commerce of the country instead of benefiting it by any acts that we may pass here in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. President——

Mr. CULLOM. I yield the floor to the Senator from New York.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. President, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee I am opposed to these House amendments, and I desire briefly to state the ground of my opposition.

First, I assume that it can not be successfully controverted that oil can be carried in tank-cars cheaper than it can in barrels. That declaration I make, and I challenge successful contradiction of it.

Mr. REAGAN. I do not think there is any human being on earth who will contradict or take issue with the Senator on that point.

Mr. HISCOCK. Very well. Then, if this provision means anything, it means that the railroad companies shall charge the oil producers more for carrying their product which ought to be carried cheaper. In other words, the amendment, instead of being in the direction of putting down freights, is positive and affirmative legislation in the direction of putting them up. The usual cry against corporations has been that they were extortionate; that they imposed burdens upon the people, and that their powers should be limited because they were robbers.

Here we have a case in which they can and do reduce the price for their service, because of the peculiar facility they have for carrying this product; and the proposition is to make the product pay more. That is the spirit of the amendment and that is what it contemplates.

Mr. President, it means that if superior energy and skill can provide a method by which to give the products of a certain industry to the country cheaper than can be done in other modes, the carriers shall not have the privilege of doing it. It means that if a combination of capital can give goods to the consumer cheaper than individual proprietors it shall not have the opportunity of doing it. In other words, this measure is aimed chiefly against cheapening the products of our mines and our factories to the consumer. I am not in favor, as between domestic producers, of carrying the doctrine of protection quite as far as that.

The Senator from Texas concedes that this product can be carried cheaper in tank-cars than it can in the other method indicated in the bill, but he claims that the same price shall be charged for each method of transportation. If we enact a law which provides for that, the result is to put up the price, to increase the price of transportation, and the one who has cheapened the facilities for transportation must increase the price of the product to the consumer.

Now let us take the amendment which has been offered by the Senator from Ohio. It provides—

> That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to transport cars for any shipper who shall own, lease, or control the same, except upon the condition that said carrier shall carry upon said cars the property of all shippers without discrimination or favor, or shall furnish similar cars to all shippers upon the same terms and conditions.

It is a notorious fact that a large proportion of the cars that are used by railroads to-day are leased by them, belonging to individual proprietors; and they belong to the shippers in many cases, for the reason that they are adapted to a particular service; and it will not pay the railroad companies to own the cars; they can not afford to do it. Take refrigerator-cars which leave a State loaded with butter in a warm season of the year. It may be a very close question whether a railroad company feels that it would pay to build those cars and put them on the road; but the home shipper has his own car in his business; he can afford to have it.

This measure proposes that the very moment he has constructed a car to be used in his business he shall share it with some one else; that others shall have the same right he has to have freightage on that car to an Eastern city, or else that the railroad company shall duplicate that car and put it on the road. That is the amendment. That is precisely what is proposed by the provision of the Senator from Ohio.

I say that I believe all shippers who are engaged in the transportation of perishable goods all over this wide country of ours to an Eastern market should have the right to build their cars, and upon fair and just terms put them upon the railroads. It is in the interest of the producers West and consumers East. The effect of this provision would be to destroy that privilege which is now enjoyed by the Western producer and Eastern consumer, and of which they have the benefit.

I had not intended to discuss these provisions at any great length, but, as I stated at the outset, to give in as brief a way as possible the reason which induced me to oppose the amendments which have come from the other House. Now, a word with reference to the provision as to the jurisdiction of courts. I announce in commencing that discussion that I am not prepared to lay down the law authoritatively as to whether we can confer this jurisdiction upon State courts or not, for I have not examined the decisions; but there is a wide distinction between a provision conferring the jurisdiction which is conferred upon State courts with reference to actions by or against national banks and what is contemplated here, and the cases cited by the Senator from Texas do not bear at all upon the question which is presented by this amendment. The provision of the Federal Constitution is that—

> The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, etc.

Every action that can be brought under this interstate-commerce law arises under a statute of the United States. It is for the violation of a statute of the United States. It is for a cause of action given by a statute of the United States. Now, how is it in reference to national banks? A national bank is simply a creature of Federal law, an artificial person that the courts say Congress has the power to create. Congress says that artificial person may be sued or sue in the State courts, but it does not say that it may be sued or sue in the State courts for causes of action arising out of or under Federal statutes. The actions that are brought there are actions upon contracts or promissory notes or bonds for the enforcement of rights either at common law or under contract. I say to the Senator from Texas that he has not presented any case which holds that where the cause of action arises out of a Federal statute, is governed by a Federal statute, Congress can abdicate to the State courts the jurisdiction of that action.

Can a cause of action created and arising under the Constitution of the United States be tried in a State court? As I said in the outset, I am not expressing an unqualified opinion on that subject. I am simply calling the attention of the lawyers of this body to the question which I have propounded. There is no distinction between actions arising upon the terms of or given by the Constitution for a violation of the Constitution and those given by statute or arising for a violation of a statute.

Mr. MITCHELL. Suppose a State judge should decline to execute the law, how would you proceed? Could you impeach him? Could you proceed against him at all?

Mr. HISCOCK. Well, I do not know.

Mr. MITCHELL. I should think you could not myself.

Mr. HISCOCK. The whole question is up whether for violation of Federal statutes, which violations are made criminal, jurisdiction can be given to State courts to try the offenders. That is the question presented. If we can surrender to the State courts the power to try civil causes of action given for a violation of Federal statutes, we can give to the State courts also the power to try and punish crimes which are created under the Federal statutes. I see no distinction between the two cases in that respect; but I do not care to discuss the question further.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator a question before he sits down; I do not want to enter into the debate. It may be the Senator has answered it. I suppose the Senator has adverted to the point. If not, I should like to ask him if it is the right of Congress to give jurisdiction to a State court, even with the consent of that court, unless there is State legislation? Can Congress and a State court put together enforce any jurisdiction the State court would not otherwise have without the legislative authority of the State itself?

Mr. HISCOCK. In respect to crimes under Federal statutes there would have to be affirmative legislation on the part of the States, for the reason that the State courts do not necessarily possess jurisdiction of crimes under Federal statutes. As to civil actions, I am not so certain that action on the part of the State is required; but I will not assume to express a decided opinion now upon that point. I am inclined to think that the decisions under the national banking law cover that precise question, but I am not disposed to express an opinion here that I might not want to change on reflection and further consideration.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will allow me——

Mr. HISCOCK. I am rather up for the purpose of directing the inquiring mind on this question. What was the Senator from Massachusetts about to say?

Mr. HOAR. I was about to call the attention of the Senator from New York to the distinction. In the case of the national banking law the State courts had jurisdiction unless a system were created by national legislation which excluded them. That is, a corporation, whether foreign, domestic, or national, or a corporation of another State, was liable under bankruptcy process to suspend unless Congress in its control over the subject fixed an exclusive jurisdiction in the United States courts. But here is a jurisdiction the subject-matter of which is wholly within the jurisdiction of the court, and if it is to meet an obligation which the State courts put in force ordinarily Congress can not take jurisdiction. Take the case of Prigg vs. The State of Pennsylvania, in 16 Peters, where it was expressly declared that Congress could not give to a State court jurisdiction without affirmative action by the State Legislature.

Mr. HISCOCK. I will not express an opinion on the question that is suggested, but for the purpose of answering the view which has been urged in favor of the amendment providing that the State courts should have jurisdiction of these actions, my argument is complete that if it is true that in those causes of action which arise under a Federal statute the jurisdiction by the Constitution is reserved to the courts of the United States, it follows that it can not be conferred by Congress upon the State tribunals and that it can not be abdicated to them. I have said enough, if I am right in this position, to answer the argument which has been made in favor of the House amendment.

But I now call attention to the provision of the Constitution, subsection of section 8:

To regulate commerce with foreign nations, among the several States, and with Indian tribes.

Under this provision the regulation of interstate commerce is reserved to Congress. The bill and the law which it proposes to amend deal exclusively with interstate commerce and provisions for its regulation. Over that subject neither the legislatures nor the courts of the respective States have any jurisdiction, or can take any, and Congress can not confer jurisdiction upon them.

Every cause of action which can possibly arise under the law in question, or the amendments proposed thereto, will involve the regulation of interstate commerce traffic between the respective States. The actions and the decisions of the courts thereon will involve only questions of interstate commerce, "the regulation of commerce among other States." This jurisdiction, I suggest, can not be conferred upon the State courts.

I will not take the time of the Senate to elaborate this point, and I have made it suggestively for the consideration of the Senators. Its force will be readily appreciated by the trained legal minds, and it is hardly worth while now that I should do more than state it.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I shall not renew the motion for an executive session this evening, because it has been suggested to me that to-morrow at 2 o'clock we shall endeavor to have the motion to go into executive session prevail.

Mr. CULLOM. I think in a little while we shall be able to get a vote on the question under consideration if Senators will remain.

Mr. VEST. There are a number of bridge bills on the Calendar, as I had occasion to say yesterday and the day before, which ought to be disposed of, in which conferences are absolutely necessary, where important railroads are being stopped for the want of the legislation proposed. I move that the Senate take a recess from 6 o'clock, if that is a convenient hour, until 8 this evening.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the Senator from Missouri to withhold that motion. It may be a few minutes after 6 before this subject is disposed of.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not think the Senator from Illinois understood the suggestion of the Senator from Missouri. He moved to take a recess from 6 o'clock, and it is now three-quarters of an hour until 6 o'clock.

Mr. CULLOM. I did understand it; but if we should not have disposed of the pending business by that time it is doubtful whether there will be a quorum here to-night.

Mr. KENNA. Is it contemplated that the session this evening shall be for bridge bills only?

Mr. VEST. That is all of my interest in it.

Mr. KENNA. Then let it be so understood.

Mr. VEST. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce to make this motion.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senator will withhold his motion for half an hour I think we shall then know whether the pending matter will be out of the way, and he can then make it. I am very anxious to do just what the Senator wishes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri moves that the Senate take a recess from 6 o'clock until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. VEST. I am willing to fix it at such time as will be convenient to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That will not do any good. There will not be a voting quorum here on any division. We had better adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. HARRIS. The object the Senator from Missouri has, as expressed by him, is to consider some bridge bills, which it is important to have passed at an early hour.

Mr. EDMUNDS. But there will be no quorum here to-night.

Mr. VEST. My experience has been, if the Senator from Vermont will permit me, that in the morning we come here fresh and everybody will be anxious to pass some special bill, and I shall be just as far off from these bridge bills to-morrow morning as I have been for the last week. That has been my experience.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not think that that is correct. I think that now in this last stage of the session, if we vote to meet to-morrow at 11 o'clock there will be a quorum here within ten or fifteen minutes afterwards, and the matters to which the Senator refers can be attended to. But on any difference of opinion this evening, it is evident to me from my experience that it will be found that there is not a working Senate present.

Mr. VEST. I think we can get a quorum. At any rate I will do my duty; I will make the motion. My committee instructs me, and I will submit the motion.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Pending that, I will try the sense of the Senate on moving that the Senate adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator from Missouri will put the recess at 6 or half past 6, so that we may get the pending measure out of the way.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I propose to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. CULLOM. But let us postpone the hour of adjournment until after 6 o'clock.

HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Then I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. STEWART. I hope that that motion will not prevail and that we shall have an evening session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. These motions are not debatable, but the Chair will hear suggestions, if there be no objection.

Mr. STEWART. I will state that we got pretty nearly through yesterday with the Calendar of House bills, leaving a few unobjected House bills on the Calendar, and we ought to finish them. We might finish them this evening.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It will be quite impossible for the Senate on any division to get on with business without a quorum, as it never ought to go on with business without a quorum. If I happen to be here, as I think I shall, I shall feel it to be a duty to insist that a quorum shall act, and if a majority of the Senate will not be here to act then we ought not to act at all. We shall get on much better if we meet early to-morrow than we shall by trying to sit to-night.

Mr. STEWART. I seldom create a break-up of a quorum; I am here myself, and I think after we have worked in committee during the whole session and there are a few undisputed bills, if we can not have a few minutes to consider them it is very wrong.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from Vermont has precedence as a question of privilege.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We had better meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow, whatever we may do to-night. So I insist on my motion now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont moves that the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I have modified that, and moved that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont moves that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the third and seventh amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, the pending question being on the motion of Mr. SHERMAN that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I intend to detain the Senate but a few minutes to answer some points made by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM].

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator from Ohio propose to debate his amendment to the pending bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir, briefly.

Mr. HARRIS. I thought probably it would be more convenient to the Senator after the debate had closed on the other side to proceed; but if he prefers to proceed now, of course he will do so.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no choice as to the time except that I wish to reply very briefly to the argument of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the Senator from Tennessee wish to submit a motion to adjourn?

Mr. HARRIS. I desire simply to make a suggestion in respect to the Senator's amendment and in opposition to it.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator desires to do that, as I have the affirmative measure I would rather hear what the Senator has to say.

Mr. HARRIS. I supposed it would be more agreeable to the Senator from Ohio to make the concluding argument for the amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. I yield.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee will proceed.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from Ohio and the Senate that neither he nor any other Senator will go farther than I to suppress monopolies in their improper practices. I have been a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee from the day it was originally organized, and have had some little to do with the formation of the bills heretofore passed and the one now pending. I want to say with emphasis that the object and purpose and rule of that committee has been to so shape its legislation as to secure absolute equality as between shippers, and I think, so far as the provisions contained in the pending bill are concerned, they do accomplish that precise object.

Under the construction of the Interstate Commerce Commission that object has already been accomplished by the legislation had; but if the amendment of the Senator from Ohio is agreed to, or if the amendment that the House of Representatives put upon the Senate bill shall be agreed to, so far from securing absolute equality as between shippers, it produces and enforces by law absolute inequality as between shippers. Here is one producer of petroleum products who demands the use of the rolling-stock of a railroad company and another producer of the same character of products furnishes his own tanks and his own rolling-stock.

Now, to illustrate, let the carrier charge exactly the same price for transporting a gallon of petroleum from one point to another, then if the common carrier is allowed a rebate, if it shall come in that form, or if not in that form, if the common carrier pays to the owner of the rolling-stock that he leases and uses for the purpose of the transportation of oil a fair and reasonable rate, he has put the two shippers of oil upon precisely the same platform of equality; but if the amendment of the Senator from Ohio or the House amendment is agreed to by the Senate there is the common carrier using his own rolling-stock to carry the product of one petroleum producer and using the rolling-stock of another producer of petroleum, for which he pays nothing, and the one producer has invested no capital in rolling-stock, while the other has invested from one to three or five hundred thousand dollars in the construction and production of rolling-stock necessary to his purposes.

Now, if the common carrier is compelled to charge no more gallon for gallon of petroleum that is transported in its own cars and with its own rolling-stock than is charged to that producer who furnishes his cars and his rolling-stock, there is no allowance for the interest and the wear and tear upon a half million dollars' worth of cars that the one producer has furnished, and yet you compel the common carrier to transport the same amount of oil for precisely the same price, taking no account of the disparity between these two producers. It works out an inequality and an injustice.

Mr. KENNA. Will the Senator allow me to make a suggestion?

Mr. HARRIS. Certainly.

Mr. KENNA. Would not the effect of this amendment be the entire abolition of the tank-car system?

Mr. HARRIS. There are a large number of tank-cars owned by people who have constructed them that are convenient for their methods of business, and the tank-car company must not only construct their own car, but must construct the reservoirs at the place of destination, the only method by which they can unload the tank-car, and large amounts of capital have been invested in tank-cars and in reservoirs, which cheapen the transportation and cheapen to the consumer the petroleum so transported.

Mr. KENNA. I understand that; but, in the line of the Senator's argument, if you compel the charging of prices for the transportation of oil in tank-cars at rates which are charged for its transportation in barrels, thus divesting the tank-car system of the economy there is in it to the consumer, would you not in effect deny to the people the benefit of every advantage they now derive from the cheaper transportation?

Mr. HARRIS. The inevitable effect will be that no more capital will be invested in the construction of tank-cars and the tank-car system must be abandoned, and the consumers of petroleum and of petroleum products must pay a higher rate of transportation than they have to pay under existing conditions.

Mr. REAGAN. Will the Senator allow me a moment?

Mr. HARRIS. Of course I will.

Mr. REAGAN. It seems to me the Senator from Tennessee and others have taken a wrong view of this question. Nobody questions the superior cheapness of transportation in tank-cars. Nobody wants the owners of tank-cars to be compelled to be charged more because they carry oil in tank-cars. The point which we are endeavoring to meet is the combination between the Standard Oil Company and the railroads performing the same office and with the same capital making a monopoly that is driving the smaller refiners out of existence. What we want to do is to compel the railroads to be common carriers, and not permit the refiners of oil to be common carriers and to be paid by the railroads for the use of their cars, and at the same time have their transportation otherwise as cheap or cheaper than others.

Mr. HARRIS. The suggestion of the Senator from Texas amounts to no more and no less than this: That the railroad common carrier shall not be permitted to hire or lease or rent rolling-stock.

Mr. REAGAN. Oh, no.

Mr. HARRIS. It practically amounts to that, and it amounts to no more and no less.

Mr. REAGAN. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. HARRIS. Certainly.

Mr. REAGAN. The Senator from Tennessee knows as well as I do that in the early use of railroads the right to run cars on them was leased out, but that idea was repudiated, and the railroads themselves are common carriers, and are by the common law and by our American customs required to furnish cars and furnish the means of transportation for all alike. The point now is to compel them to furnish the means of transportation to all shippers alike. The Senator will not see it that way.

Mr. HARRIS. In answer to the suggestion of the Senator from Texas, without accurate knowledge upon the subject I venture to say that there is not a railroad company in the United States to-day that has not been in the habit of renting more or less of rolling-stock. But there is one platform upon which, I think, the Senator from Texas and I can agree. I agree with him that it shall be the duty of the common carrier to carry from any given point to any other given point petroleum products by the car-load at the same cost to the shipper. He and I will not disagree about that. But I say that if one producer has invested a half million dollars in tank-cars and rolling-stock, and another producer has not invested a dollar in any such thing, and the carrier is compelled to charge exactly the same price per gallon for transporting oil between these points, you have by law worked out a gross inequality and discrimination in favor of one and against the other.

The thing that the committee has demanded and which the law as it stands, as construed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, requires, is simply that the charge for transportation shall be the same, with a reasonable allowance for the use of the rolling-stock which the carrier has used if it belongs to another person, and, in effect, it matters not a copper whether that allowance for the use of the rolling-stock is made in the form of a rebate or the whole freight is required to be paid in money and then the railroad company simply pays back to the shipper a reasonable compensation for the use of his rolling-stock.

If the amendment of the Senator from Ohio or the amendment incorporated by the House of Representatives upon the Senate bill shall be agreed to it enforces by law an inequality and a discrimination in favor of the one class of producers as against the other, while if the Senate bill is passed as it went from the Senate it produces the effect of absolute equality between the two classes of shippers.

That is all, Mr. President, that I care to say.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senator from Ohio desires the floor to address the Senate——

Mr. SHERMAN. I am perfectly willing to do whatever the Senate desires.

Mr. CULLOM. I am inclined to think that there is not a quorum present, and that we shall probably fail in disposing of the bill now, and therefore I will not press it further this evening.

Mr. SHERMAN. I shall have the floor, then, when the matter is resumed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Ohio as entitled to the floor when the consideration of the bill is next resumed.

Mr. PLATT. I think there was, perhaps, some misunderstanding growing out of what the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] said, that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] was going to conclude the debate. If that is so, I should wish to be heard.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will give way to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. EDMUNDS. There was no understanding about concluding the debate.

Mr. CULLOM. I may wish to say something after the Senator from Ohio concludes his remarks.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 12578) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 1974) for the erection of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex.;

A bill (S. 3737) for the relief of Sterling H. Tucker and others;

A bill (S. 3751) for the relief of certain settlers in Hettinger County, Dakota; and

A bill (S. 3864) to increase the pension of Mrs. Sue B. Johnson.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 22d instant, an additional list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. KENNA submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Commerce, reported amendments intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HARRIS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the deficiency appropriation bill; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 12578) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

CONSIDERATION OF BRIDGE BILLS.

Mr. VEST. I now move that the Senate take a recess until 8 o'clock for the purpose of considering this evening bridge bills and bills giving the right of way to railroad companies through reservations. There are one or two of those.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That motion, Mr. President, is obviously not in order, stated as it is; but I do not mind about that. It will be impossible to get on to-night without a quorum.

Mr. VEST. I will submit the language to the Senator from Vermont, and will adopt anything which he says is better. What I mean is that the Senate shall now take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening for the purpose of considering bridge bills.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is your motive for making the motion.

Mr. VEST. That is the understanding. I want the Senate to understand what I mean. I move to take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Pending that, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont moves that the Senate do now adjourn. [Putting the question.] By the sound the noes have it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us have a division.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 13, noes 25; not a quorum voting.

Mr. HARRIS. Let us have the yeas and nays on the motion and see if we can not raise a quorum in that way.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee asks for the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask unanimous consent to say a single word.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator will proceed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I am perfectly willing to help get on with the business of the Senate, but I do not propose, for one, as a matter of duty, to have the Senate do business at night or in the morning or at any other time without a quorum present for doing it. I shall insist on that. It is perfectly obvious to me, and I appeal to my friend from Missouri, that if we take a recess until 8 o'clock there will not be thirty Senators in this Chamber to-night, saying nothing at all about pairs.

We have agreed to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, and I will unite with the Senator from Missouri to take up these important small matters about which there is no controversy—such as bridge bills, and so on—if the security of repeal, and so forth, is saved, as it should be and is, undoubtedly, and get on with them; but it will only put thirty or thirty-three Senators to the trouble of sitting here and finding it impossible to do anything, for I do not intend that anything shall be done, as I am constitutionally bound it shall not, unless a quorum is present to do it.

I do not say that in opposition to what my friend wishes, because I am entirely willing to pass all these bills that are right in form and substance, as I have no doubt these are.

Therefore I appeal to Senators to consider whether it is not better to begin at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning than to undertake to go on without any avail, as it will turn out this evening.

Mr. VEST. May I be permitted to make a remark?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. VEST. I have not the slightest personal interest in this matter, and do not know of any of these bills that I have any special interest in except as a Senator and a citizens of this country. I assume that Senators will do their duty, as I propose to do mine, and if the Senate takes a recess until 8 o'clock I suppose a quorum will be present. There is no reason why that should not be the case.

As I have said before, these bills, about which I receive telegrams and letters every day, and personal solicitations of Senators and Representatives, are in such a condition that there must be a conference to-morrow, or else they will fail of their passage. The railroads are being constructed up to these navigable streams and they can not go any farther unless these bridge bills are passed. That is the whole case. I think there are about twenty of them, possibly not so many. The principal labor in regard to them is in reading them. They have been carefully considered; they have passed through the Engineer Bureau; and a large majority of them have come from the House of Representatives. They have been scrutinized by the Committee on Commerce, and, without arrogating to that committee any especial knowledge, I think that they are safely constructed.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senate allow me to make a suggestion?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. CULLOM. I think that if the Senate were to give unanimous consent that nothing else should be considered but the bridge bills referred to we might possibly come to an understanding and have a session to-night to dispose of them.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I can not consent to that. We have never done anything of that sort in the Senate.

Mr. VEST. I want to get these bills into conference. I will frankly state that I am advised by members of the House of Representatives that unless the bills go there for conference to-morrow they can not pass them.

Mr. CULLOM. Let us see if we can not have a quorum here to-night.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I will withdraw, if I may, the call for the yeas and nays and try the experiment of seeing how many Senators will be here at 8 o'clock, if the Senate wishes to try it; but I give notice that nothing shall be done to-night without a quorum, if I can help it.

Mr. VEST. I do not want to proceed without a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the withdrawal of the call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. VOORHEES. I would suggest, by way of a settlement of the differences of opinion, if it is possible to do so, to have an understanding that the bridge bills be taken up to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock. I do not believe in an attempt at holding a night session unless there is a great emergency, and if there is not it is always a failure. At the same time I do believe in the propriety and necessity of passing the bridge bills that the Senator from Missouri presents to the Senate. They ought to be passed in the interest of the public.

I ask unanimous consent that when we meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow the bills indicated by the Senator from Missouri shall be taken up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. After the morning business?

Mr. VOORHEES. After the morning business.

Mr. CULLOM. I shall make an effort to keep the interstate-commerce bill before the Senate until it is disposed of, and shall press its consideration at the very earliest moment after we meet to-morrow.

Mr. KENNA. The Senator from Illinois will pardon me for suggesting that the very purpose of fixing 11 o'clock for the meeting to-morrow is to afford an opportunity to have these bridge bills considered. They will not take very much time, not more than will be made up by meeting at the earlier hour.

Mr. VOORHEES. Failing to get unanimous consent, I make the motion that when we meet to-morrow we consider bridge bills.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. VOORHEES. Yes.

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator from Illinois that he do not object—and I do not think any other Senator will—to the consideration of bridge bills immediately after the routine morning business to-morrow, with the additional understanding, if that can be obtained, that we proceed with the interstate-commerce bill immediately after disposing of the bridge bills.

Mr. BUTLER. That is right. We will all agree to that.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is a little too broad.

Mr. VOORHEES. The bridge bills will not involve debate.

Mr. CULLOM. We can dispose of the bridge bills to-night if Senators are disposed to put themselves out a little in the way of convenience to come here and make a quorum. Let us take up those bills and pass them, and then we can go on with the regular business to-morrow morning immediately after we meet.

Mr. STEWART. Suppose we stay here an hour longer now and pass them.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. There was an agreement made that to-morrow at 2 o'clock we shall go into executive session. I want to know whether the Senate understands that that agreement was reached?

Mr. EDMUNDS. There was no agreement. That was only a notice of a motion.

Mr. STEWART. I ask unanimous consent——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. RIDDLEBERGER] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I want to understand whether the Senate itself understands that an agreement was reached that we shall go into executive session to-morrow at 2 o'clock. Outside of that I care nothing about any understanding in relation to other matters, bridge bills or anything else.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think that any unanimous consent was given for an executive session at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Yes, sir; there was no objection to it. If that is not understood by the Senate, I ask that an understanding be had now that we go into executive session to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I can not assent to any unanimous understanding for an executive session at 2 o'clock to-morrow, but at that time, or about that time, unless I am further informed, I shall certainly vote with the Senator from Virginia, if he makes a motion of that kind, to go into executive session; but it might happen that at that very moment something else was about to be concluded and that we ought to wait a little time longer.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. It may happen that the Senator from Illinois will be making a speech and will tell me that I can not take him off the floor. Will the Senator from Illinois agree that to-morrow at 2 o'clock we shall go into executive session?

Mr. VOORHEES. In order to get a definite point before the Senate, I move that to-morrow after the disposal of the routine morning business the bridge bills be taken up, to the exclusion of other business, and continued until they are disposed of—I make that motion to the Senate—and that then the interstate-commerce bill shall come up in its regular place.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that motion would not be in order, as it would require a change of the rules themselves, which prescribe the order of business. That arrangement can only be reached, the Chair thinks, by unanimous consent.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I suggest to the Senator to take an hour for them, and then it will not cut off the interstate-commerce bill. Let us try it for an hour.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask unanimous consent that the first hour after the disposal of the morning business to-morrow, or so much of that time as may be necessary, be devoted to the consideration of bridge bills.

Mr. CULLOM. I will consent to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Indiana asks unanimous consent that to-morrow morning at the close of the formal morning business one hour be devoted by the Senate to the consideration of what are commonly known as bridge bills, favorably reported from the Committee on Commerce and on the Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. EDMUNDS. Or so much of it as may be necessary until we get through with them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SABIN. I ask the Senator from Indiana to include in his request for unanimous consent the Senate right-of-way bills. The others we have time to consider, but they are equally as important as the bridge bills, and there are but three or four of them.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am perfectly willing to embrace them if they can be disposed of within the hour. I would not feel at liberty to ask beyond the hour.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then is it the understanding that the bridge bills are in that hour first to be considered and afterwards, if time remains, the right-of-way bills?

Mr. CULLOM. And that the interstate-commerce bill shall come up immediately afterwards.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be the understanding, if there be no objection. It is so ordered.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us understand this. I ask that the Chair state whether the agreement has been made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has announced that it was so ordered.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Very well, then, I am satisfied. Now I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 51 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, Febrtary 28, 1889, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, February 27, 1889.

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

PAPERS IN THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting reports from the heads of bureaus of that Department showing the condition and character of papers needed in the transaction of the current business and of no permanent value; which was referred to tho Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

NORTH LANDING RIVER, CURRITUCK SOUND.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, papers relating to the obstruction of navigation on the inland water route through North Landing River, Currituck Sound; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

EMOLUMENTS OF CUSTOMS OFFICERS, 1888.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a statement of the official emoluments of officers of customs for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, as required by section 2639 of the Revised Statutes; which was referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC LANDS IN LOUISIANA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River, in the State of Louisiana, with Senate amendments.

Mr. GAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments of the Senate be concurred in.

The SPEAKER. The amendments will be read.

The amendments were read, as follows:

Page 2, line 14, amend by inserting after the word "claimed" the following: "Provided, That the provisions of this act shall be limited to the lands claimed by actual settlers for purposes of cultivation whose titles are now incomplete within the limits of the Donaldson, Scott, and Conway grants, and that, after setting apart to each of said settlers not to exceed 160 acres, the residue of the public lands within said grants shall continue to be, as they are now, a part of the public domain: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall preclude the State of Louisiana from enforcing its claim to said residue of public lands under the acts of Congress granting swamp lands to the several States of the Union."

Mr. HOLMAN. Is the last clause which was read a Senate amendment?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that it be read again. My first impression was that it was a provision of the House bill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will again read the second proviso.

The Clerk read as follows:

And provided further, That nothing in this act shall preclude the State of Louisiana from enforcing its claim to said residue of public lands under the act of Congress granting swamp lands to the several States of the Union.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope my friend will consent to let this bill lie on the table until to-morrow morning. I was not aware that the amendment embraced the provision just read. A contrary provision was in the House bill.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Chair will withhold this bill for the present.

There was no objection.

WESLEY MONTGOMERY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery, the said bill having been returned from the Senate with amendments.

The SPEAKER. These amendments apparently are merely formal. The Clerk will read them.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 2, after the word "Montgomery," insert "or his heirs at law."
In line 3, after the word "enter," insert "in person."
In line 4, after "acres," insert "in one body."
In line 4, after "the," where it occurs the first time, insert "survey."

Mr. DORSEY. I ask that these amendments be concurred in.

Mr. WEAVER. What is this bill?

Mr. BLAND. I think we ought to have some explanation.

Mr. DORSEY. The bill simply permits this man to enter 160 acres of land in one body, in lieu of land which was taken from him by a railroad company.

There being no objection, the amendments were concurred in.

WRITTEN INSTRUCTIONS TO JURIES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 6896) to require the United States circuit and district judges to instruct the jury in writing in certain cases, said bill having been returned from the Senate with amendments.

Mr. CULBERSON. This is a very short bill. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment of the Senate be concurred in.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out all of the enacting clause and insert the following:
"That in all States wherein by the laws thereof judges of courts of record are required to give charges and instructions to juries in writing, judges of the district and circuit courts of the United States shall conform to such practice; and such written instructions shall be taken by the jury on their retirement, returned with their verdict, and retained with the files and be a part of the record in each case."

There being no objection, the amendment was concurred in.

JOHN GRAY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 11165) for the relief of John Gray, said bill having been returned from the Senate with amendments.

The SPEAKER. These amendments simply change the name of the beneficiary in the body of the bill and in the title by striking out "John Gray" and inserting the name of Mary Gray, his widow. Is there objection to concurring in the amendments? The Chair hears none, and the amendments are concurred in.

POLICE FORCE OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ETC.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883, and for other purposes, said bill having been returned from the Senate with amendments.

The amendments were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "forty-five" and insert "fifteen."
Strike out lines 14 to 17, inclusive.
In line 18 change section 3 to section 2.

The SPEAKER. If the House will indulge the Chair, this is a bill which perhaps ought to be disposed of before the 4th of March.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I ask that the amendments of the Senate be concurred in.

Mr. TAULBEE. What are the amendments?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read them again.

Mr. TAULBEE. I would like to hear how the bill will read if amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out "45" and insert "15" in the seventh line of the bill; so that it will read:

"That the act entitled 'An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes,' approved January 13, 1883, is hereby amended so as to authorize the commissioners of said District to increase said force to 11 lieutenants, 30 sergeants, 345 privates, 19 station clerks, 9 laborers, and the number of mounted men to 35, as they may deem necessary; provided that 15 of the increase in the number of privates hereby authorized shall be appointed to class 1 and 45 to class 2 of said force; and a sum sufficient," etc.

Mr. TAULBEE. Is that increase to be permanent?

The SPEAKER. Only for the purposes of the inauguration, as the Chair understands—to preserve the peace in the city during that time.

Mr. TAULBEE. I make no objection.

There being no objection, the amendments were considered and concurred in.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT KALAMAZOO, MICH.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 3431) for the erection of a public building at the city of Kalamazoo, Mich.

Mr. BURROWS. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of this bill at the present time. A bill like it has been reported favorably by the House committee.

A MEMBER. Is the amount of the appropriation the same?

Mr. BURROWS. This is the same amount as that reported by the House committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill. It will be read.

The bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Virginia. I object.

Mr. DIBBLE. This bill has been favorably reported upon by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and I hope the objection will be withdrawn.

Mr. BURROWS. Will the gentleman from Virginia withdraw the objection on the statement of the chairman of the committee?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia declines to withdraw the objection, and if there be no objection the Chair will withhold the bill.

There was no objection.

HETTINGER COUNTY, DAKOTA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3751) for the relief of certain settlers in Hettinger County, Dakota; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. GIFFORD. I ask unanimous consent to put this bill upon its passage. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON], who has charge of it, is present.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read at length. It is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to give relief to such homesteaders or others as have been adversely affected by the Government survey, by an exchange of lands with the Northern Pacific Railroad, section for section, or fraction thereof, as the interests of the parties may appear, so as to admit of the company taking other lands within the indemnity limits, in lieu of the tracts covered by real settlements: Provided, That the said railroad company will become a party to said exchange.

SEC. 2. That the homestead residence of five years required for holding said lands shall date from the first occupation of said claims.

Mr. PAYSON. I ask unanimous consent to consider the bill.

There being no objection the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. PAYSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ROBERT ADJER AND OTHERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 508) to empower Robert Adjer and others to bring suit in the Court of Claims for rents alleged to be due them; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

STERLING H. TUCKER AND OTHERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3787) for the relief of Stirling H. Tucker and others; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. That bill, Mr. Speaker, was passed by both Houses of Congress at the last session but failed to get within the limit for becoming a law, as it did not have the examination and approval of the President; and I ask unanimous consent that it be put upon its passage now. It is favorably reported from the House committee.

Mr. KEAN. What is the bill?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. It is to relieve certain parties from disability as sureties upon an official bond of a former pension agent. It takes no money from the Treasury whatever.

Mr. KEAN. Let the bill be read subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Sterling H. Tucker, William P. Grace, Elhanon J. Searle, Josiah H. Demby, Samuel Bard, and William G. Pennington, or their estates, be, and they and each of them are hereby, released from any and all liability as the sureties upon the official bond of James W. Demby, formerly pension agent, the said release to take effect upon the payment of the legal costs heretofore accrued in the prosecution of said claim by the United States: Provided, That all the rights and remedies of the Government on said bond as against said James W. Demby shall in no manner be affected hereby, but remain in full force and effect in law.

There was no objection, and the bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SOUTHERN UTES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3894) to ratify and affirm an agreement with the Southern Ute Indians in Colorado and to make the necessary appropriations for carrying the same into effect; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 314) for the relief of Henry M. Rector;

A bill (S. 1283) for the erection of a light-house on or near Diamond Shoal, off Cape Hatteras, North Carolina; and Joint resolution (S. R. 137) providing additional telegraph facilities in the city of Washington during the inaugural ceremonies on the 4th day of March, 1889.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT FORT WORTH, TEX.

The SPEAKER. Under the order of the House the Chair will now proceed to call the names of members in alphabetical order for requests for unanimous consent. On yesterday when the roll was called the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ABBOTT] called up a bill the title of which the Clerk will now report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1974) for the erection of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building with fire-proof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices, at the city of Fort Worth, in the State of Texas. The plans, specifications, and full estimates of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $130,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 20 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Texas shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same during the time the United States shall be or remain the owners thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The SPEAKER. The first question is, Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BURROWS. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker, of course, to the gentleman's bill, but there is a sort of comity, or should be, between the two sides on these questions; and if it could be understood that the bill which lies upon the Speaker's table and which was laid before the House this morning, objection being made to its consideration by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HOPKINS], could be taken up and put upon its passage, I do not think there would be any objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas. I ask, therefore, that it be understood after this bill is disposed of that is to be taken up.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has some doubt as to whether that can be done except by unanimous consent of all the gentlemen upon the floor.

Mr. BURROWS. I ask unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the request of the gentleman to the House.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, if we are to have all of the public-building bills up again in this House, then let us have them in their regular order and no other way. I object to the request.

Mr. LANHAM. I hope the gentleman will not object. The bill called up by my colleague is a Senate bill and ought to be passed. It has been favorably considered and reported by the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and it is desirable as well as important that it should pass. I hope there will be no objection.

Mr. BLAND. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the submission of the request of the gentleman from Texas for unanimous consent to consider the bill, the title of which has been read. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill was considered.

The SPEAKER. The first question is on the amendment recommended by the committee, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 11, strike out "130" and insert "75;" so it will read, "$75,000."

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. This, I believe, is a Senate bill?

Mr. ABBOTT. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOLMAN. And it is understood that the amount now fixed is to be the ultimate cost?

Mr. ABBOTT. The ultimate cost.

Mr. HOLMAN. I mean that no conference committee shall be expected to increase the amount?

Mr. ABBOTT. Not at all.

The question recurred upon the third reading of the bill.

Mr. BLAND. I call for the reading of the report. If we are going into this public-building business again we had better understand exactly what we are doing.

The report (by Mr. BANKHEAD) was read, as follows:

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, made the following report:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has had under consideration the bill (S. 1974) providing for the construction of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex., and recommends its passage with the accompanying amendment.

Mr. BLAND. Is that the only report accompanying the bill?

The SPEAKER. It is the only report made to the House.

Mr. BLAND. I think we ought to have an explanation of the merits of this bill.

Mr. ABBOTT. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will allow me, I will make an explanation, which I think will be sufficient to satisfy the gentleman. Fort Worth is a city of 30,000 inhabitants. It has at present eleven railroad outlets. Mails are coming in at all hours, day and night. There are at present no accommodations for caring for the mails and for taking care of the registered matter that passes through that office. I will further state that since the introduction of this bill Fort Worth has been made the headquarters of a railway mail division which embraces the territory of Texas, the Indian Territory, Arkansas, and Louisiana. There are a large number of employés at present engaged in the railway mail service. I do not know the precise amount that the Government is now paying in the way of rent, but know it is paying a large amount. I will also state that the report of the Postmaster-General shows that the gross receipts of that office for the past twelve months amount to $29,000, and the net receipts are something over $14,000 per annum. Now, I think that sufficiently explains the necessity for this public building.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. You want double the amount you have, and you can not complete the building without it.

Mr. BLAND. I fear that this is a bill which ought not to pass. There are no United States courts there.

Mr. MILLS. Fort Worth is a large growing city, one of the largest growing cities in the Southwest.

The Clerk read the next amendment:

Strike out, in line 14, the word "twenty," and insert "forty;" so that it will read:

"A space not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time.

The question recurred on the passage of the bill, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLAND. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 68, noes 2.

So the bill was passed.

Mr. ABBOTT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ARNO VOSS.

Mr. ADAMS (when his name was called). I ask to call up the bill (H. R. 2070) for the relief of Arno Voss.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to audit the account of Col. Arno Voss for $607, and pay the same out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request for consideration?

Mr. HOLMAN. I suppose there is a report accompanying this bill.

Mr. ADAMS. The report covers two pages, and I can explain it in a minute.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope a statement will be made as to the purposes of this bill.

Mr. ADAMS. This a claim for the widow of a colonel of cavalry who lost property at Harper's Ferry. He has died since the bill was introduced. The widow is seventy-five years of age, and has no means of support. The Committee on War Claims report that Colonel Voss was in command of cavalry, and was ordered to take that cavalry and save it when Longstreet and Stonewall Jackson were investing that fort. He saved the cavalry, leaving behind all his property. He did so, crossed the Potomac, seized an ammunition train of about ninety wagons, and turned them over to the Quartermaster-General at Chambersburgh, thus saving a large amount to the Government, and placed himself on the right wing of McClellan's army; but he lost about $607 worth of property; and this bill is to repay his widow that amount.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. BLAND. I reserve the right to have the report read, but will not insist upon its being read at this time.

Mr. LAWLER. This bill has been unanimously reported by the Committee on War Claims.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. BLAND. Now I ask that the report be read, and I hope we will have order so that we may hear what it is.

The report (by Mr. LAWLER) was read, as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration this bill, and the papers relating to the same, and on investigation find that Arno Voss was mustered into the service with field and staff as colonel Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, to date February 1, 1862, and was honorably discharged from the service August 11, 1863. That he was at Harper's Ferry with his regiment under order of Colonel Miles in September, 1862, when Harper's Ferry was besieged by the Confederate forces under Generals Longstreet and Stonewall Jackson, of the Confederate army. That on the 13th of September, 1862, said Voss received an order from Colonel Miles, commanding, to take command of all the cavalry then present at Harper's Ferry, and after nightfall of said day cross the Potomac River over the ponton bridge into Maryland, cut his way through the Confederate lines, and join General George B. McClellan. That said Voss followed the instructions of Colonel Miles, and did cut his way through the Confederate lines, reaching Greencastle, Pa., having captured on his way a rebel train of eighty-five wagons, each drawn by six mules, freighted with arms, ammunition, and provisions, which he turned over to the United States depot quartermaster at Chambersburgh, Pa., who receipted therefor.

That under the order of Colonel Miles referred to he was instructed to leave Harper's Ferry without baggage, wagons, or horses.

That at that date Voss was the owner of a large leather trunk, filled with a full outfit of wearing apparel purchased by him with his own funds at a cost of $607, which under said order he was compelled to leave behind, and which he never recovered, and finally lost from no fault of his own. That he afterwards bought an outfit of clothing to take the place of the lost one, which cost him the sum of $750.

The evidence of Brig. Gen. Julius White, who was present at Harper's Ferry at the date referred to, shows that the order of Colonel Miles was given as above stated, and that the leaving behind baggage, wagons, and led horses made it possible for Colonel Voss to inflict serious loss upon the enemy by capture of a transportation train, as above related. The committee is informed that since the introduction of this bill Colonel Voss has deceased, leaving a widow, Mrs. Voss. Your committee would recommend the insertion of the words "widow of" in the caption of the bill, and that the bill as amended do pass.

STATE OF ILLINOIS, County of Cook, ss:

Arno Voss, of Chicago, in the county of Cook and State of Illinois, being duly sworn, deposes and says that according to the best of his knowledge and belief the following is a list of this affiant's property, being his outfit for war as colonel of the Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, lost by him in the military service of the United States at Harper's Ferry in September, 1862, by reason of the order of Colonel Miles, United States Army, referred to in this affiant's petition to Congress for relief:

One large trunk, of the value of	$25.00
Two regulation uniform coats and shoulder-straps, at $75 each	150.00
Three pairs regulation pants, at $20.	60.00
Two vests, at $10	20.00
One regulation overcoat	95.00
Three pairs cavalry officer's boots, at $20	60.00
One blue cloth saddle-cloth, with gold eagles and trimmings	36.00
One dozen linen shirts, at $3	36.00
One-half dozen flannel undershirts, at $2	12.00
One-half dozen flannel drawers, at $2	12.00
One dozen pairs socks, at 50 cents	6.00
One gentleman's dressing-case	25.00
One cavalry officer's saber and sword-knot	20.00
One shotgun	50.00
	607.00

And further this deponent says not.

ARNO VOSS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, at Chicago, Ill., this 5th day of December, A. D. 1878.

[SEAL.] PHILLIP A. HAYNE,
United States Commissioner, Northern District of Illinois.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

The question was taken on the passage of the bill, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLAND. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 65, noes 4.

Mr. BLAND. I will not make the point of no quorum, but it seems that every bill which comes up in this hour must pass, good, bad, and indifferent.

So the bill was passed.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the title of the bill will be amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of the widow of Arno Voss."

There was no objection.

Mr. ADAMS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 834) for the relief of the heirs of John H. Newman; and

A bill (H. R. 6612) to grant the right of way through the Indian Territory to the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company, and for other purposes.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT WINONA, MINN.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan (when his name was called). I desire to call up the bill (S. 2475) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Winona, Minn.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2475) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Winona, Minn.

Be it enacted, etc., That the amount heretofore fixed as the limit of cost for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building for the accommodation of the United States courts, post-office, and internal-revenue and other Government offices at the city of Winona, Minn., be, and the same is hereby, increased to $150,000; and that sum is hereby fixed as the limit of cost for the erection of said building.

Mr. RANDALL. I reserve the right to object until we hear the report read.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania desire that the report shall be read?

Mr. RANDALL. If the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WILSON] will state the facts briefly, I will be content.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, as the report in this case shows, Winona is a city of 22,000 people. It is the principal city of the State south of St. Paul, increasing both in business and population very rapidly. If its population increases for the next ten years as it has for the last it will, at the expiration of that time, be little if any less than 50,000. The Supervising Architect of the Treasury, at the request of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds of this House, made an estimate of the number of square feet required in a building fit for the accommodation of the United States court, post-office, internal-revenue, and other Government offices at Winona, and of the cost of such a building. His estimate is that while a building could be erected of sufficient size for the sum of money appropriated ($85,000) if the building is made of brick without ornamentation, "if it is desired to construct the same of stone and make it fire-proof it will require from $60,000 to $70,000 additional." This bill fixes the limit ot the increase at $50,000.

I need hardly say, Mr. Speaker, that no business man would erect such a building of the brick of the locality without window-caps or sills or other ornamentation. The Government has not been accustomed to do so. It would not be creditable for it to do so; nor would it be wise or prudent to erect it without making it wholly or partly fire-proof. Such a building is used as the depository of very valuable property, and of records on whose preservation the title to valuable property depends. It will be seen that the committee of this House cut down the estimate of the architect $10,000 to $20,000. The committees of both the Senate and the House have approved of this bill, and the Senate has passed it; and I think this House will consider this sum reasonable and necessary.

Mr. RANDALL. What is the present limit?

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. The present limit is the $85,000 that is left after the purchase of the ground. The committee report $10,000 less than the architect's estimate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan that this bill be now considered?

Mr. BLAND. Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. NEWTON) was read, as follows:

Winona is much the largest city in Minnesota south of St. Paul, and is rapidly increasing in population, business, and wealth.

In 1880 the population was 10,240, in 1885 it was 15,697, and at this time it is about 22,000.

Winona is situated on the Mississippi River, and on the lines of road of the following railroad companies: The Chicago and Northwestern, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, the Chicago, Burlington and Northern; and it is the western terminus of a line of railroad from Green Bay to the Mississippi River, and the eastern terminus of the Winona and St. Peter Railroad, a line running westerly from the Mississippi River, through Minnesota and Dakota, to the Missouri River.

From the data furnished to your committee it appears that the value of the manufacturing plants in the city is $3,268,000; the number of men employed during the last year in the business of manufacturing is 2,972; the monthly wages (on an average) to the employés of that business are $133,960, and the value of the manufactured product of the year, $6,876,265.

A term of the United States district court has been held there for many years, and by an act passed in the House at this session a term of the United States circuit court is to be held there annually.

There is no Government building in Winona. There was appropriated by Congress, at the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, $100,000 to purchase a site and erect a building. Of that sum $15,000 has been used to purchase the site, and the Supervising Architect estimates that not less than $8,000 will be required for heating and $5,000 for constructing approaches, leaving $72,000 for the erection of the building. This sum, in the opinion of your committee, is insufficient. If Winona increases for the next decade as it has for the last the population will be about 50,000, and it seems to us neither wise nor economical to erect a building that would not be sufficient for the wants of the place a few years hence, or even at the present time.

Your committee therefore recommend that the limit of cost heretofore fixed for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building for the accommodation of the United States courts, post-office, internal-revenue, and other Government offices at the city of Winona, Minn., be increased to $150,000. The committee therefore recommend that the bill (H. R. 3400) be amended by striking out the words "two hundred thousand dollars," in line 8, and inserting in lieu thereof "$150,000."

Subject to said amendment, the committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. BLAND (during the reading of the report). Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. If this bill fails to pass in this hour, will it not be the first thing in order in the next hour like this?

The SPEAKER. The bill is now up for consideration and when the House resumes this order of business, to-morrow morning or whatever other morning it may do so, this bill will be before the House.

Mr. DIBBLE. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIBBLE. My point is that the limit of 11 o'clock in the order limits only the calling of the names of members and the entertaining of requests by the Speaker, and that there is nothing in the order which limits the actual consideration of a bill to the hour before 11 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the construction of the order should be that after 11 o'clock the House resumes the other order of business, having set apart this hour for this class of business.

Mr. BLAND. I wish to have the whole report read, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood the gentleman to interrupt the reading of the report, not desiring to hear it read further.

Mr. BLAND. I interrupted the reading simply for a parliamentary inquiry.

The reading of the report was completed as above.

The SPEAKER (at 11 o'clock a. m.). The hour set apart under the special order has expired.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLAND. I move that when the House adjourn to-day it adjourn to meet on Thursday next.

Mr. DIBBLE. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The hour has expired. There is nothing before the House.

Mr. SCOTT. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SCOTT. I desire to ask whether it will not be in order for the Speaker in calling the names in the hour between 10 and 11 hereafter to begin at the lower end? Otherwise gentlemen whose names are at or near that end will never have an opportunity to presenta bill to this House for consideration.

The SPEAKER. That is a practical difficulty which arises under any plan that can be adopted.

Mr. SCOTT. No, sir. Suppose the Speaker should call one name from the A's and one from the Z's, and so on?

The SPEAKER. What would become of those in the middle? [Laughter, and cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a privileged motion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has heard the gentleman's motion, but the Chair will put no motion to the House until gentlemen resume their seats. In these last days of the session order must be preserved or the public business can not be transacted.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. What has become of my bill?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's bill is before the House, and the consideration of it will be resumed when that order of business is again resumed by the House.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I rise to a privileged matter.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I desire to present a conference report.

The SPEAKER. That is in order.

Mr. DIBBLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIBBLE. My point of order is, that under the resolution setting apart the hour between 10 and 11, there is no exclusion of anything, except that it provides that it shall not be in order for the Speaker to entertain a request for unanimous consent at any other time. There is nothing in the order which prohibits, in any way, shape, or form, the continuance of the consideration after 11 o'clock of a bill which has been taken up before that hour. There is nothing in the first part of the order which says anything about consideration, or says that consideration shall not be entertained at any other time. The order says that requests for unanimous consent shall not be entertained at any other time, but the consent having been obtained within the hour the consideration can extend beyond 11 o'clock. The prohibitory part of the special order is as follows:

And it shall not be in order for the Speaker to entertain a request for unanimous consent at any other time, except, etc.

Now, the order, I contend, has nothing in it which prohibits the consideration after 11 o'clock of a measure which under the order has been brought before the House. The matter, I submit, must proceed under general parliamentary law, which knows no such interval as 11 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. But this special rule or order of the House does fix a limit at 11 o'clock for the calling of names and the recognition of members for requests for unanimous consent. The Chair thinks it was the evident purpose of the order to devote that time, and that time only, to this class of business——

Mr. DIBBLE. The order does not say so.

The SPEAKER. For otherwise a matter coming up by unanimous consent at that time might consume the entire day to the absolute exclusion of all other business. Besides, nothing is lost by the construction to which the gentleman objects, because the Chair holds that the measure is before the House and must come up as soon as this order of business is resumed.

Mr. DIBBLE. But it excludes other gentlemen who might present this request for unanimous consent to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] will please state his motion again.

Mr. BLAND. It is that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Friday next.

ESTATE OF J. J. PULLIAM.

The SPEAKER. Pending the motion of the gentleman from Missouri, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] submits a conference report, which the Clerk will read:

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 751) for the relief of the estate of J. J. Pulliam, deceased, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment.

W. J. STONE,
O. B. THOMAS,
THEO. S. WILKINSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

GEORGE F. HOAR.
W. M. STEWART,
JOHN C. SPOONER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, this bill as passed by the Senate provided for referring this claim to the Quartermaster-General for investigation. The House passed the bill with an amendment striking out "the Quartermaster-General" and inserting "the accounting officers of the Treasury." The conferees have agreed that the House should recede from its amendment, so that the claim will simply go to the Quartermaster-General.

Mr. BLAND. I would like to understand what is the purport of the claim—what does it propose to pay?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. The gentleman will understand that better if the bill be read.

Mr. BLAND. Certainly; let the bill be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas under the provisions of the act of June 16, 1864, certain claims were allowed and reported to Congress by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department, in 1882, for payment, including the claim of J. J. Pulliam's estate, for wood supplied to the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army; and

Whereas there was a mistake in the amount that should have been reported in favor of said Pulliam's estate, as appears by the report of the committee to whom said bill was referred, made before the passage thereof: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to re-examine and settle the claim of the estate of J. J. Pulliam, deceased, late of Fayette County, State of Tennessee, for wood taken by the United States forces during the late war, from 125 acres of land located near the village of La Grange, in said State; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum that may be found due said estate, first deducting any sum heretofore paid: Provided, That the amount shall not exceed $4,167.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon agreeing to the report of the committee of conference.

The question having been taken,

The SPEAKER said: The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. BLAND. Let us have a division.

The question being again taken, there were—ayes 53, noes 2.

Mr. BLAND. I insist on my motion.

Mr. PEEL. I hope the gentleman from Missouri will allow the Indian appropriation bill to be proceeded with.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri make the point that no quorum has voted?

Mr. BLAND. I do not.

The SPEAKER. Then the ayes have it; and the report is agreed to.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SUE B. JOHNSON.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I rise to present a privileged report—the report of a committee of conference.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3864) granting a pension to Sue B. Johnson, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment to said bill and agree to the same.

J. LOGAN CHIPMAN,
W. GODFREY HUNTER,
CARLOS FRENCH,
Managers on the part of the House.

C. K. DAVIS,
JAMES L. PUGH,
A. S. PADDOCK,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The following statement, submitted in pursuance of the rule, was read:

The effect of the conferees' action is to fix the pension of Mrs. General Johnson at $50 per month. This was the amount originally reported to the House when it acted on the House bill, and this is the amount provided for in the bill passed by the Senate.

Mr. BLAND. Let us have the report read.

The SPEAKER. The report of the conference committee and also the accompanying statement have been read. The question is upon agreeing to the report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. CHIPMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. BLAND. I yield for the consideration of the appropriation bill.

HENRY B. KEFFER.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a privileged report from the Committee on Accounts.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas, Henry B. Keffer, a messenger on the roll of the House at $720 per annum, is a disabled veteran soldier, having served in Company A, One hundred and twenty-second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers; and

Whereas he has been stationed at the main entrance of the House during the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth Congresses, and has given eminent satisfaction by his gentlemanly bearing and efficiency; and

Whereas his widowed mother, who is pensioned by reason of the death of his father from disability contracted in the United States service, is dependent upon her son, the said Henry B. Keffer, for support:

Be it resolved, That the name of Henry B. Keffer be transferred to the soldiers' roll of the House at a salary of $1,200 per annum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands this to be an adverse report.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. It is.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the resolution will be laid on the table without reading the accompanying report.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

J. W. HIATT.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. I also submit another privileged report from the Committee on Accounts.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Accounts be, and they are hereby, instructed to report a bill appointing J. W. Hiatt, at $2,000 per annum, to arrange and preserve the files in the Clerk's document-room, House of Representatives.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. This is also an adverse report.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the same course will be pursued with regard to this resolution, and it will be laid upon the table.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

COURT IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. CULBERSON. I desire to submit a conference report on the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report has been agreed to by the Senate, but upon investigation of the report as published this morning, it will be seen that by an inadvertence there is an error in the report, whereby it fails to express the object of the conferees. I ask unanimous consent, therefore, that the House disagree to the conference report, and request another conference with the Senate.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. CULBERSON. I also ask that the conferees be instructed as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the conferees on the part of the House on the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes, be instructed to amend the second proviso of section 6 of said bill as reported by the conference committee by striking out of said proviso the words "except as to contracts for the conveyance of real estate in fee," and by inserting in lieu of said words the following: "except as to contracts relating to real estate," and when so amended to agree to said report.

Mr. BLAND. I would like to have the bill read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has a right to have it read.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SPRINGER. The conference report has already been disagreed to, and another conference ordered, and this is simply a question of instructions. It seems to me that the gentleman is too late now to demand the reading of the bill.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman has the right to have the bill read. The subject is debatable, and the gentleman has the right to ascertain whether the instructions asked ought to be given or not.

Mr. PEEL. I hope the gentleman will withdraw that, so that we may go on with the appropriation bills.

Mr. BLAND. I am perfectly willing that appropriations may be taken up, also conference reports and the contested-election case; but if that business is not before the House I shall insist upon my motion.

Mr. BREWER. What necessity is there for the instruction of the committee?

Mr. ROGERS. There is no necessity for it; simply to gratify gentlemen who find fault with this part of the bill.

Mr. BREWER. Why not withdraw the request for instructions?

Mr. CULBERSON. Very well; I will withdraw the resolution asking instructions.

The SPEAKER appointed Mr. CULBERSON, Mr. ROGERS, and Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR as managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I move now to dispense with the morning hour for the purpose of considering the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I ask unanimous consent to adopt a resolution giving Thursday night for the Cass and Muhlenberg statues, and also for business from the District of Columbia.

Mr. PEEL. I must insist upon my motion.

Mr. OATES. Before the gentleman's motion is put I ask unanimous consent that members having reports from committees may file them with the Clerk.

Mr. PEEL. I intended to make that request.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, members having reports from committees will be allowed to hand them in at the Clerk's desk, and also the minority views of committees will be in order for presentation.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

FILING OF REPORTS.

The following reports were filed by being handed in at the Clerk's desk:

ESTATE OF A. L. BURWELL.

Mr. BOWDEN, from the Committee on Claims, reported as a substitute for bill H. R. 9774, a bill (H. R. 12653) for the relief of the estate of A. L. Burwell; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

NATURALIZATION LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. OATES, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 12577) to amend the naturalization laws of the United States; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

RICHARD W. MEADE, DECEASED.

Mr. TAULBEE, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 11345) for the relief of the heirs of the legal representatives of Richard W. Meade, deceased; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. KERR, from the Committee on Claims, presented the views of the minority on the foregoing bill; which were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and ordered to be printed with the report of the majority.

STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS.

Mr. TILLMAN, from the Select Committee on Existing Labor Troubles in Pennsylvania, reported a bill (H. R. 12654) to prevent the combination of carrying interstate commerce with other business, and to prevent strikes and lockouts on railroads, and also to prohibit the consolidation of parallel or competing lines of interstate carriers; which was read a first and second time, referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS.

Mr. STOCKDALE, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 11601) for the relief of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Peter, at Jackson, Miss.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SALE OF LAND IN MILITARY RESERVATION, FORT LEAVENWORTH.

Mr. MAISH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported as a substitute for bill H. R. 11639, a bill (H. R. 12655) to authorize the lease of a tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, from the Committee on Labor, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 12128) providing for the enforcement of the eight-hour law on Government premises; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted Mr. TOWNSHEND to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, papers in the case of W. H. McCabe and W. P. Fowler.

Also, to Mr. CRAIN, to withdraw papers in the case of William M. Douglass.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PEEL. I move to dispense with the morning hour for the call of committees.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. Did the gentleman include the presentation of bills in his request a few moments since?

The SPEAKER. That request was not made.

The motion to dispense with the morning hour was agreed to.

Mr. PEEL. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering general appropriation bills.

SPECIAL ORDER THURSDAY EVENING.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Pending that I ask unanimous consent to offer this resolution for consideration.

Mr. PEEL. I yield to have the resolution read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That on Thursday, the 28th instant, the House shall take a recess until 7.30 o'clock p. m., the evening session to be given to the consideration of the following business:

1. Not exceeding one hour to the ceremonies relating to the acceptance of the Cass and Muhlenberg statues.

2. To the business reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, together with conference reports on bills heretofore reported by said committee, not including the national park bill or the trust bills.

The session not to continue beyond 10.30 o'clock p. m.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WEAVER. I shall make no objection if one-third of the time is accorded to the Committee on Patents to consider Senate bills to which there is no objection.

Mr. RANDALL. I object to that. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, which is equivalent to an objection.

Mr. KERR. I rise to a question of privilege. I am represented on page 2550 of the RECORD of yesterday's proceedings as moving an appeal from the decision of the Chair. I wish to state that I did not do that. It must have been some one else.

Mr. WEAVER. Gentlemen have made such appeals to me that I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa withdraws his objection to the request made by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL]. Is there further objection? The Chair hears none, and the order will be made.

Mr. PEEL's motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union and resumes consideration of the bill (H. R. 12578) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

Mr. PEEL. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment which was pending when the House adjourned last night.

The Clerk read as follows:

It is proposed, on page 42, after line 11, to insert:

"That the sum of $1,912,942.02 be, and the same hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay in full the Seminole Nation of Indians for all the right, title, interest, and claim which said nation of Indians may have in and to certain lands ceded by article 3 between the United States and said nation of Indians, which was concluded June 14, 1866, and proclaimed August 16, 1866, and which land was then estimated to contain 2,169,080 acres, but which is now, after survey, ascertained to contain 2,037,414.62 acres, said sum of money to be paid as follows: $1,500,000 to remain in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of said nation of Indians and to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from July 1, 1889, said interest to be paid semi-annually to the treasurer of said nation, and the sum of $412,942.20 to be paid to the treasurer of said nation, or to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized by the laws of said nation to receive the same, at such times and in such sums as shall be directed and required by the legislative authority of said nation; this appropriation to become operative upon the execution by the duly appointed delegates of said nation, empowered so to do, of a release and conveyance to the United States of all the right, title, interest, and claim of said nation of Indians in and to said lands, in manner and form satisfactory to the President of the United States, and said release and conveyance, when fully executed and delivered, shall operate to extinguish all claims of every kind and character of said Seminole Nation of Indians in and to the tract of country to which said release and conveyance shall apply.

"That the lands acquired by the United States under said agreement shall be a part of the public domain, and sections 16 and 36 of each township, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, are hereby reserved for the use and benefit of the public schools, as provided in the act organizing the Territory of Dakota; and whether surveyed or unsurveyed, said sections shall not be subject to settlement or entry under the provisions of this act or any of the land laws of the United States; that the lands acquired under said agreement, except the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, shall be disposed of by the United States to actual settlers only under the provisions of the homestead law (except section 2301 thereof), and under the law relating to town sites: Provided, The rights of honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors in the late civil war, as defined and described in sections 2304 and 2305 of the Revised Statutes, shall not be abridged. It is hereby made the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to carefully examine each claim taken under the provisions of this act before issuing a patent to the claimant, and the entryman shall be required to make full proofs; and unless it shall appear that the claim was taken in good faith and that there has been full performance of all the terms and requirements under this act, he shall refuse a patent and declare the prior proceedings before had in such case to be null and void; and all persons settling on land under the provisions of this act shall be required to select the same in square form as near as may be, and to maintain continuous personal residence as required by law on the land and to improve and cultivate the same for that period in the manner required by the homestead laws, and to break up and plow not less than 40 acres of the land filed upon before obtaining title thereto: Provided, That any person who having exhausted his right under existing law, but who is not the owner of a home elsewhere, shall be qualified to make one additional homestead entry upon said lands; and all of the provisions of this section shall apply and be in full force as to the lands included in the recent cession of the Mus-ogee (or Creek) Nation of Indians heretofore ratified by the present Congress. Any person who may enter upon any part of said lands, in said agreements contained, prior to the time that they are opened to settlement by the proclamation of the President, shall not be permitted to occupy or to make entry of such lands or lay any claim thereto."

Mr. PEEL. That amendment was read and discussed yesterday evening, and it was ordered to be printed in the RECORD. I suppose we might vote on it.

Mr. BLAND. Inasmuch as that amendment is just called up, I would like to have the gentleman from Arkansas explain it somewhat.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, it is well known to the committee that while the Oklahoma bill was pending one of the great objections to creating a Territorial government over the territory embraced in that bill was the fact that the Government had not secured title to the lands from the Indians; that is, a general extinguishment of their equity. Under the treaty of 1866 the Creek, Seminole, and Cherokee Indians ceded to the Federal Government that large domain, amounting to ten, twelve, or fourteen million acres of land for the purpose of locating other friendly Indians or freedmen thereon. The Government after locating some there declined to continue that policy. Therefore the country has been lying waste and barren. In 1885, on an appropriation bill, there was an amendment incorporated authorizing the President to negotiate with these various tribes of Indians for a complete relinquishment of their title in order that it might become part of the public domain.

The international council of these five civilized tribes, deeming that it would invade their territory, passed a resolution declaring that they would not relinquish their title, but would hold the Government to carry out the specific object as stipulated in the treaty of 1866. But recently the Creek Nation of Indians—and I must compliment them for their intelligence and their patriotism—came to Washington, led by General Porter, one of the most intelligent gentlemen I ever met, and readily negotiated with the Government to accept the offer. The amendment to the appropriation bill of 1885 offered to allow $1.25 an acre for these lands less what the Government had paid. These Creek Indians came forward, and through the Secretary of the Interior, without any expense on the part of the Government, negotiated for this cession.

A message from the President came to the House recommending its ratification. The House reported unanimously in favor of it. The Senate recommended it, and both Houses, without any objection, passed a bill therefor; and the whole title of the Creeks to this country has been extinguished. The Seminole Indians have followed in their wake. It was understood when the Creeks made this initiative step that their brethren—the Seminoles—were to come in on the same footing. The Creek cession has been accepted. The Seminole delegation are here negotiating, and the President sent in his message a few days ago. It went to our committee and also to the Senate committee. The Senate committee has instructed its chairman to insert an amendment in the Indian appropriation bill when it goes to the Senate to provide for its ratification.

The Committee on Indian Affairs of the House have unanimously instructed me to offer this amendment for the purpose of extinguishing the title of the Seminoles. It simply appropriates the amount of money that is required to extinguish the titles to their part of the lands upon the same basis as the title of the Creeks was adjusted. The amendment appropriates the money to be paid only when they execute a conveyance rendering the title satisfactory to the President.

Mr. HOOKER. Does this affect the Seminoles as well as the Creeks?

Mr. PEEL. Exactly the same. When the object of this amendment is accomplished, the Government will then have achieved what it has been a long time attempting to reach, the extinguishment of these equities, in order that we may be able to dispose of the lands as a part of the public domain and settle this long-vexed question with the consent both of the tribes and of the United States.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I have always been heartily in sympathy with the policy which seeks by just measures, in pursuance of our treaty obligations, to extinguish the Indian titles to these various public lands and to open them up for homestead settlement. Hence, I was very anxious to see the bill known as the Oklahoma bill become a law, and I hope that it may become a law at this session. For the same reason, in order to carry out the treaty stipulations and for the purpose of purchasing these Indian lands, I am in favor of the pending amendment; and I am only sorry that it is not possible at this time that all of the country known as the Indian Territory should, upon some just terms, become a part of the public domain of this Government and part and parcel of our family of States and Territories. As this amendment seems, from the explanation of the gentleman from Arkansas, to be in the line of the policy I have suggested, I hope it will be adopted. I certainly see no objection to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. In the amendment as printed in the RECORD will be found the words "except section 2301 thereof," referring to the homestead law. My friend, the chairman of the committee, will see that that is not exactly accurate, because the section referred to is not section 2301 of the homestead law but of the Revised Statutes. I therefore offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out the word "thereof" and insert "of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which is hereby repealed."

Mr. PEEL. That is in pursuance of the object of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to hear the original amendment read.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment has been read at length and is printed in the RECORD, but if there be no objection, the amendment will be again read.

There was no objection.

The Clerk again read the amendment as printed in the RECORD.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, is there an amendment pending?

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment just read by the Clerk is pending, and an amendment to that amendment is offered by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I desire to give notice that I intend to offer an amendment to the last proviso.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can do that after the amendment offered to the amendment by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is disposed of. The question now is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to the fact that the effect of his amendment is to repeal absolutely what is known as the commutation feature of the homestead law, and to the fact that there is nothing in the amendment to protect the rights of those who have already secured rights under that law. I think, therefore, the amendment should be modified in that particular. With such modification there will be no objection to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as every effort has been made by the House for years past to repeal that section, I think it is desirable to retain the repeal here, but I will modify the amendment in the manner indicated by what I now send to the desk.

The Clerk read the amendment as proposed to be modified, as follows:

Strike out the word "thereof" in the second section of the amendment of the gentleman from Arkansas and insert the following: "Of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which is hereby repealed; but all rights initiated under the same shall remain unimpaired."

The amendment of Mr. HOLMAN as modified was agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Now, Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to the last proviso, to come in after the word "having."

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "having," in the last proviso of the amendment, insert the words "attempted to, but, for any cause, failed to secure a title in full to a homestead elsewhere."

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I reserved the right in committee to offer this amendment. The bill as it now stands gives persons who have already exhausted their right to a homestead the privilege of taking another. Under the existing laws a man when he secures a homestead exhausts his right in that respect and has no right to take a second homestead. The object of this amendment is simply to prevent one who has already secured a homestead under the homestead laws from taking another. It provides that those who have attempted to secure a homestead, but for any reason have failed to secure their title, may have the privilege of taking land again, but that under no circumstances shall a man who has had a homestead be allowed to take another, for the object of the homestead law is to give as many people as possible a chance to get homes; and if one man can take two homesteads another man must go without one.

I know that many men have made mistakes in entering homesteads, have secured poor lands; their homestead entries may not have turned out as favorably as those of others. But such things occur under the law which is common to us all; and to say that a man who has secured a homestead may, because he is not satisfied with it, or because it is not so good as another, step in ahead of a man who has never had the opportunity to get a homestead, is to do injustice and to change a feature of the homestead law which has existed from the time we have had such a law.

My proviso will simply do this: It will allow any man to take a homestead who has heretofore attempted to take one, but failed to secure it. That is the object of the amendment; and then having stricken out the words "exhausted his right," I propose that the words "one who is not the owner of a home elsewhere" be stricken out. Let me illustrate the object of this portion of the amendment. I never took up a homestead, or taking failed to complete my title. I have a home in Michigan. I have the right under the existing laws to go to Kansas or Oklahoma, if I see fit, and take up a homestead, retaining at the same time my property in Michigan. It is not right to say that no one shall be permitted to go there and take up a homestead if he has a home anywhere else. That never has been done under the homestead laws, and we should not now adopt that principle.

Mr. RYAN. I would like to have the amendment reported again. I concur in the views expressed by my friend from Michigan, but I am not quite sure that his amendment carries out his idea.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. I wish to suggest to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ALLEN] an amendment to his amendment, and I think when he listens to what I have to say in this connection he will recognize the propriety of my amendment. There are many people, particularly in the western portion of Kansas and in Eastern Colorado, as well as in many of our Western Territories, who have taken homes under what is known as the commutation feature of the homestead law. They have borrowed the money to enable them to make their entry. Now, in consequence of three or four unfavorable seasons many of these persons have been unable to pay their mortgages, and many have thus lost their homes. The amendment of the gentleman would cut out those people absolutely. If he will modify his amendment so as not to cut out these people who have taken homesteads under what is known as the commutation feature of the homestead law—because those men paid for their land just as settlers paid for land which they took under the pre-emption law—there will perhaps be no objection to his amendment. Most certainly we ought not to cut out those people who have paid for their lands under the commutation feature of the homestead law, who borrowed money to do that, but who, in consequence of unfavorable seasons, have lost everything that they had in the world and are now homeless.

Mr. RYAN. I think my friend from Michigan should accept the modification suggested by my colleague [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. And with the consent of the gentleman from Michigan we can pass this matter over for the present, so that he can modify his amendment in this particular. We can return to this paragraph hereafter.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I will ask the gentleman from Kansas whether he can tell us about how many persons there are in the condition he describes.

Mr. PERKINS. Oh, thousands—nearly all those in my State who took land under the commutation feature of the homestead law.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Have those men perfected their titles?

Mr. PERKINS. They have perfected them under the commutation provision; they have paid the Government for the land, borrowing the money in almost every instance to do so.

Mr. RYAN. They have perfected their titles because they have paid for their lands—have not taken them under the ordinary provisions of the homestead law.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I do not wish to consent to anything which appears to me contrary to the fundamental principle on which the whole homestead law rests. We can not provide for the misfortunes of all persons, but we certainly ought to do justice to all. The homestead law is a peculiar enactment in this, that it offers to every man in the United States, so long as the public domain shall remain unexhausted, one opportunity to secure a home; and since that law has been upon the statute-book, thousands and hundreds of thousands have availed themselves of the opportunity thus offered. Boys and young men are now growing up who desire to avail themselves of the benefits of this law, as others have done; and to say that a man shall have two chances under the homestead law to get a homestead, thereby depriving some one else of his right to exercise his privilege once, is contrary to the fundamental idea of the homestead law.

I do not wish to be too strenuous in regard to persons who have taken up lands under the commutation feature of the homestead law. I can readily see how a man might buy a homestead, pay cash for it, and in consequence of having borrowed the money lose it.

Mr. PERKINS. These men who took up land under the commutation feature of the homestead law did substantially the same as those who acquired homes under the pre-emption law, and who are to receive the benefits of this act. For that reason those who took up homesteads under this commutation feature of the homestead law should enjoy the benefits of this legislation.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, if this can be passed over informally, the gentleman from Kansas can prepare an amendment as to commuters and submit it hereafter for the action of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment will be passed over informally to be returned to hereafter.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask we may adopt the amendment now and return to it hereafter to make whatever modifications may be found to be necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. If the proposition is adopted it can not be amended hereafter except by unanimous consent.

Mr. PERKINS. But, Mr. Chairman, the proposition is that it shall be adopted with the consent that hereafter we shall return to it to make whatever modifications may be found to be necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection that will be done.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Chairman, I think it a bad policy to extend the provisions of the homestead law or the provisions of the pre-emption law in any way that will permit any one to obtain a larger number of acres than they can at present. Instead of allowing persons who have already had 160 acres as a homestead to take 160 more, I think there is now good reason why the number of acres that may be taken in the first instance should be restricted and limited to 80 acres. It is well known that the quantity of public land now remaining in possession of the Government suitable for agricultural purposes is small, compared to our population, to what it was a half or a quarter of a century since. The number of landless men in the United States has become so great and the quantity of land available is so small, I think the policy of the Government in the future should be to reduce the size of the homestead entry. We all agree, I believe, that the agricultural lands should hereafter be disposed of to actual settlers alone.

I can see how there may be a few worthy and deserving cases of men who lost their homesteads through misfortune, and if it were reasonably practicable to single out this small number, the Government might again give them the benefit of making another homestead entry; but the Government is not responsible for their losing their homes, and the trouble is there is no place to draw the line. You have to adopt a rule and live up to it. If men have obtained homesteads by commutation and then parted with them by sale the first year after they obtained the title to them I have no doubt they would all now like to have another opportunity to enter another homestead. I can see very well how such men may be appealing to their Representatives to amend the law and give them the privilege. But, Mr. Chairman, in this matter we had better go slowly. Let us save whatever arable lands we have now and parcel them out in small quantities to actual settlers who have no land at all; to men who have never been given any land. That is my proposition, and I hope no amendment will be adopted which will add to the number of men who, under the law, can obtain homesteads by including those who have already had the opportunity and entered homesteads and since then disposed of them.

I understand very well, Mr. Chairman, how men with constituents living on the border land of our settlements are anxious to have provision made which will give those constituents additional opportunities to enter public lands. But there are thousands of men in the older settled States with equal rights to the public lands belonging to the United States who never yet had any opportunity to make homestead entries. Every year the desire of these people to obtain a piece of land for a home becomes greater. Therefore I ask that the public lands be saved for those who have no lands now and who have never yet had an opportunity to make homestead entries.

Mr. WARNER. How many acres would the gentleman suggest as the limit of homestead entries hereafter?

Mr. JACKSON. Eighty acres is, perhaps, enough. That is more than we will be able to give twenty-five years hence. I am informed that in many of the old States from 80 to 100 acres to a settler was the policy at the beginning. It is said that in Indiana large portions of it were settled where the number of acres of land taken up by the settlers did not exceed 40 acres.

Mr. WARNER. Do those in the East waive any part of their heritage by giving to the settlers upon what is known as the great American desert the opportunity to make homestead entries of 160 acres?

Mr. JACKSON. That is the old story. When men want large grants of land from the Government it is represented as poor and worthless. But as soon as they obtain the patent it at once improves, no matter what may be the character of the land.

We have to take now what we can get, and therefore I am in favor of saving for actual settlement the public lands which are left. If the people West have already taken up the garden spots, the landless people who are seeking homes will have to be content with what remains. When almost the whole continent was open to settlement men settled upon and improved only moderate-sized tracts, and certainly it is not too much to ask now, when our agricultural lands are really almost gone, that we should limit the amount of lands that may be taken for homestead. In answer to the remark of my friend on the left I wish to say that the men in the East will take their chances with the men in the West in obtaining a home on the public lands if you will not cut them off by legislation. Make all men equal before the law. Do not give the Western man two chances to an Eastern man's one.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Chairman, it is an easy matter for a gentleman who is living on the rich and productive lands in the valleys of Pennsylvania to stand up here and say a homestead in the West is sufficient if it shall consist of only 80 acres. He little knows of the hardships and of the privations pioneers have to undergo or he would not say 160 acres way out upon the border, subject to the vicissitudes of a frontier life, are more than should be given in a homestead entry. If he were familiar with this matter I do not think he would stand up here and say that 160 acres is enough. Those who do know the difficulties encountered by the actual settlers know they can scarcely make for themselves a respectable living upon 160 acres in the far West.

I wish to add another thing, and that is the object of the homestead law was to give every man who wanted it a homestead of 160 acres of land, a most wise provision. If there are those who attempted to obtain the benefit of its provisions, but for any reason have lost the privilege, I hope we will not deny him the poor privilege given by this bill which extends the right of homestead entry to that class.

I wish to say another thing. That many who entered their lands under the homestead law commuted those homesteads and practically paid for them under the pre-emption law. Now, those men ought not to be put in any worse condition than those who took their lands under the pre-emption law and paid for them. They ought to be allowed the right of homestead entry also.

The Creek lands which we obtained a few days ago and the Seminole lands acquired in this bill aggregate nearly 5,000,000 acres, purchased under the provision of the act of 1885, which I had the honor to move as an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill. We shall doubtless soon procure the Cherokee Outlet by the same or similar methods. Let all the homeless have an equal right in obtaining homes on these lands. I think, Mr. Chairman, the criticisms that have been made by my friend from Pennsylvania are hardly just and fair to that class who go from his own State and from other Eastern States to the frontier to carve out homes for themselves.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Let me ask the gentleman from Kansas this question, if it is not true that the homestead law is much abused in the West?

Mr. RYAN. How?

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. That certain men use the homesteaders for the purpose of amassing large tracts of lands, using the same men over and over again for that purpose.

Mr. RYAN. I want to say to my friend from Ohio that if there has been any abuse of the homestead law at all it has been because of the commutation clause, which is expressly repealed by the provisions of this bill. No other abuse is possible under the homestead law; and it is only under that provision of it which this resolution repeals that there has been abuse of which complaint is properly made.

Mr. WARNER. And let me suggest that I take it for granted, and it may be properly assumed, that the men who go upon our Western prairies to make their homes have the common honesty of the East not to allow themselves to be used by any one for such purposes.

Mr. RYAN. They are not only honest, but they are the great bodyguard of the nation itself.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. PEEL. I hope the gentleman from Michigan, if he has his amendment ready, will now present it and let us have a vote.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I ask the adoption of the amendment in a modified form as I now send it to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out of the proviso, the words "that any person who having exhausted his right under existing law, but who is not the owner of a home elsewhere," and insert: "That any person who having attempted to, but for any cause failed to secure a title in fee to a homestead under existing law, or who made entry under what is known as the commutation provision of the homestead law, shall be qualified," etc.

The question was taken on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment, and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to prevail.

Mr. JACKSON. I demand a division for the purpose of asking unanimous consent to make a brief statement of my views on this question.

Mr. PERKINS. I hope there will be no objection.

Mr. JACKSON. If the committee please, I wish to reply to the reason given in regard to those who have commuted and obtained lands in that way. I think that those who obtained their lands under the commutation features of the homestead law, if there be any difference, have certainly less claim now for relief than any other class of men. Let us see what provision was made. The leading feature of the homestead law as originally passed was to give 160 acres of public land to every man or head of a family who would permanently settle upon it and improve it. As a guaranty that he would improve it for his own use as a home, the law provided that he should live upon it at least five years, and could not obtain title until that time had elapsed. But an amendment was afterwards made to the law which permitted a homesteader after one year, by paying the minimum price of $1.25 per acre, to obtain title without remaining upon it the five years. This was a very improper change. Its tendency was to give lands to those who had money, and not to the settler without means.

I did not propose, Mr. Chairman, to enter into a discussion of the irregularities and frauds which it is alleged have been committed under the homestead law, especially under this commutation provision; I am not making charges; but I repeat if there have been abuses under that law it was under that very feature of it. But without violating law it permitted men to make entries, commute and pay out and obtain title, and sell to speculators, who could thereby acquire large bodies of land. Certainly these parties have less right to have a second homestead given them than any other class. So far as there is evidence before Congress in regard to irregularities and frauds under the homestead law, it is, I believe, wholly where men took their homesteads and commuted them, obtained patents and then sold their lands. It was contrary to the general and true principles of the homestead law that men should be allowed to commute and pay for their homes, because that was only done and could of course be only done where men had money and were able to pay for the lands. In many cases it is alleged—and I undertake, as I have stated, to make no charges whatever, but simply refer to it for the purpose of illustration—that this provision has frequently been used for the purpose of allowing men to take up public lands, and, in accordance with a previous understanding, transfer them to speculators, and by this plan, it is said, the most valuable of our timber lands on the Pacific Slope have passed in large bodies to individuals, who hold them for speculation.

Mr. RYAN. Let me correct the gentleman there to say that two-thirds of the settlers upon the public domain who have finally perfected their homes, who live upon them and cultivate them, took them under the homestead law and commuted them. It is certainly unfair to assail them.

Mr. JACKSON. I have been very careful to make no charges, but I ask, what does the gentleman's statement indicate? It means that the men who have obtained the lands were not poor men for whom the lands were intended by the homestead law. It shows that they went to men who were able to pay for them, and had money for that purpose, and could buy their lands like anybody else. I have no doubt the gentleman's statement is correct; and that a great many men who have obtained homesteads were men with money, and by this provision the public lands have passed to a great extent into hands of people with money of their own, or it may be money which others had and allowed to be used for that purpose, using this to absorb large tracts of valuable Government lands.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not want this garden spot to be given away in great bodies. I want small, compact homes preserved for the people of this great country—for the people who need them. There is no use calling these lands that are expected shortly to be opened poor lands, or, as the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] suggested, desert lands. No, Oklahoma is the last great body of good land not yet opened to settlement. I have no doubt it is good and valuable. It is surrounded by populous States and settlements. I do not think there is any good reason for hurrying the titles into private hands. It would be a grand thing if we could keep some of these lands for settlers ten, twenty, or thirty years hence. The settlers now living near it have to a great extent had 160 acres given them as a homestead. I have no doubt vast numbers of them would like the law changed so they could assign their homesteads in Kansas and elsewhere, and hurry into this Territory and get 160 acres more just as soon as it is opened. This would enable those living near it to practically monopolize this land. I am opposed to this; but I do not think it should apply to any part of the public lands.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania demands a division upon the question just taken.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 106, noes 4.

So the amendment to the amendment was adopted.

Mr. HOOKER. I offer a proviso to the amendment of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL].

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That all rights of any friendly Indians who may have been settled upon any part of said lands proposed to be conveyed shall not be affected by said sale and transfer to the United States: And provided further, That said sale and transfer of said lands shall in no way affect the rights and interests of any other of the five semi-civilized Indian tribes.

Mr. HOOKER. I desire to say a word in regard to this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it is a subject of congratulation to me to find that the Indian Committee, so ably represented by my friend from Arkansas, and the House, too, seem to have reached the conclusion that there are some Indians at least who have some title to lands which the Government ought to respect; for if it be true that the patent of the Government of the United States to the Creeks, who hold by the same tenure that the Cherokees hold, is not good, then the title you acquire by transfer from the Creeks may be of doubtful character.

I therefore think it is a subject of congratulation that the gentlemen who are in favor of this proposition of allowing the Creeks to sell their claims have at last found out that there is some title to be respected in the Indians in consequence of the patents which the Government have given them. As to the policy, Mr. Chairman, of this sale, I do not pretend to challenge it, for I have held to the doctrine, and hold to it yet, that the five semi-civilized nations of Indians with whom we have been treating and stipulating, and with whom you propose now to make another agreement, have to-day got capacity and intelligence enough to attend to their own matters; and I suppose the United States, through its committees in its Congress, have got capacity, intelligence, and honesty enough not to accept a doubtful title from the Indians. And I congratulate them that they think the right given by the Indian title is a good one.

I want to guard the interests of the other civilized tribes who, under the provisions of the sixteenth section of the treaty of 1866, may have settled upon these lands. I believe, sir, that the Creek Nation has the right to sell the land they live upon if they choose, but I believe that the policy is bad for the Indians, because it settles in the very midst of their country a white population, before whose advancing civilization not many years will have expired before you will say you want the balance of the land; and if they are willing to convey it, that may be all right and proper, because I think they have intelligence to know what their own rights are. But on the policy of settling white population among the Indians, I want to raise this note of warning in behalf of the remaining five semi-civilized tribes as to the impolicy of having a white settlement in the midst of their own country, if they ever expect that they will be admitted to the rights of Territorial organization, or rather I should say to State organization and a representation in this body and at the other end of the Capitol. They will thus dispose of the rights which the country has conveyed to them, and which they seem to be, so far as the Creeks are now concerned, ready to reconvey to the Government of the United States for an adequate consideration. As I understand the amendment of the gentleman from Arkansas, it proposes now to extend to another of the semi-civilized tribes—the Seminoles—the same right of conveyance and to accept their conveyance, as the Creek conveyance has already been accepted, by legislation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question then recurred on the amendment of Mr. PEEL as amended; and the amendment as amended was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For compensation of judges of Indian courts, at such rates as may be fixed from time to time by the Secretary of the Interior, $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. BLAND. I inquire of the gentleman from Arkansas in charge of this bill where these courts are situated for which provision is made for the compensation of the judges.

Mr. HOLMAN. On the reservations.

Mr. PEEL. I am not able to give the gentleman from Missouri all the places, but they are on several reservations. One of the most prominent, as I remember, is that of the Flathead Indians on the Jocko reservation, in Montana. I think the gentleman from Indiana will agree with the statement that I am about to make, that when we made our investigation we found in the report of the agent where all of these courts are located that a great deal of good resulted. The Indians were disciplined by them and disposed to accept the decisions of these tribunals. The decisions of the courts were reported as having been satisfactory to the complainants and defendants, and the judges seemed to be very much respected. The appropriation has done a greal deal of good.

Mr. HOLMAN. It gives them some idea of government among themselves.

Mr. BLAND. What laws do they operate under?

Mr. HOLMAN. They operate under the Indian laws.

Mr. PERKINS. Under the Indian laws and orders from the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. BLAND. Is it to adjudicate matters arising between white men and Indians?

Mr. HOLMAN. No; it is only for matters arising between the Indians.

Mr. BLAND. And not at all for matters between them and white men?

Mr. HOLMAN. Indians entirely. The object is to teach these Indians self-government.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the sum of $9,371.50, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay the settlers who in good faith made settlement in the Wind River Valley, Wyoming Territory, previous to the time when the said valley was included in the Wind River Indian reservation, the value of their improvements as heretofore found by appraisement by the proper Indian agent under direction of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That no payments shall be made to any one of said settlers until he shall first have finally removed from said reservation.

Mr. BLAND. I would like to have some explanation of that paragraph from the gentleman in charge of this bill, as to what is the subject-matter of these claims.

Mr. PERKINS. This is to compensate some settlers who have settled on these lands prior to the time it was designated as an Indian reservation. Their improvements have been appraised and examined by officers representing the Interior Department, and this appropriation simply proposes to pay them the appraised value of their improvements. But it does not pay it until they have moved entirely from the reservation.

Mr. BLAND. Are they settled on the reservation?

Mr. PERKINS. I understand that they have left the reservation; but as a precaution we provided that they should not be paid until they had removed. The Delegate from Wyoming says they have gone; but as a matter of caution we put this on—that they should not be paid until they had removed themselves from the reservation.

The Clerk read as follows:

This amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in the purchase of carpets, matting, office furniture, casing for records and files, repairs to casings and furniture, and other necessary expenses incident to the removal of the office of Indian Affairs, to be immediately available, $2,000; for one female laborer to be employed in Indian Office, at $6,060 per annum; in all, $2,660.

Mr. HOLMAN. I raise the point of order on that paragraph.

Mr. PERKINS. There is a typographical error there. We certainly do not intend to pay the female laborers $6,060. The amount should be $600.

Mr. RANDALL. That ought to be provided for in the legislative bill.

Mr. PEEL. I know it ought, but it was not done.

Mr. RANDALL. It was not estimated for. That is the reason it was not done.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think this employé ought to be provided for in the legislative bill, and I regard this as a very bad practice. Still, I make the point of order only as to the $2,000 item preceding that.

The CHAIRMAN. If the point of order is made against one item in the paragraph it affects the entire proposition.

Mr. HOLMAN. There are two distinct propositions, one applying to the $2,000 in line 10. As to that proposition I make the point of order; as to the other I do not make it.

Mr. RANDALL. I understand that the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PEEL] is entirely willing to have that $2,000 item stricken out.

Mr. PEEL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand that the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is to strike out the paragraph from line 4 down to and including the word "dollars" in line 10?

Mr. HOLMAN. That is the proposition.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] striking out the letters "ty" in the word "sixty" in line 11.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay Beeson and Baker, of Paola, Kans., for services rendered the Indian Office in furnishing abstract titles, according to statement of August 31, 1888, $60.

Mr. BLAND. I raise the point of order upon that item. I would like to hear it explained.

Mr. PERKINS. This is to pay for some abstracting that was done by these gentlemen at the request of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. The Commissioner thought he had authority to order the work and he had it done; the Auditor approved the bill, but the Comptroller questioned the right of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to order the work done. There is no question that the work was done, and these gentlemen now ask that this amount be appropriated to pay for that service.

Mr. BLAND. On the statement of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] this is evidently a mere claim and is subject to the point of order, and I make the point that it is not authorized by existing law.

Mr. PERKINS. I trust the gentleman will not do that. These gentlemen can not get their pay in any other way. The amount is only $60, and it is recommended by the officers of the Department. The Commissioner authorized the work.

Mr. BLAND. If we are going to put claims into these appropriation bills let us put them all in. I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. On the statement of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] the Chair must sustain the point of order.

Mr. PERKINS. I do not contend against the point of order, but I suggest to the gentleman from Missouri that in my judgment he ought not to interpose it. This service was rendered at the request of the Indian Office; the Government had the benefit of the service and the Auditor approved the bill, but the Comptroller of the Currency questioned the authority of the Commissioner to have the work done, and now these gentlemen ask that this appropriation shall be made to pay for it.

The CHAIRMAN. But the Chair understands the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] to insist on the point or order.

Mr. BLAND. My great objection is to putting a few claims into appropriation bills and passing them through here when a great many others have no such favor shown them. However, in this case I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support of Indian day and industrial schools, and for other educational purposes not hereinafter provided for, $685,000; for the construction and repair of school buildings, $55,000; and for purchase of horses, cattle, sheep, and swine for schools, $10,000; in all, $750,000: Provided, That the entire cost of any boarding-school building to be built from the moneys appropriated hereby, including furniture, shall not exceed $10,000, and the entire cost of any day-school building to be so built shall not exceed $600.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I find that this paragraph makes provision for the support of "Indian day and industrial schools, and for other educational purposes not hereinafter provided for, $685,000," and "for the construction and repair of school buildings, $55,000;" but the point I wish to have some information about is this: "And for purchase of horses, cattle, sheep, and swine for schools, $10,000." I would like to have some explanation of why horses and cattle, sheep and swine have to be purchased for schools to the amount of $10,000.

Mr. PERKINS. I will say that at most of the industrial schools they have farms in connection with the schools. They cultivate those farms and it is necessary to have horses to do the work, and it is necessary to have cattle and sheep in order to make the farms productive and valuable and serviceable. This is only a continuation of the appropriations heretofore made in this direction. The appropriation this year is less than it was last year, and less than has been asked for by the Department.

Mr. BLAND. While the gentleman is up, I would like to ask him a question. I notice a provision here for the cost of putting up boarding-school buildings. Can the gentleman give us any information as to where those buildings are to be located?

Mr. HOLMAN. They are to be on the reservations, of course.

Mr. PERKINS. This is the usual appropriation in that respect; the matter is left with the Interior Department and the Indian Office, as heretofore.

Mr. BLAND. Then I understand from the gentleman from Kansas that the committee is leaving the whole thing to the discretion of the Department, without any information as to the necessity for this appropriation.

Mr. PERKINS. The necessity for it arises from the fact that the Department is extending this system of education each year, is gradually civilizing the Indians, is every year inducing more of the Indian children to attend school; and as the number of school children enlarges, the necessity for school buildings necessarily increases.

Mr. BLAND. I would suppose that any recommendation with reference to this matter would be accompanied with a statement as to the location of the school buildings, the different schools to be accommodated, etc.

Mr. PERKINS. The Department does not furnish that information. The matter has heretofore been left and is now left discretionary with the Department.

Mr. BLAND. That strikes me as a rather loose way of appropriating money.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the gentleman from Arkansas will consent to amend this paragraph by inserting after the word "construction," in the twenty-first line, the words "on Indian reservations," so as to provide for the "construction on Indian reservations and repair of school buildings." Of course the repairs must be made wherever the school buildings are located.

Mr. PEEL. There is no objection to that amendment. It simply carries out the intention of the committee.

Mr. PERKINS. I am not sure that the amendment suggested should be assented to. We have school buildings which are not on reservations, and it may be that some of this appropriation may be required to be used upon those buildings.

Mr. HOLMAN. This amendment does not affect that matter. The money can still be spent for repairs of school buildings wherever they may be located.

Mr. PERKINS. If the amendment is offered in that shape, all right.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment submitted by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "construction," in line 21, insert "on Indian reservations;" so as to read: "For the construction on Indian reservations and repair of school buildings, $55,000."

Mr. PERKINS. There is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. I move to amend by striking out in line 20 of this paragraph the words "six hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars" and inserting "$4,000,000." On this amendment I desire to say a word.

The Secretary of the Interior, on page 26 of his last annual report, recommends an appropriation of $4,000,000 for the purpose of educating Indian youth. The statistics show clearly that the large majority of the Indian youth in this country of school age are not provided with any educational facilities whatever. There are in the United States, omitting Alaska, according to the best attainable statistics, about 250,000 Indians, and about 50,000, or nearly that number, are Indian youth of school age. And yet we have educational facilities for only about 16,000 children, and there are only 15,000 enrolled, while the average attendance is only 11,000.

We are now expending in educating these 11,000 Indian youth $1,200,000, and if there are 50,000 Indian youth of school age and only 11,000 attending school, there are nearly 40,000 Indian youth of school age running wild for whom no educational provisions whatever have been made.

For more than a hundred years we have been dealing with this Indian problem; and for more than a hundred years our policy has been a complete failure. In all the years of the past as in the present we have been educating a very few and allowing the great mass of the Indians to grow up in ignorance and barbarism. We have recently passed a national statute allotting land to the Indians in severalty. This, too, has been a failure, and it will continue to be a failure until the Indian youth of the entire land are educated.

If we would take the advice of the Secretary of the Interior and appropriate four or five million dollars to provide schools for all the Indian youth of the country, they might in one generation be educated in the English language, in agriculture, and other industrial pursuits, so that they would be qualified to accept lands in severalty and would become peaceable citizens. But so long as we go on as we are now doing from year to year, educating a few at Hampton and a few at Carlisle and a few on the reservations and a few in this or that favorite Indian school, while nearly forty thousand Indian youth are running wild, the Indian question will present precisely the same difficulties in the future as in the past.

We talk of increasing these educational facilities, but we do not do it. Last year the enrollment of scholars was only nine hundred more than the year before, which is as nothing compared with the great mass for which no provision whatever is made.

My only object in offering this amendment now is to call attention to this question. Early in the last session I introduced a bill providing for the compulsory education of all the Indian children in the United States; but that bill has not been considered, as thousands of other bills have not been considered, and I am well aware that we have not now time to consider and pass such an important measure as this, but I desire to call attention to it as the only remedy for the evils of our degraded and disgraceful Indian civilization. And as much as I am in favor of an increased appropriation for this purpose I would not vote for it unless it were accompanied with a compulsory provision which would secure the attendance of all the Indian children whose education was contemplated. Without this provision the money would avail very little.

I was in the Indian Territory about two years ago, and was at one of the Indian agencies. While there I saw that the Government had made provision for the education of two or three hundred children, and yet only about thirty were in attendance. Seventeen or eighteen teachers were there employed at the expense of the Government, but only a few scholars. It was not the fault of the teachers, but the fault of the law. It is useless, or almost useless, to build school-houses for the Indians and employ teachers and furnish books unless we can in some way secure the attendance of the scholars. We must have a compulsory law, the wisdom of which would soon be appreciated by the Indians themselves.

We have been trifling with barbarism and paying tribute to ignorance, wickedness, and degradation too long, and it is now time that the civilization of this generation vindicate itself by a new departure. If all the Indian children of this generation were educated and taught trades and business and especially fitted for agricultural pursuits there would be no savages to curse the next generation. When the older Indians would pass away, the blanket and the tribal relation and the tomahawk and the wigwam would pass away. The lands allotted to them would become productive farms, and their dwelling-places would become peaceful and happy homes. At present there is no place for the educated Indian children to go when they leave school, and no employment or vocation at their command.

When they return to the tent and the wigwam and the tribe, they are so few in number as compared with the uneducated that they are hated and despised by their uneducated playmates and associates, and in order to escape the hatred and contempt and scorn of their tribe, they go back to the habit and degradation of barbarism and are often worse than they would have been had they never seen school or books. Let all be educated at once, and they will support each other in the pathway of progress, and have a common aim and a common sympathy. Let this be done and let attendance be required if the Army be necessary to secure it. Let the appropriation be large enough and we will save hundreds of million of dollars, untold sacrifice of human life, and bring forth a new civilization.

Mr. Chairman, I now withdraw my amendment. I only wanted to take time enough to call the attention of the House to this question.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of Indian pupils at Albuquerque, N. Mex., at $175 per annum for each pupil, and for the erection and repair of buildings, $35,000.

Mr. BLAND. This seems to be an appropriation per capita, but I would like to inquire of the gentleman having charge of this bill the exact number of pupils that are educated in this school.

Mr. PEEL. I am not able to say now just exactly how many pupils are educated in that school.

Mr. PERKINS. One hundred and seventy-five dollars per annum is paid for each pupil, and as the appropriation is $35,000 it is not difficult to tell just exactly how many are to be provided for.

Mr. BLAND. But it also provides for the erection and repair of buildings.

Mr. PERKINS. Buildings should be made sufficient to accommodate the pupils, and the appropriation is for that purpose.

Mr. BLAND. What was the first cost of these buildings?

Mr. PERKINS. There is quite a large building there which was erected originally by a church organization. The Government secured it from that religious society.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. If the appropriation of $35,000 is devoted to this purpose it will support two hundred pupils.

Mr. BLAND. I would like to know what is the character of this building for which an appropriation is made.

Mr. PERKINS. No part of this appropriation is for the erection of any building.

Mr. BLAND. Why, the paragraph provides for the erection and repairs of buildings. I would like to know what is the character of the building.

Mr. PERKINS. As I have already stated, the structure in the first instance was put up by the Presbyterians for a mission school and was subsequently secured by the Government of the United States to accommodate the number of Indians provided for in this appropriation. It is ample to accommodate the pupils who are educated there.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman move an amendment?

Mr. BLAND. No, I do not.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church for buildings and other improvements made by said board on land at Albuquerque, N.

Mex., donated to the Government for Indian school purposes, $6,803.13, being the appraised value of said improvements as agreed upon by a representative of said board and a special agent of the Indian Bureau.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not like to interfere with a church, but I should like to direct the attention of the gentleman from Arkansas to this matter. This alleged donation was the reason given why a school should be established at Albuquerque.

Mr. HOLMAN. Did the gentleman from Pennsylvania reserve the point of order?

Mr. RANDALL. I did not.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will reserve it, then.

Mr. RANDALL. As I have stated, the original inducement for the establishment of this school at Albuquerque was the donation of this property by the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church. It would seem to be what the lawyers call damnosa hæreditas, an injury to own it. We established a school there, and we are now asked to pay for that donation. [Laughter.] Gentlemen will see there has been a conference between the Presbyterian board and a special agent of the Indian Bureau in this connection.

I want to say further that this matter was investigated last year by the Committee on Appropriations and decided to be a claim in the opinion of that committee and not proper to be embraced in the deficiency bill. I do not make the point of order, because it relates to a church.

Mr. BLAND. I have not made the point of order, as I do not wish to defeat any necessary appropriation for the education of Indian pupils.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman move an amendment?

Mr. BLAND. I move to strike out the last word. Now, Mr. Chairman, so far as I am individually concerned I am in favor of liberal appropriations for educational purposes. I have not made the point of order, and have merely moved the amendment for the purpose of obtaining information on the subject.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have made the point of order because it is at least doubtful whether this appropriation ought to be made. The location of the school in question is not a good one, to begin with. The Indians gathered there are from the Mescalero Apaches and from the San Carlos reservation, and are necessarily removed several hundred miles from their homes. My observation has led me to conclude that the schools away from the reservations are not as a rule beneficial. When the Indian children go back they go back into a condition of barbarism worse than that of the children raised on the reservations and not removed from it. I think that money expended on the reservation for this purpose has a better effect in regard to the education of the Indian children than the money applied away from the reservation, for that money properly expended on the reservation educates the whole family, father and mother, as well as the pupils, and has a beneficial effect upon all. But when you remove the children from the reservation, which must be done by a kind of force and to the universal grief of the parents, you do not accomplish so much good as can be obtained by educating them on the reservation. So that from my standpoint the establishment of the school in question at Albuqueque was not on the whole a wise measure. It was established by the Presbyterians, and was a very kind and generous act on their part; but my belief is that the school should not have been established at all.

I am not inclined, however, Mr. Chairman, to press the point of order, inasmuch as the chairman of the committee has approved the appropriation and placed the amount in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being withdrawn, the Chair will also regard the pro forma amendment of the gentleman from Missouri as withdrawn; and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support of one hundred and fifty pupils at the St. Ignatius mission school, on the Jocko reservation, in Montana Territory, at $150 per annum each, $22,500.

Mr. TOOLE. I move to strike out, on page 51, lines 24 and 25, and lines 1 and 2, on page 52, and insert what I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the support of three hundred pupils at the St. Ignatius mission school on the Jocko reservation, in Montana, at $150 per annum each, $45,000.

Mr. PERKINS. I would like to ask the gentleman from Montana whether the school accommodations there are sufficient to accommodate the number of pupils he proposes to locate there?

Mr. TOOLE. The school is capable of accommodating quite four hundred pupils.

Mr. PEEL. I would ask the gentleman to allow the recommendation of the Department to be read.

Mr. TOOLE. Let me state that I have the recommendation of the Indian Office and the Interior Department asking for this appropriation. These recommendations were made, however, after the bill had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs, but the indorsement is in strong terms, and I can appeal to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], and the honorable chairman of this committee for the confirmation of the statements made in the report of the special inspector of the Indian service when he says that this school is one of the most excellent in the service.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to confirm that statement from my own observation, that it is one of the very best in the Indian service, much more efficient than some far more pretentious schools outside of the reservations.

Mr. PEEL. I also take great pleasure in saying the same thing. We visited the school in person. It is the best disciplined and located school that I have seen, and the amendment meets my thorough approval. From my knowledge of the surroundings I have no objection to the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, last evening when this bill was under consideration the committee, by unanimous consent, passed over two paragraphs on page 41 of the bill at my request with a view to recurring to them and offering an amendment. I refer to the paragraphs beginning with line 3 and ending with line 8, in the following words:

For support and civilization of the Navajo Indians, including pay of employés, $7,500.

For continuing the work of constructing ditches and reservoirs for the Navajo Indians, $7,500, to be taken from the funds now in the Treasury belonging to said Indians.

I now submit the amendment which I wished to prepare: To strike out lines 3 and 4 and amend the next paragraph by striking out, in line 6, the words "seventy-five hundred" and inserting "including pay of employés, $15,000."

Mr. PEEL. Let it be read as it will stand if amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

For continuing the work of constructing ditches and reservoirs for the Navajo Indians, including pay of employés, $15,000, to be taken from the funds now in the Treasury belonging to said Indians.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now move a further amendment, to strike out "to" after the sum named, and insert the words "seven thousand five hundred dollars of which shall" so that it will read, "$7,500 of which shall be taken from the funds now in the Treasury belonging to said Indians."

The committee informally rose to receive a message from the Senate, Mr. ENLOE in the chair.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message was received from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announcing that that body insisted on its amendments disagreed to by the House, agreed to the conference asked for, and had appointed Mr. ALLISON, Mr. PLUMB, and Mr. GORMAN conferees on its part.

It also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12485) making an appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

It also announced concurrence in House resolution for the printing and distribution of extra copies of the testimony taken and report made by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries for the investigation of the fur-seal and other fisheries in Alaska.

It further announced the passage without amendment of H. Res. 266, to print the eulogies on James N. Burnes, of Missouri.

It further announced that the Senate insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked, and had appointed Mr. VEST, Mr. WILSON of Iowa, and Mr. EDMUNDS as conferees on its part.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment the bill (H. R. 5716) for establishing a light-house at the mouth of Otter Creek, Lake Champlain; asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. PALMER, Mr. CULLOM, and Mr. RANSOM as conferees on its part.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 7777) to provide for the sale of lands patented to certain members of the Flathead band of Indians in Montana Territory, and for other purposes; asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. JONES of Arkansas, Mr. PLATT, and Mr. DAWES as conferees on its part.

It further announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 8740) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell to the "Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas" certain lands in Kansas; asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. PLUMB, Mr. TELLER, and Mr. COCKRELL as conferees on its part.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 9268) to punish dealers and pretended dealers in counterfeit money and other fraudulent devices for using the United States mails; asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. REAGAN as conferees on its part.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 9418) to incorporate the Washington and Western Maryland Railroad Company; asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. SPOONER, Mr. FARWELL, and Mr. FAULKNER as conferees on its part.

It further announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 11634) to provide for the allotment of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies, in Indian Territory and for other purposes; asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. DAWES, Mr. MORGAN, and Mr. STOCKBRIDGE as conferees on its part.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 5509) to grant to the Gulf and Chicago Air Line Railway Company the right to construct bridges over navigable water courses; asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE as conferees on its part.

It also announced that the Senate had passed the bill (H. R. 483) for the relief of Elizabeth Jones, widow of John Jones, deceased, and to place the name of said John Jones on the muster-rolls of Company B, Second Regiment, North Carolina Mounted Infantry.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The amendment of Mr. HOLMAN was reported again.

Mr. MCMILLIN. What is the object of this being taken from the funds of the Indians?

Mr. HOLMAN. I would like to have it all taken, but the custom has been to appropriate $7,500 from the funds of the Government and $7,500 from the funds of the Indians.

Mr. MCMILLIN. So it is to be taken from the Indian funds and the general funds of the United States. I see no reason why it should not be taken entirely from the Indian fund.

Mr. PERKINS. The pay of employés ought not to be taken from their funds.

Mr. MCMILLIN. If they are for their good, why not?

Mr. HOLMAN. I think that is all right. They are better than any other Indians we have.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Mr. Chairman, what is the question before the House? I want the section read as proposed to be amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

It is proposed to strike out "to be taken from the funds" and insert "$7,500 of which shall be taken from the funds of said Indians," and the paragraph if amended as proposed will read: "For continuing the work of constructing ditches and reservoirs for the Navajo Indians, including the pay of employés, $15,000, $7,500 of which shall be taken from the funds of said tribe now in the Treasury belonging to said Indians."

Mr. MCMILLIN. My reason for opposing the amendment is that I think these appropriations ought to come from the Indian fund.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope there will be no objection made against this.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows.

For trust-fund interest due Delaware general fund, $8,930. This amount to be paid per capita to the Delaware tribe of Indians, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, being the sum invested by the United States in Florida and North Carolina bonds and held in trust for their benefit by the said Secretary, $140,000; and the Secretary of the Interior is also hereby authorized and directed to sell the Union Pacific Railroad bonds held in trust for the Delawares, and to pay to said Indians per capita the proceeds thereof, together with all uninvested moneys to their credit and on deposit in the United States Treasury: Provided, That the Florida and North Carolina bonds, amounting to $140,000, shall become the property of the United States.

Mr. RANDALL. I make the point of order against that paragraph, that it makes new legislation. This is a proposition to distribute $140,000 among the Delaware Indians, and also to sell certain Union Pacific Railroad bonds which have been invested by the Government as part of the money due to the Indians named. Now, I do not believe altogether in giving the money directly to these Indians. I believe the effect will be that they will spend the money and then they will become dependent upon the United States Treasury.

Mr. PEEL. I think I can satisfy the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RANDALL. The point of order I make is that there is no law authorizing this disposition of the fund.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Arkansas on the point of order.

Mr. PEEL. I do not think the point of order is well taken, because this is a trust fund that belongs to these Indians. It is now deposited in the Treasury of the United States. They have petitioned for this money, and I think under the rules of the House conferring jurisdiction upon the Committee on Indian Affairs in relation to all matters between the Indians and the making of appropriations therefor, the right is given to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to distribute this money among them. That is all it does. I therefore make——

Mr. RANDALL. If the gentleman will allow me, will he tell me what is the amount of Florida and North Carolina bonds?

Mr. PEEL. I was just getting the documents for that purpose. I do not know that I shall be able, without going over them pretty carefully, to find the amount exactly, but there is $140,000——

Mr. RANDALL. I do not know of any law that compels the United States to take those bonds at $140,000.

Mr. PEEL. I think you will find on an examination of the statement made by the Department that the money was invested in these bonds for the benefit of the Indians, and if you pay them the money the bond would come back to the Government. Under Rule XI all matters affecting the relations between the United States and the Indians and the Indian tribes, including appropriations therefor, are referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and I insist that under that rule the committee had the right and power to report this appropriation in this bill.

Mr. RANDALL. Not under that rule. That does not give you any power to legislate. You are changing the law here.

Mr. PEEL. It is only disbursing the money. The law authorizing the investment is an old one.

Mr. RANDALL. This is merely a change of existing law. It would not be here if it was not a change of existing law. If they had the power to do this they would do it without putting this provision on the appropriation bill.

Mr. PEEL. The Secretary of the Interior would not have the power to disburse the money without a law authorizing it.

Mr. RANDALL. And you propose to make a law to let him do it, and not to let him do it as the trust provides, for the trust provides that it shall be held, not distributed.

Mr. PEEL. I ask to have clause 16 of Rule XI read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes, including appropriations therefor: to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, not upon the point of order—reserving that, I would like to have read for the benefit of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] and of the committee the communication received from the Interior Department upon this subject.

The communication was read, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, December 22, 1886.

THE PRESIDENT:

I have the honor to submit herewith copy of a communication of 14th instant from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, inclosing copy of a petition addressed to the Congress of the United States by certain Delaware Indians resident in the Cherokee Nation, praying that the Government cause to be paid to each Delaware Indian the amount due of the principal and interest of the "trust fund" held by virtue of the several treaties with them.

The petitioners state that they are citizens of the Cherokee Nation; have a republican form of government; an elective judiciary and other officers; a school system, and all other appliances of a civilized government; that they are an agricultural and a stock-raising people, subsisting mainly as such, and are on the same equality in these respects as the Delaware Indians who elected to become citizens of the United States under the treaty of July 4, 1866, who have long since received their share of said trust fund.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs reports that it would be a great benefit to the said people and a large saving to the United States Government if the request of the petitioners is complied with; that the whole number of these Indians, as per last pay-roll, aggregates eight hundred and sixteen individuals, and the per capita payment was $59; that their trust funds amount to $874,178.54; that the annual interest thereon amounts to $46,131.75, and that there is in addition to the above principal sum a further sum of $12,633.89 accumulated interest on their school fund now on the books, which results from the fact that the Delaware children are educated at the Cherokee schools under the agreement with the Cherokees in 1867

With a view to obtaining the necessary legislation by Congress for effecting the purpose sought by the Indians, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs has caused to be prepared a draught of an amendment (copy herewith) which he desires may be incorporated in some one of the appropriation bills, and he recommends that the same may be forwarded to Congress for favorable action.

Concurring in the views of the Commissioner, I respectfully recommend that the matter may be laid before Congress for the consideration and action of that body.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. L. MULDROW,
Acting Secretary.

Mr. PERKINS. In addition to that, without asking to have the entire document read, I desire to suggest that this amendment was prepared in the Indian Office, that it has the approval of the Interior Department, and that these Indians are entirely competent to care for themselves. As suggested by the letter of the Secretary, they have a common-school system; they have a local government of their own; they are as civilized as any members of the tribes who have become citizens of the United States. This statement shows that they have $53,000 in Florida bonds, $87,000 in North Carolina bonds, $49,000 in Union Pacific bonds, and $672,000 in United States Government bonds.

Mr. RANDALL. But you do not propose to distribute the United States bonds?

Mr. PERKINS. No. I am showing now what their funds are in the aggregate. We do not propose to distribute the entire bond.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, for the information of the gentleman from Pennsylvania and of the committee generally, I will state that these Delaware Indians, so called, are not Delawares in the proper sense of the word. They are Cherokees now. They are incorporated into the Cherokee Nation, one of the five civilized tribes, which has a regular form of government, and they are entitled to all the interests and privileges of the Cherokees. Therefore, the distribution of this fund will not affect their future in the least. Gentlemen say that they will become a charge upon the Government hereafter. They can not become a charge upon the Government unless the Cherokees become such a charge, because these Indians are a part of the Cherokee Nation. The Government is now paying $46,000 a year interest on this money; the Indians want it turned over to them, and the Government does not want it, and I do not see why it should not be disposed of in this way.

Mr. RANDALL. All that goes to the merits of the question as an independent proposition, but the provision, in my judgment, does not belong here under the rules of the House.

Mr. PEEL. If the gentleman insists upon the point of order, as a matter of course it must be disposed of, but I was in hopes that when he learned the merits of the proposition and also understood the economy that would be accomplished on the part of the Government by this provision, he would not object to it.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not think there is any economy accomplished by it.

Mr. PEEL. Certainly there is. It will save $46,000 a year which the Government is now paying out as interest on this money.

Mr. RANDALL. How will it save any money to the Government?

Mr. PEEL. It will save $46,000 interest that we are paying every year.

Mr. RANDALL. At all events, it does not belong on an appropriation bill. That is clear.

Mr. PEEL. I must say, Mr. Chairman, that I think the Committee on Indian Affairs have the power to report this provision in this bill. I hope, however, that the gentleman from Pennsylvania will withdraw his point. More than a majority of these Indian families have petitioned on this subject. I have a petition in my pocket now in addition to the one which has been set out here. If the Indians want this money and are competent to take care of it, and if the Government does not need it, let us distribute it, and save the $46,000 a year interest that we are now paying. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his point of order.

Mr. RANDALL. I decline to withdraw it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For trust-fund interest due Kaskaskias, Peorias, Weas, and Piankeshaws, $3,347.84.

Mr. WEAVER. I desire to reserve the point of order against the last paragraph until I hear further in regard to it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 56, after line 20, insert the following:

"Provided, That said commission is authorized to propose to the Cherokee Nation or tribe of Indians an agreement providing for the complete cession and relinquishment to the United States of all their right, title, and interest in and to the lands known as the 'Cherokee Outlet,' and the purchase of the same by the United States on the same terms as were contained in the agreement which was entered into with the Creek Nation and ratified by act of Congress at this session; and if such agreement is made and entered into by the parties respectively and ratified by the national council of said Cherokee Nation, the lands embraced in said cession shall become a part of the public domain and be opened to settlement under the homestead laws of the United States in the same manner and under the same conditions as provided in this act with reference to the lands recently ceded to the United States by the Creek and Seminole Nations or tribes of Indians; and the President of the United States is authorized to issue a proclamation, after the ratification of said agreement, fixing the time when settlers may enter upon the lands embraced in said outlet."

Mr. BUCHANAN. Has a point of order been reserved against the paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. A point of order was reserved against the paragraph by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER].

Mr. BUCHANAN. I suppose a point of order would also lie against the amendment. I make the point of order distinctly against the amendment until I know more about it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will explain the proposition to my friend from New Jersey. This proviso simply authorizes the commission that may be appointed under and by virtue of this act to enter into and conclude an agreement with the Cherokee Nation for the complete relinquishment of all their right, title, and interest in the Cherokee Outlet to the United States upon such terms and conditions as are provided in the treaty recently ratified by and between the United States and the Creek Nation for the cession of their lands; and if such agreement is made by the parties, respectively, then this outlet is to become part of the public domain in the same manner as has been provided in regard to the Creek lands; that is, the land shall be opened upon the same conditions precisely. Of course, unless the agreement is entered into, this provision amounts to nothing at all. It simply offers to the Cherokees the same terms that we have offered to and obtained from the Creeks in regard to their lands which lie side by side with those now under consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to know whether——

Mr. McADOO. I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to pass upon the question of order.

Mr. RYAN. I do not think anybody has made a point of order; the point was simply reserved.

Mr. WEAVER. I made no point of order; I simply reserved it. I now withdraw it.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I renew the point of order as to these words in the seventh and eighth lines, on page 55:

Not more than two of whom shall belong to the same political party.

I think that if the President of the United States can not be trusted to appoint proper commissioners the whole provision had better go out.

Mr. WARNER. I suggest to my friend from New Jersey that he reserve the right to make the point of order, and pending that, move to strike out those words.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I do not care which way it is done. In accordance with the suggestion of the gentleman I will reserve the point of order and will move to strike out those words.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the words referred to by the gentleman from New Jersey will be stricken from the paragraph

Mr. PEEL. I do not understand what is the proposition.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I desire to strike out the words "not more than two of whom shall belong to the same political party." I think that either the outgoing President or the incoming President should be trusted in a matter of this kind.

Mr. PEEL. I can not consent to the amendment striking out that clause. That has been the rule in regard to nearly all these commissions.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Then I make a point of order against those words.

Mr. PERKINS. I trust my friend from New Jersey will permit me to suggest that in several bills in which we have provided for commissions we have inserted a clause of this kind providing that no more than a given number should be from the same political party. The object is to distribute these matters fairly between the two great political organizations.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands the gentleman from New Jersey to withdraw the point of order against the paragraph and to move to strike out these words.

Mr. BUCHANAN. No, sir; I said that I would renew the point of order made by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER], but only as to these words. The whole paragraph is subject to a point of order, but I only raise the point in regard to these words.

Mr. PEEL. Well, if the gentleman insists on it, let those words go out.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the words indicated will be stricken out.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I object to those words going out by consent. I would like the Chair to rule upon the point. If the Chair holds that they must go out on a point of order, all right.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well; then the Chair will be compelled to sustain the point of order upon these words; but there is a question whether it would not affect the balance of the paragraph.

Mr. RYAN. It would, if the point were made against the rest of the paragraph; but it is not.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well; the Chair sustains the point of order made by the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. SPRINGER. Now, I ask for a vote on my amendment.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I suggest to the gentleman in charge of this bill that the words "to the United States," in line 13, page 55, ought to be transposed so as to come in after the word "relinquishment," in line 11. The clause will then read "full and complete cession and relinquishment to the United States." In this way we shall avoid ambiguity.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the verbal amendment suggested by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON] will be agreed to. The Chair hears no objection, and it is ordered accordingly.

The question recurred on Mr. SPRINGER'S amendment; which was agreed to.

Mr. McADOO. I move to amend by the following proviso, to come in after the amendment just adopted:

Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended in buying refreshments for Indians attending meetings with commissioners or in anywise attending or presenting gifts to such Indians or their representatives.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. I move to strike out the last word, to reply briefly to the gentleman from Georgia, and the reference made to my connection with the Ohio senate as its presiding officer on yesterday.

I desire to call attention, Mr. Chairman, to that contest in Ohio, and to say that contest arose because of frauds perpetrated in the county of Hamilton. The frauds consisted in stealing the ballot-boxes in one precinct and carrying them into a saloon, where they were opened and stuffed with Democratic votes.

In another precinct three or four hundred names were added to the poll-list, and these names were of persons who had no residence or place in that district, and who could not be found by the Democratic officers from the senate of the State of Ohio.

Not only that, but in another precinct one of the Democratic judges of election, having placed the ballot-box nearly 30 feet away from the door, deliberately took the votes passed to him from the window, putting the ballot placed in his hands to be deposited in the box into his pocket and from another pocket taking out and putting a Democratic ballot into the box. So openly was this done and so clearly was this seen that a leading Democrat of Cincinnati said to him, "You infernal scoundrel, you have even stolen my ballot."

There was suspicion that there was likely to be Democratic scratching at the ballot-box, and therefore these men were not willing to trust even the Democrats themselves.

That question came up for contest in the senate of the State of Ohio as to the four seats from Cincinnati, and those claiming these four seats having been elected at the same time and by the same tickets, or ballots, and standing together, the presiding officer of that assembly (and I had the honor to be the presiding officer) declared in that contest these gentlemen could not vote in their own case. And in that decision I was sustained by every precedent of this House, by every parliamentarian in the country, by the distinguished Judge Wilson, author of Wilson's Parliamentary Law, and by every other parliamentarian of any note. I, as the presiding officer, decided these men could not vote. Then the Democrats left the chamber of the senate in the State of Ohio and set up a rump senate of their own. After that, by agreement, the cases were heard, testimony taken, and then they came back to the senate, but rather than to submit to a final hearing twenty Democratic members left that body and fled to Kentucky and Tennessee. The seventeen remaining members, no question having been made as to a quorum being present, seated the four contestants, and proceeded with the business of the house.

The record was made by Hon. Charles L. Vallandigham, clerk of the house, a Democrat himself, a gentleman of honor and reputation, the son of Clement L. Vallandigham, formerly a member of this House, and on that record the matter was carried to the supreme court in my State and the supreme court sustained that body and the action of its presiding officer.

Not only was it sustained by the supreme court but sustained by every honest Democrat in the State of Ohio, including such gentlemen as Hon. George L. Converse, of Columbus, and the honorable gentleman who afterwards became the candidate for the Vice-Presidency on the national Democratic ticket, Hon. Allen G. Thurman.

And not only that, Mr. Chairman, but in the trial of the cases, the wing, as it were, of this great conspiracy, the tally-sheet fraud, at Columbus, Hon. Allen G. Thurman, who was chosen to represent the prosecution, in his speech to the jury on that occasion declared that the firmness of the presiding officer of the senate at that time had saved the State from disgrace, and he commended my course in that body. [Applause.]

The forgers, ballot-box stuffers, and ballot-box plunderers of Hamilton County were afterward tried for their crimes and convicted and sent to the penitentiary, where they belonged, and since that time we have had fair and honest elections in that city of Cincinnati, and I commend this course of proceedings to my Southern Democratic friends.

That is all I desire to say.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the pro forma amendment.

I beg the indulgence of the committee for a few moments, and will take the privilege of presenting my views upon a pending question, in order that the House may know how very "fair and impartial" our political opponents can make themselves when it is our ox that is being gored. I desire to be brief. I send first to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read an article from the San Francisco Chronicle of date March 25, 1887, a Republican newspaper, which has reference to the methods by which one of the sitting members upon this floor and upon the other side of the House obtained his seat, and has been allowed and is now allowed to keep it.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION.

Whatever may be the result of the contest between Sullivan and Felton, enough has already appeared to make it perfectly manifest that Felton's election was assured by the use of the most improper and vicious methods. It is proved beyond a doubt that the sugar ring worked earnestly and diligently for him and spent their money in ways which they would doubtless call practical politics, but which are more properly classified by the simple name of bribery.

It is conceded that a certain amount of money may be used at or about election time in a perfectly legitimate manner. There are certain recognized campaign expenses common to every election and every party. These are perfectly well understood and accepted by everybody. But the people have yet to learn that paying men money to vote in one way or not to vote in another, dragooning employés into voting for a particular candidate by threats of losing their places, or discharging men because they have voted the wrong ticket are, all or any of them, allowable, or that they come within the definition of clean or decent politics.

The question of a fair and honest expression of public opinion is of vastly greater importance than that any one man, no matter what his politics, should go to Congress. On the purity and fairness of elections rests the whole fabric of popular government. Take that away, and the structure of government by the people crumbles to ruins. If, on the other hand, a particular man is defeated for Congress, the world moves on just the same, the affairs of the nation do not suffer any violent shock, nor is the welfare of the country seriously impaired.

Such an election as is now being investigated is a shame and a disgrace to this city and this State. The shamelessness of Felton's political supporters would overpass belief were it not that it is so well known that they never stick at anything to gain their purposes. If they make up their minds to a certain thing it is going to be done, if it can be accomplished by human means and if the weakness of human nature can be successfully assailed by promises or threats. Bribery and corruption are their usual weapons, threats and intimidation the reserve stock of their armory. In this last case they employed all their force and used all their ammunition, and they made every shot tell. At any rate, Felton received his certificate of election, and this was all his partisans and henchmen could accomplish. Whether he will retain it is another thing.

Whenever there is an election secured by such means as were employed to elect Felton it is to be hoped that it will be contested. In no other way can this infamous system be broken up except by showing its utter uselessness to defeat the will of the people, and every man, no matter what may be his politics, who secures his election by such means as the sugar ring used to elect Felton should be unseated and new elections held until they can be honestly conducted.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will regard the pro forma amendment as withdrawn, if there be no objection; and if the gentleman desires to proceed he can renew it.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. I renew the pro forma amendment.

The article, Mr. Chairman, which has just been read appeared in the leading Republican newspaper of San Francisco on the 25th day of March, 1887. The contestant had at that time been taking evidence for about thirty days in this contest. That paper, the Chronicle, is the leading Republican newspaper of the State of California, and is published in a city wherein two-thirds of the population of the Fifth Congressional district of that State reside. A few days later, and in the same paper, this article appeared, which I now send to the desk to have read. It bears date April 5, 1887.

The Clerk read as follows:

TOO SOLID FOR FELTON.

An examination of the ballots cast at the Almaden mine shows that over 150 of the tickets were scratched for Felton for Congress, and that all the changes had been made by three persons. This unanimity of sentiment must be very gratifying to the candidate who received his certificate of election on the strength of it, but it is very questionable whether the House of Representatives will smile as much over it as did Mr. Felton and his friends.

There is but one name for the method by which this election was carried, and that is corruption. No sane man believes that 150 votes would be polled at one precinct, all scratched for one man and the scratching all done by three persons, unless some improper influence had been used to bring about such a result. Voters who are entirely free and untrammeled do not, as a rule, employ three persons to scratch 150 ballots for them at one precinct. Either the voters were too ignorant to know what was done to their tickets, or they were compelled to vote them as they were prepared for them; and it is easy to imagine that either will be enough to induce a Democratic House of Representatives to throw out the whole precinct.

Felton's supporters claim to be able to prove that corruption and bribery were used for his opponent. That may be, but of his supporters. A second bribery does not make the first one right, nor can any proof do away with the evidence afforded by the inspection of the Almaden ballots. It in no way palliates or excuses the guilt. Such disclosures are simply shameful.

They go to show that nothing is allowed to stand in the way of partisan success, and that in practical politics there is only one thing to be considered, the election of the candidate. That men are bought, threatened, or driven into voting as they otherwise would not is considered a mere nothing, provided there are enough of such votes to elect. That the people are defrauded of their real choice is deemed rather a good joke than otherwise, and the swindled candidate is wished better luck next time.

If the Government of this country is to be carried on by popular suffrage such a course of conduct as has been developed in this Congressional election can not be in any way condoned or excused. The unpardonable sin against the people—that of defrauding them of their political rights—has been committed and nothing can mitigate the guilt of the offenders. Such an election as this is more dangerous to the liberties of the nation than armed rebellion would be, for it saps the very foundation of popular government and threatens the destruction of the whole fabric.

Whenever the day shall come that a state of things such as has been brought to light in this contest can go unchallenged and unpunished government by the people is at an end. We shall have substituted money for majorities, and coercion and corruption for a free and fair ballot.

During the reading of the foregoing,

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, said: I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I make the point of order against this article and the preceding one. I protest against this Indian appropriation bill being made further a mud-scow, and I move that the honorable gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] be requested to come to the rescue.

The CHAIRMAN. In view of the decision of the Chair on yesterday when a similar question was presented——

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was about to overrule the point of order.

The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. ROWELL. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MCKENNA. Will the gentleman from Illinois yield to me?

Mr. ROWELL. In a moment.

I shall not depart from my usual practice and take up an election case for discussion on an appropriation bill; and I only rise now, sir, to call the attention of this committee to the fact that this election contest has been based from beginning to end upon just such testimony as has been presented by the gentleman from Indiana—hearsay, rumor, newspaper talk, and such testimony—and that the newspaper which has been brought into this contest here to-day and called a Republican newspaper is a newspaper that has from the beginning been hostile to the Republican member from that district in California; that the whole report in this case from turret to foundation-stone is based on testimony having no more weight in any court than newspaper articles of that character; and I say, sir, as far as Almaden is concerned, that every voter of the Almaden mine except eight, they dead or moved away, came into the case—the testimony is in the record—and impeached that statement, impeaching the statement of your witnesses. So that you were compelled to abandon Almaden in committee and substantially in your report. [Applause on the Republican side.]

I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BLAND. Then why do you not take up the case?

Mr. ROWELL. I always seek a continuance, when I know the jury is packed against me, if I can. [Renewed applause.]

Mr. MCKENNA. Mr. Chairman, it is well known to the House that I have taken a decided and prominent interest in the contest between Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Felton, but I took that interest when the case was presented. I have never yet intruded myself on the House when my remarks would be irrelevant, and I do not now know whether I shall be justified in following the bad example of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. O'NEALL] who, in his eagerness and impartiality, took the floor to have read newspaper articles reflecting on the sitting member, who is in every respect the gentleman's peer.

Sir, it has been from considerations other than those of fear of the result of the contest as far as the result ought to be dependent on the evidence which caused me to take the stand I have taken. Why, sir, look at the record in the case [holding up two large volumes]—nineteen hundred pages of testimony pushed to our consideration in the last days of a weary Congress, testimony which must necessarily be referred to in order that a calm, judicious, and fair judgment should be formed. And, sir, knowing full well such reference can not be made, the gentleman from Indiana has considered it safe to have newspaper articles read from the desk. Knowing such reference could not be made, he has considered it safe and sufficient to make the report which he has made in the case.

The record, sir, deters, yes, repels not only what the gentleman in his report is pleased to term the "average member" of Congress from its perusal, but repels the most resolute and conscientious and painstaking member from even looking at it. It has so efficiently this effect that I am almost forced to believe that it was purposely intended to have this effect. And yet there is no testimony in it which in a fair tribunal would raise a suspicion against the sitting member.

There is direct testimony in it against the contestant, and for the entertainment of the gentleman from Indiana, and by way of illustration of the case, I send to the Clerk's desk to be read from the Record, page 1121, the testimony of John F. Reed, called on behalf of the contestee. His testimony applies to one of the precincts in the city of San José:

The Clerk read as follows:

Q. Do you know anything in relation to the voting of a number of men in the Fourth ward in this city?
A. In what way?
Q. Were you participating in the voting of a number of men yourself?
A. Yes, sir; I was.
Q. On whose behalf?
A. The Democratic party.
Q. That is a straight Democratic ticket?
A. Yes, sir; from top to bottom.
Q. Including the name of Mr. Sullivan?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you how many you participated in voting?
A. I could not state.
Q. About how many? I do not ask the names. About what number of voters did you succeed in assisting in voting?
A. Seventy or eighty.
Q. At least seventy, and probably not more than eighty?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. They voted the Democratic ticket, did they?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you if any one else assisted you in voting these various parties?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I believe Mr. Fisher?
A. Mr. Fisher and Mr. Hommerich.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MCKENNA. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. PEEL. I desire to appeal to both sides of the House. I think it is very necessary that we should pass this bill, and in order to do so I make this request: That general debate on all amendments that may be offered shall be closed in twenty minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time to be equally divided?

Mr. BLAND. I want to extend the time to one hour. The other side have heretofore refused to take up this case; and this is the only opportunity we may have to get it before the House. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Missouri object?

Mr. BLAND. I ask that one hour be given. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from California will submit another pro forma amendment the Chair will recognize him.

Mr. BLAND. I object to proceeding——

Mr. MCKENNA. I move to strike out the last word, and ask the Clerk to proceed with the reading.

The Clerk read as follows:

Q. They are both residents of the Fourth ward?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And these men voted in the Fourth ward at the last election, and voted the straight Democratic ticket?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How do you know they voted the straight Democratic ticket?
A. Because I would give them the tickets and go with them to the polls.
Q. And see that they put them in?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know whether or not they received any consideration for it?
A. I believe they did.
Q. Upon what do you base your belief?
A. Mr. Hommerich and Mr. Fisher would settle with them.
Q. Would you see them settle?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Would they pay them before voting or after?
A. After voting.
Q. How would they know that they had voted?
A. They took my word for it.
Q. That is, as I understand it, after these parties were voted you would take them to these men?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Represent to them that they had voted?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they would pay them for it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. About what was the average price that they got?
A. Different prices; $3 the utmost.
Q. What was the lowest?
A. A dollar.
Q. That, I suppose, ranged according to the time of day or according to the inclination of the parties?
A. In the forenoon they were cheaper than in the afternoon.

[Laughter.]

Mr. MCKENNA. Now, sir, that is not hearsay testimony; it is direct testimony, and direct to the effect that in behalf of the contestant in this case, 80 votes were purchased at a rate from $1 to $3. The report in this case is illustrated by this testimony. In connection with it I will read from the report made by the gentleman from Indiana. On page 1 of the report and on page 2 this language is employed:

No charges of fraud or other wrong or violation of law or of the rights of the elector being made by contestee against contestant, the committee might well have passed over the evidence without looking for anything upon which averments might have been based. But, in view of the magnitude of the cause and of the importance of dealing out equal and exact justice, the committee have industriously and in a painstaking manner examined to ascertain whether any evidence existed upon which such allegations—

That is, against the contestant for bribery—could have been made, and none is found.

[Laughter.]

He proceeds:

In fact, nothing is found to warrant a suspicion of fraud against Sullivan or the vote by him received.

Oh, how industrious the gentleman from Indiana was; how painstaking! [Laughter.] Such is some of the record, Mr. Chairman; and in the whole of it, in the whole accumulation which has been piled up by the contestant, there is nothing which justifies accusation against Mr. Felton. But, as I have said, none will resort to the record to find out whether the report of the gentleman is true or untrue, founded or unfounded; hence my action.

Mr. Chairman, the whole thing, certainly the present proceeding, is distasteful to me. I am in no pleasant position from my standpoint, because, as I have said, it is not my practice or my disposition to intrude myself where my remarks or myself will be irrelevant. Besides, Mr. Chairman, I can not approach the consideration of any election case but with distaste amounting almost to nausea. In pretension, election cases are non-partisan; in fact, they are oftener the most partisan of questions.

With solemnest bombast we assert the coldest neutrality, and while our words are yet echoing in the air we execute the hottest partiality, and we are not ashamed. Indeed, we swell and glow with a sensation as new, as delightful of having subdued the eagerness of our legislative function to the sedateness of justice. There may be some merit, sir, in acquiescing without comment in the hypocrisy which declares justice in our words while we execute injustice in our deeds; but there are some cases so gross that they should not be allowed to hide under a miserable mockery of fairness, and the case of Sullivan against Felton is one of them; and if I can rejoice at all at this opportunity to address the House, it is because it is an opportunity to show this, because it is an opportunity to show in a few words what the record in the case is and what the case is. Thanking the House for its attention and apologizing even for having been forced to demand and use its attention, I take my seat. [Applause.]

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, we are told by the honorable gentleman from Illinois that this is hearsay testimony and that the Chronicle opposed Mr. Felton. It may be and is hearsay testimony. I want to tell him that the proprietor of that paper is Hon. Michael DeYoung, who was a delegate to the Chicago convention that nominated Benjamin Harrison for the Presidency, and I believe is or in the late campaign was a member of the Republican national committee.

Mr. SPRINGER. And he is a candidate now for a Cabinet position.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. And, as my friend, Mr. SPRINGER, says, is now urged by the Republican press of this country for a place in the Cabinet of the incoming President. The paper may have opposed Mr. Felton. I am not advised as to that, but the editor was so disgusted at the methods by which Mr. Felton obtained the certificate of election as to boil over with indignation. When the gentleman says that the only evidence in this case is hearsay, except the evidence of one James Reed, whose testimony is against Sullivan, I want to tell him that he has not read the evidence.

If he will read the evidence he will find that all the testimony of Mr. Reed, to the extent that it is entitled to any credit, is in relation to his work for one Singletary, who was running for clerk in the county of Santa Clara and who was elected by two or three hundred majority, while Mr. Sullivan and the balance of the Democratic ticket were beaten by that many. Mr. Reed expressly exculpates Mr. Sullivan from all participation in or knowledge of the matters about which he testifies.

Let me say further, if that side of the House wants to hear something about an election case where every species of fraud was perpetrated to secure the sitting member his election certificate, and which fraud is proven by an abundance of direct and uncontradicted testimony, let them take up this election case and let the light of that evidence shine in upon it. Do not, gentlemen, do not talk about the want of evidence. Let the case be discussed and go to the country, and let the country have an opportunity to judge. Gentlemen upon that side work themselves up into a white heat and go into cat-nip pass-overs when a colored man's rights are at stake or imagined to be at stake.

Is not an Irishman about as good as a "nigger?" I know that a good many of our Republican brethren do and always have held, the colored "gentleman" to be entitled to much higher consideration than an Irishman, but certainly upon that side of the House there ought to be a few—a very few at least—who will not deny even to an Irishman the right to be heard and to have his case passed upon.

The gentleman from Ohio, who entertained us yesterday evening and who has again this morning given us a further exhibition, will surely come to the front and give us the benefit of his mighty influence. After his demonstration there is no mistaking the fact that in his own estimation at least he is the very embodiment of honest impulses and of fair dealing.

In the State of California the law provides that in the city of San Francisco the mayor, the auditor, the city and county attorney, the tax-collector, and the city and county surveyor shall constitute a board of election commissioners for the county and city of San Francisco; that this board shall appoint the precinct election boards. These latter boards shall be composed of persons of different politics. In 1886 the mayor and auditor were Democrats, the others, then members of that election board, were Republicans.

Mr. Strother, who was the auditor, testified that the three gentlemen referred to brought in a complete set of names to constitute the inspectors and judges of the eighty-odd precincts in that part of said county and city in the Fifth Congressional district, and without giving himself or the mayor any say about the matter whatever moved the appointment of the persons by them selected, and that when the mayor refused to put the motion the mover, John Love, city and county attorney and one of the commissioners, put the motion, and the other two Republicans voted with him. And these persons thus selected were declared the persons who should hold the elections. Mr. Strother testifies further that a number of the parties selected were of a disreputable character.

The testimony of Mr. Strother is uncontradicted; on the contrary, it is tacitly admitted by Mr. Love, who afterward became one of Mr. Felton's attorneys in the case. To be sure, this scheme did not avail anything, because the Democrats appealed to the courts for a writ of mandate, to which these men afterward submitted. I refer to this simply to show the spirit of unfairness rife among the party friends of Mr. Felton. While this scheme did not work, when foiled in that effort, the Republican managers of that election began to hunt up the Democratic committeemen for the different precincts, to whom had been confided the selection of the Democratic minority on these precinct boards, and whenever a committeeman could be influenced to select a man wanting in integrity, it was done. In the second precinct, the forty-sixth assembly district, where one James Hughes was the Democratic committeeman, he was induced to import and board at his home a couple of pretended Democrats to be placed on the election board. In counting out the ballots in this precinct when Sullivan's name was reached on a Democratic ticket the name of Charles N. Felton was read instead.

Mr. ROWELL. I challenge the statement and assert that there is not any such testimony except hearsay from the first to the last page.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. Let us take up this case.

Mr. ROWELL. I challenge the record.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. I will be more than glad to show you the evidence.

Mr. ROWELL. You can not do it.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. In this precinct the fraud is proven by overwhelming evidence, and in different ways, and by the most direct testimony. O'Shea, who was a Republican watcher, testified that when Sullivan's name was on a ticket it was deliberately read off "Charles N. Felton." His (O'Shea's) testimony is corroborated by the evidence of one Garrigan and by a recount of the tickets and by numerous circumstances that I would be glad to point out from the record had I the time to do so.

When the recount took place Sullivan had 94 instead of 2 majority. This, be it remembered, was a precinct that usually gave about two Democratic to one Republican vote. In 1884, between the same candidates, Sullivan and Felton, Sullivan had about two votes to Felton's one. In 1886 Sullivan's returned vote was 130 while Felton's was 128. The recount gave Sullivan 167 and Felton 73. To satisfy myself about this precinct I sent and procured a certified copy of the returns at the late election, which I now have at my boarding place. From this certified return at the late election the Harrison electors had 79 votes while the Cleveland electors had 201, a majority of 122.

No unbiased mind can read all the evidence in relation to this precinct, not hearsay evidence, but direct and uncontradicted testimony, and come to any other conclusion than that James Hughes was hired to get on that election board men who would and did deliberately count to Sullivan a much less number of votes than he received, and to Felton a much larger number than he received.

In the second precinct of the forty-eighth assembly district the evidence showed that at least two members of this board were bribed and that the returns were crooked. Just what effect the bribery had on the returns and the vote of the precinct is not disclosed, but that the evidence was and is such as to show such uncertainties and such a want of integrity in the precinct vote as to demand its being thrown out there is but little room to doubt. Had I the time I would be glad to point out the various items of evidence, direct evidence, showing want of integrity in this precinct. The precinct gave Felton 55 majority.

But, sir, it is hardly necessary now to enumerate. Let this case be taken up and we will give that side of this House an opportunity to contemplate the picture. In the language of the San Francisco Chronicle—

> The shamelessness of Felton's political supporters would overpass belief were it not that it is so well known that they never stick at anything to gain their purposes. If they make up their minds to a certain thing it is going to be done if it can be accomplished by human means, and if the weakness of human nature can be successfully assailed by promises or threats.

The political supporters referred to are the sugar kings, Spreckles Bros. These men had headquarters at the Baldwin Hotel, where they had a secretary, one John W. Burdett, employed. Mr. Burdett testified that he had the extreme honor of being secretary to Felton's committee. From these headquarters a circular was sent out inviting voters to these headquarters. Democrats and Republicans were alike invited. So says Burdett. Invited for what? "To confer with the executive committee at their rooms, Nos. 26 and 28, Baldwin Hotel." So says this circular.

The effect of this circular, so Burdett says, was to bring a great many individuals to these headquarters. Among the persons thus attracted were between 500 and 1,000 strikers. "Where the carcass is there will the buzzards go." It is not necessary to follow this further. Let me refer gentlemen to the evidence of such men as William McLaughlin, Frank Cunningham, and others who visited those headquarters. Sirs, the testimony shows that from these headquarters there was, on the day of election, sent $50 cash to each of the eighty-odd precincts in that part of the city—the south half in the Fifth Congressional district. Besides this, the evidence abundantly shows that other large sums of money were used in these same precincts. In short, it is not extravagant to assert that in the city of San Francisco there was a perfect carnival of corruption and corrupt methods.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri rise?

Mr. BLAND. I desire to offer an amendment to this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman will wait until the Clerk can read the pending paragraph, then if the amendment is in order the Chair will recognize it.

Mr. BLAND. I supposed that the paragraph had been read.

The CHAIRMAN. It had not; and all amendments to the previous paragraph had been exhausted and all pro forma amendments withdrawn.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the paragraph.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman wish to offer an amendment to the paragraph now being read, or to the paragraph last read?

Mr. MORRILL. To the paragraph last read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will send it up.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 20, page 56, add:

"The President of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to appoint three commissioners for the purpose of entering into negotiations and agreements with the Prairie band of Pottawatomies and the Kickapoo Indians in Kansas for the sale of a portion of their reservation and the allotment of the remainder, such agreement, when made, to be by them submitted to the first session of the Fifty-first Congress; and to carry out the provisions of this act the sum of $5,000, or so much as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby appropriated, to be immediately available."

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say in support of this amendment that these reservations are situated in the most thickly settled portion of Eastern Kansas. They lie but a few miles apart. The Pottawatomie reserve is about 10 miles square, containing some 70,000 acres, and the Kickapoo reserve is 5 miles by 6, containing nearly 20,000 acres. The Indians have improved but a small portion of these lands. The surrounding lands are nearly all improved and in a high state of cultivation, occupied and owned by as intelligent, enterprising, industrious, and moral a people as ever plowed a furrow or harvested a crop. These reservations are at present a standing annoyance and embarrassment to the people of the counties in which they are located.

Being entirely beyond the control or jurisdiction of the local authorities, there is no power vested in them to locate and maintain roads or build bridges to afford the residents of the surrounding country safe and convenient means of communicating with each other. Their property being exempt from taxation, they stand as a barrier to the improvement of the counties and make the burden of taxation much heavier on the people. Prairie fires are frequently started on the reservations, sweeping over a large extent of country and destroying the fences and grain-stacks of the neighboring farmers, who are powerless to detect and punish the guilty parties. Thousands of dollars have been paid out within the past few years as costs in criminal cases arising upon these lands.

There are comparatively a small number of either tribe now residing upon these reservations, the larger part having years ago moved to the Indian Territory. The few who still remain would doubtless have gone at the same time had it not been for the influence of a few half-breeds, who, exempt from taxation and all the burdens of civil government, grow wealthy by systematically bleeding the blanket Indians of their annuities. I believe if this matter was honestly and fairly presented to the Indians that a large majority would prefer to sell their lands and join the other members of the tribe farther south. Some doubtless would choose to take allotments and remain where they are, but this could be easily arranged. The present condition of affairs is simply unendurable to those who have made homes on the surrounding lands, and it is the duty of the Government to afford ample and immediate relief. I trust there will be no opposition to this amendment.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana, obtained the floor.

Mr. PERKINS. I would like to ask——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has already recognized the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. O'NEALL], who, the Chair presumes, rises to oppose the amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. I wish merely to ascertain where my colleague proposes that this amendment be inserted.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. PERKINS. My colleague, as I understand, has offered this amendment to come in at the end of line 20. An amendment has already been inserted there. For that reason he should offer his amendment to follow the amendment already incorporated in the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. This amendment follows the two provisos already put upon the bill, one by the amendment offered by myself and the other by the amendment of the gentleman from New Jersey.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk understands that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MORRILL] is to come in after the amendments already agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER. I suggest to the gentleman from Kansas that instead of providing in the amendment for the appointment of a new commission he use the words "said commission," so as to allow the commission already provided for to take jurisdiction of this matter.

Mr. MORRILL. I think the suggestion is a good one. I modify my amendment in accordance with it.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I propose now to simply notify the other side that we shall insist upon calling up this case and give gentlemen who challenge the record an opportunity to do so.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The committee informally rose, and Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 565) for the relief of Mary A. Howse and Lulu H. Howse;

A bill (H. R. 766) for the relief of H. L. Newman;

A bill (H. R. 285) for the relief of the legal representatives of H. Corths;

A bill (H. R. 4581) for the relief of Thomas Matthews and others;

A bill (H. R. 10652) to encourage the enlistment of boys as apprentices in the United States Navy;

A bill (H. R. 10481) for the relief of Rev. William Gregston;

A bill (H. R. 10082) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of the widow and orphan children of Col. William R. McKee, late of Lexington, Ky.;"

A bill (H. R. 9464) for the relief of Hudson G. Lamkin;

A bill (H. R. 341) for the relief of John Farley;

A bill (H. R. 5888) for the relief of William H. Boyd;

A bill (H. R. 7801) for the relief of William F. C. Nindemann, formerly a seaman in the Navy;

A bill (H. R. 5336) for the relief of George B. Hansell;

A bill (H. R. 7924) for the relief of A. J. McCreary, administrator of the estate of J. M. Hiatt, deceased, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of S. Dillinger & Sons;

A bill (H. R. 11658) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 948) for the relief of William H. Tabbarrah;

A bill (H. R. 4489) for the relief of J. M. Hogan;

A bill (H. R. 329) for the relief of Chambers & Brown;

A bill (H. R. 6394) for the relief of Hayem & Taylor;

A bill (H. R. 8053) to extend the time for the redemption of school farms in Beaufort County, South Carolina;

A bill (H. R. 8272) to provide for the payment of F. H. Bates as military instructor at Washington High School, District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 7864) to reappropriate to pay for alley condemned in square numbered 493;

A bill (H. R. 2688) for the relief of Alfred Breuer; and

A bill (H. R. 5690) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell block of land 108 in the city of Houston, Tex.

Also the following Senate bills:

A bill (S. 751) for the relief of the estate of J. J. Pulliam, deceased;

A bill (S. 3778) to establish the Lincoln land district in the Territory of New Mexico; and

A bill (S. 1488) granting an increase of pension to Louisa V. de Kilpatrick, widow of Maj. Gen. Judson Kilpatrick, United States Volunteers.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. PEEL. I ask a vote on the pending amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment submitted by the gentleman from Kansas.

The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

The President of the United States is hereby authorized and empowered to appoint three commissioners for the purpose of entering into negotiations and agreements with the Sioux Indians occupying the Great Sioux Indian reservation in Dakota for a full and complete cession and relinquishment to the United States of a portion of their reservation, and to divide the remainder into separate reservations, and for such other purpose as they may find necessary touching said Indians and said reservation; and such agreements, when made, to be by them submitted to the first session Fifty-first Congress for ratification; and to carry out the provisions of this act and the duties of said commission the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be found necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby appropriated, this amount to be immediately available.

Mr. RYAN. I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

Mr. RANDALL. Before that I would like to have some salary fixed for these commissioners.

Mr. PERKINS. I will offer an amendment for that purpose later.

Mr. RYAN. I desire to add an amendment as an additional section, to come in at the end of section 2, on page 57.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the President may at such time as he may deem it necessary direct land offices to be located upon the lands opened to settlement by this act, not to exceed two in number, and may nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate appoint the usual officers to conduct the business of said land offices.

Mr. RYAN. In support of the amendment I wish to state that under the provisions of this bill certain lands are to be opened to settlement by proclamation of the President, but there is no provision made as to how a settler can make his entry on the land. I therefore offer the amendment providing that the President may establish these land offices not exceeding two in number.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is right.

Mr. PERKINS. There ought not to be any objection to that.

Mr. HOOKER. I understand, Mr. Chairman, that the provisions of the bill—and if I am correct in my understanding the amendment proposed comes in after line 11, on page 57——

Mr. RYAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOOKER. It will be observed by the provisions of the bill that the President is authorized to appoint three commissioners for a specific purpose, and whatever these commissioners may do has to be submitted to Congress before it is operative. In other words, the Fifty-first Congress must ratify their action. It provides: "And to carry out the provisions of this act and the duties of said commission the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be found necessary," is appropriated. I do not think, therefore, that there ought to be an amendment put on the bill establishing land offices here until there has been action on the report of that commission.

Mr. PERKINS. But that provision relates to the Seminole and Creek lands.

Mr. RYAN. The gentleman from Mississippi will perceive that under the provisions of the bill the Creek lands that we purchased the other day by act of Congress and through negotiations, and the Seminole lands which are here provided for, are to be taken for settlement under the proclamation of the President issued for that purpose. Now it would be entirely idle for the President to issue a proclamation to open the lands to settlement if there was no land office where a settler could go and make his entry, and my amendment simply provides that the President may establish not exceeding two land offices for that purpose.

Mr. HOOKER. And does not apply to the Sioux lands?

Mr. RYAN. No.

Mr. PERKINS. They are not open yet, and of course the report of the commission would have to come before Congress before they can be opened.

Mr. PETERS. That is an entirely different provision.

The amendment of Mr. RYAN was adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. PERKINS. Before proceeding with the bill I desire to offer an amendment to section 2, fixing the compensation of the commissioners or limiting it to $10 a day, exclusive of traveling expenses, and I will prepare that amendment and ask consent to return to this section afterwards.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the paragraph will be passed over for the present to allow the gentleman from Kansas to prepare the amendment.

There was no objection.

Mr. STEELE. I ask consent of the chairman of the committee to recur to page 51, line 16.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose?

Mr. STEELE. I desire to insert the word "not" before the word "included." I was absent on a conference committee when that section was under consideration.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Chairman, I am inclined to object. That matter was discussed before the committee.

Mr. STEELE. I hope the gentleman will not object to it.

Mr. PEEL. I will have to object.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I offer the following amendment to the last section:

On page 60, after line 24, after the words "from time to time," strike out to the end of the section and insert: "Visit and inspect the schools in which Indians are taught in whole or in part from appropriations from the United States Treasury, and report to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs what in his judgment are the defects, if any, in any of them in system, in administration, and in means for the most effective advancement of the pupils therein towards civilization and self-support, and what changes are needed to remedy such defects as may exist. The superintendent shall nominate to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for employment and recommend to him for dismissal superintendents, teachers, and such other persons as are permanently employed in carrying on Indian schools under the management of the Government; and the Commissioner shall, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, employ or reject such nominees and dismiss or reappoint such superintendents, teachers, and other school employés. The superintendent shall also have authority to make, with the approval of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, such rules and regulations for the conduct of the schools as in his judgment their good may require. Such superintendent shall spend at least six months of each year in the field in the inspection of Indian schools. The Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be detailed from the employés of his Department such assistants and shall furnish such facilities as shall be necessary to carry out the foregoing provisions respecting said Indian schools."

Mr. PERKINS. Before debate proceeds I reserve the point of order upon that amendment.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Just a few words in explanation. The last section of the bill changes existing law in several particulars, but particularly in this. Under the law, as it now exists, it is provided that the superintendent shall visit these schools where Indians are taught in whole or in part from appropriations from the United States Treasury. The bill before us provides that he shall visit such Indian schools as are being managed by the Government. In other words, he can not visit or inspect schools except those. My amendment restores the existing law in that respect, and for the reason that we may have more information in regard to the management and government of the schools to which we contribute from the public Treasury, as well as of those schools which we manage. Take the Hampton school; it is a Government school. The pupils are taken there by contract, and we ought to have the privilege of sending an inspector there in order to decide whether it is advisable to continue the appropriation for that school; and the same may be said in regard to the other schools of a like nature—the Lincoln and the Albuquerque schools.

The next material change in the law will be found in the last part of the section, commencing after the words "Indian schools," as follows:

One of which said assistants shall be designated by the superintendent of Indian schools as a chief clerk, and such person so designated shall be acting superintendent of Indian schools during the absence of the superintendent or when a vacancy exists in such office.

Now, whenever the superintendent goes into the field and is absent, then this mere clerk becomes the acting superintendent of the Indian schools, and as such it is provided in this section he may discharge, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, teachers and other employés. It seems to me that is too great a power to give to a mere clerk. My amendment omits the final clause of the section.

Mr. RANDALL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CUTCHEON. Certainly.

Mr. RANDALL. Does the amendment propose to continue the present law in giving to the Indian school superintendent the supervision and control over the schools that are in part supported by the Federal Government?

Mr. CUTCHEON. That is what it does.

Mr. RANDALL. I think the gentleman is clearly right in that direction. There is no doubt that it changes existing law. There is no difference whether we pay $1 or $50. It is a change of the present law as to the superintendent of Indian schools.

Mr. NELSON. I want to suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the gentleman from Michigan, if they will allow me, that the trouble with the old law was this: It was too comprehensive. The law as it is now on the statute-book was put on by a law of last year. It is too comprehensive. It would give to the superintendent of Indian schools as much control in the removal of the teachers in your school at Philadelphia as it does in the schools on the reservations.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not think the Lincoln Institute would object to fair supervision or control.

Mr. CUTCHEON. My amendment does not change that. That is left subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. NELSON. If the gentleman from Michigan will make his amendment provide merely for visiting these schools, then it will be all right, but if it provides for anything more than that in regard to these contract schools it interferes with the business of private parties, and that would be a mistake.

Mr. CUTCHEON. My amendment does not require that. It requires the superintendent to visit and inspect, but not to employ or discharge teachers.

Mr. PERKINS (to Mr. CUTCHEON). If you will confine your amendment to that there will be no objection to it. But you have incorporated into it many provisions which we have not examined and have not time to examine, and as to those I make the point of order.

Mr. CUTCHEON. They are very simple.

Mr. PERKINS. Well, if you will confine the amendment to the features you have stated, there will be no objection to it.

Mr. CUTCHEON. There is one other matter that I want to mention. My amendment provides that the report shall be made directly to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs instead of to the Secretary of the Interior. It seems to me that this is a part of the Indian Bureau, and that the report ought to go primarily to the Commissioner. Do you object to that?

Mr. PERKINS. Not if you confine your amendment to that.

Mr. CUTCHEON. The next difference is, that the superintendent is authorized to nominate teachers to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs is authorized to appoint them with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. Is there any objection to that? The superintendent, instead of appointing teachers and other employés, nominates them to the Commissioner, and the Commissioner, as head of the bureau, makes the appointments with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. If the objection of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PERKINS] to my amendment applies only to the matter of keeping the superintendents six months in the field, I am willing to withdraw that part.

Mr. PERKINS. Prepare your amendment with the modifications you have suggested and I think there will be no objection to it. And while that is being done, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to a paragraph that has been passed over.

There was no objection.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON] in so far as it gives the power to appoint teachers to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will suggest to the gentleman that permission has been given to return to a paragraph that has been passed over. In the mean time the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON] will prepare his amendment in a modified form, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] can present his objection to it when it is again offered.

Mr. PERKINS. On page 57, at the end of line 11, after the word "available," I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "available," at the end of line 11, page 57, insert: "Provided, That the pay of such commissioners shall not exceed $10 per day, exclusive of traveling expenses."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have modified my amendment, and I desire to call attention to the points of difference in order to see whether there is any objection to what remains. The existing law provides that the superintendent may employ and discharge superintendents, teachers, or any other persons connected with schools wholly supported by the Government, and, with like approval, make such rules and regulations for the conduct of such schools as in his judgment their good may require. I now withdraw my former amendment and submit it in the modified form which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Page 60, line 24, after the words "time to time," strike out to the end of the section and insert:

"Visit and inspect the schools in which Indians are taught in whole or in part from appropriations from the United States Treasury, and report to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs what, in his judgment, are the defects, if any, in any of them, in system, in administration, or in means for the most effective advancement of the pupils therein toward civilization and self-support, and what changes are needed to remedy such defects as may exist. The superintendent shall nominate to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for employment, and recommend for dismissal, superintendents and such other persons as are permanently employed in carrying on Indian schools under the management of the Government, and the Commissioner shall, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, employ or reject such nominees and dismiss or retain such superintendents, teachers, or other school employés. The superintendent shall also have authority to make, with the approval of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, such rules and regulations for the conduct of the schools as in his judgment their good may require. The Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be detailed from the employés of his Department such assistants and shall furnish such facilities as shall be necessary to carry out the foregoing provisions respecting said Indian schools."

Mr. NELSON. I desire to make a point of order against so much of that amendment as authorizes the Commissioner of Indian Affairs directly or indirectly to appoint or remove the teachers of Indian schools. I can not quote the exact words of the amendment, but the Chair will understand the provision to which I allude. I make the point of order that it is a change of existing law. The main feature of the new law adopted last year was to vest the power of appointing and removing teachers of Indian schools in the superintendent of Indian schools. This amendment proposes to set aside that provision and permit these appointments and removals to be made by the Commissioner.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I would be glad if the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] would withhold his point of order for a moment in order that I may make an explanation.

Mr. NELSON. I have no objection to that.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I wish to state the difference between this provision and that of the existing law. The present law passes over the Commissioner of Indian Affairs entirely with reference to the appointment and dismissal of teachers; the superintendent of Indian schools appoints and dismisses, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, while the Commissioner of Indian Affairs has nothing to say about the matter pro or con. My amendment simply brings the Commissioner of Indian Affairs into the operation; the superintendent will either nominate for appointment or recommend for dismissal, and then the Commissioner may appoint or dismiss, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. In either case the ultimate power rests with the Secretary of the Interior. In the one case—that is, under the existing law—the Commissioner is wholly passed over, while by my amendment he is brought in as the primary power to appoint or remove, acting upon the nomination or recommendation of the superintendent. It seems to me this is right. That is all the change that my amendment proposes.

Mr. NELSON. I insist on my point of order to that part of the amendment. I desire, if I may be permitted, to make a brief reference——

Mr. CUTCHEON. I hope the gentleman will withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to hear the gentleman on the point of order.

Mr. NELSON. I have nothing further to say on that point.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will sustain the point of order as to that part of the amendment.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Before the point of order is insisted upon or decided I wish to say a few words. If I understand the amendment now proposed by the gentleman from Michigan—and I wish the particular attention of my friend from Minnesota, for I propose to state some facts which may possibly have some influence with him—I understand that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan is intended to restore to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs the right to approve at least, if not to make appointments and removals of teachers. Now, I wish to say that up to the time of the passage of the Indian appropriation bill of last year the Commissioner of Indian Affairs did have the power to make these appointments and removals; but at that time this office of superintendent of Indian schools was created and the power to make these appointments and removals was conferred upon that officer. The effect of that legislation has been to create a conflict of authority. It makes two heads where there should be but one. I am in possession of some facts showing the consequences of this conflict; I do not care to state them in detail; but it is a fact that by reason of the conflict brought about in the administration of the law between the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the superintendent of Indian schools at least two and possibly more of these schools have been totally destroyed.

The school at the Kiowa agency and that at the Nez Percé agency no longer exist. The trouble has arisen from this condition of things: The superintendent of Indian schools resents any effort on the part of the Commissioner to control the schools or any persons connected with their management. Now, the Indian agent is required to enforce the rules and regulations prescribed by the Department for the government of the Indians. Among these regulations is one strictly forbidding the bringing of any intoxicating liquors upon the agency. Now, I know as a matter of fact that two or three months ago the superintendent of the school at the Kiowa agency was found in a state of intoxication on more than one occasion. He was suspended by the agent in charge, and the action of that agent was sustained by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; but owing to jealousy or something else the superintendent of Indian schools here at Washington reinstated that man in the control of the school at the Kiowa agency. As a result of this conflict of authority, the Kiowa and Comanche Indians have met in council and have taken their children away, so that the school is discontinued entirely. A similar condition of things exists at the Nez Percé agency. It will thus be seen that this division of authority in the administration of the law brings disastrous results to the schools. It seems to me there ought to be a controlling power somewhere.

Mr. CANNON. I agree with the view expressed by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE]. Now, if this amendment be made broad enough to take the appointing power entirely away from the superintendent, both in regard to nominations and otherwise, and to lodge that power with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, subject to the Secretary of the Interior, then I will make a point of order.

Mr. CUTCHEON. My amendment simply leaves the superintendent the power to nominate or recommend. As he is the officer in immediate contact with the schools, this provision seems reasonable.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires——

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Will the Chair permit me one word?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to have this question of order settled before further discussion is had upon the merits.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I trust that the point of order will not be insisted upon. There ought to be some remedy for such evils as I have stated.

Mr. NELSON. I wish only to say that I regard this matter as vital. If the Chair will allow me to reply to the observations which have been made (though perhaps this discussion is outside the point of order) I wish to say that one of the chief reasons last year for changing the law so as to create this office of Indian school commissioner and give him these powers, was the fact that under the old practice the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in too many instances made the appointment and removal of teachers of Indian schools a matter of mere patronage. I very well remember a discussion that I heard between the late Commissioner, Mr. Atkins, and another prominent official of the Government on this question; and the complaint was made that to adopt the law which was enacted last year was to cut off the Indian Office from a portion of the patronage or perquisites belonging to it.

My idea is this: the office of Indian school superintendent and the management of Indian schools should be divorced as much as possible from the management of the Indian Office in other respects. It should stand on its own footing, and the superintendent of the schools should have the right to discharge his subordinates for cause.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The Clerk read the words which were ruled out on the point of order] and the question was taken on the remaining portion of Mr. CUTCHEON'S amendment, and it was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. Does the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan, just adopted, strike out the concluding portion of the section which provides for a chief clerk?

Mr. CUTCHEON. It does strike that out and leaves the matter to existing law.

Mr. PERKINS. I did not understand that it struck that out, and do not believe it should be stricken out. As the law is to-day there is no one to act for the superintendent when he is absent in the field, and there should be some one to act in his place. That is the judgment of the committee, and therefore we have provided for the chief clerk, who should act as superintendent while he was absent from the office.

The CHAIRMAN. By unanimous consent, the section may be modified.

Mr. CUTCHEON. The objection was, during the absence of the superintendent, of allowing a mere clerk to assume the duties of the superintendent. Under the law the superintendent has the right of removal, and the point of order made by the gentleman from Minnesota was that the power of removal lodged with the superintendent was in his absence conferred upon a mere clerk.

Mr. PEEL. I hope we will have a vote.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. NELSON. That is a new section, and I desire to recur to the section just passed.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. My amendment can be acted on and then we will go back if necessary. I ask for the reading of my amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by adding after section 8 the following:

"SEC. 9. That hereafter the costs of the trial of the cases in the courts of the several Territories tried pursuant to and for the offenses named in section 9 of the act entitled 'An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes,' shall be audited by the accounting officers of the Treasury and paid out of money for similar expenses in the trial of criminal cases in the courts of the United States."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The amendment I offer is, as I perfectly well understand, subject to a point of order; but I do not believe the point of order will be made against it when the House understands the reasons for offering it.

Until the last session of the Forty-eighth Congress there was no law whatever in this country for punishing one Indian for any crime against the person or property of any other Indian upon an Indian reservation. In the closing hours of the Forty-eighth Congress, when the appropriation bill was under consideration, an amendment was offered to that bill giving jurisdiction to Territorial courts where reservations were located to try criminal cases, such as murder, rape, assault with intent to commit murder, and other designated offenses.

It gave rise to considerable discussion at the time. A point of order was made against it and the gentleman from Indiana and several others participated in the debate. After full discussion the point of order was withdrawn and the amendment was adopted. The law has, however, been inoperative, scarcely a single case having been prosecuted under it. When any of the offenses named in the law are committed by one Indian on the person or property of another upon a reservation in any of the Territories the officers there refuse to take cognizance of the offense, and we have not far to seek for the reason of their indifference.

The entire expense of prosecution would fall, of course, upon the county where the offense is committed; and as the reservations and the Indians upon them contribute nothing towards the payment of the taxes or the expenses of the Territories, the officers refuse absolutely to enter the charges and begin prosecution.

The Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of Indian Affairs in the two last reports from those officers have recommended the enactment of some law to give force and effect to the law passed at the last session of the Forty-eighth Congress.

I send to the desk and ask to have read certain extracts from the report of the Commissioner.

The Clerk read as follows:

[Report of Commissioner of Indian Affairs for 1886, page 103.]

In my last annual report attention was called to certain defects in the ninth section of the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stats., 385), providing for the punishment of certain crimes committed by Indians. Subsequently a bill was prepared and submitted to Congress relieving the Territories of the expenses incident to the enforcement of the law, and extending its provisions to that portion of the Indian Territory not covered by the laws of the five civilized tribes. I deem the passage of this or a similar bill to be necessary to the proper execution of the act. In Dakota especially the county authorities refuse to prosecute Indians guilty of the most serious offenses on the ground of the expense incident to such prosecution. As the counties derive no revenue from the reservations within their limits, the injustice of compelling them to assume the burden of these prosecutions is apparent.

[Report of Commissioner of Indian Affairs for 1887, page 33.]

For the third time I am compelled to call attention to the defects in the ninth section of the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stats., 385) providing for the punishment of certain crimes committed by Indians, Congress having failed to enact the same.

The Territories should be relieved of the expenses incident to the enforcement of the law.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It is of importance to the General Government that the law be enforced. It would operate as a powerful support in preserving peace and good order on the reservations. Besides it would be of the highest value to the Indians in bringing them to a due regard for the lives and persons and property of others under the laws of civilization. It would be worth much to them as a means of education and development.

Mr. HATCH. Let us have a vote. I think there will be no objection to the amendment,

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I trust the amendment will be adopted.

The amendment was adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota is recognized to offer an amendment to a preceding paragraph.

Mr. NELSON. The correction I desire to make I find has already been made.

Mr. PEEL. I desire in connection with my remarks, Mr. Chairman, in regard to the disbursement of the Delaware fund, to have printed in the RECORD a communication by the chief and representative of the Delaware Indians bearing upon the subject.

There was no objection.

The paper referred to by Mr. PEEL is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

I write this to you because I am not able to speak to you all. I am here in the interests of my people, the Delaware Indians, who are now incorporated with the Cherokee Nation, with which they dwell in peace.

My people have a large sum of money in the Treasury of the United States, together with some bonds of the States of North Carolina and Florida, and some bonds of the Union Pacific Railroad Company. The money and the amount of the bonds belong to my people. The United States pay interest at 5 per cent. per annum upon the money and the face value of the bonds. The payment is made semi-annually. It amounts to about $180 to each family during the year or $90 every six months. Paid in this way it does the people but little good and much harm. They depend upon these payments more and work less. They go in debt to the merchants, who trust them upon the faith of the interest payment. The merchant has to wait six months for his money, and he therefore charges higher prices and greater rates of interest. The result is that the people get very little good from the interest money.

This system of interest payment is therefore pernicious in two ways:

First. The people get very little for their money and are always in debt.

Second. They are encouraged to work less and to depend more upon the small payments and the credit system, which places them always in the power of the merchant.

Eleven years ago the chiefs, headmen, and councilors became convinced that all the moneys of the people should be paid to them, and at a council they appointed me to represent them in the effort to have it accomplished. I caused petitions to be signed by my people urging the payment. I came here, though I am advanced in years and the distance is long, six times, and asked you to give my people their own. Your President and Interior Department asked also that it should be done. Yet you failed and refused to do so. I now ask you again that our moneys be given to us. The reasons for my request are these:

When my people were uncivilized they needed a guardian. They were improvident, they did not know how to work, their feet were strangers on the path of civilization. They could not be trusted with large sums of money because they were as children and needed a guardian. That time has passed. They number nearly eight hundred people. They are subdivided into some two hundred families. The family relation is preserved. The husband and father cares for his wife and children. We have farms, homes, gardens, orchards. We have horses and cattle and other stock. Our children have excellent schools. The people have their churches as have the whites. Some are Baptists, some are Methodists, others belong to other denominations. Religious freedom is established, but nearly all worship the God of the Christian and are a Christian people. Our lands are good. We grow wheat and corn, oats and rye, and potatoes. Our gardens are rich with plenty, our orchards smile with God's goodness. Our lands are good for pasturage, where our flocks and herds grow fat and increase. My people no longer look to the forest and the stream for food, but to their fields and their labor. We are a civilized people. We are as the white man, competent to manage our property and money. We are no longer children, and therefore no longer need a guardian. We need our moneys for two reasons:

First. It will remove the last lingering sense of dependence. When our people know they will receive no more money from the United States they will grow strong and self-reliant. The merchants will sell to them only for cash, or on short credit at cheaper rates with less interest. Only the industrious will be enabled to get credit. Hence lessons of industry and economy will be taught, and our people will have better goods at cheaper prices. The present pernicious credit system, whose basis is the semi-annual interest payments, will be destroyed.

Second. The payment of all our moneys at once will give to each family on an average nearly $4,000. With this sum they can improve their homes, get better furniture, improve their modes of living, erect better barns, acquire more improved utensils, better stock of horses and cattle, and free themselves from debt. Then, with a good country and a fair start, with only themselves to depend upon, they will grow strong in heart, strong in self-reliance, and under the smile and providence of God will work out their own destiny for themselves toward a better and higher life.

The President and the Secretary of the Interior have shown already that the payment to us of our moneys will relieve the United States from the payment of 5 per cent. interest each year.

Hence I ask in the name of my people that you enact the necessary law to pay over to my people, the Delaware Indians, all of the moneys now to their credit in the Treasury of the United States.

Very respectfully,

CHARLES JOHNNYCAKE,
Representative and Delegate of the Delaware Indians.

Mr. PEEL. I now move that the committee rise and report the bill as amended to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. DOCKERY reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the Indian appropriation bill, had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments.

Mr. PEEL. I demand the previous question upon the amendments, and upon ordering the bill to be engrossad and read a third time.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the amendments recommended by the committee were concurred in; and the bill as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. PEEL. I demand the previous question upon the passage of the bill.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereor the bill was passed.

Mr. PEEL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced agreement to the conference report on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa.

It also announced the passage of the following bill and joint resolutions, in which concurrence was requested:

A bill (S. 3993) to provide for the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska;

Joint resolution (S. R. 142) to print 20,000 copies of the special report of the Commissioner of Labor on the statistics of and relating to marriage and divorce;

Joint resolution (S. R. 141) to print 10,000 copies of a compilation of the inaugural addresses of the Presidents of the United States from George Washington to Benjamin Harrison, inclusive, for the first century of Presidential inaugurations, and for other purposes.

It also announced concurrence in the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1974) for the erection of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex.

It further announced the passage of resolutions for the printing of the report on Indian education and civilization, by Alice C. Fletcher, and of the report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the year 1887, and for the distribution thereof; in which concurrence was requested.

It also announced that the Senate had passed the following House bills without amendment:

A bill (H. R. 157) correcting the military history of Robert McNutt; and

A bill (H. R. 11197) for the removal of the political disabilities of Henry A. Ramsey.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolution of the House of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 483) for the relief of Elizabeth Jones, widow of John Jones, deceased;

A bill (H. R. 3829) for the relief of Wesley Montgomery;

A bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6896) to require the United States circuit and district judges to instruct the jury in writing in certain cases;

A bill (H. R. 11165) for the relief of Mary Gray, widow of John Gray; and

Joint resolution (H. Res. 266) to print the eulogies on James N. Burnes, of Missouri.

Also the following Senate bills:

A bill (S. 3864) to increase the pension of Mrs. Sue B. Johnson;

A bill (S. 1974) for the erection of a public building at Fort Worth, Tex.;

A bill (S. 3751) for the relief of certain settlers in Hettinger County, Dakota; and

A bill (S. 3737) for the relief of Sterling H. Tucker and others.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced agreement to the report of the conference committee on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following conference report, and ask that it be printed in the RECORD, and the statement of the conferees be read.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11651) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the Government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 6, 11, 12, 13, 15, 31, 45, 53, 56, 69, 75, 84, 88, 89, 97, 99, 101, 102, 106, 107, 108, 109, and 121.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 41, 50, 55, 59, 66, 67, 70, 81, 85, 86, 90, 91, 92, 93, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 119, and 123, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following: "One laborer, $1 per day, $313;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$45,577;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$18,300;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,250;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$18,450;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed to be inserted insert "$1,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,150;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$5,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by said amendment insert "and on Fifteenth street, between Pennsylvania and New York avenues;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 32, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following: "For resurfacing and repaving Pennsylvania avenue, from First to Seventeenth streets northwest, $125,000; in all, $215,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 33, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$125,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$15,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 68, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment strike out the word "contract" and insert in lieu thereof the word "contracts;" and at the end of said amendment insert the following: "To be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 79, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 80, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out in said amendment the words "and for circles to become public reservations;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$418,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 98, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$36,250;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 105, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$48,540;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, strike out the word "six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five;" and strike out of said amendment the words "five hundred," where they occur in lines 8 and 10; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 120, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add to the words proposed to be inserted by said amendment the following: "and succeeding;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On amendments numbered 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 37, 39, 42, 43, 44, 47, 48, 51, 52, 54, 61, 63, 64, 65, 100, and 124 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

J. C. CLEMENTS,
FELIX CAMPBELL,
D. B. HENDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

P. B. PLUMB,
H. L. DAWES,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement accompanying the report is as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11651) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1890, submit the following written statement in explanation of the action which is recommended by the conference committee on each of the amendments in the accompanying conference report, being in comparison with the bill as it passed the House, except when otherwise stated, namely:

On amendments numbered 2, 3, and 4: Provides for one additional laborer at $1 per day, and strikes out proposed increase of $500 in the salary of the inspector of plumbing in the executive office.

On amendments numbered 5, 6, and 7: Provides for an additional clerk at $1,000, and strikes out proposed increase of $300 for the contingent expenses in the assessor's office.

On amendments 8, 9, and 10: Increases the amount for contingent expenses $250 in the collector's office, and $500 for necessary expenses in the collection of overdue taxes.

On amendments 11 and 12: Strikes out proposed increase of $1,000 in the salary of the assistant attorney.

On amendments 13, 14, 15, and 16: Strikes out proposed increase in the salary of superintendent of roads from $1,400 to $1,800; increases the salary of the superintendent of lamps from $900 to $1,000; and strikes out provision for superintendent and inspector of sewers at $2,000.

On amendment 17: Increases amount for contingent expenses in the engineer's office $200.

On amendment 19: Provides for paving Fifteenth street between Pennsylvania and New York avenues.

On amendments 31 and 32: Strikes out proposed increase for repairs to pavements from $90,000 to $100,000, and appropriates specifically $125,000 for resurfacing and repairing Pennsylvania avenue from First to Seventeenth streets.

On amendment 33: Increases the amount for permit work from $100,000 to $125,000.

On amendment 36: Increases the amount for repairs to streets, avenues, and alleys from $30,000 to $40,000.

On amendment 38: Increases the amount for repairs to county roads from $45,000 to $50,000.

On amendment 41: Provides for extending Eighteenth street, middle section, to Columbia road, at a cost of $5,000.

On amendment 45: Strikes out provision that limits the improvement of Rock Creek Church road, except where it is widened.

On amendment 49: Describes Howard avenue, which is to be improved, as located in Mount Pleasant.

On amendment 50: Reduces the amount for improving Bunker Hill road from $8,000 to $4,000.

On amendment 53: Restores the provision for improving River road from Tennallytown west.

On amendment 55: Reduces the amount for condemnation of streets, roads, and alleys from $10,000 to $5,000.

On amendment 56: Strikes out the provision inserted by the Senate authorizing the commissioners to proceed to condemn land for streets, alleys, and roads and highways to the ascertainment of the costs thereof.

On amendment 59: Increases the amount for cleaning and repairing sewers and basins from $33,000 to $35,000.

On amendment 60: Increases the amount for replacing obstructed sewers from $12,000 to $15,000.

On amendment 62: Increases the amount for suburban sewers from $40,000 to $50,000.

On amendments 66, 67, and 68: Confines the work of sprinkling, sweeping, and cleaning to streets, avenues, and alleys; strikes out the limitation of 27 cents per thousand square yards for sprinkling, sweeping, and cleaning streets and avenues, and 30 cents per thousand yards for alleys, and provides for payment to the contractors for the current fiscal year for such work at contract prices.

On amendment 69: Strikes out proposed increase for the parking commission from $18,000 to $25,000.

On amendments 70, 71, 72 and 73: Provides for electric lighting on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue; increases the amount for electric lighting from $35,000 to $40,000; limits the payment for electric lighting to 60 cents per night on wires underground, and to 40 cents per night to wires operated wholly or in part overhead; and restores the provision authorizing the commissioners to invite proposals for supplying electric light at reduced rates by any system.

On amendments 79 and 80: Provides for increased pay to principals of drawing schools.

On amendment 81: Requires the commissioners to report to Congress an estimate of the number of teachers required in the public schools and the amount of salary for each.

On amendment 84: Strikes out proposed increase for repairs and improvements to school buildings from $20,000 to $25,000.

On amendment 85: Increases the amount for contingent expenses of public schools from $22,500 to $25,000.

On amendment 86: Appropriates $8,985.30 for the purchase of additional ground for the Arthur School building.

On amendment 87: Confers upon the commissioners all the powers conferred on the Secretary of the Treasury and other officers of the United States by the act of August 1, 1888, for the condemnation of land for sites for school buildings, engine houses, and police stations.

On amendment 88: Strikes out proposed increase in the salary of the major and superintendent of police from $2,700 to $3,300.

On amendments 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, and 95: Strikes out proposed increase in the number of lieutenants of police from 9 to 10, increases number of sergeants of police from 22 to 28, increases the number of police privates of class 1 from 145 to 185, increases number of police privates of class 2 from 140 to 150, and increases number of drivers of police patrol wagons from 5 to 7.

On amendments 97 and 98: Strikes out proposed increase in contingent expenses of the fire department from $7,500 to $8,000.

On amendment 99: Strikes out proposed appropriation of $5,000 for purchase of new fire-alarm boxes.

On amendments 101, 102, and 105: Strikes out proposed provision that a clerk in the health office shall in the absence or inability of the health officer perform his duties; and strikes out proposed increase of one clerk at $1,000 in the health department.

On amendments 106, 107, 108, and 109: Strikes out proposed increase in the general miscellaneous fund of the District from $7,000 to $8,000; and provides for one hostler and ambulance driver at $240, as proposed by the House for the Washington Asylum.

On amendment 110: Reduces the amount for improving the grounds of the Reform School from $600 to $300.

On amendment 111: Appropriates $6,700 for steam-heating and lighting by gas the several buildings of the Industrial Home School.

On amendment 112: Increases the amount for the relief of the poor from $15,000 to $16,000.

On amendment 113: Appropriates $5,000 for temporary support of indigent persons, to be expended in the discretion of the commissioners of the District.

On amendment 114: Increases the amount for the maintenance of the Columbia Hospital and Lying-in Asylum from $15,000 to $20,000.

On amendments 115 and 116: Appropriates $700 for drainage and sewerage and for coal vault for the buildings of the National Association for Destitute Colored Women and Children.

On amendment 117: Appropriates $10,000 for the erection of a brick building for the German Orphan Asylum Association.

On amendment 119: Appropriates $15,000 to aid the House of the Good Shepherd in erecting a building.

On amendment 120: Requires report to be made from the asylums reformatories, industrial schools, and charities named in this act and in former and succeeding appropriation acts on or before the 1st day of October of each year.

On amendment 121: Strikes out proposed appropriation of $2,000 to enable the commissioners to obtain information touching the charities of the District.

On amendment 123: Inserts the following provision as section 3 of the bill: "That hereafter all moneys received from the sales of animals or material of any sort, purchased under appropriations made for the District of Columbia since July 1, 1878, other than for the water department, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, to the credit of the United States and the District in equal parts; and all balances of appropriations that have been heretofore or that shall be hereafter made for the District of Columbia under section 3 of the act of June 11, 1878, entitled 'An act providing a permanent form of government for the District of Columbia,' heretofore or hereafter remaining unexpended at the end of two years from the close of the fiscal year for which such appropriations have been or shall be made, shall be covered into the Treasury, one-half to the credit of the surplus fund and one-half to the credit of the general fund of the District of Columbia."

On amendments 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 37, 39, 42, 43, 44, 47, 48, 51, 52, 54, 61, 63, 64, 65, 100, and 124 the committee of conference have been unable to agree. These amendments relate to work on streets and avenues; proposed legislation touching the character of rails to be used by street railroads in the District; constructing county roads and surburban streets; appropriations for main and pipe sewers; authority to use appropriations for repairs of sewers and replacing of obstructed sewers by contract or otherwise; making appropriations available at once for improvement of streets and county roads, construction of sewers and erection of school buildings; appointment of three sanitary engineers to report upon a system of sewerage in the District of Columbia; the placing of telegraph, telephone, and electric-light wires under-ground; and to the appropriation of $200,000 for the establishment of a zoological park.

J. C. CLEMENTS,
FELIX CAMPBELL,
D. B. HENDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, just a few words more in explanation of this report. This bill as it passed the House appropriated $4,943,193.61. It was increased by the Senate to $6,296,139.91; being an increase of $1,352,946.30, of which sum the House agreed to $32,905 by concurring in certain Senate amendments, leaving $1,320,041.30 to be disposed of by the conference committee. Of this sum the conferees have been unable to agree upon $873,137. The Senate yields $155,596, and the House yields $291,308.30. Now, I wish to call attention to the items involving the appropriations which are still in controversy between the conferees of the two Houses. Upon streets the amount in controversy is $498,137, on county roads $110,000; making a total of $608,137.

It will be seen by these figures that the Senate amendments, concerning which we are unable to agree, appropriate for streets and county roads an expenditure of about $1,100,000, being an increase over the bill of last session of about $608,000 in round numbers.

The managers on the part of the House have not thought that they were authorized to concede this large increase in expenditure in the matter of streets, in view of the present good condition of the streets, comparing favorably, as we think, with the streets of other cities. In this connection I would call attention to the fact that in 1881 the amount appropriated for streets was $300,000.

It has been gradually increasing, until last year it was $617,000. Now, it is proposed by this Senate amendment to carry this item up to $1,100,000. Furthermore, in this connection I will call attention to the increase in this bill during the same period of time for all purposes.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will my colleague allow me a question at this point?

Mr. CLEMENTS. Certainly.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to know whether that increase is to be appropriated to any specific streets, or is it a gross sum?

Mr. CLEMENTS. It is intended to be applied to specific streets named, and to be apportioned by schedule to the different parts of the city.

In 1881 the total amount appropriated was $3,425,257.38. The amount appropriated last year was $5,070,210.32. I read these figures in order to show the rapid and continuous growth of public expenditures for the District of Columbia for various purposes, and it must be borne in mind that the people of the United States outside of the District of Columbia under the provisions of the law organizing this Government pay 50 per cent. of these expenditures. The people of the District pay the other 50 per cent. On the main and pipe sewers the amount of difference again is $50,000. Another amendment is for $15,000 to pay for a sanitary commission—a commission of sanitary engineers—to examine the present sewerage system of this city and to make report.

The conferees on the part of the House object to this provision for the reason that under the appropriation bill of last year $5,000 was given to enable the commissioners of the District to make an examination of the present system of sewerage, and their report, we are informed, is now almost ready to be submitted. It has not been received, however. We do not know the result of their investigation, and therefore did not think it wise to enter upon another inquiry until the result of that one was known.

The next and last item involving any expenditure of money is an appropriation of $200,000 for a zoological park, proposed to be purchased through the instrumentality of a commission provided for in the Senate amendment. The conferees on the part of the House have not thought proper to yield on that question.

Mr. HATCH. And I hope they will not.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope not.

Mr. CLEMENTS. This makes $873,137 that is in controversy in accordance with this report.

There are five other items of legislation in this bill to which I will briefly call attention, and upon which the conferees have failed to agree. One is a provision requiring the existing street railway companies to replace their present track with flat rails, and, while the conferees on the part of the House believe that something ought to be done, I think I am authorized to say that they believe some steps ought to be taken to correct the nuisance now existing at the railroad crossings, and while they believe that perhaps, by degrees, this plan of substituting flat rails for those now used may be carried out, at the same time they think that the provisions of this amendment proposed by the Senate are oppressive, and would perhaps result in bankrupting some of the weaker roads if they were required to replace their rails within a very short period, as they would be under the provision in the bill. The House conferees have therefore been unable to agree to the Senate amendment.

The next is a provision as to the repairs of streets and alleys, that they may be made under contract or otherwise. Under existing law they must be made under contract with the lowest bidder. The provision in the bill authorizes the commissioners, at their discretion, to have the work done otherwise than under contract wherever they see proper. We have not thought this a wise provision. The general policy of the Government has been to require these things to be done under contract with the lowest bidder, and if a provision of this sort were to be adopted at all, we think it ought to relate only to the smaller items of expenditure.

The third legislative provision proposed about which there is disagreement is one to make the amount of money appropriated for streets, roadways, and avenues immediately available. We do not believe that that is a necessary or wise provision. We think that the expenditures for each fiscal year should be kept within the fiscal year as far as practicable, and therefore we have not thought proper to agree to this provision.

Another provision is in regard to authorizing the commissioners to permit in some cases the laying of electric, telegraph, and other wires underground, and to prohibit them from permitting companies hereafter to place additional wires overhead. The House provision is to prohibit in the future additional wires being put overhead, and to give authority to the commissioners to permit the existing wires or others to be put underground. The Senate provision in effect simply gives a permissive power to the commissioners to allow existing wires to be placed underground.

Another matter of disagreement is the Senate amendment changing the bill in relation to contracts for asphalt pavements. The existing law, which has been approved by Congress after Congress, limits the amount to be paid to $2 per square yard. The provision of the Senate now in controversy proposes to give to the commissioners the discretion to increase that amount, wherever in their judgment the travel or the importance of a particular street or the character of the ground requires a larger expenditure in order to make a good pavement. The conferees on the part of the House thought that to grant such discretion as that would be in effect to repeal the statute and leave the matter entirely to the commissioners. If we give the commissioners power to make exceptional contracts in their discretion, that, in effect, sweeps away its limitation entirely.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have said all that I care to say upon these provisions, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask my colleague in relation to one point. I understood him to say that there is an item there for the purchase of a park.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Yes, a zoological park; an amendment put in by the Senate. The appropriation is $200,000.

Mr. BLOUNT. At what point?

Mr. RANDALL. At no point. Wherever they may select.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I think there is some intimation as to the locality, but it is very loose.

Mr. RANDALL. It is very loose indeed.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, this question of a national park or a zoological garden is a matter to which I would like to have the House give its attention. It will be observed that we have practically agreed upon all matters in controversy between the two Houses except the amount to be given for street improvements and the question of this national park. Nearly all the remaining matters in issue between the two Houses have been agreed upon. In regard to this park I would be glad if the House would give some expression of its views. In the House bill there was no provision for a park. The Senate amended the bill by providing for the purchase of 200 acres of ground for a zoological park or garden. Since that time a sentiment has developed in this city, and it has been pressed upon us by a citizens' committee, that we should inaugurate here a national park embracing some 2,000 acres of land. Now, if it is the sentiment of the House that we should have a park at all, I would be glad to have some expression of that kind at this time, so that we may act intelligently in the conference. For myself I say that I incline very strongly in favor of a park in this city. We have not one now.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. How much will it cost?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. It is estimated that it will cost, all told, to get the land about a million and a half of dollars. I am satisfied that a provision can be draughted in the conference that will bring the amount much below that sum, by compelling the property-owners whose land will abut on this park to contribute largely to the expense. If some general instructions were given to us, declaring that the sentiment of the House favors a park at all, I believe we can provide for carrying out that judgment in a wise manner. But if the House is against any park, the sooner we know that the better, that we may terminate this issue in conference.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. How much is it estimated will be the cost of maintaining the park after it is established?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. No estimate has been made in that respect as to the national park. As to the zoological park, the estimate was about $25,000 a year—probably $40,000 for the first year or two, when the Government would be putting in accommodations for the animals. Our experience would probably be about the same as that of other cities in regard to their parks.

I will say for the information of those who desire to know, that according to the figures furnished to us the parks in London embrace 2,200 acres; in Paris, 58,000 acres; Vienna, 8,000 acres; Tokio, 6,000 acres; Berlin, 5,000 acres; Dublin, 1,900 acres; Versailles, 3,000 acres; Central Park, New York City, 840 acres. Chicago has just authorized a park of 2,000 acres. I do not know what number of acres may be embraced in the present parking system of that city. San Francisco has 1,200 acres of park. The city of Washington has no park. It is a question for grave thought and earnest consideration whether the time has not arrived when our national capital should have a park in keeping with the capitals of other nations. I think that we should have the judgment of our associates in this House on that subject. I believe in this park; I am for it; but I will yield my judgment to that of the House and will devote my efforts to carrying out its wish. I repeat that I would be glad to have an expression of the sentiment of the House before we again go into conference.

Mr. HATCH. Does the gentleman wish to be understood as saying that there is in the Senate amendment provision for two parks—one a general park and one a zoological garden?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. No, sir. The original amendment which was put on the bill by the Senate provides for the purchase of 200 acres for a zoological garden. The proposition now urged upon us is to have a national park embracing some 2,000 acres, running clear out to the boundary, and which shall include a zoological garden—the greater to include the less.

Mr. HATCH. How much of this proposed appropriation is to be devoted to the establishment ot the zoological garden?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. It was estimated that for the first year about $40,000 would be required to equip and run the zoological park.

Mr. HATCH. That is, aside from the purchase of the land?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I think the amount embraced in the amendment of the Senate for the purchase of the ground for the zoological garden is about $200,000.

I desire to say in this connection, as suggested to me by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL], that Philadelphia has 2,900 acres of park.

Mr. HATCH. If the gentleman would include in this bill an amendment providing for inclosing the Capitol as a "zoological park," I think the country would indorse the proposition, for we have now as big a "bear garden" here as anybody could want. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. No doubt there are in the Capitol some animals that ought to be taken in. But let us not turn this matter to mirth. It is a serious question, and I think it should be seriously considered by the House.

Mr. RANDALL. Does the gentleman from Iowa maintain that the conferees representing the House and the Senate upon a controversy involving $200,000 for a zoological garden can entertain a proposition for purchasing, not 200 acres, but 2,000 acres, at an expense of a million of dollars?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I think it is within the power of the two Houses to do that.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, then, I hope this House will take that fact into consideration in the vote which it will give.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. That is why I have said in perfect candor that I do not want to do anything on this question until we have an expression of the sense of the House; I have frankly presented the question with that view. I certainly would not venture on such a proposition without some expression from the House in favor of it.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman from Iowa permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. With great pleasure.

Mr. BLOUNT. The proposition is for a zoological park?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman says there is being pressed on them a plan for a national park, an entirely distinct one from this zoological park?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. It is to be an enlargement of this, and embraces animals as well as a general park.

Mr. BLOUNT. It is to be a national park.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. It is a national park, embracing a zoological collection. That is what they are pressing upon us. A number of bills have been introduced into the Senate and House embracing that idea. I am not certain but favorable reports have been made on them. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL], on the District Committee, says favorable report has been made on that proposition.

Mr. BLOUNT. What is the extent to which they propose to enlarge?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. They propose to take in about 2,000 acres. The park proposed by the amendment is to be located on Rock Creek. The larger park would take in the smaller.

Mr. BLOUNT. I understand that is being discussed by the conferees.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. We have only discussed the zoological feature so far.

Mr. BLOUNT. But it is being pressed.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. It is being pressed by the citizens' committee. A committee came and asked us to consider it.

Mr. BLOUNT. Do the conferees consider it is competent for them to entertain the proposition?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. We can enlarge or decrease it, but I think some expression should come from the House before we enter on any such proposition.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. As the amendment now stands it is limited to a zoological park.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. What the gentleman wants is instructions to go further and make an amendment for a national park.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. We want an expression from the House whether they want a park or not.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. There is the difficulty with those of us who are in favor of a zoological park and against a national park. For one I am in favor of a zoological park. I think if we can appropriate money for the purpose of making archæological and ethnological researches and to send out the Albatross to find fossils at the bottom of the sea we can certainly spend a few thousand dollars to keep the animals now nearly extinct from becoming entirely so by the establishment of a zoological park in this city. I thiuk that is a wise thing, but I am not willing to go into a real-estate speculation to the extent of 2,000 acres for a national park.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I wish to impress upon the House if we are going to have a park here it must be provided soon, for when houses are built and the city extends into the region where the park is proposed to be built, the only available ground for it will be taken up.

It is now within our reach, and citizens are eager to contribute from their own pockets to aid in building it. If the larger scheme can be made the property-holders will contribute largely towards it.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I do not wish to be understood as wishing to prevent any liberal citizens from buying 1,800 acres of land and presenting it to the Government or city for that purpose if they choose. I wish to be understood only as favoring the zoological park instead of the other; and, if possible, I should like to have some expression of sentiment on the part of the House which would enable the conferees to act on that proposition.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. But for the fact that a few men planted in the midst of the proposed park, having the power of refusing to sell their lands or fix any price upon them, are able to block the way of their fellow-citizens in this respect, there would probably be not so much necessity for this action. But the power to condemn must be given to reach that class of people. That is why the citizens of the District of Columbia insist upon some legislation to reach them. Efforts were made by subscription; a large amount has already been obtained by subscription, and, as I understand, a considerable amount has been promised; but because of the fact that here and there some person will refuse to give way or allow his property to be used for the purpose at any compensation, hoping to be able at some time or other to demand from his fellow-citizens blackmail of 200 or 300 per cent. over the value of the property, it is necessary that some such steps should be taken to allow the exercise of the right of eminent domain, if this work is ever to be prosecuted. Because, as I have said, when this land is built up, it will be very difficult and very expensive to get possession of it.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman permit me a moment?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Certainly.

Mr. BLOUNT. For many years we have been told when making the appropriations pertaining to the Potomac Flats that the Government would gain thereby about 700 acres of land. I wish to ask my friend if in the investigation of this matter that subject has been considered.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. We did not have that matter before us, I will state to my friend from Georgia.

Mr. BLOUNT. If my friend had heard my question I think he would not have answered me in that way. He has just stated, when he was referring to the need of securing the land which it was desirable to secure possession of for the purposes of a national park, that it would be difficult after awhile, or in a few years, to get suitable lands; and in that connection I asked the gentleman whether he or his fellow-conferees in discussing the feasibility of getting lands for this purpose had turned their attention to the large amount of land which would probably be reclaimed from the Potomac Flats.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. No, sir; it has not been urged upon us as either desirable or available for that purpose. On the contrary, the region of Rock Creek, it is represented, is a beautiful region of country for the purposes of the park, equally adapted for that purpose as the Philadelphia park, and better perhaps than Central Park in New York. I do not know as to the accuracy of that, for I have not inspected them. I simply lay the matter before the House and ask an expression of its judgment.

Now I would like to answer my friend from Ohio who is on his feet.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. I wish to ask if it is not possible to make substantial progress in this matter by ascertaining first what lands can be obtained, surveying the outlines, and then get the next Congress to act upon it, if we are not now ready to do so? I understand that neither the price of the ground is known, nor in fact the exact limits the park is proposed to occupy.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. They have made and submitted very careful estimates of the cost.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. But I only wish to suggest whether it is not possible to insert a provision here looking in the direction the gentleman contemplates.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. The citizens' committee have that matter well in hand. The region is well mapped out, and the only difficulty is in the want of power to condemn for the purpose of acquiring title for the Government.

I will yield to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] unless some other gentleman desires to be heard.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I would like to offer the following instruction to the committee of conference.

The SPEAKER. It is not now in order to instruct the conferees. It can be read for information, if the gentleman desires.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Then I ask that it be read for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House managers on the District of Columbia appropriation bill are hereby instructed by the House to endeavor to secure such action by the managers on the part of the two Houses on the Senate amendment numbered 124 as will secure to the District of Columbia a national park.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I offer that resolution with a view of getting the sense of the House on this question. As those of us who have been here for a year or two remember, an effort has been constantly made on the part of the Senate to so provide in the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia that some legislation may be had for the establishment of a zoological park. At the same time there have been bills pending before this and the other branch of Congress for a national park, and if the national park project is adopted then the provision for the zoological park as a separate institution will be entirely unnecessary. The bill for the national park has been reported favorably and unanimously by the Committee on the District of Columbia, who have taken a great deal of pains in this respect to investigate the subject and ascertain all of the details.

Inasmuch as no opportunity will be afforded us in this session of Congress to present this matter to the House, and as in the view of the committee it is important that it should at the present time be acted upon, I would like to submit the views which influenced the committee in reporting this bill favorably.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there has been a great deal said heretofore about how much has been spent upon the District of Columbia in the way of public improvements; but if gentlemen will look out upon this city they will see that there has been less done for the people of the District of Columbia, as citizens of this District of Columbia, than for the people of many other cities in the United States. Now, I do not say that the people here do not get more benefit from the public buildings and parks than we get in South Carolina or any other city; but they have no general park here that belongs to the public.

They have no public buildings where the city authorities have a permanent abiding place. They have no post-office fit for any city of this country or any country that is civilized. In fact, there has been nothing done for the people of this city that has not been done for people of other cities of this Union not as large. Therefore, I trust that gentlemen will not view this question unfavorably upon the theory that there has already been as much done for the people of this District as the Government is under obligation to do. Now, there is scarcely a city of any size in the United States that has not a public park. While there are a number of small parks in this city, there is not a single one of any size where the people can go out into the country, as it were, and get the fresh air and have all the invigorating influences that come from the country that does not belong to some private party. There are, it is true, a number of small reservations, but they do not accommodate the large portion of the city growing out towards the west, and if the same spirit governs us in the future that has in the past, the whole of the park in which the Smithsonian Institution is situated will be occupied by public buildings.

Mr. BLAND. Does not the gentleman from South Carolina think that if the obstructions were taken away that have been created by the Pennsylvania Railroad and the ground cleared that that would be a very desirable park?

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, was received, and the following approvals were also announced:

On February 26:

An act (H. R. 11795) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes;

An act (H. R. 11879) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890;

An act (H. R. 7718) for the relief of Milo McCrillis;

An act (H. R. 11777) granting the right of way to the Fort Smith, Paris and Dardanelle Railway Company to construct and operate a railroad, telegraph, and telephone line from Fort Smith, Ark., through the Indian Territory to or near Baxter Springs, in the State of Kansas;

An act (H. R. 10240) for the relief of J. Edwin Pilcher;

An act (H. R. 11515) granting a pension to Charles G. Sanders;

An act (H. R. 11923) granting a pension to Charles Schuler;

An act (H. R. 10882) granting a pension to Nancy Hamilton;

An act (H. R. 10879) increasing the pension of Permelia Smith; and

An act (H. R. 2428) granting an increase of pension to William H. Koch.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will state, Mr. Speaker, that if there is any portion of this District in which we could well have a park it is this portion through which Rock Creek passes, and if the people of this District are to have a park for such portion as would be an honor to this city, being the capital of this nation, they can not get it unless they get it under action of this Congress. There is no power in any governmental officer here to condemn land or to put his finger for a public purpose upon a single piece of property in this District; and therefore whatever is done must be done by action of Congress.

Now, I know, Mr. Speaker, that 2,000 acres of land is a very large park for a city of the size of the city of Washington; and if we were to legislate for to-day or for the near future it would be too large; but we all know that this city is growing rapidly; that property is going up in price, and that if we are to have a national park in this city this is the most opportune time the Congress of the United States will ever see.

We can get a park here in this District now at a cost which will not be any more than one-fifth or one-sixth of what has already been expended for the purchase of land by the city of Philadelphia or New York or any of the large cities in this country. In Brooklyn, where they have a large park, they spent $3,919,000 in the purchase of the land alone. In St. Louis, where they have a new park of about 788 acres, they paid $849,000. In addition to that they have a number of other parks in the city of St. Louis; and I do not understand, Mr. Speaker, why the people of this District and the people of the United States should not be willing to expend as much money for the benefit of the people residing in this capital city as is ordinarily spent by people who control their own expenses.

Mr. HERBERT. Will the gentleman state how much is the annual expense of keeping any of these parks in order that he has mentioned? Can the gentleman give us any idea of the annual expense of keeping up one of these immense parks?

Mr. HEMPHILL. No, sir; I have no information upon that subject. I will say, however, to my friend from Alabama that I presume the people of those cities are well satisfied with the expense that is found to be necessary to keep up these parks, because there is not a single instance where such a public park has ever been dedicated and the people have taken it back and put it to any other use, as they might do if they were dissatisfied; and not only have those cities which have parks kept them up and improved them, but nearly every other city of any importance in the country is now seeking to acquire such a park.

Mr. TAULBEE. I will ask the gentleman from South Carolina whether it is not a fact, so far as he has observed with regard to this matter of public parks, that a large proportion of the expense which is necessary in order to maintain them is derived from the leasing of proper privileges to citizens within the parks?

Mr. HEMPHILL. I think that might be made available to quite a large extent in maintaining a park.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I desire to ask the gentleman a question as to the propriety of this legislation on an appropriation bill. Is there anything in the proposed amendment that would limit or control the purchase of this property, or protect the interests of the people at large against the privileged few who would be benefited?

Mr. HEMPHILL. My resolution was presented simply to test the sense of the House upon this question, so that if the resolution is adopted and the report comes back from the conferees, the House, if it be satisfied that the amendment is a properly drawn one, can adopt it; if not, can give the conferees further instructions, or can reject the amendment. This leaves it to the conferees upon the part of the House, if this resolution is adopted, to prepare a suitable amendment by which the interests of the public will be properly guarded.

Mr. McMILLIN. Will the gentleman from South Carolina permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Yes, sir.

Mr. McMILLIN. The gentleman has referred to parks that have been purchased or made by other cities, and to the expenditures incurred therefor.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Yes, sir.

Mr. McMILLIN. Does the gentleman propose that the city of Washington shall do what those other cities have done, pay for the parks that it gets, or does he propose that they in conjunction with the balance of the people of the United States shall pay for it, and that his constituents and mine shall pay for part of it?

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will say to the gentleman that so far as I am concerned I would propose that the citizens of the United States should do with reference to this public park as they do with reference to all other public improvements in this, District, that is, that they should pay their fair share of the cost of the park. We own one-half of the property in the District. It belongs to the United States, and the concurrence of opinion has been up to this time that the Government of the United States ought not to own half the property here unless it is willing to pay half the expenses.

Mr. McMILLIN. Will the gentleman permit another question?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Yes, sir.

Mr. McMILLIN. The gentleman says that the people of the United States own one-half of the property here.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Yes, sir.

Mr. McMILLIN. In order to arrive at that estimate is it not a fact that the parks themselves which are now established here have been charged to the people of the United States as a part of their property?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, sir, if they are a part of the property of the United States, and if the United States is not satisfied to hold them or to pay taxes upon them, let the Government sell them or erect public buildings on them.

Mr. McMILLIN. Furthermore, is it not the fact that the streets have been charged against the United States in order to make up that estimate?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Oh, that is neither here nor there.

Mr. McMILLIN. I will say to my friend that that is here. That is a fact, and it is going to remain here.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, that may be a fact; but if so, it is a fact by the action of Congress, and it is not fair to blame the people of the District for something which Congress has done of its own free will.

Mr. McMILLIN. But you are endeavoring now to get Congress to do something more in the same direction.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, if we have done an erroneous thing in the past, the proper remedy is not to deny to the people of this District a public park such as the people of other cities have. The proper remedy is to go to work now to regulate properly the proportion of the expenses of the District which the people here ought to pay, and the proportion which the people of the United States ought to pay. But let us not visit the punishment upon the people of the District when they have had no voice in the action that has been taken in the past, and when it has been done by Congress itself, which has had sole authority to act in the premises.

Mr. HERBERT. I wish to ask the gentleman from South Carolina whether it is not also a fact that in order to make the showing of the Government owning one-half of the property here, all the Government buildings have been charged to the people of the United States? And is it not also a fact that the Government itself, without any help from the people of the District, takes care of every public building here?

Mr. HEMPHILL. I presume that is all true, but I do not see that it has anything to do with the question at issue here.

Mr. HERBERT. It is an answer to your argument about the Government owning one-half of the property.

Mr. HEMPHILL. It is not an answer to my argument; and if the gentleman thinks it is I am quite satisfied that he has a monopoly of that opinion. We did this ourselves. Congress fixed the matter to suit itself, and not the people of the District, and if anything is wrong Congress is responsible and Congress alone has the power to change it.

Mr. HERBERT. The facts I have stated, though, go to your argument, based upon the estimate of the Government owning one-half the property here.

Mr. HEMPHILL. That does not make any difference. I simply say that that is the estimate which has been recognized heretofore, and that Congress, which has had the power, has not changed it. The gentleman from Alabama is entitled to his opinion, and I may agree with him, but at the same time it is not fair to make the people of the District responsible for the existing state of affairs.

Now, there is something else I would like to say in regard to this park. It is well known that Rock Creek flows right through the District from one end to the other until it empties into the Potomac River. Along a considerable portion of Rock Creek the banks have been built up with dwelling-houses, and as a natural consequence the creek has become in some parts the natural sewer for everything in the shape of refuse coming from those dwellings. Rock Creek has thus become a stench in the nostrils of the people in that portion of the city. There has been pressed most urgently upon the District Committee a proposition to arch over Rock Creek in part and to tunnel another part so as to get rid of these noxious odors coming from the creek. If we should undertake to do that work, although it would apply to only a very small part of Rock Creek, it would cost, according to the estimate, $600,000, and in all probability by the time we had finished it the cost would be a great deal more.

Now, as a pure matter of dollars and cents, I submit whether it is not better to keep the banks of this creek free from dwelling-houses and dedicate the land to some public purpose. I do not hesitate to say that something must be done for the protection of the people living in the neighborhood of Rock Creek, where buildings have been constructed on its border. Unless something be done that whole stream will become the deposit of the sewerage and refuse of people living upon its banks, and that portion of the city will soon have to be abandoned or given over to people who can live in the midst of those stenches.

Besides, Mr. Speaker, there will never be a time when this property can be purchased as cheaply as it can be purchased to-day. The people who own the land that is expected to be purchased along Rock Creek, if any be purchased at all, are the original owners of the property; and as a member of the District Committee I can say that not a single one of them nor the representative of one of them has come to me, or, so far as I know, to any member of the committee, urging this park project upon our consideration. Although I have heard the names of a number of these owners, I know but a single one; and although he bought a piece of property there four or five years ago, he says, "If you want this land for a public park, I will sell at a price that any gentleman in whom I have confidence will put upon it." I think that is a fair proposition. He has not asked Congress to appropriate one cent; but he says that, on the contrary, he would prefer to hold the land that he might realize the advance in price.

It is true that a part of the property along this creek has become very valuable. I know a gentleman in this city who, according to repute—I have no personal knowledge of the fact—purchased seven or eight years ago a piece of property in this city for a small sum, which he could now sell for $250,000 or $300,000. If we are ever going to get a park, now is the time; it is in my opinion the only time when the people's representatives will be willing to vote the sum necessary to secure it.

In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, if this park is purchased the District under the usage and the existing law will have to pay one-half of the expenses. It is proper that the people owning property along the line of this park should pay their just proportion in view of any increased value which may arise from the dedication of this land to public use. The District is in a better condition to pay its share of this money now than it will probably ever be for years to come. There is a considerable surplus in the treasury of the District, amounting to several hundred thousand dollars—between six hundred thousand and seven hundred thousand.

Mr. BLOUNT. How about the debt?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Of course there is a debt due by the District; but it is not payable.

Mr. RANDALL. The District is in debt to the Federal Government to the extent of a million dollars, on account of the expense of the work on the aqueduct, and I suggest, if there is any surplus in the treasury, the District should devote it to paying that indebtedness.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I want to remind the gentleman from Pennsylvania that, as I understand, this aqueduct was controlled entirely by officials of the United States.

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman was stating that the District has $600,000 in its treasury undisposed of. I wanted to say that I thought the best appropriation of that amount would be for the District to pay something toward the million of dollars advanced by the Government on the aqueduct, which has proved an utter failure.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I think before the District pays any money on that account there ought to be instituted an investigation to see whether the Government of the United States has not swindled the people of this District out of a great deal of that money. As I understand, there is an investigation now going on at our expense——

A MEMBER. The committee has reported.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Yes, the investigation is finished, I believe; and I understand there is a very black report, so far as the Government of the United States is concerned. If we have taken the money of the people of this District, or at least run them into debt to the extent of a million of dollars, and if, according to the report made by members of this body, we have misappropriated the money designed for the construction of that tunnel——

Mr. RANDALL. That was done against the remonstrance of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HEMPHILL. That may be true. Yet the District is not responsible, as the gentleman will admit. It is by the fault of officials of the United States Government that this misappropriation has happened, and it is not right to visit our sins upon the people of this District.

Now, Mr. Speaker, they talk a great deal about having a "monkey show" here, and all that sort of thing, just the same kind of language we heard when this question was before the House on a former occasion. We spend a great deal of money in keeping in order the horticultural garden down here. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE] says that we ought to provide for the preservation of the animals on this continent before they become extinct; but I think it much more important that we should furnish some outlet, some breathing place, for the poor people of this city, who can not get away in the hot weather, and to give them fresh air, sunlight, and a chance for health and life. Those who live here and can not get away, and those of us who were kept here last summer during the long discussion upon the tariff, have seen the poor people sitting out and lying out on the streets by day and night, under the baking sun of the day or the reflected heat of the streets at night, unable to get relief from the intense heat; and I do not know that we can do a better thing than to furnish to the children of the poor people some shaded places where they can go and get rid of the hot glow of the summer sun.

If, then, it is important to preserve the animals of the country, how much more important is it to do something towards preserving the health of the people, and especially those of our people who can not get away in the summer time. I trust we will not be niggardly and unjust to these people, and while we are willing to establish a park here for animals, forget them and their wants, but that we will rise to a proper consideration of the question, and I believe when we have done so we will give to the people of this city what is given to the people of other cities, who have the privilege of electing their own city officials, their own city council and mayor, a proper and suitable public park.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, I will occupy not exceeding five minutes in this discussion. The gentleman from South Carolina has spoken of the injustice to the people of this District in refusing this appropriation, and intimates illiberality on the part of the Government.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, I do not mean to say that the Government is illiberal; but I tried to show that the people of the District did not receive as much benefit as some of our friends seem to think they have already received, and as I myself thought they received before I got here and served upon the committee.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I wish to show, Mr. Speaker, something of the obligations of the District to the United States in connection with the District government.

The bonded debt of the District of Columbia which the Government of the United States has assumed—that is to say, one half of it, principal and interest—on the 1st day of July was $20,581,000, as shown by the following statement from the last report of the Treasurer of the United States, to wit:

The following table shows the date of maturity, rate of interest, and principal of the loans of the District of Columbia outstanding on the 30th day of June, 1888:

Date of maturity.	Title.	Rate of interest.	Amount.
		Per cent.
July 30, 1873	Three-year (Emery)	7.3	$100
July 1, 1891	Permanent improvement	6	3,031,600
July 1, 1891	Permanent improvement	7	515,600
July 1, 1892	Twenty-year funding	6	956,150
July 26, 1892	Market	7	144,900
July 1, 1899	Twenty-year funding	5	920,400
October 1, 1901	Water	7	360,000
November 1, 1902	Thirty-year funding	6	604,100
July 1, 1903	Water	7	15,000
August 1, 1924	Fifty-year funding	3.65	14,033,600
Total			20,581,450

The annual interest on this sum at that time was $906,000, of which the Government of the United States is paying one-half. In addition to the funded debt—and by the way I will state that the principal part of this has been for improvements in the District of Columbia—in addition to the funded debt there is one-half of the amount recently expended on the aqueduct tunnel for the increase of the water supply of the city; so that the amount due on the 1st day of July by the District to the United States for money already advanced for the tunnel was $1,038,000. The debt of the District, funded and otherwise, of which the United States has assumed and is paying to the sinking fund one-half of the principal as it is discharged and annually one-half of the interest as it accrues, amounts in the aggregate to the immense sum of over $21,000,000.

Now that we have a surplus of about a million in the Treasury (which, if the Senate amendment prevails, would leave it only about a half million or a little less) the gentleman says is an opportune time to expend money for a zoological park, and at the same time adopt the larger provision for a national park, the one which he is advocating, which is to swallow up the zoological garden and make it a part of it. The provision inserted in the bill to which he refers, reported by his committee, as I understand, provides not for the immediate payment, but for the creation of a debt running along for future years, adding up and piling up against the people of the United States outside as well as those inside of the District a further accumulation of debt for the luxury of a park.

Why not in the interest of the tax-payer apply it to the water debt or to the three and a half millions of bonds that will be due July 1, 1891, within a year after the expiration of the year for which the appropriations of this bill are made? In my judgment there is no necessity in this city for a national park such as is proposed, as there is in other cities. The Government of the United States has reserved plats of ground all over the city, in addition to the larger reservations which we find everywhere, breathing places where the people can go; and we have broad streets and the Government has expended money in their improvement; and in the sundry civil bill each year is carried a large sum of money for paving the walkways through the reservations, and paid for entirely out of the revenues of the Government; no part of it is paid by the District, nor is anything paid by the District for the lighting of the reservations, for the convenience of the people of the District much more than for the people outside. And the gentleman himself has referred to the Soldiers' Home, a place near by, which, while it does not belong to the city or the National Government strictly, yet it is a great place of resort and will remain there.

Now, I believe the time has come when the Government of the United States is paying largely more than its proper share for the expenses of the District and that it ought to be reduced, and if the people of this city and District desire a park it is their business to provide it at their own expense in a larger measure than is provided in the amendment which it is proposed to incorporate on this bill.

I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] for five minutes.

Mr. MILLS. I was a member of the Forty-third Congress when this strange copartnership was entered into between the Federal Government and the government of the District of Columbia. When the local government of this District was abolished by the Forty-third Congress I then very seriously questioned the wisdom of that action; and every year since that time has satisfied me more fully that the government now held over the people of this District is wrong. It is un-American. It is not in accordance with the principles upon which we have organized local governments in this country. The people of this District ought to have a local government of their own, and the Federal Government ought to have such jurisdiction and control over the public property of the Federal Government as is necessary to take care of it.

In the arrangement of the compromise the interests of the Federal Government, which would apply in that government, were abolished, and it was then determined that the Federal Government should pay one-half of all the expenses annually incurred in the administration of the government of the people.

At that time, perhaps, it was a fair apportionment. The city was small; perhaps not exceeding 100,000 inhabitants. It has passed beyond that, and the property owned by the Federal Government then was around this Capitol and in the streets and parks belonging to the Federal Government, which were retained by the Government for its use at that time. Now the city has extended and is continuing to extend. The interest of the Federal Government is constantly decreasing in proportion as the interest of the people is constantly increasing. As my friend from Pennsylvania said a few moments ago, the apportionment is now excessive upon the Federal Government, and the people under the local government are not contributing what they ought to contribute toward the Government. I believe, sir, that we ought to stop this unnatural partnership, and the Federal Government ought to appropriate each year out of its own funds whatever is necessary and its equitable proportion for the protection of its public property and the interests of the city.

But, sir, what interest has the Government in buying a park for the people of the District of Columbia? The park belongs to the people, not to the Federal Government. It is not for the interest of the Federal Government that there should be a park on Rock Creek or in the midst of the city. It is for the comfort and convenience of the people, and not for the Government, and the people ought to pay for it. We will continue this condition of things until we dissolve this unnatural government and give the people of the District of Columbia the same rights that we give the people of Texas—representation upon their population, charging them with their own local self-government. [Applause.]

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, I now yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT].

Mr. BLOUNT. It is singular what a prejudice against the Treasury of the United States is manifested in connection with all the arguments made touching expenditures for this District. The distinguished gentleman who is now the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia alleges that the Federal Government ought to be liberal in the matter of appropriations here, because it owns one-half of the property. The gentleman from Tennessee rightly suggested that in ascertaining the one-half of the property of the United States it consisted mostly in streets, alleys, and parks.

Now, sir, I wish to know if any gentleman will gainsay the question that the streets and parks are for the people of this city, and if they are, will you undertake to close your eyes to it and charge it as a matter inuring to the benefit of other people outside of this District? Why, sir, it is strange that such argumentation should obtain in so intelligent a body as this. In reference to the water supply here, the Government originally paid for it out of the Federal Treasury, and this people got it as a gratuity. Then these same people came in a few years ago and insisted that the Government of the United States should give them an additional water supply; and because, forsooth, there may have been some mismanagement in some given place, unwilling to take their own misfortune, they turn upon the Federal Government and charge it as a crime and insist that we shall make it good. It is said, sir, that the city of Washington has not been and is not fairly treated, is not liberally treated, and has not the same opportunities that other cities have. What city, sir, in this country—is it New York, Philadelphia, or any city in this country—that has the Federal Government come to it and taken one-half of its burdens in the shape of taxation? Yet, sir, that was their singular argument.

Again, sir, only a few years ago the people of this District complained that the public health was affected by the Potomac flats, and if we would appropriate, as we have done, millions of dollars for the reclamation of it—and it is going on to-day—we would reclaim 700 acres of beautiful land lying along the Potomac. A large part of it has been reclaimed, a large part is being reclaimed; and yet none of the gentlemen who have come before the House conferees, none of the gentlemen who appeared before the Committee on the District of Columbia, offer to use any portion of the 700 acres or any other area owned by the Government of the United States. It is always private property that we are to buy. No matter what we have we can not utilize it. There is always some special reason why the necessary improvement should not be put on Government land, where it would take nothing out of the Treasury.

My friend from Iowa says he has not heard of this matter at all in his interviews with the Senate conferees. It does not appear that that committee or the Committee on the District of Columbia ever hear of anything in connection with this question of the purchase of land except Rock Creek park. My friend, the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, says that no gentleman interested in that property has ever approached him. I take his statement as true. I take it as true subject to this qualification: I do not suppose that my friend ever inquired into that matter at all. But, sir, there does come to us through other sources, there does come from citizens of this District who are in communication with members of this House the statement that there are persons engaged in a large real-estate speculation about this proposed Rock Creek park. They have their attorneys who do approach other members of this House and who do press that project. It is doubtless being urged by them, and all of this word painting as to the beauty and importance and value to the city of this park is the work of those artists.

Now, sir, so far as I am concerned, I am not willing to do anything that will put into the hands of the House conferees at such a time as this, with little opportunity for deliberation, with little opportunity to ascertain whether it is true, as stated by honorable citizens of this District, that real-estate speculations are involved—I am not willing, I say, to put into the hands of the House conferees authority at such a time to take action upon this important question. If it is true that speculators are organized to urge the sale of this park, let us beware, for the best of us may be misled. Let us postpone this matter until we have time to investigate through a committee of this House the questions that are raising doubts in our own minds, and when we shall have done that and the matter shall have come up before us for deliberate action, then let us give it due consideration.

Sir, let us bear in mind the situation. Up to this hour the House of Representatives has refused to take up this question. It has been apprehensive about the parties in interest who were behind this project. It has been apprehensive lest it should be misled in this matter. It has been interested to preserve its own good name free from any possible imputation of scandal. While this is true of the House, the Senate has tacked on to this bill an appropriation of $200,000 for a zoological garden, and when the conferees get together certain interested persons will be there pressing not for the $200,000 but to sell 2,000 acres of land. They tell you of what is done in Paris, of what is done in London, of what is done in Philadelphia; they appeal to your national pride to take up this matter now and not to postpone it. In the closing hours of the session, in that hurried conference, shall we make haste to dispose of the public treasure? My colleague has just stated that the Senate amendments to this bill involve an increase of expenditures in one year of 25 per cent. What city in this country would not make a halt at such a suggestion? It is enough of itself to cause us to stop short, and now, in the closing hours of this Congress, to put an end to this question, for the present at least, by instructing the House conferees that we will not entertain this project further at this time. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CLEMENTS was recognized, and yielded five minutes to Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, the arguments already made in favor and against the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] by members who have preceded me are as strong proof as any man can desire against the policy of adopting it. Gentlemen of intelligence and experience in such matters contend that there is no necessity for the creation of a public park in the city of Washington of the character contemplated in the proposed amendment, while others of equal intelligence and experience insist that such a park is not only a necessity, but that members of the House who oppose it do not appreciate the importance of this great project.

This, then, presents the issue as to whether the members of this House should favor a bill authorizing the laying out of a great national park in this the capital city of our country. Now, until this question is settled it seems to me, sir, that it is not wise legislation to attempt to appropriate a million and a half of dollars that may be used for such purpose. The gravity of the measure demands that it should be presented in a separate and distinct bill and brought before the House by a committee in the manner provided by the rules which we have adopted.

In no other way can there be a full and a fair discussion of this proposition. If this vast sum of money is to be expended, as the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] contends, for the good of the public, let the representatives of the public have a voice in determining the manner of its expenditure. The way in which the question is presented in the amendment takes from the members of the House all opportunity to be heard upon perfecting a bill for the purchase of the land for the creation of the proposed park and providing against illegitimate speculations by syndicates or real-estate dealers. We know that unless legislation for this object is properly guarded scandals are liable to arise.

Now, before I am called to vote upon a proposition which takes from the public Treasury nearly a million and a half of money, I would like to listen to the arguments of those who believe that a public park of the character proposed in the amendment should be established in Washington.

When I have satisfied my mind as to the necessity of the park I will then be ready to assist in perfecting the legislation by which this is to be accomplished. But I protest against the summary manner in which the friends and advocates of this proposed park are forcing this question.

The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] talks in a way that indicates that he has given much thought and study to the subject. But I take it, sir, that the great majority of the members of the House feel as I do, that they would like more light upon the subject. I am opposed to this amendment for other reasons, but my time is too limited, I fear, to permit me to present them now.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CLEMENTS was recognized, and yielded four minutes to Mr. MCMILLIN.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of entering my protest against the proposition that is involved in the amendment now under discussion. The people of the United States have given to the city of Washington a greater area of parks and more park adornment than is possessed by any other city in the country in proportion to population. This statement will not be denied by any one of the Representatives of sixty millions of people sitting around me.

We have here Judiciary Square, Lafayette Square, Franklin Square, and Lincoln Park. Then we have the immense park and grounds extending from the Capitol to the Potomac nearly two miles, to which we are adding hundreds of acres by the lands we are reclaiming from the Potomac River at a cost of millions of dollars. The Capitol grounds and White House grounds also contribute their beauty. All this has been given by the United States to this city. But not content with this, we are asked to go still further and sell the homes of the people in order to make them the habitations of monkeys. [Laughter.]

The gentleman from Iowa complains that some of the citizens living on the land which it is contemplated to purchase for this purpose are holding it back and attempting to "blackmail" the Government by fixing a high price upon it. It seems to be a crime in the eyes of some that the spot associated with school-boy days should have any pleasant memories to cause the grown-up man to linger there and be reluctant to turn it over as a residence for the bison and den for the snake.

This is not designed simply as a park for the people; that is not the object; the purpose is to establish zoological grounds to be inhabited by rabbits, snakes, and all kinds of animals that will be delightful to the eye as objects for the inspection of those who visit here. Whatever the debate may claim to the contrary, the amendment itself shows that it is designed for a zoological garden. If the people of Washington want that kind of a display, let them have it; but let them pay for it themselves.

Mr. HEARD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MCMILLIN. I would like to do so, but I have only four minutes; the gentleman, therefore, will pardon me for declining.

The amendment provides for the establishment of a zoological park in the District of Columbia "for the advancement of science!" A bear garden is to be established "for the advancement of science!" You are already paying, gentlemen, as the representatives of a hard-worked, tax-paying people one-half of the expenses connected with the government of this city. This itself is unjust and should not have been begun. You are required by the proposed amendment not only to pay for this land, but to buy the monkeys and then pay for their keeping.

Barnum is to have a new rival in his "animal industry," and the people of the United States who can not get to Washington are to "pay the fiddler" for others' dancing. Gibbon tells us love of the circus and fights of wild beasts characterized the degeneracy of the Romans. To gratify this morbid fondness for display of wild beasts one of Rome's distinguished statesmen urged Cicero to hurry and send to the "Eternal City" the tigers, lions, etc., necessary for his approaching show.

Are we following in their footsteps, and anxious to imitate their decline? I must enter my most solemn protest against saddling still further indebtedness upon the people of the United States for the purchase of land at $2,000 an acre, to be followed by the expense of keeping up a zoological garden here in this city. Let us perform the duties legitimately devolving upon us, and not attempt to rival circus and menagerie owners in the show business.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CLEMENTS. I would like to inquire whether the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] proposes to——

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will state that I am quite anxious to reach a vote, for the hour is now late; but I promised five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] and five minutes to the gentleman from Maryland; and after that I want to say a word or two myself. I will then call the previous question.

Mr. RANDALL. Oh, no; you have not the control of this bill.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I mean the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. RANDALL. That has only been read for information.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD].

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I am not unmindful of the fact that the House is impatient for a vote. I can not afford to ignore that fact any more than my audience can afford to listen to me when it is already tired. But I rise to protest mildly against the course of argumentation which has been pursued in opposition to the position of my friend from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL]. It may be all right for the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MCMILLIN] to inveigh in general against the policy of establishing zoological gardens although many eminent and patriotic statesmen favor it. It may be that it is all wrong, as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] argues, that the form of government which we find in this District exists.

But, in the language of the gentleman from South Carolina, I beg leave to remind these gentlemen respectfully that we are not responsible for the existing law, but that there can be no ground purchased for the purposes of a zoological park or park of any kind, and no money expended for the maintenance and care of such park unless by the consent of Congress. I would remind the gentleman from Texas that it is not the fault of the people of this District that this "un-American system of government" exists here. This, as has been said by the gentleman from South Carolina, is due to the act of the American Congress and without the agency or consent of these people. Let Congress assume the responsibility for its own misdeeds; if it did wrong, let it correct that wrong, and not lay the responsibility for it at the door of the District.

Now, a word in reply to my friend from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT]. A few days ago, when a certain measure was under discussion in this House, that gentleman remarked in my presence that he would not give much for a man who always saw a "job" in everything, and therefore opposed it. I responded that I agreed with him cordially in that feeling. Now, I want to call the attention of the House, and especially of my friend from Georgia, to the fact that, losing sight, I think, of the spirit of that sentiment, he has made a speech against this proposition based primarily upon the assumption by him that there is a "job" in it; that there is some great real-estate organization behind it and pushing it; and he intimates that although the gentleman from South Carolina disclaims having been approached upon the subject by interested parties, perhaps others have been approached. Now, I have heard no man on the floor of the House or elsewhere, except the gentleman from Georgia, intimate that anybody had been approached. I do not believe he was ever approached——

Mr. BLOUNT. If the gentleman wants to press that matter, I have no objection to answering very fully.

Mr. HEARD. I do not fear to press it. More than that, I invite the gentleman to make any disclosures in his knowledge. I challenge him to do so; for if he knows anything behind this scheme which makes it disreputable or liable to bring scandal upon the American people, I say it is his duty to disclose it for the benefit of his associates on this floor, that they, being warned by such knowledge, may be prepared to act as intelligently as he.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman allow me——

Mr. HEARD. Not now; I want to finish my sentence. I want to say to the gentleman, however, in the presence of this House, every member of which who hears me knows that I speak truly, that the gentleman, while claiming a desire now to have this proposition discussed on its merits and fully, has always, to the extent of his power, obstructed the consideration of the same when the effort was made to bring it before the House in a separate bill; that when the chairman of the District Committee asked for the fixing of a day for District business the gentleman from Georgia resisted the granting of any time to that committee unless the consideration of this bill should be excluded.

I say that the Committee on the District of Columbia, which reported this measure or a measure of this character, has been always anxious to have the matter discussed upon its merits and to have the House act intelligently upon it. But I am not willing to let the gentleman from Georgia intimate, without showing the reason for the intimation, that the "schemes" of which he talks may influence some gentlemen other than himself to the conclusions at which they may arrive. If the gentleman knows of any improper scheme connected with this whole matter, I repeat, let him now give the information to the House and the country in order that we may be duly warned. This House will then act as intelligently and I believe as patriotically as will the gentleman from Georgia.

I insist, Mr. Speaker, that the position taken by my friend from South Carolina is right. If the people of the United States pay more of the expenses of conducting the District government than they ought, it rests with Congress to change that rule. And let not this House forget that it is the duty of Congress to so change that rule as to secure justice alike to the whole country outside the District and to the District of Columbia. This House should not forget, and I ask that in our instructions to the committee we should consider it, that it is competent for Congress to fix and determine the proportion of such expense as the District should bear. These conferees have come like honest men asking us for an expression of our opinion as to the merits of the proposition for a national park which they have been discussing in conference, and for our instructions as to what they shall do.

Now, Mr. Speaker, let us discuss this matter like honest men dealing fairly with each other. If the sense of the House is against the measure on its merits, let us so instruct these gentlemen on the conference committee. But bear in mind, as the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] has truly stated the proposition, if the people of this city are to have the park privileges which they desire, they have got to be obtained through authority of this Congress. Nothing can be done by them without our permission. Even if they are willing to pay the entire expense of carrying out the plan they can not do so on their own motion.

It must be done, if done at all, under the authority of the Government of the United States. Congress can expend millions of dollars of the money belonging to the people of this District and waste it in an aqueduct tunnel or otherwise, because it has the authority to do so; but the people of this District before they can do anything of the kind proposed, and before even they can expend their own money for any public purpose, must first get the authority of Congress to do it. If you are in favor of it, then it becomes all right; but otherwise they can do nothing.

Mr. HATCH. Will my colleague permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. HEARD. Certainly.

Mr. HATCH. Does the gentleman say that a million of dollars was wasted on the aqueduct tunnel?

Mr. HEARD. I understand two million of dollars were wasted upon that tunnel; and one million comes out of the treasury of the District of Columbia, though the waste occurred through no fault of hers, but by the negligence or misconduct of those acting for the Government.

Mr. HATCH. Was not that bill reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia?

Mr. HEARD. No, sir, it was not. That committee had nothing whatever to do with it.

Mr. HATCH. Who made the appropriation?

Mr. HEARD. I am not prepared to answer who made the appropriation; but the District Committee could not do it, and I suppose of course the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BLOUNT. I can answer that question if I am allowed to do so.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. RANDALL. I want to put the saddle on the right horse. If I remember correctly, that proposition originated in the Forty-seventh Congress.

Mr. HEARD. That is beyond my memory of things here. I mean it did not come from the present Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman said that it did not come from the District Committee.

Mr. HEARD. Not since I have been a member of that committee during the last four years.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not want any misunderstanding in this matter. My impression is, and I make the statement subject to review hereafter when I have made examination, that this aqueduct-tunnel project came from the Senate in the Forty-seventh Congress.

Mr. HEARD. But not from the District Committee.

Mr. RANDALL. It came originally from that committee, if I recollect aright, and my friend from West Virginia [Mr. WILSON] corroborates that statement.

As the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] has alluded to the Committee on Appropriations I will merely remark that committee has resisted all along under the leadership of the gentleman from West Virginia the whole of this procedure.

Mr. HEARD. Allow me?

Mr. RANDALL. Certainly.

Mr. HEARD. I am advised by my friend from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT]——

Mr. BLOUNT. Do not put it too strong.

Mr. HEARD. The gentleman from Georgia said it came from the Senate in the nature of an amendment to your bill.

Mr. RANDALL. I think not.

Mr. HEARD. That is what the gentleman from Georgia says.

Mr. RANDALL. Let us get this matter right.

Mr. HEARD. I want no controversy with the gentleman from Pennsylvania on this subject, because I do not assume to be prepared to contradict him or to correct him if he is wrong. My statement was based upon that received by me from the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT].

Mr. HEMPHILL. There is no need of controversy about it. I now yield the floor to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SHAW].

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I know the House is impatient to vote on this proposition and I will only detain it for a moment or two. Gentlemen seem to be oblivious of the fact that this is our capital city when they assert that in proportion to its population and extent it has larger park privileges than any other city of the United States and offer that as an argument against the pending measure. Not one of the constituents of any member of this House has come to this city but that member has felt a pride in showing him its beauties, its public buildings, broad avenues, and reservations.

I understand the proposition has been made in the Senate to expend a certain amount of money for the purpose of still further beautifying and adorning this city. I feel a pride in this city, and am willing to vote to place a reasonable amount of money in the hands of trustworthy agents for the purpose of still further improving it. Improvements should here keep pace with the growth of our country. This capital should be so adorned as to be an incentive to patriotism, and thus be made to contribute towards perpetuating our republican form of government. Money expended in this way is assuredly wisely invested. As this is the capital of the greatest nation upon the earth, so it should be made the most beautiful city in the world.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I desire merely to say a word or two more.

Mr. CLEMENTS. How much time does the gentleman propose to take?

Mr. HEMPHILL. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood the gentleman was speaking in the time of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON], and that being the case there are seventeen minutes remaining.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Does the gentleman from Georgia desire to go on this evening?

Mr. HATCH. Oh, let us finish this up.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I only want to say that there seem to be some of our friends here who always manage to work themselves up into a state of undue excitement when anything of this kind is proposed because of apprehended real-estate speculations. It is not a question of whether somebody is going to make a little money but whether the District of Columbia and the United States are to get full value received for the proposed expenditure, because if the scheme is undertaken it is the duty of Congress to see that the money is properly expended.

It should be remembered, Mr. Speaker, that the people of the District of Columbia, having no representation here on the floor, ought not be denied the right of having that which every other city is allowed to enjoy; and I will say if they object to this that there has not been a single man who came before the District Committee and made that objection known. In addition to that, all this talk about the people of the United States paying for "monkeys," and the homes of the people being taken away from them in order to establish places here to keep monkeys, has nothing whatever to do with the question. The people of the United States are not "paying the money" in any sense in which these words are used in the speeches of gentlemen who are opposed to this measure. The property of the United States Government is paying its appropriate share of the taxes here. The amount that has been fixed by Congress is the amount that was believed to represent the proper proportion of the General Government towards the payment of taxes here, and if Congress thinks it is too large it can change it if it is not satisfactory. Hence it has nothing whatever to do with the question; and it is not coming out of my pocket, nor your pocket, but is a tax levied upon the Government of the United States upon property which it holds in this city, and which pays only its share of the taxation.

Now, there is nothing whatever in the idea that this thing is being pushed upon the House at the closing hours of the session of Congress. This measure has been pending in various forms since 1866, and was reported to Congress and thoroughly and fully investigated, and Mr. B. Gratz Brown, a gentleman who afterwards ran upon the national Democratic ticket, and ought therefore to receive the respectful consideration of this side of the House at least, reported in favor of it.

Mr. HATCH. I beg the gentleman's pardon; he did not run upon the Democratic ticket; he ran on the Greeley ticket.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Oh, he ran on the ticket which the Democrats set up and voted for. It is too late now to deny it. The Democrats nominated him.

Mr. HATCH. I beg the gentleman's pardon again; they did not nominate him.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, whether they did or not, he ran on the Democratic ticket, and the Democrats voted for him as a representative of Democracy, and he is an honorable man so far as I know his record. He reported in favor of this measure, and spoke in behalf of it in the Senate of the United States in 1866, and the question has been before Congress ever since that time. It was before the last Congress, and has been before every Congress for a long time, and will be before all Congresses to come, I suppose, until some definite action is taken in regard to it. I hope, therefore, the members of the House will vote upon this as a pure business transaction without reference to the other irrelevant questions which have been sought to be lugged into the debate.

I yield the balance of the time back to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, this debate has been running about in the way I wanted it to run, because I desired an expression of sentiment on the part of the House in regard to this proposition.

There are one or two things in connection with the matter which either are not understood or which seem to be obscure to the minds of some gentlemen, and to which I desire to call the attention of the House briefly. The first parties that agitated the question of a zoological park or garden in this city were gentlemen connected with the Smithsonian Institution, and the central figure amongst them was Mr. Hornaday, a very intelligent gentleman, a man of large experience, who spent much time in the jungles of Africa and in other places, and felt a patriotic interest in preserving the remaining animals of this country.

He came before the Committee on Appropriations with the proposition, but the committee rejected it, and I was influenced somewhat by the idea suggested by my friend from Georgia at the time that probably there was a real-estate scheme back of the proposition. I think this House knows pretty well the fact that I have been quite an aggressive party in making attacks on such things as that when I thought they had as an inspiring motive such underlying influences. I have fought them vigorously, and have had some experience and hard fights in conferences with my friend from West Virginia [Mr. WILSON] on that same question. But after looking into this matter my investigation satisfied me that the real-estate speculators were against the park.

Now, the Senate has put on an amendment here providing for a 200-acre proposition. The citizens finding it at that stage, took it up and wanted to enlarge the appropriation into a national park, keeping the zoological garden as a feature of it. I had no part in getting up the bill or in reporting it, not being a member at that time of the District Committee, favoring the national park. So far as I have investigated it, and so far as the question of every great city having breathing places for its population is concerned, that feature comes to me with force in favor of the proposition. If it embraces a real-estate speculation, if it is for that purpose, I am for hitting that with an iron hand; but I am not prepared to sacrifice it because it might be an incident. I know nothing of the kind. No one approached me on the subject excepting the citizens' committee, ably represented and ably spoken for, who came before the conferees on the part of the House to represent their views. I thought it my duty before entering upon so important a question to lay it before the House and invite instructions. I care not whether it be voted up or voted down upon this bill. I will endeaver to carry out the instructions of the House. I am for the park, I am for a zoological garden, but I am frank in telling you that whatever is the judgment of this House in its action on this matter will be law for me.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Does the gentleman not think it would be better to have that project in a separate bill?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I am not prepared to answer that for this time.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, how much time is there remaining?

The SPEAKER. There are only six minutes remaining.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO].

Mr. MCADOO. The combination between the United States Government and the District of Columbia is, in my opinion, an infamous outrage upon the tax-payers of the United States; and so long as it exists this capital city of the nation will be disgraced as the Mecca of speculators and professional boomers. This is the best parked city in the world. It has no districts of congested population; it has no commerce; it has no manufactures; it has uniform, broad, open, healthful, well-paved avenues; it has no towering tenements and blind alleys; its numerous well-kept parks are brought to the homes and the very door-steps of the rich and poor people alike. It does not need this park. The city might as well buy an iceberg from Alaska as this park.

The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MCMILLIN] spoke a moment ago about a monkey-garden. The monkey is the central figure in the theory of evolution; and this project has evoluted as from the jelly-fish to the elephant. It was originally suggested that there should be a zoological garden attached to the Smithsonian Institution for all the animals of the United States. There would be plenty of room there for that. Then came the demand for an independent zoological park, with monkeys from Africa to gambol with the native buffalo, and the great American rattlesnake to play with the foreign boa-constrictor, while the native raccoon slept peacefully with the Numidian lion.

Then, from the zoological garden, pure and simple, came the grandly organized boom for Rock Creek Park. The monkey-garden, true to its nature, has evoluted into this gigantic demand on the national tax-payer. The "greatest show on earth" can crowd under canvas, but the proposed zoo wants half a township. There is nothing mean about local enterprise when it can draw drafts on the United States Treasury. Where is this park to be located? The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] grew eloquent and pathetic asking breathing places for the poor; but he asks us to put this park not on the redeemed lands near the river, but away off in the region of the suffering and oppressed rich people, of whom you can not find enough to redeem Sodom remaining in the city during the hot, sultry days of which he speaks.

Where are the petitions from the great mass of the citizens for this park? If Dives demands, why does not Lazarus even petition? There is and can be no blackmail in raising the price of this land, because we do not want this park now nor will we ever need it in the future. If the backers of the movement want this land let them buy it themselves. The people of the United States do not want it. I am a true friend of this beautiful city and its people. The trouble is a few here undertake to speak for the majority. It is hard here to get genuine public opinion on local questions. In my opinion what is needed is good old-fashioned American local self-government.

Let the people rule. Divorce this unnatural partnership between the District and United States Government. Let the people choose their rulers, and through them say what they want, and then put their hands in their own pockets and pay for it like the manly, independent Americans they claim to be. In the mean time down brakes, hard and strong, on speculative adventures at the expense, to a large extent, of the Federal tax-payers.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WILSON].

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to participate in this discussion, but I have a great interest in questions affecting the District of Columbia, and in questions which are of great interest to my friend from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON]. I have still a recollection of the strong comradeship that grew up between us in the last Congress when we had very hard battles over the District appropriations in the closing hours of the session, I have been called upon to confirm the statement made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania recently as to the origin of the appropriation for the water-works of the District of Columbia. That appropriation, Mr. Speaker, was not made upon the regular appropriation bill for the District of Columbia. It will be found in the statutes of the Forty-seventh Congress in an independent act, which was approved on the 15th day of July, 1882, entitled "An act to increase the water supply of the city of Washington, and for other purposes."

My recollection of the origin of that act is that it came to the House from the Senate; that it first passed at the other end of the Capitol and came to this House. I venture to make the statement that it was considered and reported to this House by the Committee on the District of Columbia in the Forty-seventh Congress.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Will the gentleman state who was the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia in that Congress?

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. In the Forty-seventh Congress? I was not a member of that Congress.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Neal, of Ohio.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. Mr. Neal, of Ohio, was chairman of that committee. My recollection is that this bill was passed at a night session devoted to the business of the District of Columbia.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. I understand that the fault is not in the law, but in the execution of the law.

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. I was going to make that statement, that the trouble is not in the law so much as it is in its execution.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The water supply has not been increased, but "the other purposes" have been faithfully carried on. [Laughter.]

Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia. The whole trouble has come from the plans adopted for a subterranean tunnel. If the plans proposed by General Meigs or those proposed by Colonel Casey had been adopted it would have been completed years ago and at an expense of not one-fourth of what has already been expended, which seems now to have been wasted, and an adequate water supply obtained for the elevated portions of the city of Washington.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND].

Mr. BLAND. I only want a few minutes in which to enter my protest, inasmuch as these parks and Government reservations are under consideration, against the manner in which they are used and abused on public occasions; and I do not allude to the occasion of the present inauguration, but to four years past and since, and to every opportunity since I have been a member of this House.

We talk of the people of the United States, and of the benefit that they derive from these reservations and parks. It is said that the streets belong to the people of the United States; that the parks are the property of the people of the United States; that the public buildings belong to the people of the United States; and yet we see all these reservations partitioned off to-day with scantling for seats, where no citizen of the United States who comes to Washington can get a sight of the inauguration ceremonies without paying a high fee to the monopolists, whoever they are, who belong in this District. Now, if we are to have public parks for the benefit of the people, and public streets and public reservations for the citizens of the United States, let us tear down the seats of these monopolists and let the free citizens of the United States have an opportunity of seeing the celebrations on public occasions without having to contribute their money to these monopolists of this District, who undertake to crowd everybody out by their great structures upon our public reservations. Let us have free parks and free streets. [Laughter and applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time allowed for debate has expired. The question is on agreeing to the report.

Mr. DIBBLE. I desire to move that the House recede from its disagreement.

The SPEAKER. This is not the time to make that motion.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I ask the previous question on the adoption of the report.

Mr. HEMPHILL. That, I understand, relates only to those things that have been agreed upon.

The SPEAKER. The report states that the conferees have agreed as to certain matters and have disagreed as to certain other matters. If the report is adopted the matters upon which the conferees agree will be disposed of, and the other matters upon which they disagree will be open for the action of the House or for future conference.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was adopted.

Mr. CLEMENTS moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. HERBERT, Mr. HATCH, Mr. RANDALL, and Mr. CLEMENTS rose.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire whether or not the instructions proposed to be given by the resolution of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] are pending.

The SPEAKER. They are not. They have been read for information.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Then I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this House, the conferees on the part of the House on the District of Columbia appropriation bill should adhere to their action in conference of a disagreement as to this amendment.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Does that relate to the park?

The SPEAKER. The resolution does not mention any particular amendment.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. That is offered as a substitute for the resolution offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL], I understand.

The SPEAKER. That resolution was not formally offered. It was read for information, but it is not pending.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Now, Mr. Speaker, in order that the effect of the vote may be fully understood, I wish to say that, as I understand, an affirmative vote on the resolution offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CLEMENTS] will be a declaration against the zoological garden and against the park.

The SPEAKER. Undoubtedly.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I move to insert in the resolution, after the word "amendment," the words "numbered 124."

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. DIBBLE. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. DIBBLE. I rise to move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 124.

Mr. RANDALL. That is not in order.

The SPEAKER. The motion to recede takes precedence, but in effect it is simply the converse of the other proposition, and a vote on either one settles the other.

Mr. DIBBLE. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. RANDALL. The previous question has been demanded.

The SPEAKER. The previous question was demanded on the resolution; but pending that the gentleman from South Carolina makes a motion which under the practice of parliamentary bodies has priority, a motion that the House recede from its disagreement. As this motion tends to bring the two Houses to an agreement it has precedence.

Mr. MILLS. But has the gentleman the floor to debate the question when the previous question has been demanded?

The SPEAKER. It was not demanded on this proposition, but on the resolution offered by the gentleman from Georgia. This is a motion of superior dignity.

Mr. DIBBLE. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE].

Mr. HEMPHILL. I would like to submit a motion, to be read in connection with that already pending—a motion that the House recede with instructions——

The SPEAKER. The House can not recede with instructions. The House can recede from its disagreement to an amendment, and can concur in the amendment with an amendment; but the House can not recede and at the same time instruct the conferees.

Mr. SCOTT. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. HERBERT. I hope that motion will not carry. I desire to ask that there be a session to-night for the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, there were—ayes 87, noes 46.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered, there being—ayes 11, noes 85; less than one-fifth voting in the affirmative.

So the motion to adjourn was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. PETERS: A bill (H. R. 12656) granting a pensions to Elizabeth W. Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROGERS: A bill (H. R. 12657) to grant a lease for a bath-house at Hot Springs, Ark.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. TOWNSHEND: A bill (H. R. 12658) for the extension and improvement of Fifth street northwest—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12659) for the extension of Whitney avenue, in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. A. R. ANDERSON: Affidavit to accompany House bill No. 4662—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BOOHER: Petition of John M. Holt, of Atchison County, Missouri, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BRUMM: Petition of citizens of the Sixth district of Kentucky, asking for the reopening of the election case of Thobe vs. Carlisle—to the Committee on Elections.

By Mr. CARUTH: Petition of Geo. A. Rougee, administrator of John Rougee, of Eliza H. White, widow of Bartlett B. White, and of Perry Crosthwait, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DORSEY: Memorial of farmers of Nebraska, for an increase of the currency of the country—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Petition of Hughes Post, No. 285, and of Philip H. Sheridan Post, No. 328, Grand Army of the Republic, for an appropriation for publishing war records—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. HERMANN: Resolutions of Multnomah Typographical Union, in favor of the Breckinridge international copyright bill—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. O'FERRALL: Petition of Henry Huyett, of Clarke County, Virginia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL: Memorial of the Philadelphia Maritime Exchange, asking the House of Representatives to recede from its amendments to Senate bill No. 2851, amending the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. OUTHWAITE: Resolutions of W. H. Fowler Post, No. 366, Grand Army of the Republic, in favor of appropriations of money for publishing war records—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. RICE: Memorial of the Secular Society of Minneapolis, Minn., against the Sunday-rest bill, etc.—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. ROBERTSON: Petition of heirs of Hermina Porche, of East Baton Rouge Parish, Louisiana, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. T. L. THOMPSON: Concurrent resolutions of the Legislature of California, for the improvement of Eel River, California—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

The following petitions for a national Sunday-rest law were received and severally referred to the Committee on Labor:

By Mr. T. J. CAMPBELL: Of 395 citizens of New York.

By Mr. HUDD: Of 336 citizens of Wisconsin.

By Mr. H. G. TURNER: Of H. H. Tucker and others, of Georgia.

By Mr. VOORHEES: Of 187 citizens of Washington Territory.

The following petitions, praying for a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage, were received and severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. BREWER: Of 215 citizens of Ovid, Mich.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Of 179 citizens of Mount Holly, N. J.

By Mr. KEAN: Of 214 citizens of Ocean Grove, N. J.

By Mr. McCOMAS: Of citizens of Rockville, of Lay Hill, of Potomac, of Buckeystown, of Williamsport, of Hagerstown, of Smithsburgh, of Sharpsburgh, of Keedysville, of Smithsburgh, Md., and of the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of Maryland.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 28, 1889.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House requested the return of the bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3993) to provide for the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska with an amendment in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 157) correcting the military history of Robert McNutt; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. REAGAN presented resolutions adopted by the Southwestern Lumber Manufacturers' Association, representing the States of Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas, favoring the passage of the bill for the organization of Oklahoma Territory; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CALL. I present joint resolutions of the Legislature of Florida, which I ask may be read.

The joint resolutions were read, as follows:

Whereas the State of Florida has a just and valid claim against the Government of the United States for reimbursement of money actually paid out to troops used in the suppression of Indian hostilities which should be paid over to the State without further delay; and

Whereas the Legislature of Florida, recognizing the justice of the aforesaid claim and the importance of a settlement thereof without further delay to meet the urgent demands upon the State for funds to protect the health of her people and the people of the whole country: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Florida, the senate and house concurring therein by a two-thirds vote of each, That our Senators and Representatives are hereby requested to urge the passage by the present Congress of an act appropriating a sufficient sum to repay the State of Florida for the money expended in the suppression of Indian hostilities.

Resolved, second, That these resolutions be enrolled and signed by the president of the senate and speaker of the house, and a copy be sent to our representatives in Congress.

Passed the senate February 19, 1889.

PATRICK HOUSTOUN,
President of the Senate.
CHARLES A. FINLEY,
Secretary of the Senate.

Passed the house of representatives February 20, 1889.

J. L. GASKINS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
WILLIAM H. REYNOLDS,
Chief Clerk House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What disposition does the Senator desire made of the joint resolution?

Mr. CALL. Inasmuch as the bill to which they refer has been favorably reported from the Committee on Claims and is now on the Calendar, I move that the joint resolutions lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN presented the petition of W. H. Baldwin, jr., and 509 others (218 voters and 292 women), citizens of Cecil and Howard Counties, in the State of Maryland, and a petition of the Independent Order of Good Templars of Rockville, Md., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, transportation, sale, etc., of alcoholic liquors; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. VEST presented a memorial of citizens of St. Louis, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill or any similar legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Southwestern Lumber Manufacturers' Association, representing the States of Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas, favoring the passage of the bill for the organization of Oklahoma Territory; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. TELLER presented the petition of Henry Brown and the petition of William Wright, masters United States Light-House Establishment, praying that their names may be placed upon the active-list of the United States Navy with the rank of lieutenant not in the line of promotion; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a memorial of 130 citizens of Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented the petition of H. B. Geringer and 96 others (48 voters and 49 women), citizens of Delta and Yost Top, Fulton County, Ohio, and the petition of John C. White and 38 others (25 voters and 14 women), citizens of Piqua, Ohio, praying for the proposal of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of alcoholic liquors as a beverage; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HAWLEY presented the petition of O. G. McIntire and 22 others, citizens of South Windsor, Conn., and the petition of R. F. Cooper and 32 others, citizens of Westport, Conn., praying for a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PADDOCK presented the petition of J. H. Estey and 65 other citizens of Salem, Nebr.; the petition of James Griere and 122 other citizens of Wessington Springs, Dak.; the petition of J. T. Barnett and 81 other citizens of Buffalo, Dak., and the petition of William McCready and 135 other citizens of Aberdeen, Dak., praying for a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MORGAN. I present the petition of Patrick Doran, formerly a messenger of one of the committees of this body, which has heretofore been referred to the Committee on Claims and reported upon favorably. I present it with a view of having it referred to the Committee on Appropriations, thinking that it is a proper item to be provided for in the deficiency appropriation bill.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of citizens of Lee, Ind., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. McPHERSON presented petitions of citizens of Elmer and Ocean Grove, in the State of New Jersey, praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented three memorials of citizens of Atlantic Highlands and other places in New Jersey, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HOAR presented the petition of Elmer Parker and 37 others (21 voters and 17 women), citizens of Worcester, Mass., and the petition of J. M. Ball and 23 others (12 voters and 12 women), citizens of Holden, Mass., praying for the proposal of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. EVARTS presented the petition of the American Export and Trading Company of New York, praying such legislation as will promote the more intimate commercial relations of the United States with the several countries of Mexico, Central and South America, the West Indies, and other foreign countries, to the end that American shipping may be revived and American commercial interests and intercourse with foreign countries may be stimulated and encouraged; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. MORRILL presented the petition of E. T. Smith and 52 others, citizens of Corinth, Vt., and the petition of A. M. Allbe and 30 others, citizens of Springfield, Vt., praying for the passage of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

POLICE FORCE OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the request of the House of Representatives to return the bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883, and for other purposes.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been enrolled, and signed by the President of the Senate.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Has it been signed by the Speaker of the House?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. And by the Speaker of the House. It is a House bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move that it be returned, and let the House get out of it as best they can.

The motion was agreed to.

SALMON FISHERIES OF ALASKA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3993) to provide for the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska.

The amendment of the House of Representatives was, to add to the bill as a new section:

SEC. 3. That section 1956 of the Revised Statutes of the United States was intended to include and apply, and is hereby declared to include and apply, to all the waters of Behring Sea, in Alaska, embraced within the boundary lines mentioned and described in the treaty with Russia dated March 30, A. D. 1867, by which the Territory of Alaska was ceded to the United States; and it shall be the duty of the President, at a timely season in each year, to issue his proclamation and cause the same to be published for one month in at least one newspaper published at each United States port of entry on the Pacific coast, warning all persons against entering said Territory and waters for the purpose of violating said provisions of said section; and he shall also cause one or more vessels of the United States to diligently cruise in said waters and arrest all persons and seize all vessels found to be or to have been engaged in any violation of the laws of the United States therein.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That amendment raises a very important and in some respects a difficult question, if it means what those who advance it intend it to mean. If it does not mean that, and only applies to fishing for seals by citizens of the United States in Behring Sea while the subjects of Her Majesty are to be permitted to fish there, then it makes a very curious discrimination. The question is so delicate and important in those respects that I think I ought to move that the amendment be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. HOAR. The amendment presents the great question whether the United States propose to assert the doctrine of mare clausum in regard to a sea larger than the Mediterranean and the gate-way to which is 450 miles wide. I think it should be very carefully considered by the Committee on Foreign Relations. While I suppose every member on this side of the Chamber means to affirm to their fullest extent the rights of the United States in those waters, it is very important that we have the advice of an experienced committee before affirming a particular principle, and, indeed, as to the phraseology and form of the affirmation which need be made as well as the substance.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. I hope the bill and amendment will be referred.

Mr. MORGAN. Before the bill is referred I desire to say a word about the amendment. I do not understand that section 3 proposed to the bill does present the question of mare clausum. It presents simply the question whether the United States having on the Aleutian Islands very valuable fur-seal fisheries have the right to protect those animals in seas that do not belong strictly to the mare clausum principle, and which are very valuable to commerce, against that kind of fishing and hunting that is utterly destructive of the whole of the generation of fur-seals.

The principle upon which I understand the amendment to be based is entirely independent of any treaty stipulation between the United States and any foreign country, although in view of our treaty relations with Russia upon the subject of the Alaskan purchase and Russia's former assertion of the right to control the waters of the Behring Sea, I could not permit myself to admit on the floor of the Senate that that pretension of Russia was entirely unjust and that in purchasing Alaska we did not succeed to her rights in that particular.

But I desired only to say that I do not consider that the question of mare clausum is involved in the third section proposed to the bill by the House of Representatives.

Mr. STEWART. The original bill for the protection of the salmon fisheries is quite important to be acted upon, and I merely express the hope that the Committee on Foreign Relations will find time to bring it back at an early day, because at another season they might destroy the salmon fisheries practically by the dams and other contrivances that are going on there for the purpose, and that matter becomes important.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the bill with the amendment proposed by the House of Representatives will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6050) referring the claim of the owners of the steamer I. N. Bunton to the Court of Claims, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. VOORHEES on the 27th instant, intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill, reported it favorably, and it was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3192) granting increase of pension to Daniel H. Kent, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4624) for the relief of the estate of John W. Whitfield, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BATE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 1067) to amend the war record of Alfred H. Thomas, deceased; and

A bill (H. R. 9949) for the relief of Patrick C. McQueeny.

Mr. BATE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of John H. Edwards, praying for compensation for military services rendered, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3405) for the relief of Albert Grant, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of James B. Blackstone, praying for the payment of a balance of bounty claimed by him, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9271) for the relief of James A. Stewart, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PLATT, from the Committee on Territories, submitted a report to accompany the bill (S. 2445) to provide for the formation and admission into the Union of the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes; which was ordered to be printed.

WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT TUNNEL.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Referring to the report I made two or three days ago from the joint select committee relating to the Washington water supply and which the Senate at that time only ordered to be printed as to the text of the report and one or two papers that were then returned, I stated at the time that there was a great mass of testimony and also a large number of maps and profile drawings, etc., that I would file in the Secretary's office to save bringing them in here. I now move that the testimony taken by the committee, and such parts of the maps and drawings as the chairman of that committee may think it advisable to print—I do not want to print them all if I can help it—be printed for the use of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3431) for the erection of a public building at the city of Kalamazoo, Mich.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had appointed Mr. ERMENTROUT, Mr. CRAIN, and Mr. BAKER of New York members on the part of the House to co-operate with the committee appointed by the Senate to take charge of the arrangements for the inaugural ceremonies at the Capitol on the 4th of March.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. BOWEN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

WHITE RIVER BRIDGE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there further morning business? If not that order is closed, and under the agreement of the Senate the Secretary will report the first bridge bill on the Calendar reported favorably from the Committee on Commerce.

The SECRETARY. Order of Business 2659, the bill (S. 3728) authorizing the Midland Railroad Company to build a bridge over White River at Aberdeen, Ark.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, before the word "feet," in line 4, to strike out "fifty" and insert "sixty-five;" so as to read:

That if said bridge shall be made with unbroken and continuous spans, there shall be at least one span of a height of not less than 80 feet above low water, or 65 feet above high water, measured to the lowest part of the superstructure of said bridge, and said span shall have a clear opening of at least 300 feet between the piers measured at right angles to the current at every stage, and shall be over that portion of the river used by boats during ordinary stages of water, and the bridge shall be at right angles to, and the piers parallel with, the current of the river.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, after the word "Arkansas," at the end of line 14, to strike out "in which" and insert "within whose jurisdiction;" so as to read:

And in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to the free navigation of said river, caused or alleged to be caused by said bridge, the case may be brought in the district court of the United States of the State of Arkansas within whose jurisdiction any portion of said obstruction or bridge is located.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, line 17, before the word "built," to insert "commenced or;" so as to read:

And until the said plan and location of the bridge are approved by the Secretary of War the bridge shall not be commenced or built; and should any change be made in the plan of said bridge during the progress of construction such change shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert as a new section:

SEC. 8. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be not commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MILL CREEK BRIDGE, IN VIRGINIA.

The bill (S. 2299) for the construction of an iron bridge from the military reservation at Fortress Monroe to Elizabeth City County, Virginia, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in line 7, after the words "sum of," to strike out "twenty" and insert "twenty-five;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to construct and maintain an iron bridge over Mill Creek, in the State of Virginia, from the military reservation at Fortress Monroe to Elizabeth City County, in the said State of Virginia; and the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be needed, is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE OVER EASTERN BRANCH OF POTOMAC.

The bill (S. 3900) to authorize the Secretary of War to make a survey, plan, and estimate of the cost of constructing a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River, in the District of Columbia, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE OVER ST. JOHN'S RIVER, FLORIDA.

The bill (H. R. 10588) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the St. John's River, in the State of Florida, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of executive business, stating that it will take but a few minutes and will not delay the order heretofore made. I believe it important.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio moves that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After thirteen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

KENTUCKY RIVER BRIDGES.

The bill (H. R. 11573) to authorize the construction of bridges across the Kentucky River was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 8, after the words "over the," to strike out "contributaries" and insert "tributaries;" so as to read:

That the Kentucky Midland Railway Company, a corporation organized under the act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, be, and it is hereby, authorized to construct and maintain a bridge, and approaches thereto, over the Kentucky River, in the State of Kentucky; and also a bridge or bridges over the tributaries or forks of said river at such point or points as said company may deem suitable for the passage of its said road over said river or its tributaries or forks.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 10, after "foot-passengers," to insert:

But the rates of toll charged for the passage over said bridge of wagons, vehicles, animals, and foot-passengers shall be submitted to the Secretary of War and approved by him before said company shall collect such tolls.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 6, after the word "telegraph," to insert "and telephone;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That any bridge built under this act and subject to its limitations shall be a lawful structure, and shall be recognized and known as a post-route, and it shall enjoy the rights and privileges of other post-roads in the United States, and equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 9, after the word "be," to insert "commenced or;" and in line 12, after the words "Secretary of War," to insert "and the expense of such change or of any change required by the Secretary of War in such bridge after its completion shall be paid by the corporation or persons owning or operating said bridge;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That any bridge authorized to be constructed under this act shall be built and located under and subject to such regulations for the security of navigation of said river as the Secretary of War shall prescribe, and to secure that object the said company or corporation shall submit to the Secretary of War, for his examination and approval, a design and drawing of the bridge, and a map of the location thereof; and until the said plan and location of the bridge are approved by the Secretary of War the bridge shall not be commenced or built; and should any change be made in the plan of said bridge during the progress of construction, such change shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, and the expense of such change or of any change required by the Secretary of War in such bridge after its completion shall be paid by the corporation or persons owning or operating said bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VEST. This is a House bill amended. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and ask for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE.

The bill (H. R. 11649) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River, between the city of Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, and Platte County, in the State of Missouri, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ILLINOIS RIVER BRIDGE.

The bill (S. 3951) to establish a railway bridge across the Illinois River extending from a point within 5 miles of Columbiana, in Greene County, to a point within 5 miles of Kampsville, in Calhoun County, in the State of Illinois, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments. The first amendment was, in section 1, line 4, after the word "Company," to insert "a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois;" in line 7, after the words "Illinois River," to strike out "extending from" and insert "between;" in line 9, after the words "Greene County," to strike out "to" and insert "and;" in line 12, after the word "river," to strike out "beyond what is necessary in order to carry into effect the rights and privileges hereby granted," and in line 15, before the words "district courts," to strike out "cause may be tried before" and insert "same shall be instituted and determined in;" so as to make the section read:

That the Litchfield, Carrollton and Western Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, its successors and assigns, are hereby authorized and empowered to erect, establish, and maintain a railway bridge across the Illinois River between a point to be by them selected within 5 miles of Columbiana, in Greene County, and a point to be selected by them, within 5 miles of Kampsville, in Calhoun County, in the State of Illinois; and that said bridge shall not interfere with the free navigation of said river, and in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to the free navigation of said river, the same shall be instituted and determined in the district court of the United States for the southern district of the State of Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 6, after the word "shall," to strike out:

Not be of less elevation in any case than 50 feet above extreme high-water mark as understood at the point of location to the bottom chord of the bridge, nor shall the spans of said bridge be less than 250 feet in length.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Have one or more channel spans, each having not less than 350 feet clear channel-way, and not less than 55 feet clear head-room above high-water mark, and the clear head-room under the other channel spans may be less than 55 feet: Provided, That no part of the superstructure of such spans shall give a less head-room than 10 feet above high-water mark: And provided further, That the interests of navigation be not injured by such reduction in height.

So as to read:

SEC. 2. That any bridge built under the provisions of this act may, at the option of the company building the same, be built as a draw-bridge, with a pivot or other form of draw, or with unbroken or continuous spans: Provided, That if the said bridge shall be built with unbroken or continuous spans it shall have one or more channel spans, each having not less than 350 feet clear channel-way and not less than 55 feet clear head-room above high-water mark, and the clear head-room under the other channel spans may be less than 55 feet: Provided, That no part of the superstructure of such spans shall give a less head-room than 10 feet above high-water mark: And provided further, That the interests of navigation be not injured by such reduction in height.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 20, before the word "feet," to insert "and fifty;" so as to read:

And the piers of said bridge shall be parallel with the current of said river, and the main span shall be over the main channel of the river, and not less than 350 feet in length.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 25, before the word "feet," to strike out "fifty" and insert "sixty;" in line 28, before the word "hundred," to strike out "one" and insert "three;" and in line 28, after the word "length," to strike out:

And such additional spans as may be required shall not be less than 100 feet in length, and said spans shall not be less than 30 feet above low-water mark, and not less than 10 feet above high-water mark, measuring to the bottom chord of the bridge.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

And every part of the superstructure shall give a clear head-room of not less than 10 feet above high-water mark.

So as to make the proviso read:

And provided also, That if any bridge built under this act shall be constructed as a draw-bridge, the same shall be constructed as a pivot draw-bridge, with a draw over the main channel of the river at an accessible and navigable point and with spans of not less than 160 feet in length on each side of the central or pivot pier of the draw; and the next adjoining spans to the draw shall not be less than 350 feet in length; and every part of the superstructure shall give a clear head-room of not less than 10 feet above high-water mark.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 35, after the words "high water," to insert:

Provided, That the spans of both high and low bridges shall be so located as to afford the greatest possible accommodation to the river traffic, and a draw-opening of low bridges shall, if practicable, be located next or near shore.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, line 16, before the word "built," to insert "commenced or;" in line 25, after the words "prescribed by," to strike out "Secretary of War" and insert "Light-House Board;" in line 27, after the word "as," to strike out "Congress" and insert "the Secretary of War;" and in line 29, after the word "river," to strike out:

And the authority to erect and continue said bridge shall be subject to modification by law whenever the public good shall, in the judgment of Congress, so require, without any expense or charge to the United States.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the structure herein authorized shall be built and located under and subject to such regulations for the security of navigation of said river as the Secretary of War shall prescribe; and to secure that object the said company or corporation shall submit to the Secretary of War for his examination and approval a design and drawings of said bridge and a map of the location, giving, for the space of 1 mile above and 1 mile below the proposed location, the topography of the banks of the river, the shore-lines at high and low water, the direction and strength of the current at all stages, and the soundings, accurately showing the bed of the stream, the location of any other bridge or bridges, and shall furnish such other information as may be required for a full and satisfactory understanding of the subject; and until the said plan and location of the bridge are approved by the Secretary of War the bridge shall not be commenced or built, and should any change be made in the plan of said bridge during the process of construction such change shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War; and the said structure shall be at all times so managed and kept as to offer reasonable and proper means for the passage of vessels through or under said structure; and to secure the safe passage of vessels at night there shall be displayed on said bridge, from the hour of sunset to that of sunrise, such lights as may be prescribed by the Light-House Board, and the said structure shall be changed, at the cost and expense of the owners thereof, from time to time, as the Secretary of War may direct, so as to preserve the free and convenient navigation of said river.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert as a new section:

SEC. 6. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be not commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended, so as to read: "A bill to establish a railway bridge across the Illinois River, between a point within 5 miles of Columbiana, in Greene County, and a point within 5 miles of Kampsville, in Calhoun County, in the State of Illinois."

Mr. VEST. I see by a mistake in the bill the clause reserving the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act has been omitted. That clause should be inserted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By unanimous consent that clause will be inserted. The Chair hears no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS POTEAU RIVER.

The bill (H. R. 11735) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Fort Smith and Choctaw Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Poteau River, in the Choctaw Nation, near Fort Smith, Ark.," was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, which were, in section 1, line 15, before the word "amount," to insert "the;" in line 16, after the word "the," to strike out "inhabitants" and insert "individual members;" in line 19, before the word "company," to strike out the word "and" and insert "of said;" in the same line, after the word "and," to strike out the words "among each other" and to insert "the company between the stockholders;" in line 20, after the word "jurisdiction," to insert "of said courts;" in line 22, after the word "distinction," to strike out "of" and insert "as to;" in the same line, to strike out "citezenship" and insert "citizenship;" and in line 23, before the word "parties," to strike out the words "as to" and insert "of the;" so that the section will read:

That an act entitled "An act to authorize the Fort Smith and Choctaw Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Poteau River, in the Choctaw Nation, near Fort Smith, Ark.," approved June 18, 1888, be amended as follows:

"That the district court of the United States for the western district of Arkansas, or such other court of the United States as may have jurisdiction over the Indian Territory in which said bridge is located, shall have jurisdiction over all controversies arising between the said Fort Smith and Choctaw Bridge Company and the Choctaw tribe of Indians; and said court shall have like jurisdiction, without reference to the amount in controversy, over all controversies arising between the individual members of said nation or tribe of Indians and said bridge company, and also over all controversies which may arise between the stockholders of said company, and the company between the stockholders; and the civil jurisdiction of said courts is hereby extended within the limits of said Indian Nation without distinction as to citizenship of the parties so far as the same may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, and ask for a conference with the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

BRIDGE OVER RED RIVER AT SHREVEPORT.

The bill (H. R. 11782) to approve and ratify the construction by the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company of the bridge over the Red River at Shreveport, La., and the bridge over the Ouachita River at Monroe, La., and to authorize said railroad company to maintain said bridges over said water ways, subject to certain stipulations and conditions, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VEST. I move to strike out the word "Texas" in the title and wherever it is found in the bill and insert "Pacific" instead; so as to read, "the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific Railroad."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the word "Texas" will be stricken out of the bill where it occurs, and the word "Pacific" will be inserted, and the same amendment made in the title. The title as proposed to be amended will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 11782) to approve and ratify the construction by the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific Railroad Company of the bridge over the Red River at Shreveport, La., and the bridge over the Ouachita River, at Monroe, La., and to authorize said railroad company to maintain said bridges over said water ways, subject to certain stipulations and conditions.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and ask for a conference with the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

BRIDGES OVER MISSOURI RIVER.

The bill (H. R. 12515) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at the most accessible point between the mouth of the Femme Osage Creek and a point 2 miles above the city of St. Charles, in the county of St. Charles, in the State of Missouri," was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGES OVER GREEN AND BARREN RIVERS.

The bill (H. R. 12524) to authorize the construction of bridges over Green and Barren Rivers, in the State of Kentucky, by the Henderson State Line Railroad Company, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 11, after the word "which," to strike out "it" and insert "they;" so that the section will read:

That the Henderson State Line Railroad Company, organized under an act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct and maintain one or more bridges, and approaches thereto, over Green River and Barren River, in the State of Kentucky, at such points as said company may deem suitable for the passage of its said road over said rivers. Said bridges shall be constructed to provide for the passage of railway trains, and, at the option of the corporation by which they may be built, may be used for the passage of wagons and vehicles of all kinds, for the transit of animals, and for foot-passengers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 4, after the word "privileges," to strike out the word "of" and insert "as;" and in line 6, after the word "telegraph," to insert the words "and telephone;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That any bridges built under this act and subject to its limitations shall be lawful structures and shall be recognized and known as post-routes, and they shall enjoy the same rights and privileges as other post-roads in the United States. Equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies, and the United States shall have the right of way across said bridge and its approaches for postal-telegraph purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, line 3, after the words "security of," to insert the word "the;" in line 10, before the word "built," to insert "commenced or," and at the end of the section to insert:

And all changes in said bridges required by the Secretary of War at any time or their entire removal shall be at the expense of the corporations or persons owning or operating said bridges.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. That any bridges authorized to be constructed under this act shall be built and located under and subject to such regulations for the security of the navigation of said river as the Secretary of War shall prescribe, and to secure that object the said company or corporation shall submit to the Secretary of War, for his examination and approval, a design and drawing of the bridges and a map of the location thereof, and until the said plan and location of the bridges are approved by the Secretary of War the bridges shall not be commenced or built; and should any changes be made in the plan of said bridges during the progress of construction such changes shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, and all changes in said bridges required by the Secretary of War at any time or their entire removal shall be at the expense of the corporations or persons owning or operating said bridges.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and ask for a conference with the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

BRIDGE ACROSS OSAGE RIVER.

The bill (H. R. 12389) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Osage River at some accessible point in the county of Benton, in the State of Missouri.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, line 3, after the word "river," to strike out "beyond what is necessary to carry into effect the rights and privileges hereby granted;" in line 15, after the word "be," to insert "or commenced;" and in line 16, after the word "be," to strike out "made" and insert "built;" so that the section will read:

SEC. 2. That said bridge shall be constructed and built without interference with the security and convenience of navigation of said river, and in order to secure that object the said company or corporation shall submit to the Secretary of War, for his examination and approval, a design and drawings of the bridge, and a map of the location, giving, for the space of one-half mile above and one-half mile below the proposed location, the topography of the banks of the river, the shore-lines at high and low water, the location of any other bridge or bridges, and shall furnish such other information as may be required for a full and satisfactory understanding of the subject; and until the said plan and location of the bridge are approved by the Secretary of War the bridge shall not be commenced or built: Provided, That if the said bridge shall be built with unbroken and continuous spans, they shall conform in length and height to the requirements of the Secretary of War, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert at the end of section 3:

All changes in said bridge required at any time by the Secretary of War shall be made at the expense of the persons or corporations owning or controlling said bridge.

So as to read:

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed, upon receiving the plan and map and other information, and upon being satisfied that a bridge built on such plan and with such accessory works and at such locality will conform to the prescribed conditions of this act, to notify the company that he approves the same; and upon receiving such notification the said company may proceed to an erection of said bridge, conforming strictly to the approved plan and location; and should any change be made in the plan of the bridge or said accessory works during the progress of the works thereon such change shall be subject likewise to the approval of the Secretary of War; and in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to the free navigation of said river, caused or alleged to be caused by said bridge, the case may be brought in the circuit court of the United States of the district of the State of Missouri in whose jurisdiction any portion of said obstruction or bridge may be located. All changes in said bridge required at any time by the Secretary of War shall be made at the expense of the persons or corporation owning or controlling said bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert, at the end of section 5, the words:

And all telegraph and telephone companies shall have equal privileges as to said bridge.

So that the section will read:

SEC. 5. That the United States shall have the right of way for such postal and telegraph lines across said bridge as the Government may construct and control, and all telegraph and telephone companies shall have equal privileges as to said bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, line 3, after the word "all," to strike out the words "material and substantial;" so that the section will read:

SEC. 6. That Congress shall have power at any time to alter, amend, or repeal this act, so as to prevent or remove all obstructions to the navigation of said river by the construction of said bridge and its accessory works; and all alterations of said bridge shall be made and all such obstructions shall be removed at the expense of the owners of or persons controlling said bridge, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and ask for a conference with the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE AT LYONS, IOWA.

The bill (H. R. 12489) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Lyons, Iowa, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments. The first amendment was, in section 1, line 6, after the word "maintain," to strike out "if in the opinion of the Secretary of War the same be a public necessity;" in line 9, after the word "River," to strike out "at a place suitable to the interests of navigation;" in line 16, after the word "river," to strike out "beyond what is necessary in order to carry into effect the rights and privileges hereby granted;" in line 22, after the word "obstruction," to strike out "touches" and insert "is located;" and at the end of the section to strike out the proviso: "Provided, That this proviso shall not influence the location of said bridge in its relation to the interests of navigation;" so as to make the section read:

That the Lyons and Fulton Bridge Company, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Iowa, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct and maintain a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at a point at or near the city of Lyons, Iowa, under the limitations and conditions hereinafter provided, and to lay on or over said bridge a track or tracks for the more perfect connection of any railroad or railroads that are or may be constructed to said river, on either or both sides thereof, at or opposite said point. That said bridge shall not interfere with the free navigation of said river, and in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to the free navigation of said river, the cause may be tried before the circuit court of the United States in and for any district in which any portion of said bridge or obstruction is located. Said bridge shall be constructed to provide for the safe and convenient passage of railroad trains, wagons, and vehicles of all kinds, animals, and foot-passengers, for such reasonable rates of toll as may be fixed from time to time, subject to approval and change by the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 9, after the word "granted," to strike out "to all, including;" and in line 10, after the word "railroad," to insert "telephone;" and in line 12, after the word "for," to strike out "said;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That any bridge constructed under this act and according to its limitations shall be a lawful structure, and shall be known as a post-route, and the same is hereby declared to be a post-route, upon which also no higher charge shall be made for the transmission over the same of the mails, the troops, and the munitions of war of the United States than the rate per mile paid for their transportation over the railroads and public highways leading to said bridge; and equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted all railroad, telephone, and telegraph companies, and the United States shall have the right of way across said bridge and its approaches for postal-telegraph purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, line 1, after the word "railroad," to strike out "and telegraph;" so as to read:

SEC. 4. That all railroad and other companies desiring to use said bridge shall have and be entitled to equal rights and privileges in the passage of the same, and in the use of the machinery and fixtures thereof, and of all the approaches thereto, under and upon such terms and conditions as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War, upon hearing the allegations and proofs of the parties, in case they shall not agree.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, line 38, after the word "Congress," to insert "or the Secretary of War," and in line 42, after the word "Congress," to insert "or the Secretary of War;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the structure herein authorized shall be built and located under and subject to such regulations for the security of the navigation of said river as the Secretary of War shall prescribe; and to secure that object the said company or corporation shall submit to the Secretary of War, for his examination and approval, a design and drawing of the bridge and a map of the location, giving, for the space of 1 mile above and 1 mile below the proposed location, the topography of the banks of the river, the shore-line at high and low water, the direction and strength of the current at all stages, and the soundings, accurately showing the bed of the stream, the location of any bridge or bridges, and shall furnish such other information as shall be required for a full and satisfactory understanding of the subject; and until the said plan and location of the bridge are decided by the Secretary of War to be such as will not materially or unnecessarily affect the interests of navigation the bridge shall not be commenced or built; and should any change be made in the plan of said bridge during the progress of construction, such change shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War; and the said bridge shall be constructed with such aids to the passage of said bridge, in the form of booms, dikes, piers, or other suitable and proper structures for confining the flow of water to a permanent and easily navigated channel, for a distance of not less than 1 mile above the bridge location, and for the guiding of rafts, steam-boats, and other water craft safely through the draw and raft spans, as the Secretary of War shall from time to time prescribe and order to be constructed and maintained at the expense of the company owning said bridge; and the said structure shall be at all times so kept and managed as to offer reasonable and proper means for the passage of vessels through or under said structure; and for the safety of vessels passing at night there shall be displayed on said bridge, from the hours of sunset to sunrise, such lights as may be prescribe by the Light-House Board; and the said structure shall be changed or removed at the cost and expense of the owners thereof from time to time as Congress or the Secretary of War may direct, so as to preserve the free and convenient navigation of said river; and the authority to erect and continue said bridge shall be subject to revocation and modification by law, when the public good shall, in the judgment of Congress or the Secretary of War so require, without any expense or charge to the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and ask a conference with the House of Representatives thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE ARKANSAS RIVER.

The bill (H. R. 10721) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River at or near Cummings Landing, Lincoln County, Arkansas, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, line 11, after the word "telegraph," to insert "and telephone;" so as to read:

Equal privileges in use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies; and the United States shall have the right of way across said bridge and its approaches for postal-telegraph purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, after the word "conditions," at the end of line 8, to strike out "which each shall perform in" and insert "for;" and in line 11, after the word "hearing," to strike out the word "of;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. That all railroad companies desiring the use of said bridge shall have, and be entitled to, equal rights and privileges relative to the passage of railway trains over the same, and over the approaches to the same, upon payment of a reasonable compensation for such use; and in case the owner or owners of said bridge, and the several railroad companies, or any of them, desiring such use, shall fail to agree upon the sum or sums to be paid, and upon rules and conditions for using said bridge, all matters at issue between them shall be decided by the Secretary of War upon hearing the allegations and proofs of the parties.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, line 3, before the word "regulations," to strike out "the" and insert "such;" so as to read:

That any bridge authorized to be constructed under this act shall be built and located under and subject to such regulations for the security of said river as the Secretary of War shall prescribe.]

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, line 4, after the word "Congress," to insert "or Secretary of War;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 6. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved, and the right to require any changes in said structure or its entire removal at the expense of the owners thereof, whenever the Congress or Secretary of War shall decide that the public interest requires it, is also expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and ask for a conference with the House of Representatives thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

BRIDGE ACROSS RED RIVER, LOUISIANA.

The bill (H. R. 10319) to authorize the Natchitoches Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Red River, in Louisiana, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH SIOUX RESERVATION.

The bill (S. 2029) granting right of way to the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company through the Sioux Indian reservation was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, after the word "course," in section 1, line 13, to insert "between the Cheyenne and Moreau Rivers;" so as to make the section read:

That the right of way is hereby granted, as hereinafter set forth, to the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company, a corporation duly organized under the general incorporation laws of the Territory of Dakota, its successors and assigns, for the construction, operation, and maintenance of its railroad through the lands set apart for the use of the Sioux Indians and commonly known as the Sioux Indian reservation, beginning at a point on the west bank of the Missouri River in Dewey County, Dakota, opposite Forest City, Potter County, Dakota Territory, running thence by the most practicable route in a southwesterly course between the Cheyenne and Moreau Rivers to the city of Deadwood, Dak.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 9, after the word "until," to insert:

The consent of such Indians as are entitled to such compensation shall be obtained thereto in such manner as the President of the United States may direct, and until.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to fix the amount of compensation to be paid the Indians for such right of way, and provide the time and manner for the payment thereof, and also to ascertain and fix the amount of compensation to be made individual members of the tribe for damages sustained by them by reason of the construction of said road; but no right of any kind shall vest in said railway company in or to any part of the right of way herein provided for until the consent of such Indians as are entitled to such compensation shall be obtained thereto in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct, and until plats thereof, made upon actual survey for the definite location of such railroad, and including the points for station-buildings, depots, machine-shops, side-tracks, turnouts, and water-stations shall be filed with and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and until the compensation aforesaid has been fixed and paid; and the surveys, construction, and operation of such railroad shall be conducted with due regard for the rights of the Indians, and in accordance with such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may make to carry out this provision.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert as a new section:

SEC. 5. That Congress shall have at all times power to alter, amend, or repeal this act and revoke all rights hereunder.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS TALLAPOOSA RIVER.

Mr. VEST. I ought to have reported yesterday from the Committee on Commerce the bill (S. 3995) to authorize the Montgomery and Sylacauga Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Tallapoosa River. I now report that bill with amendments, and ask that it be taken up and considered at this time.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 2, line 6, after the word "telegraph," to insert "and telephone;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That any bridge built under this act and subject to its limitations shall be a lawful structure, and shall be recognized and known as a post-route, and it shall enjoy the rights and privileges of other post-roads in the United States, and equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies; and the United States shall have the right of way over said bridge for postal-telegraph purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, line 17, before the word "built," to insert "commenced or;" so as to read:

And until the said plan and location of the bridge are approved by the Secretary of War the bridge shall not be commenced or built, and should any change be made in the plan of said bridge during the progress of construction such changes shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the end of section 4, to add:

And the expense of such change and of any other changes at any time required by the Secretary of War in said bridge, or its entire removal after being completed if the Secretary of War deems the same necessary, shall be paid by the persons or corporation owning or controlling said bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HAMPTON AND OLD POINT RAILWAY.

The bill (S. 2828) granting right of way and other privileges to the Hampton and Old Point Railway Company was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 16, after the word "corporation," to strike out:

Provided, That the privilege hereby granted shall at all times be subject to be rescinded by order of the Secretary of War, and that the said corporation shall at any time when so ordered by the Secretary of War remove its rails and all other fixtures and appurtenances: Provided also, That the location of said road shall follow the water line of Hampton Roads from the bridge across Mill Creek along the western side of the land ceded to the United States by Virginia, terminating at the pier on Hampton Roads, unless a different location be made by order of the Secretary of War: And provided further, That the said road shall be constructed through to the land ceded to the Government upon such route, plans, and dimensions as may be approved by the Secretary of War: And provided further, That the charges for transportation of any inmate of either the said Soldiers' Home or Hampton Institute over the entire line of said street railway, one way, shall not exceed 10 cents, and the charge for like transportation of any package not exceeding 20 pounds in weight and belonging to any inmate of either said home or said institute shall not exceed 10 cents: And provided further, That the privilege herein granted shall be determined and become void unless the said road shall be completed and put in operation between the points aforesaid within two years from the passage of this act.

And to insert in lieu thereof:

subject to the following provisions:

First. Said railroad shall cross Mill Creek upon a bridge distinct from the existing bridge owned by the United States or upon such bridge additional to and united to the existing bridge as may be approved by the Secretary of War. It shall follow the water line of Hampton Roads along the western side of the land ceded to the United States by Virginia, terminating at some point north of the quartermaster's pier, or near to and on the west of the highway nearly opposite the main entrance to Fortress Monroe.

Second. So much of said road as may be upon said lands ceded as aforesaid shall be constructed upon such plans and dimensions as may be approved by the Secretary of War.

Third. The manner and times of running cars of said road shall be subject to such special orders or general regulations as the Secretary of War may deem necessary to the good order and the military uses of the military post and ceded lands.

Fourth. Charges for the transportation of any inmate, officer, or employé of the Soldiers' Home or Hampton Institute, or any enlisted man or civilian employé of the military force at Fortress Monroe over the entire line of said road shall not exceed 10 cents.

Fifth. The privileges hereby granted may at any time be rescinded or suspended by order of the Secretary of War, and said corporation shall at any time, when so ordered by the Secretary of War, remove its rails and all other fixtures and appurtenances at its own expense and cost and without any claim of any kind whatever for any loss, damage, or compensation of any kind from the United States.

Sixth. The grants and privileges mentioned in this act shall be determined and become void unless the said road shall be completed and be put in operation within said ceded lands within two years from the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 1, after the word "act," to strike out "shall be in force from its passage, and;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That this act shall be subject to alteration, amendment, or repeal at any time at the pleasure of Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order of the Senate will not expire until 12 o'clock and 38 minutes.

Mr. PLUMB. I move, then, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of a bill the title of which will be stated.

Mr. HOAR. Are the bridge bills disposed of?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bridge bills have been disposed of, but the agreement was that if any time remained of the hour assigned for their consideration the remaining time should be devoted to what are known as right-of-way bills favorably reported and on the Calendar; and the hour assigned for that purpose, with the time which has been consumed in other objects, will not expire until 12 o'clock and 38 minutes. The Senator from Kansas moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senator will not do that after the unanimous-consent agreement made last night.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Kansas certainly will not insist upon violating the unanimous agreement.

Mr. PLUMB. I could have this bill passed in a few minutes if the Senate would allow me to get it up.

Mr. DAWES. I ask leave to make a report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] is entitled to the floor. Does the Senator insist upon his motion?

Mr. PLUMB. I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kansas.

The motion was not agreed to.

Mr. PLUMB. If Senators decide not to go on with the consideration of an appropriation bill, then they may have that responsibility upon them.

Mr. HOAR. There was unanimous consent given last night for the consideration of bridge bills to the exclusion of everything else for one hour this morning, and I consider myself bound in honor to so vote.

Mr. PLUMB. Senators can take the responsibility.

Mr. HOAR. It only postpones the consideration of the appropriation bill which the Senator from Kansas has in charge for a few moments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kansas desire to have the unanimous consent suspended?

Mr. DAWES. I ask unanimous consent to be allowed to make a report at this time.

Mr. PLUMB. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next bill on the Calendar under the order of the Senate will be proceeded with.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from Kansas will ask unanimous consent to vacate the former order I shall have no objection, but having agreed, as I did, to the order made yesterday, I will not by vote violate that order.

Mr. PLUMB. I did ask unanimous consent, but the Chair held that that was not in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas misunderstood the Chair. The Chair merely announced the order of the Senate. The reading of the next bill in order will proceed.

DULUTH AND WINNIPEG RAILWAY.

The bill (S. 3918) granting to the Duluth and Winnipeg Railway Company the right of way through the Leech Lake and White Earth Indian reservations in the State of Minnesota was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, in section 2, line 24, after the word "reservations," to strike out "as to the amount of said compensation" and to insert "to the provisions of this act;" so as to read:

But no right of any kind shall vest in said railway company in or to any part of the right of way herein provided for until plats thereof, made upon actual survey, for the definite location of such railroad, and including the grounds for station buildings, depots, machine-shops, side-tracks, turn-outs, and water-stations, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and until the compensation aforesaid shall have been fixed and paid, and the consent of the Indians on said reservations to the provisions of this act shall have been first obtained in a manner satisfactory to the President of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHEROKEE CENTRAL RAILWAY.

The bill (S. 3721) to grant a right of way to the Cherokee Central Railway Company through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, line 3, after the words "one hundred," to strike out "and fifty," and in line 5, after the words "two hundred," to strike out "and fifty;" so as to read:

That said corporation is authorized to take and use for all purposes of a railway and for no other purpose, a right of way 100 feet in width through said Indian Territory, and to take and use a strip of land 200 feet in width with a length of 3,000 feet, in addition to right of way for stations for every 10 miles of the road, with the right to use additional ground where there are heavy cuts or fills as may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of the road-bed, not exceeding 100 feet in width on each side of said right of way, or as much thereof as may be included in said cut or fill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, line 11, after the word "within," to strike out the words "one year" and insert "six months;" so as to read:

That when a map showing any portion of said railway company's located line is filed as herein provided for, said company shall commence grading said located line within six months thereafter, or said location shall be void; and said location shall be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, in sections of 25 miles, before construction of any such section shall be begun.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMESTOWN AND NORTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

The bill (S. 1228) granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railroad Company through the Devil's Lake Indian reservation, in the Territory of Dakota, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

The bill (S. 2806) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to fix the amount of compensation to be paid for right of way for railroads through Indian reservations, in certain contingencies, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WYOMING MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY.

The bill (H. R. 10028) granting to the Wyoming Midland Railway Company the right of way through the Wind River or Shoshone Indian reservation was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments, in section 3, line 21, after the word "that," to strike out "the President of the United States may, in his discretion, require that;" in line 22, after the word "to," to strike out "said right of way" and insert "this act;" and in line 24, before the words "may prescribe," to strike out "he" and insert "the President of the United States;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That the consent of the Indians to this act shall be obtained by said railway company in such manner as the President of the United States may prescribe before any right under this act shall accrue to said company.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. JONES of Arkansas, Mr. SABIN, and Mr. DOLPH were appointed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order of the Senate for the consideration of bridge bills and bills granting rights of way has been executed. If there be no further morning business——

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12490) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

Mr. CULLOM. The understanding yesterday, as I remember it, was that immediately after the consideration of the bridge bills, which have now been disposed of, the interstate-commerce matter should come up again for consideration, and I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of that measure.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has no power to enforce a unanimous agreement. It rests wholly upon the consent of the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. I move then——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognized the Senator from Kansas, who has moved to proceed to the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is not debatable. Is there objection to the Senator from Illinois proceeding?

Mr. PLUMB. We can pass the appropriation bill in fifteen minutes.

Mr. CULLOM. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kansas.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12490) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask that the bill be read for action on the amendments of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the amendments proposed by the Committee on Appropriations will be acted upon as they are reached in reading the text of the bill.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the bill, and read to line 9, on page 6.

Mr. PLUMB. In line 10, on page 6, after the word "stations," I move, by instruction of the committee, to insert:

Including superintendents of weighers of second-class matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 6, line 10, after the word "stations," insert:

Including superintendents of weighers of second-class matter.

So as to read:

Superintendents of stations, including superintendents of weighers of second-class matter, ten classes, salary, graded in even hundreds of dollars, from $1,000 to not exceeding $2,000 per annum, except at New York, N. Y., where the salaries of the superintendents of Stations A and D shall be fixed at $2,500 each per annum, and superintendents of Stations E and F shall be fixed at $2,200 each per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The first amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Office of the First Assistant Postmaster-General," on page 9, after line 9, to insert:

That all acts and parts of acts that conflict with the provisions hereinbefore stated are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the same head, on page 9, line 13, after the word "offices," to insert "including rent of city post-office at Washington, D. C.," and in line 14, before the word "thousand," to insert "and ten;" so as to make the clause read:

For rent, light, and fuel for first and second class post-offices, including rent of city post-office at Washington, D. C., $610,000.

Mr. PLUMB. After the word "dollars," in line 14, I move to insert:

And of this sum not exceeding $900 may be paid for the rent of a branch post-office on Capitol Hill, in the city of Washington.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the same head, on page 9, line 16, after the word "dollars," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That there shall not be allowed for the use of any third-class post-office for rent a sum in excess of $400, nor more than $60 for fuel and lights in any one year.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to line 24, on page 9.

Mr. PLUMB. I move to add after the word "million," in line 24, the words "and ninety-five thousand;" so as to read:

For free-delivery service, $8,095,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PLUMB. I also move to add at the end of line 24, on that page, after the word "dollars:"

Provided, That the Postmaster-General may, if in his judgment the good of the service so requires, make contracts for necessary supplies for the free-delivery service for a period not exceeding four years, payable out of this appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Office of the Second Assistant Postmaster-General," on page 11, line 19, after the word "fund," to insert "or any portion thereof;" so as to make the clause read:

For necessary and special facilities on trunk lines, $295,655.38: Provided, That the Postmaster-General may, in his discretion, withdraw this fund, or any portion thereof, from any railroad company when, in his judgment, the public interests require it.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further amendments to the bill as in Committee of the Whole?

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, and request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. PLUMB, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the House on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11651) to provide for the expenses of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; that the House further insisted upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 37, 39, 42, 43, 44, 47, 48, 51, 52, 54, 61, 63, and 65, asked a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CLEMENTS, Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL, and Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa managers at the further conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 11197) for the removal of the political disabilities of Henry A. Ramsay; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE AT RED WING.

Mr. VEST. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce to report favorably with amendments the bill (S. 3923) to authorize the Duluth, Red Wing and Southern Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near the city of Red Wing, in the State of Minnesota, and to establish it as a post-road.

Mr. SABIN. As the bill just reported is a bridge bill, I ask that it may be put on its passage at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the bill just reported from the Committee on Commerce may be now considered.

Mr. CULLOM. Do I understand the Senator to say that it is a bridge bill?

Mr. SABIN. It is a bridge bill.

Mr. CULLOM. I will yield for that.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments of the Committee on Commerce will be stated in their order.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 1, line 4, after the word "company," to insert "a corporation created and organized under the laws of the State of Minnesota;" in the same line, after the word "assigns," to strike out the words, "being first thereto authorized by the Legislatures of the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, respectively;" and in line 12, after the word "for," to strike out the words "a railway and wagon bridge combined" and insert:

The passage over the same of railroad cars and locomotives, and at the option of the company for the passage of vehicles, animals, and foot-passengers.

So as to read:

That it shall be lawful for the Duluth, Red Wing and Southern Railroad Company, a corporation created and organized under the laws of the State of Minnesota, its successors and assigns, to build and maintain a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near the city of Red Wing, in the State of Minnesota, and to lay on and over said bridge railway tracks, for the more perfect connection or use of any railroad or railroads that are or shall be constructed to the said river at or opposite said Red Wing, and said bridge may be so constructed as to be used for the passage over the same of railroad cars and locomotives, and at the option of the company for the passage of vehicles, animals, and foot-passengers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 13, before the word "bridge," to strike out the word "railway;" after the word "bridge," to strike out "or combined railway and wagon bridge;" and in line 14, before the word "constructed," to strike out the word "so;" so as to read:

Any such bridge shall be constructed and maintained under the limitations and conditions herein provided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 2, after the word "river," to strike out the words "beyond what is necessary in order to carry into effect the rights and privileges hereby granted" and insert "but the rate of tolls charged for the transit of vehicles, animals, and foot-passengers shall be approved by the Secretary of War before the same shall be collected;" in line 8, before the word "any," to strike out "which" and insert "whose jurisdiction;" and in the same line, after the word "obstruction," to strike out the word "touches" and insert "is located;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That the said bridge shall be so constructed as not to interfere with the free navigation of said river, but the rate of tolls charged for the transit of vehicles, animals, and foot-passengers shall be approved by the Secretary of War before the same shall be collected; and in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction, or alleged obstruction, to the free navigation of the said river the cause may be tried before the district or circuit court of the United States for any district of any State in whose jurisdiction any portion of the bridge or obstruction is located.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 6, to strike out the word "cord" and insert "chord;" and in line 8, after the word "mark," to strike out "as such mark is understood;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That if the said bridge shall be made with unbroken and continuous spans, the bottom chord of said bridge shall not in any case be of less elevation than 50 feet above extreme high-water mark at the point of location of said bridge; nor shall the spans of said bridge be less than 250 feet in length; and the piers of said bridge shall be parallel with the current of said river, and the main span shall be over the main channel of the river and not less than 300 feet in length.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add to section 6 the words "or persons or corporation controlling the same;" so as to make the section read:

That the plan and specifications, with the necessary drawings of said bridge, shall be submitted to the Secretary of War for his approval, and until he approve the plan and location of said bridge it shall not be built or commenced; and should any change be made in the plan of said bridge during the progress of the work thereon, such changes shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War; and all changes in the construction of said bridge that may be directed by Congress shall be made at the cost and expense of the owners thereof or persons or corporation controlling the same.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 7, line 2, after the word "said," to insert the words "town of;" so as to make the section read:

Said bridge shall be so constructed as not in manner to interfere with the waterworks of said town of Red Wing, or with any pipe, well, or other appurtenance, or machinery, fixture, or property connected therewith.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In section 7, line 2, if there be no objection, before the word "manner" the word "any" will be inserted. That amendment will be made.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 8, line 1, before the word "amend," to strike out "or;" after the word "amend," to insert "or repeal;" and after the word "act," in the same line, to strike out the words "so as to prevent or remove all material obstructions to the navigation of said river by the construction of bridges;" so as to read:

That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add to section 8:

And if the construction of said bridge is not commenced in one year from the approval of this act and finished in two years from the same date, this act shall be null and void.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. CAMERON, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HAMPTON and Mr. JONES of Arkansas submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12485) making an appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

FLORIDA STATE CLAIM.

Mr. CULLOM. If there is no further morning business I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on Senate bill 2851, being the interstate-commerce bill.

Mr. CALL. Day before yesterday, when the Calendar was taken up, there was unanimous consent given for the consideration of Senate bill 746. I do not think that to pass the bill will take any more than the time of reading it. The Legislature of the State of Florida have by a joint resolution petitioned Congress to pass this bill, particularly in view of the condition of the treasury of that State and the necessity for large expenditures to prevent the recurrence of the epidemic which existed there last year. Under these circumstances I ask the Senator from Illinois and the Senate to respect the unanimous consent that was given day before yesterday, which was that that bill should be considered at the conclusion of the three hours which the Senate then granted for the consideration of House bills on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the agreement of yesterday.

The Chief Clerk read as follows from to-day's RECORD:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then is it the understanding that the bridge bills are in that hour first to be considered and afterwards, if time remains, the right-of-way bills?

Mr. CULLOM. And that the interstate-commerce bill shall come up immediately afterwards.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be the understanding, if there be no objection. It is so ordered.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us understand this. I ask that the Chair state whether the agreement has been made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has announced that it was so ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate, pursuant to the agreement of the Senate, the message from the House of Representatives concerning the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887. The message of the House of Representatives will be read.

Mr. STEWART. I ask the Senate to pass a little bill. If it takes more than a minute I shall let it go for the present.

Mr. CALL. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senate has been considering this interstate-commerce matter two or three times, and we are approaching, I trust, the end of the conference report, so as to get it away that other business may be transacted. I hope there will be no interruption until it is out of the way, which will be but a little while.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The message of the House of Representatives will be read.

Mr. CALL. I rise to a question of order. The Senate gave its unanimous consent day before yesterday for the consideration of Senate bill 746 at a particular time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That was vacated by the order of yesterday.

Mr. CALL. Then, if that was vacated without any consent of mine, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the present order of business Senate bill 746 shall be taken up under the previous agreement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the consideration of the pending amendments to the interstate-commerce bill the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 746) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to settle and pay the claim of the State of Florida on account of expenditures made in suppressing Indian hostilities, and for other purposes. Is there objection?

Mr. BLAIR. I reserve the right to object if it leads to debate. I have been a long time pressing for an opportunity to ask the Senate simply to vote upon a constitutional amendment that has been reported favorably in at least two Congresses, and I desire that it may be laid before the Senate simply for a vote upon it, the Senate listening no further than just to the reading of the report. I do not like to be in the way of the public health, and I suppose the bill of the Senator from Florida tends in that direction; but I desire to reserve the right to object if it leads to debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida? The Chair hears none.

CONSIDERATION OF PENSION BILLS.

Mr. SAWYER. I give notice that after the bills for the consideration of which consent has already been given are out of the way, I shall ask the Senate to take up and pass the House pension bills. It will not take exceeding twenty minutes to dispose of them.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The message of the House of Representatives relating to Senate bill 2851 will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 4, 1889.

Resolved, That the House insists upon amendments numbered 3 and 7 to the bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and asks a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. CRISP, Mr. ANDERSON of Iowa, and Mr. O'NEILL of Pennsylvania be the managers of the further conference on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3.

Mr. PLAT . Mr. President, as one member of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and as one of the conferees on the part of the Senate upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon the amendment which is now under consideration and a motion to recede from which has been made, I desire to say a very few words. I shall not take the time of the Senate at any considerable length.

I believe that Congress has acted wisely in passing the interstate-commerce bill. I believe that under its administration many of the complaints which were prevalent in the country before its passage have been composed, and that many of the inequalities and discriminations which had existed prior to that time have been remedied.

I believe, and believe thoroughly, that the law as it is being administered by the Interstate Commerce Commission is of great value to the country. I desire that it shall not be imperiled. It seems that all legislation of this kind can have no other effect but to imperil that law and its successful administration in the future.

That law is based upon one fundamental proposition, and that is that unjust discriminations and undue preferences shall not be permitted on the part of railroads among their patrons. That is the general proposition of the law.

While it was under consideration all kinds of propositions were made, that there should be incorporated into the law special features of legislation which should determine what should be a proper rate of freight charge in any case, and whether a certain rate per mile should be charged upon freight, whether certain things should go in one classification or in another classification, whether certain methods of transportation should be treated as other methods of transportation with regard to charges; but the committee considered, and I think considered wisely, that if the law was to have a successful result the only thing to do was to declare the general principle and leave it to the commission to carry that into effect.

The law having been passed, the commission having been in operation nearly two years, it having taken hold of all complaints made that the general provisions of the law and the common law were not being complied with and dealt with them, and I must say in a satisfactory way, now, when some amendments are proposed to the law which seem to be necessary, and especially one relating to allowing the commission to require the publications of joint tariffs by connecting roads, there comes back the old proposition to depart from the theory of the bill and to say that in one certain case freight rates shall be charged according to a certain principle. It is special legislation. The theory of the bill is general legislation, and if we are to adopt special legislation in this case, then there is no reason why we should not go the country all over and adopt special legislation when anybody comes here and appears to make out a good case.

It is better for the bill, it is better for the interests of the country, for the interests of the railroads, for the interests of the patrons of railroads, to leave the matter as it is, in my judgment; and therefore I am opposed to any such amendment to the law or to any amendment that seeks to determine by Congress how freight rates or passenger rates shall be arranged.

I confess that I have been looking with a great deal of curiosity to see the object of this amendment. I can not understand it. I do not know what is behind it. I know there are denunciations of the Standard Oil Company here, but the question of comparative charges on oil carried in tank-cars or in barrels is settled. It is settled, and settled satisfactorily, by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and acquiesced in by the railroads and by the Standard Oil Companies; and yet here it comes to be tried again in this tribunal. Now, what is the reason for it?

I repeat, the principle of this very amendment, with one exception which I shall point out, is already the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in a case which involved nine railroads, has been acquiesced in by those roads, and is being acquiesced in by the other common carriers of the country. Why bring it here again? That case was heard upon a book of testimony as large as one of the volumes of the Statutes at Large. It was carefully considered; it was heard at great length; very carefully considered by the commission; a very elaborate and able opinion rendered, and it was settled. Yet here it comes again.

If this is all for the purpose of denouncing the Standard Oil Company, all right; there is no necessity for this legislation unless it be to perpetrate an injustice which the Interstate Commerce Commission did not allow by its decision. I suppose the Standard Oil Company is a great monopoly. I am willing to assume for the purpose of the discussion of this case that it is a very wicked monopoly; that it does very wicked things; but I do not on account of that propose to indulge in what seems to me most vicious legislation, in legislation which can only have far-reaching and lasting deleterious results.

Let us see just what this amendment is and see if we can get at what the real animus of it is. This case, which has once been settled by the Interstate Commerce Commission, is brought here on appeal by the plaintiff, and we who have not read the testimony—I venture to say there are not three Senators in this body who have read the testimony on which that case was decided—that we who have not read the case and who are not familiar with it, and who can not understand what is right and what is wrong in it, are asked to decide the case over again. There must be a reason for it, and I think I can point it out.

But first I want to refer to the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in this case, to show what it was. I am not going to read at great length, but I am going to read from the syllabus of the case which I find in the second annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission—the case of George Rice vs. The Louisville and Nashville and eight other railroad companies. It is this:

When for a special traffic, e. g., the transportation of petroleum oils, a carrier provides rolling-stock for one method, but does not provide it for another for which it publishes rates, but the shippers are expected to provide the same, the terms on which such rolling-stock is to be provided should be uniform and be published with the rate-sheets, and can not lawfully be left to be the subject of bargain and of different terms in the case of different shippers.

It is properly the business of a carrier by railroad to supply the rolling-stock for the freights he offers or proposes to carry; and if the diversities and peculiarities of traffic are such that this is not always practicable, and consignors are allowed to supply it for themselves, the carrier must not allow its own deficiencies in this particular to be made the means of putting at unreasonable disadvantage those who make use in the same traffic of the facilities it supplies.

When two methods—

I ask attention to this. If any Senator has the amendment before him I ask him to compare the amendment with this portion of the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission:

When two methods for the transportation of an article of merchandise are nominally offered by the carrier, for only one of which it offers rolling-stock, and for the other of which the shipper must supply his own rolling-stock at considerable expense, it can not be said that the resort to the latter by the shipper is so far a matter of choice that he has no concern with the charges for transportation in the other mode. The man of small means being compelled to make this choice by reason of the carrier's failure to supply rolling-stock for the other mode, has a right to insist that the charges by transportation in the two modes shall be relatively just and equal.

When oil is transported in tanks permanently affixed to car bodies, the tank is to be considered as part of the car; and for oil transported therein the charge for transportation should be the same by the hundred pounds that the carrier charges for transportation between the same points of barrels filled with like oil and taken in car-load lots. The carrier is guilty of unjust discrimination if the shipper in barrels is charged a higher rate.

Neither the fact that the shipper in the one case supplies the rolling-stock, nor the alleged fact, which is not found sustained, that for the tanks there is a greater probability of return loads, nor the further alleged fact that with barrel shipments there are greater risks to the carrier's property and that which it carries, can justify imposing upon the barrel shipments the greater burden.

Having read so far in the decision, I propose to read the amendment which is insisted upon here.

Mr. REAGAN. Will the Senator from Connecticut allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. PLATT. If the Senator will wait one moment, I want to put the amendment right along with this decision.

Mr. REAGAN. What I wanted to do——

Mr. PLATT. I wish to put this amendment right along in connection with what I have read.

Mr. REAGAN. What I wanted to say was that the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut declines to yield.

Mr. PLATT. I will yield in a moment, but I do not want to yield just now. This is the amendment:

Provided, however, That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, to carry refined oils and other petroleum products, cotton-seed oil, and turpentine for any shipper, in tank or cylinder cars, who shall own, lease, or control the same in any manner, except upon the condition that said carrier shall charge the same rate for the transportation of said products in wooden packages or barrels, in car-load lots, as in said tank or cylinder cars, the said tank and cylinder and said wooden packages and barrels being carried free in each case.

There is nothing said in the decision about the tanks or the barrels being carried free in each case, but I think it may be implied from what I have read. At any rate, with that exception the amendment is precisely the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission so far as I have read it. I now propose to read another clause from the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission which is not in this amendment, and which shows why the amendment is insisted upon as it is.

Mr. REAGAN. If the Senator will now allow me, what I want to do is to read the ruling of the commission following what he has read.

Mr. PLATT. Let me get through with the decision.

Mr. REAGAN. But the Senator will pass to another decision now.

Mr. PLATT. No, not at all. There was in that decision this:

Under this rule the carrier will be at liberty and will be expected to make to the owner of tank-cars a reasonable allowance for their use.

That is not in this amendment. The amendment is for the purpose and no other purpose, as I think, of adding to the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners the provision that the persons who supply tank-cars shall not be allowed anything for their use. That is all there is to it. The commission decided that they should be entitled to a reasonable compensation for the use of their cars. Pass this amendment and they are not to have any compensation for the use of their cars.

That brings the whole matter down to a single point. George Rice, the plaintiff in that case, not having obtained from the commission a decision that the shippers were not entitled to a reasonable sum for the use of their cars, comes to Congress and asks Congress to so declare and to reverse that portion of the decision. He would make Congress an appellate court.

I submit that it is not well for us to try this case over again. There is no reason for trying it over again. The fact that the Standard Oil Company is a monopoly, the fact that it has done bad things, that it is a wicked monopoly, if you please, is no excuse for taking the case out of the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners and enacting a law on the subject. If it were not for the appeal which is made to prejudice against the Standard Oil Company, the amendment, in my judgment, would not have 3 votes in the Senate.

I am not a friend of monopolies. If the Standard Oil Company is a monopoly that has been doing wrong I am not its friend, I am its enemy; but I am not going by any appeal to whatever feeling I may have against the Standard Oil Company to be led into what I think is improper and unwise and even vicious legislation.

Why should not the parties who furnish tank-cars have a reasonable sum for their use? If one railroad furnishes to another railroad a tank-car the railroad so furnishing it will have a reasonable sum allowed for the use of the car while in the possession of the latter carrier. Why should not the same rule apply?

These tank-cars were the result of a necessity. They were the result of a condition of things which made their invention, their construction, and their use a necessity. The railroad companies could not furnish them, or did not furnish them. The people engaged in the business were obliged to furnish them. Now, why should not the people who furnish their own cars have what is allowed to everybody who furnishes cars to a railroad company—a just compensation for the use of them? Why should we here in Congress enact a law that, if the peculiarities of a business are such that the railroad company can not furnish a peculiar car, and the people engaged in the business do furnish the car, they should not be allowed a reasonable compensation for the use of it? If it were not that this were the Standard Oil Company no such proposition would obtain a foothold for a moment in the Senate.

Mr. President, there are other people who own tank-cars besides the Standard Oil Company. While the amendment is aimed at the Standard Oil Company it hits some other people. The total number of tank-cars in the United States is about 7,000. Fifty-eight per cent. of them are owned by the Standard Oil Company; 24 per cent. are owned by other firms and individuals engaged in producing and transporting oil, and 18 per cent. are owned by railroads.

But this principle goes further. It goes to every business for the proper development of which it becomes necessary to have cars of a different construction from the ordinary freight-car which is furnished by railroads. It goes to the dressed-beef business, which I think is as great a monopoly as the Standard Oil business, with this exception, that the Standard Oil monopoly, however wicked it may have been, has succeeded in reducing the price of oil very materially to the consumer, while the dressed-beef monopoly has succeeded in raising the price of beef to the consumer.

But I saw in a paper since this discussion has been going on that a new dressed beef company was about to be incorporated, and it was to put on a new line of refrigerator cars, and there was to be competition in the business. Pass this measure and say that the new company which proposes to enter into competition in this business shall not have any compensation for the use of the cars which it may furnish and you break down that competition. Oh, competition is all right until it reaches a point where people can compete favorably, and then it is apparently all wrong in the estimation of some Senators.

It goes still further. Take the lumber cars of the great Northwest, cars that have to be furnished especially for the business. You may say that the railroad companies ought to furnish them. They can not, or will not, and if the business is to be carried on satisfactorily the cars are to be furnished by the people engaged in the business. Why should they not have a fair compensation for the use of them? Will you so extend the amendment that wherever a business differs from the ordinary transportation of merchandise in a way that it requires special cars, and the railroad company is not ready or willing or can not furnish them, and the persons engaged in the business can furnish them and do furnish them, nothing shall be allowed by railroads for the use of such cars? I maintain that such compensation is right, and fair, and just, and honorable, and nobody ought to complain of it.

That is what this decision says. That is the only limitation upon the rule that there must be charged for oil carried in barrels in car-load lots no more than is charged for oil carried in tank-cars, by the hundred pounds. That limitation is right, and it is to break down that limitation that this amendment is brought here and insisted upon in the Senate.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, the debate thus far, and especially by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], shows that either they do not understand this amendment or I do not. The Senator from Connecticut has discovered a mare's nest. He has put a construction upon this amendment that no mortal man has ever claimed for it. The author of the amendment, one of my colleagues in the House of Representatives, who spoke to me about it and understood the construction that was put upon it, looked over it with me to see if it could bear such a construction. I say to the Senator that it is absolutely insensible to such a construction. There is not a word or a line in this amendment that prevents the railroad company from allowing any shipper for the use of a car. The whole is a mere fancied trouble.

Mr. President, I need not speak even so long as my friend from Connecticut upon this subject, who said he would confine himself to a very short time. I think I can make this matter plain so as to show that the amendment is not special legislation. It is general legislation. It asserts a principle and applies it to a particular industry or business, not to a special case or to a special man. It applies the rule which lies at the foundation of the interstate-commerce act to the transportation of petroleum and all its products in this country and to everything that can be carried in barrels or in tanks. It therefore applies a broad general principle that where oil or turpentine or cotton-seed oil is carried in tanks of iron it shall not be charged a less rate of transportation than the same amount of oil carried in barrels, which is the common mode of confining liquids by the ordinary people of the country. That is all there is of it. It does not go a single inch beyond it.

Senators say it is special legislation. The Interstate Commerce Commission recommended this identical legislation in their first report as to petroleum. I have here a quotation from their report. Instead of being special legislation it was among the very first provisions demanded by the Interstate Commerce Commission after they entered upon the discharge of their duties. Here it is, taken from their first report:

> It is well known also that the transportation of mineral oil is already to a very large extent in tank-cars owned by parties who are not carriers subject to regulation under the act to regulate commerce. A willingness to disregard the rules of equality and justice as between shippers when it can be made for the interest of the carriers to do so is as likely to make its appearance in the action of the managers of any one of these outside organizations as in that of the managers of the railroads, for the temptations will be the same and the same class of persons will be bidding for special privileges and advantages which before the act was passed prospered so unfairly upon railroad favors. The act has not changed the nature or the grasping disposition of individuals; it has only interposed certain restraints, which it is reasonable to assume will be evaded if the opportunity shall be presented.

Now, mark this passage:

> These facts are noted for the purpose of placing the whole subject distinctly before the National Legislature. If it is the will of Congress that all transportation of persons and property by rail should come under the same rules of general right and equity, some further designation of the agencies in transportation which shall be controlled by such rules would seem to be indispensable.

Here the commission, after pointing out the abuses that grew out of the use of tank-cars and the discrimination in favor of that mode of carrying this product, called the attention of Congress to it with a view to have it corrected, and this amendment is only a feeble effort to carry out this recommendation of the commission. Let us go a little further.

It is sometimes said that this amendment will raise the price to the consumer. What foundation is there for that claim? None whatever. The men who are anxious to have the amendment adopted wish to promote competition. They do not wish to be trammeled and driven out of trade by superior advantages given to those who control larger means. That is all there is about it.

Senators seem to think that we have dragged the Standard Oil Company here to be arraigned. I have not arraigned the Standard Oil Company. Among its managers are some of my dearest friends. But at the same time we must know that the effect of combining great interests and great wealth and great power in the hands of a single corporation or a single set of trustees does tempt them to seize and hold and press every advantage. It is in human nature to do it. We would do it ourselves.

No man can be trusted to try his own case. All I have said and all I want is that these men who have not these facilities and advantages shall have equal competition so far as the law can give it to them, yielding, however, to the superior force and superior wealth and the natural advantage which is given against them. All I ask and all that is provided for in this amendment is that precisely the same rate shall be applied to transporting oil in barrels as to oil in tanks. That is all I have asked and all I have endeavored to ask.

Mr. GRAY. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. I promised not to be long, and I know it would lead me away from the line of my remarks.

Mr. GRAY. It is only a single question and on a matter of much interest.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator will only ask a single question I will yield.

Mr. GRAY. I ask the Senator whether the carrying of oil in tanks and also the conveyance of it by the wonderful pipe-lines from the oil wells is not a great economy in the distribution of that product and a great advancement in the mode of conveyance?

Mr. SHERMAN. I will answer in the first instance yes, and in the second instance no. I intended to come to that very point, and I shall read what the commissioners say.

Mr. GRAY. If the Senator answers yes that it is, I ask him again whether the effect of the amendment is not to neutralize this great advancement in the economy of distribution.

Mr. SHERMAN. I answer no. I say the effect of this amendment will tend to reduce the price, and I say it will have the opposite result of driving out this competition, now almost ruined, because men can not stand up against the competition they have with these great companies. If you drive them out of competition you raise the price of this important article everywhere, because there will be no one to dispute the price.

Mr. President, let us go a little further, confining myself to the line of argument I intended to pursue. It is said by my friend from Illinois, whose opinions I always respect, that if this amendment is adopted the Standard Oil Company will furnish no more cars of this kind. My friend need not fear that at all.

That leads me to reply to the leading remark made by my friend from Connecticut. There are two motives and two reasons why the Standard Oil Company will always furnish cars. As long as they can use them for their own purposes in this way they have practically a monopoly of transportation. There are two reasons: first, because they get paid for the use of cars, not as the producers of oil, not as the refiners of oil, but as a company organized with a view to furnish rolling-stock, or an equipment company. Nobody denies their right to do that. The Senator from Connecticut seemed to imply that we denied their right to a reasonable compensation and to pay for the use of these cars. Not only have we not denied it, but I am perfectly willing to put a clause in the amendment stating that the owners of these cars may be allowed a reasonable rate for the use of the cars. That is the law now. The railroad company may hire cars, they may fix the arrangement, but that is one kind of a contract. That is a contract with an equipment company, because the Standard Oil Company has many faces and many visages and has all kinds of companies under its control and organization, but all governed by trustees.

However, the amendment does not in the slightest degree prohibit a railroad company from paying to this equipment company for the use of the car, and the usual rate is so much a mile. It is allowed to all cars. It is absolutely necessary in the conduct of the great business of the United States that this arrangement should exist, because the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, for instance, sends its cars not only over its lines, but to the remotest part of this great country. Its railroad cars, and the cars of other long lines of railroad, may be seen in the farthest extremity of the country, and everywhere, wherever they go, they are allowed in their accounts with each other a certain rate that is agreed upon. The same rate applies for this equipment company, alias the Standard Oil Company. When it puts its cars on the road, and they go off to a particular line, however far away, they are all the time earning money, and it is the money that these cars earn, received from the railroad company, that will always induce them to put their cars on. Therefore my friend from Illinois need not fear at all but that this equipment company, or some other equipment company, will always supply all the cars that are necessary.

Mr. President, this kind of attachment to railroad companies is, in my judgment, one of the most dangerous sapping and mining operations of railroads. Nearly every company has more or less equipment companies and side-shows, as they are called, who receive from the company under a contract made between the equipment company and the railroad company certain rates, certain charges for the supply of cars. Those agreements exist now between these companies that furnish the oil-cars, and they get their money for transporting the car, and the poor dealers can not use these cars. They do not complain of that, because they see no way to avoid it. It would not be prohibited in this bill, nor is it prohibited by this amendment in the slightest degree. Therefore, for all time to come, as long as railroads cease to perform their full duty of supplying cars necessary to the transportation of all kinds of products, equipment companies, and the Standard Oil Company is one great equipment company, will supply cars. So with the express-cars sometimes, so with the refrigerator-cars, so with the lumber-cars, and so with all these various cars. They are paid for by the railroad, and that is the reason why they are furnished. If they were not paid for, if their use was not paid for by the railroad, they would be discontinued and the railroad companies would be compelled to buy or build these cars. Therefore this question does not enter into that matter at all.

But there is one advantage which these people have against the smaller dealers that ought not to exist and ought not to be favored by the law, and that is every company owning its own cars and having its advantages of wealth and power is constantly, from the nature of mankind, engaged in an effort to obtain a monopoly of the trade. I said yesterday that the English law in respect to interstate commerce, or rather in respect to commerce in Great Britain, is better than ours, because it declares in so many words that if any arrangement is made which tends towards monopoly the courts there may intervene under the common law of England to prevent that dangerous form of oppression, for there can be no more dangerous form of oppression than a monopoly, a power which is not possessed by others. The English law guards against it. All that this amendment is designed to do is to guard against the monopoly which, under the ordinary course of business, the oil-transporting companies with their tank-cars will have over the others. All that is asked by these people, most of whom are struggling now for an existence, is that their oil furnished by mother earth in bounteous flow, and only in modern times, shall be carried at the same rate per gallon in the barrels that they can furnish as the Standard Oil and other companies.

Mr. President, I will say to the gentlemen who are opposed to this amendment that it does not in the slightest degree affect the right of a railroad company to hire cars and to pay a reasonable amount for their use. If in that hiring of cars an unreasonable amount is paid for cars hired with the view to give a particular company an advantage or a monopoly it is under the prohibition of the law as it stands now, and the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the admirable decision they made in the case of George Rice against these various railroad companies, expressly recognized that fact and recognized the equity and justice of this claim. Indeed, I could not state this matter more strongly than by reading a few paragraphs from the decision made by the commissioners in that case. In considering the question of the different rates paid for oil in tanks and oil in barrels they say:

I. The fact that the owner supplies the rolling-stock when his oil is shipped in tanks in our opinion is entitled to little weight when rates are under consideration.

The commission having already stated that as a matter of course in the ordinary transaction of business a fair and reasonable allowance should be made for the use of cars when furnished. Then the commissioners proceed:

It is properly the business of railroad companies to supply to their customers suitable vehicles of transportation (Railroad vs. Pratt, 22 Wall., 123, 133), and then to offer their use to everybody impartially. If the varieties of traffic are such and their requirements of rolling-stock so numerous and diversified that this becomes impracticable or burdensome, so that the aid of their customers becomes essential or convenient, the supply obtained by their assistance can not with any justice be utilized by the carrier in such manner as to establish discriminations which would otherwise be inadmissible. The carrier has no right to hire rolling-stock and then allow it to be used exclusively by one class of persons on such terms as will drive out of business those who are compelled to use its own rolling-stock in a competitive traffic. This, however, is precisely what takes place in this traffic if the rates for the transportation in barrels are considerably in excess of those which are charged for the transportation in tanks. The tank-cars which are furnished to the carrier by shippers, whether the use is paid for or not, ought properly to be held for the use of all; but if this is found impracticable, it is very certain and very obvious that proprietorship of the car for the use of which the carrier pays, as it generally does—

Here the commissioners again recognize, and recognize properly that in all cases the carrier has to pay to the shipper for the use of the car when the shipper furnishes the car. The commission say further:

But if this is found impracticable, it is very certain and very obvious that proprietorship of the car, for the use of which the carrier pays, as it generally does, can fairly entitle the owner to no special consideration in the making of rates.

The commission carefully discriminates between the making of rates on carrying oil and the question of paying a reasonable charge for the use of the car, which we do not in any case deny. It goes on and says:

He—

The shipper—

has an advantage, arising from his ownership, in being able to control the use, but that circumstance can be no reason for extending to him exceptionable consideration which will make the advantage specially oppressive to competitors. It is, on the other hand, a very forcible reason why the carrier should see to it that its patrons who are forced to make use of such facilities as it provides for them shall not find its own want of proper rolling-stock made a ground of discrimination against them. On this point the misapprehension of the situation is very apparent in some of the arguments which have been made for the defense. The complainant, it is said, asks the railroad companies to relieve him from the consequences of his own lack of capital to carry on his business to the best advantage. He can not choose the best method, because that method requires a large outlay in capital. His competitor in business can choose it, and it is for that reason that complainant is driven out of the market. He must blame his want of capital, it is said, and not the railroad companies, for his failure.

A statement of the situation differing a little from this will more nearly present the actual facts. The railroad company not having supplied itself with the necessary rolling-stock to enable one branch of its traffic to be carried on in the way most advantageous to those who engage in it, suffers parties who have the capital which will enable them to supply the defect to put cars of their own upon the road, for the use of which it pays, and at the same time gives to such parties the exclusive use of what they supply, and also such preferential rates on the merchandise carried for them as will put successful competition quite out of the question. It is not the lack of capital to carry on the business that then proves fatal, but it is the lack of capital, in addition to what is needed in the business, to supply rolling-stock to the railroad company for his use. It would be the height of injustice for the carrier to make such a lack a ground for discrimination in rates, and then to say that the party suffering from it has no reason for complaint since the rates which are named are offered to all. The offer is exclusive in fact, whatever it may be in terms or in theory.

If a carrier of passengers were to make a uniform rate of 3 cents a mile to all who rode in the cars it provided, but, being deficient in rolling-stock, were to allow owners of private cars to fill them with passengers at 2 cents a mile and be paid for the use of the cars in addition, we should not expect any one to attempt a defense of the discrimination based upon the ground that the rates were equally open to all, and that if one, by reason of lack of capital to supply himself with a private car, was unable to take the benefit of the most favorable rate, he should blame his fortune for it, not the common carrier.

The wrong in such a case would be as plain as it would be gross; but such a discrimination in the carriage of persons would be far less injurious than a similar discrimination in the transportation of property; the one would involve a small sum of money only; the other might be destructive to a business. We hold, therefore, that the fact that one consignor furnishes a car for hire to the railroad company for the transportation of his oil is no ground whatever for a discrimination in rates in his favor as against another consignor who must ship in the cars the carrier supplies. It may be a reason for limiting to himself the use of the car he furnishes, but the discrimination can not justly or lawfully go any further.

I might go on and show the reasoning of the commission; and all we ask now is a legislative declaration applicable to all corporations of this kind, and I would extend it to all articles alike, but as the House amendment confines it only to articles like oil and turpentine, which are carried in bulk, all that is asked is a rule which will make the same rate for oil carried in barrels as for oil carried in tanks. That is all.

Mr. President, there is another thing which my friend——

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator will allow me to ask him a question. Has not the Interstate Commerce Commission decided that the same rate must be charged per hundred pounds or per pound for the transportation of petroleum in casks or barrels as in tanks?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not care to go further into that matter. If the commission did so decide, this is only what is contained in the decision, and why then object to it? What harm can it do?

Mr. SPOONER. If the commission has so decided, what is the necessity or the good of our enacting the decision into a statutory law?

Mr. SHERMAN. I say they did not do it, but the Senator seems to claim they did. But if they did, even if it should be reiterated in the law, what harm could it do? It would only show how foolish and vain is this opposition to the amendment, which the Senator seems to think only enacts what is already decided by the commission.

But my friend from Illinois talked about the pipe-line to Chicago. When I spoke of pipe-lines I had not in my mind the proposed pipeline from Ohio to Chicago. I thought at the time of the pipe-lines in Pennsylvania, going from the oil regions there to New York, but it makes no difference; it is all the same. It is right and just that pipelines should be established, and I should be very glad indeed to see the surplus oil of the oil region of Ohio transported to Chicago and St. Louis, or wherever else it may be used; but when it is transported in a pipeline, owned by a single company, and they claim the right to exclude from it all oils not belonging to them or controlled by them, then I say such a pipe-line is against public policy, and my honorable friend here within a year from this time will be clamoring for the extension of this law over it.

Mr. CULLOM. If it becomes a common carrier under the law.

Mr. SHERMAN. It must become a common carrier, because it can only get the right to go from Lima, Ohio, to Chicago, by passing through three States, and it must get the consent of three States to laying down the line, disturbing the soil and the roads. It becomes a common carrier for that very reason, because it must depend to some extent upon a grant from the governments of the States through which the line passes. When a pipe-line of this kind is established it ought to be open to all.

It is sometimes said that it will not do to mix the oils from different wells. Senators who make such an assertion are mistaken, for the oils from different wells are mixed all the time. Why should not all oils go over the same pipe-lines? Why should not that be the rule? It ought to be the law made here now. It is said, however, that it will not do to mix the oils. All oils from the same field, of the same kind, are of the same value. From the vast oil region of Pennsylvania they send all the oils in pipe-lines and mix it. The same argument might be made against the transportation of wheat, that each man's wheat from the farm should be kept separate until it is finally consumed; and yet we know that in commerce all the wheat goes into the bins in the great warehouses and is drawn out by shutes and is carried in cars and mixed all the way, so that the wheat which finally enters into a barrel of flour may come from half a dozen different States. So with these pipe-lines.

No, Mr. President, the principle must be extended, and I shall have to wait until next session, when the Senator himself will be demanding that there shall be no discrimination in transporting oil on pipe-lines, and that where a pipe-line undertakes to transport oil it becomes a common carrier and is subject to the law of common carriers and must take the oil from every oil-well without discrimination or favor; and any attempt whatever by any company to set up an exclusive use of one of these pipe-lines will be resisted by my friend as eagerly and as earnestly as I am doing now in seeking justice for my constituents.

Mr. President, I asked a moment ago, and I repeat the question, why should oil carried in barrels pay more than oil in tanks? Why should it not have the same rate? What reason is given? Sometimes it is said as to oil that is carried in tanks that the tank is attached to and forms part of the car. So it is. But the iron tank which contains the oil weighs more than the barrels necessary to carry the same quantity of oil. So, if there is any discrimination, it ought to be in favor of the barrels. They are lighter.

But it is said some times that it is easier to load oil on to a tank than oil in a barrel. So it is. But who loads the oil? Not the railroads, not the common carrier; but every shipper, where the charter is by the carload, is bound to load and unload his car. That is the universal law of the road. Every person who hires a car loads it, whatever may be the load to be put upon it.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] seems to be surprised at that, but if he will hire cars he will find that he gets an empty car and may fill it as he pleases, and when it arrives at its place of destination he must unload it. If there is any difference in the case of loading and unloading it falls upon the poor shipper, who ships in barrels and not upon the owner of the car.

So, Mr. President, all these discriminations now are against the small shipper. Ought not the large shipper to be satisfied with the natural discriminations in his favor without seeking to get another advantage in the rate charged?

But it is said that the commission had decided that the tank-cars must be carried backwards and forwards from place to place without cost, and even money is paid for their use all the time, and yet the commission decided that these other shippers in barrels must pay return freight on their barrels, that they must pay in addition to the freight on the oil the freight on the barrels going and returning, here again giving by virtue of their decision a discrimination in favor of the great shipper as against the poorer shipper.

That is one thing that should be corrected so that the barrel and the tank-car will be carried free back and forth on precisely the same footing; but now, under the decision of the commissioners, the tanks are carried free while the barrels are charged return freight, and that return freight in some cases amounts to a reasonable profit on the whole transaction, the business being a close one with sharp competition.

Senators, I am not in the habit of making any appeals grounded upon a mere prejudice against wealth or strength or power. They have their advantages. I say in this case I feel that I am advocating a principle which is right and just, from which this Senate can not flee, and I intend if I can to make it so plain that it will not attempt to flee. I say that all the shippers of oil should have the same rate of charge that is charged against the man who owns the car, and owns the railroad perhaps; the great producers of our country and the great oil-shippers of our country should be put upon the same footing of equality, and you can not escape it.

I am not here to demagogue. I am not here to appeal for these men, citizens of my own State, because they are not so strong and wealthy as those with whom they compete. I do not ask a single thing for them that I would not be willing to give to the greatest and strongest corporation in the world; but I do say that while I have a seat here they shall not be discriminated against unless against my most earnest and solemn protest.

Now, Mr. President, I have said all that I care to say. I believe the proposition contained in the House amendment is right. I believe the Senate will do itself justice in adopting this simple proposition. If it works wrong there can be no danger from it, for we shall be here in a short time again to correct it. It simply declares a general principle, in some measure already announced by the commission, and I believe its declaration by Congress will fortify and strengthen them in their contest to do what is right and just between the shippers.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, I shall only take the time of the Senator for a few moments.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] makes a very earnest appeal to the Senate to do justice by the people, and that is very proper; I make the same appeal. I say to this American Senate that I desire in the legislating upon this question that the Congress of the United States shall do exact justice by all the people of this country, rich men and poor men, whoever they may be. That is all very nice talk, but the question before the Senate is whether the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio, if it were enacted into law, would not legislate discrimination as between one set of people and another. I undertake to say that the effect of that amendment if adopted would be, not to do exact justice between all the people, but to produce absolute discrimination by statutory provision.

I am not standing here in defense of the Standard Oil Company; I am not here in defense of any monopoly; but I am standing here to protect this law, the purpose of which was to prevent unjust discriminations, to prevent preferences, to prevent extortions, and to protest against having an amendment incorporated into the law the result of which would be to produce exactly that state of case. I assert without the fear of contradiction that if the amendment which was incorporated into this bill by the House of Representatives were to become a statute the result would be inevitably that the price of oil to the people of this country, the consumers, would be increased instead of reduced.

Let us see what is the language of the provision. The last clause of it says:

> As in said tank or cylinder cars, the said tank and cylinder and said wooden packages and barrels being carried free in each case.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is the very thing. Now they do carry the tank-cars free.

Mr. CULLOM. Suppose they do now carry free in each case. Suppose you adopt the amendment proposed, the result of it would be that they would not carry free in either case; that would be the consequence of it, and the effect would be an increase to the consumer in the price of oil just as inevitably as that the sun rises and sets every day. I am not going to detain the Senate, because I know there is an eager desire to get this subject out of the way so that other matters may be considered.

Mr. GEORGE. If it will not disturb the Senator, I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. CULLOM. Not at all.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to ask the Senator from Illinois if the fact is not that under the law as it now exists, with all the restraints we have been able to put upon the traffic about which we are discussing, the Standard Oil Company almost entirely monopolizes this transportation; and does it not in fact have such advantages that it is crushing out all smaller dealers and all smaller refiners?

Mr. CULLOM. I will answer the Senator. There have been many smaller refiners, as they are called, before me on this subject, some of them protesting against the amendment that is now under consideration, opposing it because they say in the end it will operate against their interests. Others have been before me and have said that while the law is right now they want this thing legislated in; that is to say, they want their lawsuits settled by statute instead of going before the commission with a presentation of the facts and trying the case as anybody else does as between litigants. That is the situation of the case.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, as I said yesterday, have rendered two decisions, and in the last one, in the Lake Shore case, they have decided practically, and almost in terms, that it is the duty of the railroad company, and they ordered that that railroad should do so, to carry oil in tanks and in stock-cars per car-load at the same rate; and because every railroad is not perhaps immediately consenting to that arrangement and so giving other people trouble, other men have come to me and said that they wanted to avoid a lawsuit, to avoid the expense of going before the commission, and therefore wanted us to put this special legislation into the law so that they might get rid of the necessity of presenting their facts and trying their case before the commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BERRY in the chair). The Senator will please suspend. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, being the resolution offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], authorizing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate alleged election outrages in certain States, etc.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that the unfinished business may be laid aside and that the pending question be disposed of.

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the Senator will modify that so that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside.

Mr. HARRIS. Informally laid aside is exactly what I meant if I did not say it. Let it be informally laid aside until the Senator from Illinois concludes his remarks and we come to a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside until the matter now pending be concluded. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President——

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CULLOM. I believe I have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is now entitled to the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. CULLOM. I do not.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I beg pardon. I did not know that the Senator from Illinois had the right and title to the floor after 2 o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President——

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to ask the Senator from Illinois a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. CULLOM. Yes, sir.

Mr. GEORGE. If it be true that the Interstate Commerce Commission have substantially decided, as I understood the Senator to say they have, that the law is now as is proposed by this amendment, what is the objection to incorporating that decision into the statute?

Mr. CULLOM. The objection to incorporating this amendment into the general law is that the result of it would be a change of base by the common carriers of the country, and the consequence of that would be that the people would suffer in the increase of the price of oils to the consumer. As inevitably as the world stands that would be the result. And I want to say another thing, that the Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that every case stands and must necessarily stand upon its own facts. For instance, oil is shipped from the oil fields to the honorable Senator's State or further beyond in tanks. There comes back car-loads of turpentine and cotton-seed oil and materials of that sort. In that case the tank shipment would perhaps be cheaper to the railroad than if the oil were sent to Mississippi in box-cars filled with barrels, while in other sections of the country North a different state of facts would be found to exist.

The consequence is, as I intimated before, that every case coming before the commission must stand upon its own merits and facts just as any lawsuit litigated between individuals stands the fact pertaining to that particular case. But when you come to make the law say that so and so must be so and so everywhere, you thereby legislate into this act unjust discrimination in some cases, where it would be right and proper in others. So I say that kind of legislation ought not to be tolerated in a general act the purpose of which is to prevent extortion and unjust discrimination and preference in all parts of the country, leaving the facts to be ascertained by testimony before the commission or the courts so as to ascertain what the right of the case is in each instance.

Now, the honorable Senator from Ohio has referred to the English law on this subject, and he says that there the common law allows a party to go into court wherever there is preference, and the court sees to it that no undue preference is granted to one individual, whether he be rich or poor. That is the common law here, and it is not only common law, but it is the general act which now is the statute law of the United States in relation to the regulation of interstate commerce.

I want to say to the honorable Senator that I claim nothing so far as I am concerned in connection with this general legislation; but I tell him that the general act regulating interstate commerce in the United States to-day is completely abreast of the present legislation of the English Government. While they have passed some three or four thousand acts of Parliament to reach the point where they are to-day, we cover them by a single statute. That is the truth about the matter.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] asked me to make my remarks short so that we may have a vote, and I propose to quit right here by asking the privilege of inserting in the RECORD some very important testimony or arguments by gentlemen who have furnished them to me, representing various interests in this country, which I think will be of value to the country if the people can see them in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. So by the leave of the Senate without taking up the time of the Senate I will have two or three extracts relating to these particular amendments inserted in the RECORD if there is leave given.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DAWES in the chair). Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CULLOM. I shall not take up the time of the Senate longer. The papers referred to are as follows:

[Extracts from paper presented to Interstate Commerce Commission by General Basil W. Duke.]

If House amendment 7, giving the State courts concurrent jurisdiction "in all civil actions and proceedings" arising under the interstate-commerce act, be made a part of that law it may be confidently predicted that it will result in a condition very detrimental to the interests the act was meant to serve, and calculated to render the act itself within a brief period inoperative. I shall not stop to consider the power of Congress to confer jurisdiction of any kind or degree upon the State courts. It is a novel and indeed startling construction of the constitutional provision which vests in Congress the "power to regulate commerce between the several States," that that body shall be permitted, in its discharge of such duty, to invoke the aid of the State governments exercised through any of their departments. It is in conflict with the opinion expressed in so many cases by the highest judicial authority of this country, and seems in no wise in harmony with the idea on which the original interstate-commerce act was formulated.

In a more general sense, it certainly is at variance with all previously accepted canons of constitutional construction that Congress can grant jurisdiction to a State court or power to a State Legislature, for it is as competent to do the one thing as the other. Nevertheless, if it has happened that the House of Representatives was not sufficiently advised of the extent of Congressional authority in this direction, when it thus amended the bill as it came from the Senate, due consideration will doubtless be given that question by the committee of conference. There is little necessity, however, of discussing the power when the policy of such legislation is so manifestly unwise. We may expect, if concurrent jurisdiction on this subject be conferred on the State courts, that the decisions will become as conflicting as they will be numerous, and the multitude of doubtful cases can be measured only by the number of actions which may be instituted. In every forum there may be a distinct and different construction of every provision of the act susceptible of variant interpretation.

The confusion and incertitude so produced in the action of the railroad companies and the general conduct of all commercial business and the disaster wrought before that confusion could be remedied would be incalculable. The labor of the commission and the difficulties with which it contends would be enormously increased and its utility and influence necessarily impaired. That uniform regulation of all the instrumentalities by which commerce between the States is conducted, to accomplish which chiefly induced the constitutional grant of power to Congress to regulate such commerce, would become well-nigh impossible.

In regard to amendment 3, I would respectfully suggest that the commission has already considered, in two well-known cases, the complaints of shippers of oils in wood, and have made orders affording substantial relief. There has been, it is conceded, a general compliance on the part of the railroad carriers with the directions of the commission. The verbiage of this amendment is somewhat involved and its meaning obscure, but its intention seems to be to prohibit the carriers from allowing any reduction in charges, as rental of cars or otherwise, to shippers who furnish tank-cars for the transportation of their oils. It will not be denied that it is far preferable, as cheaper, more convenient, and safer, both for carrier and shipper, that shipments of oil should be made in tank-cars than in barrels or packages loaded in ordinary cars. When tank-cars are furnished by the shipper a proportionate amount of the carrier's rolling-stock is released from that service and may be otherwise employed, and certain other elements of expense are eliminated, such as loading, unloading, and handling. The shipper who, at his own cost, constructs or leases tank-cars and furnishes them to the carrier, and thus cheapens and facilitates transportation, should receive at least indemnity. The reduction of charges which covers these items is certainly equitable, and in no sense an "undue or unreasonable preference" or discrimination against the shipper of oils in barrels or packages. To prohibit it is virtually a legislative inhibition of the business enterprise and liberal effort at improvement in all business methods which have so stimulated commercial activity and growth. It certainly is not the way to still further enhance competition and cheapen transportation rates.

In prohibiting any charge for the barrel or package in which oil is shipped, and compelling the carrier to haul it free, the amendment creates rather than removes a discrimination. When oil is carried in tanks the shipper pays charges on the full weight of his oil. It is said that the tank is the package, and that if the weight of the wood in barrels or packages be estimated as a part of the cargo that of the tank should be so estimated likewise and included in the charge. But the tank is part of and inseparable from the car. Where the shipper furnishes the tank he at the same time furnishes the car in which his oil is to be transported, and it is this fact which should be especially considered in the determination of this matter. If special cars were or could be furnished by shippers of whisky, beer, flour, and many other articles now carried in barrels or packages, and by the use of such cars these commodities could be carried stripped of the wood, the same concession made the tank-car shipper would be made all of these. As it now is they all pay for the weight of the barrels or packages in which their goods are shipped as part of the weight of the cargo of the freight to be hauled independently of the weight of the car and its fixed appurtenances of any kind in which the freight is placed for carriage.

It is this cargo or freight on which the charge according to weight should be imposed; and to adopt any other rule would lead to endless complications and produce innumerable discriminations. Many brewers do in fact furnish their own cars, and the carriers pay them mileage therefor. Nevertheless, as beer is always shipped in wood, the same rate is charged for the barrel or package of the beer so shipped as on that of beer hauled by the cars of the carriers. In other words, the charge according to weight is made on the entire freight, including as justly a part thereof the wooden package, and no charge is made for the weight of the car or any part thereof.

There is really, fairly considering all of the factors which enter into the tariffs, no difference in the rates charged on shipments of oils, whether in tank-cars or in wood, save the reduction in the shape of mileage equitably due the shipper in tanks for the car—the means of transporting his oil—which he himself furnishes.

In the complaint of Scofield vs. The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company, the Interstate Commerce Commission held that on all shipments of oils the carriers "should carry the same weight for the one price in the one car as in the other, and that the rate should be made by the 100 pounds instead of by the barrel."

It appeared from the evidence in that case that ninety barrels of oil are hauled in the tank-car as the lowest minimum, as against sixty barrels in a stock-car as the lowest minimum, and their ruling was intended to meet and correct this inequality. But the commission, after a careful examination of all the data entering into the determination of the rates, and in its expression of opinion as to what should be considered in a fair adjustment of the rate, said: "The carrier, of course, has the right to charge for the weight of the barrel as part of the freight."

The House amendment under consideration, in providing that wooden packages and barrels should be carried free, seems intended to meet and annul this finding of the commission, although such finding is based upon a most thorough investigation of the matter, and certainly influenced by no predilection in favor of the carrier.

It would seem that the amendment was also intended to indirectly prevent the railroad companies from permitting or availing themselves of the use of cars furnished by shippers for the carriage of oils. There is no more reason or justice for such prohibition (whether couched in express terms or reached by other statutory requirements) in the matter of oil tank-cars than if made of the use of sleeping-cars, fruit and vegetable cars, refrigerator-cars, or any kind or description of cars that may be furnished by shippers.

It would be far better, of course, that every railroad company should have cars peculiarly constructed for and adapted to every necessity of commerce, and in such number as to meet every demand whenever made. But that is practically impossible. The best that each can do is to maintain a supply of rolling-stock adequate to the usual demands of commerce it serves, keeping enough of that character of equipment which its special traffic may require, and, in addition, for the use of the public, such cars as are best adapted to the general service. Upon this point I may be permitted to quote again from the commission: "Another phase of the statute" (the act to regulate commerce) "is presented by this proceeding, namely, that of the shipper furnishing in part his own cars. Long prior to and at the time the act to regulate commerce was enacted there was a prevailing general custom and usage among railroads of the United States of renting cars from each other and from mere car-furnishing companies, paying rent for the use of such cars. A like custom and usage then prevailed, and has since, of the carrier paying rent to the shipper for cars occasionally furnished by the shipper for the transportation of his goods. This amount in each instance then was, since has been, and is now, three-fourths of a cent per mile." * * * "If the carrier has been forbidden by the statute from transporting freight over its line otherwise than in its own cars, bulk would have necessarily been broken and cars unloaded by every railroad at the end of its line, and there reloaded into the cars of its connecting line, resulting in greatly increased delays and expense in the transportation of freight; and we can well understand why the statute contains no provision requiring the carrier to transport freight only in its own cars.

"The rule upon this subject, to which we have uniformily and steadily adhered, has been that the rate charged by the carrier must not be affected by either one of these customs and usages, but must be the same on all cars operated over its line, whether furnished by the carrier or others, just as though no custom or usage existed whereby the carrier obtained any of its cars from shippers or from car companies. The rate of three-fourths of one cent per mile paid for the exchange of cars has seemed to us, upon evidence repeatedly taken upon this subject, a reasonable allowance for the car's service, and has been the same very generally in all parts of the country."

It is apparent that the Interstate Commerce Commission has closely and exhaustively considered this subject in all its relations. It has decided that "the carrier at its peril must see to it, in every transaction in which the shipper furnished the car for the transportation of the freight, that such shipper shall not thereby receive a lower rate than other shippers who use and have to use the cars furnished by the carrier in the shipment of their freights;" and that the carrier should haul "the same weight in the one car as in the other," charging "by the hundred pounds instead of by the barrel;" but it has also reached the conclusion that it is just and right that the carrier should "charge for the weight of the barrel as part of the freight;" and that it is no detriment to the public for shippers to furnish cars for the transportation of their freight, nor for the carriers to pay rental therefor.

If the reasoning by which they have reached this conclusion, with all the facts before them, be entitled to regard, it will be neither just nor expedient to amend the "act to regulate commerce" in this respect. If it be desired only to prevent unjust discrimination and the making of rates which will give certain shippers "undue" or "unreasonable preference," there is no need for this amendment. The act in its existing terms sufficiently does that; and the commission, in the case cited, has ruled that the carriers "must give the same rates on oil shipped in barrels in car-load lots that it charges upon oil in tanks."

Respectfully submitted.

BASIL W. DUKE, Attorney, etc.

[Extracts from letter of Charles H. Tweed.]

NEW YORK, October 1, 1888.

DEAR SIR: I trust that the proposed amendments of the House of Representatives to the interstate-commerce act as passed by the Senate will have very careful consideration before they shall be adopted by the Senate or the Interstate Commerce Committee of that body.

The first amendment of importance, printed at the top of page 7, seems to indicate a purpose to make legislation a medium of very special and particular provisions applicable to the particular case of any party who considers himself aggrieved or who desires to secure an advantage over others. It would hardly seem to be wise or proper for Congress to attempt to enter into the consideration and determination of particular circumstances applicable to particular products. It is suggested that the purpose of this amendment at the top of page 7 is to prescribe that precisely the same rates shall be charged for the carriage of oil whether the railroad company provides the car or the shipper provides it; that is to say, that the railroad company shall have no compensation for being compelled to provide a car for the transportation of the barrels, though, as you are very well aware, the expense of providing rolling-stock is a very serious charge and burden upon all the railroads of the country, and the cars are injured and greater risk is incurred by the carriage of oil in barrels than when transported in tank-cars. The whole subject, as you are aware, has had consideration from the commission in the Rice cases, and I am quite at a loss to see why the subject should be made, or sought to be made, a matter of special legislation.

* * * * * * *

In regard to the amendment on page 22, section 11, I can hardly think that the Senate will seriously consider turning over to the State courts the jurisdiction of causes arising under the act to regulate commerce. The subject of the regulation of interstate commerce is specially reserved by the Constitution to the Federal authorities, and without discussing the question of the constitutionality of turning over this subject to State courts it would certainly seem one which ought especially to be dealt with by the Federal tribunals on account of the purely Federal nature of the questions involved therein.

Yours, very respectfully,

CHARLES H. TWEED.

Hon. SHELBY M. CULLOM,
Chairman Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, Washington, D. C.

[Extracts from letter of John C. Gault.]

AMENDMENTS TO INTERSTATE-COMMERCE LAW.

SEPTEMBER 20, 1888.

* * * * * * * *

I desire also to call your attention to the amendment offered by Mr. GROSVENOR, of Ohio, requiring railroads transporting refined oils and other petroleum products, cotton-seed oil, and turpentine in barrel packages, without making any charge for the packages themselves. This whole question of the transportation of refined oils and petroleum has been before the Interstate Commerce Commission (I. S. C. Report, page 742), and their finding was that the railroads should charge the same price per hundred pounds on oil in barrels, including the weight of barrels, as on oil in tank-cars, which is fair and just, and which all of the railroads, so far as I know, are complying with. It was found, on investigation, that an empty tank-car weighed no more than an empty box-car owned by the railroad—indeed, it does not weigh quite as much. Mr. GROSVENOR is asking the railroads of the United States to do a very singular thing, something which is unheard of or unknown in this or any other country. He requests that the railroads shall make no charge for the barrels in which oil, etc., is transported. If this amendment should be adopted, reasoning from analogy, it is evident that every shipper of whisky, molasses, or anything else carried in a barrel should be entitled to the same privilege, and if the law intended that discrimination shall not be allowed on railroads, then every shipper of goods which are shipped in boxes or other kinds of packages should be allowed to have their goods carried without any charge for the packages in which the goods are shipped. In other words, if other shippers are to be put on an equality with the oil shippers, then every railroad in the United States is asked to allow tare on every kind of a package in which freight is shipped. I do not think it will require any argument to satisfy you that both the amendments of Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, and of Mr. GROSVENOR, of Ohio, are impracticable and ought not to be adopted.

Yours, truly,

JNO. C. GAULT, General Manager.

Hon. SHELBY M. CULLOM,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

[Letter of John S. Blair.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 29, 1889.

DEAR SIR: On behalf of the Missouri Pacific and St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Companies, I beg leave to submit a few observations concerning two of the House amendments to Senate bill 2851.

By one amendment it is proposed that when oil is carried in barrels the weight of the barrels shall not be considered in fixing the rate, but the barrels shall be carried free. This amendment seems to me inharmonious with the theory underlying the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887. The cardinal idea of that statute is found in the words "unjust discriminations," in section 2, and the intention of Congress was that after its passage it should no longer be in the power of the quasi-public institutions engaged in carrying traffic between the States to discriminate by means of its rates between two shippers. The proposed amendment on its face flies in the teeth of that statute by requiring the carriers to transport barrels containing oil free while permitting packages containing all other commodities to be charged for.

I do not mean, however, to address myself to the real merits of the question as to whether oil carried in barrels in competition with oil carried in tank-cars is entitled to this legislative discrimination, for I feel safe in saying that no member of Congress in the press of his varied and numerous duties can have considered all the elements which bear upon the question. Naturally it is one within the legitimate province of the courts and by statute it is within the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is not to be overlooked in this connection that by reason of difference of climate, opportunity for return loads, and amount of this traffic, the principle might vary for different roads. This was recognized by the commission on page 128, in its annual report to the Secretary of the Interior of December 1, 1888, "In the matter of relative tank and barrel rates on oil." On page 111 of the same report is found its ruling that on nine of the railroads of the United States barrels should be charged for, and yet on page 128 it holds this not applicable to the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The amendment proposes that the one thousand four hundred and eighteen railroads of this country, enumerated on pages 264 to 309 of said report, shall in this matter be laid upon a Procrustean bed.

The impossibility of Congress making proper investigation of the relative rates on oil in barrels and in tanks may be shown by referring to the proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission, in which those rates upon nine railroads of the country were involved. The evidence adduced before the Commission fills a royal octavo volume of 529 pages, the conclusions of the Commission occupying pages 503 to 593 of the first Interstate Commerce Commission reports.

I need not allude to the impolicy of the precedent sought to be established of Congress adjusting a single controversy between shippers as to relative rates, but permit me to urge the discredit to be thrown upon the Interstate Commerce Commission by the proposed legislative reversal of its conclusions. Such a reversal is manifestly unfair and unjust to the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company and the eight other companies who were summoned before the commission, presented their evidence and arguments, were directed to reduce their rates, and who have acquiesced on the decision of the commission. Neither complainant nor respondents achieved a complete victory before the commission, and if any of the questions then disposed of are to be reconsidered it would only be fair to take them all up and afford all parties an opportunity to be heard.

Another amendment proposes to give to the State courts concurrent jurisdiction with the United States courts in all civil actions and proceedings under the act of February 4, 1887. There is somewhat of an incongruity in giving to the State courts jurisdiction to enforce a statute governing intercourse between the States, but as similar jurisdiction has from time to time been conferred in matters purely Federal, such as naturalization, bankruptcy, and national banks, no very serious objection can be urged on that score.

But a harmonious system of control over railroads can not be expected from such a course. Under section 709, Revised Statutes United States, the Supreme Court may only re-examine the decisions of the highest court of a State, and what cases may thus reach the Supreme Court will in every State be determined by the legislation of that State regarding the re-examination by its highest court of the decisions of its inferior tribunals.

And the law regulating commerce between the States may not only be differently interpreted in the several States, but by different judges in the same State.

Yours, very respectfully,

JNO. S. BLAIR.

Hon. S. M. CULLOM,
United States Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the third amendment of the House of Representatives with an amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. There is no amendment pending to the House amendment. The question is simply on agreeing to the House amendment, and I hope the Senate will not agree to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has been misinformed. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the third amendment of the House of Representatives.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senate will not recede.

Mr. CALL. I propose to vote for insisting upon the disagreement to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the Senate bill, but I think that this important subject ought not to be considered at this time and in this hasty manner when there is but little opportunity for each Senator to explain his vote upon this amendment. I shall vote against it upon this ground: The amendment proposes to compel one man to furnish cars for the business of another, and it proposes to require the same rate to be paid for shipment in wooden vessels as in iron vessels. There can be no considerations which are proper in passing a law affecting public transportation except those which relate to the public safety, the public convenience, the economy of cost, and that there shall be equal facilities furnished to all persons.

This amendment proposes to disregard the public safety, which is promoted by the shipment of oil in iron vessels. It proposes to disregard the public convenience and the public economy, both of which are promoted by this means, and to substitute a rule requiring the same rate to be imposed whether the cars are furnished by the shipper or furnished by the railroad company. That would be entirely proper if its application could be fairly and justly made at this time, but it is unjust because the condition of the railroads in this country differs so broadly that the immediate application of this rule would be very unequal and unjust, and might be very oppressive to the people. In the State which I in part represent the entire transportation of lumber is done upon cars furnished by the different mills and producers of lumber; and to apply this principle to that transportation would require that practice to be discontinued as proposed by the amendment of the Senator from Ohio, by requiring one person to furnish cars for the use of another.

The amendment of the House provides:

Provided, however, That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, to carry refined oils and other petroleum products, cotton-seed oil, and turpentine for any shipper, in tank or cylinder cars, who shall own, lease, or control the same in any manner, except upon the condition that said carrier shall charge the same rate for the transportation of said products in wooden packages or barrels, in car-load lots, as in said tank or cylinder cars, the said tank and cylinder and said wooden packages and barrels being carried free in each case.

That provision affects materially the entire business done in the State which I in part represent, which is done by cars furnished by the different mills, and in which the proceeds are returned in the shape of cotton-seed oil or turpentine to some general place of manufacture.

While the principles affirmed by the Senator from Ohio are entirely correct, their application at this time to those roads which are unprovided with means of transportation of their own, and which are relying entirely upon the means furnished by the individuals who do the business, would cause an entire suspension of business.

It is true that the contract that every railroad company makes is to do all the transportation that is offered, and to do it in the safest, most economical, and best manner, and to provide the means by which it shall be done; and this provision would add in that respect nothing to the obligation; but the means by which it proposes to effect it is not to enforce that duty, that obligation, that contract on the part of the railroad company, but it is in requiring that the same rate of charge shall be imposed in the one case as in the other where the man furnishes the car and where he does not. Unquestionably that is not the intention of the provision, but that is its effect; that is its declaration and that is the power of this legislation passed in this manner on this hasty consideration after a few speeches made upon one side and a few upon the other and the matter enacted into law. While I accept all the principles affirmed by the Senator from Ohio, yet I insist that the application of them to this case and the remedy proposed, that one man or one company shall furnish these conveniences for the use of other persons—if that be the remedy I insist it will not work properly.

The strictures on the Standard Oil Company have nothing to do with this motion. The measures which may be advisable to restrain great business operations in such manner that they shall not increase the price of the necessaries of life to the people have no place here. The Standard Oil Company has certainly reduced the price of oil to the people of this country, and in the consideration of this subject specially directed towards oil and its transportation this fact should have weight and influence. While I am desirous of making such laws as will require transportation to be given by railroad companies to all persons on equal terms and at the least cost to the people, I am opposed to discriminating against great business enterprises and men of great business capacity who conduct enterprises which diminish the cost of the comforts and necessaries of life to the people.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator will withhold that motion for a few moments so that we may get a vote on this measure.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I withheld the motion yesterday all day to enable the Senator from Illinois to get a vote.

Mr. CULLOM. I think the debate is exhausted.

Mr. HARRIS. I want to suggest to the Senator from Virginia that if he will yield to me I will move to lay the motion of the Senator from Ohio on the table, which motion cuts off further debate, and we can thus test the sense of the Senate upon the pending question.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I will yield for that purpose.

Mr. HARRIS. I move then to lay the motion of the Senator from Ohio on the table.

Mr. REAGAN. On that motion I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HARRIS. So do I.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CULLOM. I understand that a vote to lay on the table disposes of the motion of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. HARRIS. It does; it ends it.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWN (when Mr. COLQUITT'S name was called). I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. COLQUITT] is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHACE].

Mr. VANCE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB]. I do not know how he would vote.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. TELLER. I am paired with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON]. I do not know how he would vote if present, and I withhold my vote.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I understood yesterday that the Senate had agreed to go into executive session at 2 o'clock. So understanding, I think it becomes me to withhold my vote on this question.

Mr. GRAY. I am requested by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] to announce that he is paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON].

Mr. SAWYER. I am paired on this question with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY]. If he were here, I should vote "yea."

Mr. VANCE. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER] is in the Chamber. I therefore desire to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. QUAY (after having voted in the affirmative). I wish to inquire whether the vote of the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] is recorded?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He is not recorded.

Mr. QUAY. Then I withdraw my vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania withdraws his vote.

Mr. BROWN. My colleague [Mr. COLQUITT], who is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHACE], is absent from the Senate Chamber on account of ill health.

Mr. FRYE. My colleague [Mr. HALE], who is detained in the Committee on Appropriations, is paired with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK]. I am paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN].

Mr. HOAR. Will the Chair be kind enough to state the pending question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. To lay the amendment of the Senator from Ohio on the table.

Mr. SHERMAN. I offered no amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair should have said that the question is on the motion to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Ohio that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the third amendment of the House of Representatives.

Mr. HOAR. I vote "nay."

Mr. SHERMAN. I raise the point of order now that no motion can be made to lay upon the table a motion to recede from a disagreement to a House amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is too late to raise the question of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. I simply wish to say that by parliamentary law such a motion, if it prevails, carries the whole matter to the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will report the state of the vote.

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 11; as follows:

YEAS—34.

Aldrich,	Edmunds,	Jones of Nevada,	Sabin,
Blair,	Evarts,	McPherson,	Spooner,
Brown,	Farwell,	Morgan,	Stanford,
Butler,	Gray,	Morrill,	Stewart,
Call,	Hampton,	Pasco,	Stockbridge,
Cameron,	Harris,	Payne,	Walthall,
Chandler,	Hawley,	Platt,	Wilson of Md.
Cullom,	Hiscock,	Pugh,
Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Ransom,

NAYS—11.

Bate,	Davis,	Reagan,	Vance,
Berry,	George,	Sherman,	Wilson of Iowa.
Coke,	Hoar,	Turpie,

ABSENT—31.

Allison,	Daniel,	Hearst,	Quay,
Beck,	Dawes,	Ingalls,	Riddleberger,
Blackburn,	Eustis,	Kenna,	Saulsbury,
Blodgett,	Faulkner,	Manderson,	Sawyer,
Bowen,	Frye,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Chace,	Gibson,	Paddock,	Vest,
Cockrell,	Gorman,	Palmer,	Voorhees.
Colquitt,	Hale,	Plumb,

So the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Before any other business is done I raise the point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will hear the Senator from Ohio on the point of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. I simply wish to state the point. According to my construction of the rules, a motion to lay on the table a motion to recede from a vote disagreeing to a House amendment to a Senate bill is not in order; or rather I should say that the effect of it is to carry the bill and all the amendments to the table. The general principle is that a motion to lay on the table, if it prevails, carries everything connected with the bill, the whole subject-matter, to the table, unless an exception be made by an express rule, and only by an express rule. A motion to lay on the table an amendment does not have that effect by a recent special rule of the Senate; but under the parliamentary law the effect of laying any motion pending upon the table is to carry to the table the whole bill, and all the amendments connected with it.

Mr. HARRIS. The statement of the Senator from Ohio was quite right until two or three years ago the rules were modified and amended, and Rule XVII now provides that—

When an amendment proposed to any pending measure is laid on the table it shall not carry with it, or prejudice, such measure.

The intent and spirit and purpose of that rule was to allow a motion to lay on the table anything pertaining to a pending bill or measure, and it can not, in my opinion, have the effect that the Senator from Ohio asserts that it must have.

Mr. SHERMAN. I only wish to say that the rule mentioned by the Senator from Tennessee forms an exception to the parliamentary law, and that exception must be fairly construed. It applies only to amendments and not to motions to recede or to concur or to insist or to adhere. It does not extend to anything else but an amendment strictly.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I ask for recognition by the Chair now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was waiting to hear further suggestions upon the point of order.

Mr. HOAR. I desire that Rule XVII may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The rule will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

RULE XVII.—AMENDMENT MAY BE LAID ON THE TABLE WITHOUT PREJUDICE TO THE BILL.

When an amendment proposed to any pending measure is laid on the table it shall not carry with it, or prejudice, such measure.

Mr. PLATT. Is it claimed that prior to the adoption of that rule a motion to lay on the table any motion which might be pending about a bill carried the bill to the table with it? I do not so understand the rule.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is the parliamentary law as clear as any proposition can be, that a motion to lay on the table a pending amendment carries the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This was not a motion to lay an amendment on the table.

Mr. PLATT. Not at all. It was a subsidiary motion made in the progress of debate, and, as it seems to me, without a great familiarity with the rules, it is very doubtful whether before the amendment of the rules the laying of such a motion, which had been made with reference to a pending measure, upon the table would carry the whole matter to the table.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not wish to insist upon it now, but I will look into the parliamentary precedents.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will hold that the point of order so far as respects this question does not lie, and the laying on the table of the motion to recede does not affect the amendment or the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate further insist on its disagreement to House amendments numbered 3 and 7, and agree to the further conference asked by the House of Representatives thereon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois moves that the Senate insist on its disagreement and agree to the conference asked for by the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Messrs. CULLOM, PLATT, and HARRIS were appointed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 1874) to establish a United States court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 11649) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between the city of Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, and Platte County, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (H. R. 10588) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the St. John's River, in the State of Florida;

A bill (H. R. 12515) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at the most accessible point between the mouth of the Femme Osage Creek and a point 2 miles above the city of St. Charles, in the county of St. Charles, in the State of Missouri;" and

A bill (S. 3421) for the erection of a public building at the city of Kalamazoo, Mich.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After three hours and thirty minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

THE YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

On motion by Mr. VEST, it was Ordered, That the Secretary request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 283) to amend sections 2474 and 2475 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, setting apart a certain tract of land lying near the headwaters of the Yellowstone River as a public park.

DISTRICT MILITIA.

On motion by Mr. HAWLEY, it was Ordered, That the Secretary request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; non-concurred in certain other amendments of the Senate, and non-concurred in the amendment of the Senate numbered 9 with an amendment; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HERBERT, Mr. MCADOO, and Mr. THOMAS of Illinois managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 12485) making an appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

HOUR OF RECESS.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate take a recess from half past 6 until half past 8 o'clock to-night.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland asks unanimous consent for an order that the Senate take a recess from 6.30 until 8.30 this evening. Is there objection? ["None."]

Mr. EDMUNDS. What is the question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That the Senate take a recess from 6.30 to 8.30 this evening.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is so ordered, if there be no objection.

DISTRICT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PLUMB submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11651) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 6, 11, 12, 13, 15, 31, 45, 53, 56, 69, 75, 84, 88, 89, 97, 99, 101, 102, 106, 107, 108, 109, and 121.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 41, 50, 55, 59, 66, 67, 70, 81, 85, 86, 90, 91, 92, 93, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 119, and 123, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following: "One laborer at $1 per day, $313;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$45,577;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$18,300;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,250;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$18,450;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,150;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$5,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by said amendment insert the following: "And on Fifteenth street, between Pennsylvania and New York avenues;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 32, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following: "For resurfacing and repaving Pennsylvania avenue, from First to Seventeenth streets northwest, $125,000; in all, $215,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 33, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$125,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$15,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 68, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In line 3 of said amendment strike out the word "contract" and insert in lieu thereof the word "contracts;" and at the end of said amendment insert the following: "To be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 79, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 80, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out from said amendment the words "and for circles to become public reservations;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$418,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 98, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$36,250;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 105, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$48,540;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, strike out the word "six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five;" and strike out of said amendment the words "five hundred," where they occur in lines 8 and 10; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 120, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add to the words proposed to be inserted by said amendment the following: "and succeeding;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On amendments numbered 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 37, 39, 42, 43, 44, 47, 48, 51, 52, 54, 61, 63, 64, 65, 100, and 124 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

P. B. PLUMB,
H. L. DAWES,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. C. CLEMENTS,
FELIX CAMPBELL,
D. B. HENDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate further insist on its amendments disagreed to by the House which are not disposed of by the conference report, and ask for a further conference thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the managers of the further conference on the part of the Senate, and Mr. PLUMB, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

The action of the House of Representatives was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 28, 1889.

Resolved, That the House concur in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, numbered as follows: 1, 7, 8, 10, 14, 20, 23, 24, 26, and 27.

And non-concur in the amendments of the Senate to said bill numbered as follows: 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 25, 28, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, and 39.

And concur in the amendment of the Senate numbered 9 with an amendment as follows: After the word "available," in line 5 of said amendment, add "said sum to be in full for all expenses of designing, erecting, and furnishing said building."

And ask a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. HERBERT, Mr. MCADOO, and Mr. THOMAS of Illinois be the managers of the said conference on the part of the House.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments disagreed to by the House, disagree to the House amendment to the ninth amendment of the Senate, and agree to the request of the House for a conference on the disagreeing votes.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HALE, Mr. FARWELL, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12383) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 5.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 21, 23, 24, 25, and 26, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out, in line 19, page 13 of the bill, the words "and twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following:

"To enable the Secretary of War to cause examinations and tests to be made in converting the existing cast-iron ordnance of the War Department into steel-lined breech-loading torpedo howitzers for throwing high explosives, according to the plans heretofore submitted to Congress and to be submitted to the Board of Ordnance and Fortifications, $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The Board of Ordnance and Fortifications is hereby directed to examine and report upon a site or sites for ordnance testing and proving ground to be used in the testing and proving of heavy ordnance, having in view in the selection of said site or sites their accessibility by land and water, means of transportation, and suitability for the purpose intended, and also the actual and reasonable cost and value of the land embraced in said site or sites and the least sum for which the same can be procured. Said board shall report thereon to the Secretary of War, to be submitted to Congress at its next session; and in case the said board shall select a site or sites and recommend their purchase, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to secure written proposals for the sale of the land so recommended until such time as Congress may act upon the recommendation of said board and of the Secretary of War.

"For the necessary expenses under the foregoing provision, $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment insert the following:

"For the construction of a counterpoise battery to mount a seacoast rifled gun, $40,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary. Said battery to be located at such point as the Board of Ordnance and Fortifications may direct; the erection of such battery shall be by the inventor thereof under the general direction of the Board of Ordnance and Fortifications and shall be completed within twelve months from the time this act shall take effect, and the gun to be mounted thereon, with its fittings, shall be furnished by the Ordnance Department of the Navy."

And the Senate agree to the same.

W. B. ALLISON,
P. B. PLUMB,
A. P. GORMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

R. W. TOWNSHEND,
LEVI MAISH,
GEO. W. STEELE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

FORTIFICATION APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DAWES submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 8, 9, and 10.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 5, 6, 11, and 12, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out from said amendment the words, "to be available until expended and;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"For the purchase of movable submarine torpedoes, in the discretion of the Board on Ordnance and Fortifications, $50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

H. L. DAWES,
P. B. PLUMB,
A. P. GORMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
JOSEPH D. SAYERS,
SAM. J. RANDALL,
BENJ. BUTTERWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

DISPOSAL OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. DOLPH submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2511) to provide for the disposal of certain public lands of the United States under the provisions of the homestead laws only, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, and 3 with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of section 1 of the bill after the word "act," in line 3, and insert in lieu thereof: "No public lands of the United States, except those in the State of Missouri, shall be subject to private entry;" and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows:

Add to section 2 as follows:

"Provided, That all pre-emption settlers upon the public lands whose claims have been initiated prior to the passage of this act may change such entries to homestead entries and proceed to perfect their titles to their respective claims under the homestead law, notwithstanding they may have heretofore had the benefit of such law, but such settlers who perfect title to such claims under the homestead law shall not thereafter be entitled to enter other lands under the pre-emption or homestead laws of the United States."

And the Senate agree to the same.

After the word "destruction," in line 5, section 3, of the bill, insert the words "or failure."

Add to section 5 as follows:

"And provided, That if the original entry should fail for any reason prior to patent or should appear to be illegal or fraudulent, the additional entry shall not be permitted, or, if having already been initiated, shall be canceled."

And the Senate agree to the same.

After the word "enter," in line 7, page 4, of the bill, insert the following: "As a personal right and not assignable."

After the word "so," in line 15, page 4, of the bill, insert the word "additionally."

And the House agree to the same.

Add to section 6:

"Provided also, That this section shall not be construed as affecting any rights as to the location of soldiers' certificates heretofore issued under section 2306 of the Revised Statutes."

And the Senate agreed to the same.

Add an additional section as follows:

"SEC. 7. That the 'act to provide additional regulations for homestead and pre-emption entries of public lands,' approved March 3, 1879, shall not be construed to forbid the taking of testimony for final proof within ten days following the day advertised as upon which such final proof shall be made, in cases where accident or unavoidable delays have prevented the applicant or witnesses from making such proof on the date specified."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Add as an additional section:

"SEC. 8. That nothing in this act shall be construed as suspending, repealing, or in any way rendering inoperative the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to provide for the disposal of abandoned and useless military reservations,' approved July 5, 1884."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act to withdraw certain public lands from private entry, and for other purposes."

And the Senate agree to the same.

J. N. DOLPH,
J. H. BERRY,
H. M. TELLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
THO. C. McRAE,
L. E. PAYSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL EYRE.

Mr. STEWART. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3106) for the relief of Lieutenant-Colonel Eyre.

Mr. COCKRELL. There are not 12 Senators in their seats. I have three very important bills, exceeding important to my constituents. If this bill is to be passed in the condition of the Senate, my three bills must be passed.

Mr. STEWART. All right.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no reason why this partiality should be shown.

Mr. ALLISON. I have a few bills also that must be passed if we are to arrange about passing bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the bill be read at length.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is not worth while to waste time over this matter. It is nearly half past 6 o'clock now, and if we are going to pass one bill we have got to pass half a dozen. That is all there is about it.

Mr. STEWART. Let the bill be read.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am not going to allow the bill to be passed without calling the yeas and nays, unless my bills are also to be passed.

Mr. STEWART. I am willing that they should be passed.

Mr. SAWYER. Let us pass them all.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the bill be read for information, if we are to go on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for information, subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Lieut. Col. Edward E. Eyre, late lieutenant-colonel of the First California Cavalry, be released from all further liability on account of his receipts and disbursements of funds as acting quartermaster, and the proper officers of the United States Treasury are authorized and directed to cancel said liability, whether the same be pending in court or has become a judgment, and to close the accounts of said Edward E. Eyre.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to hear the report read before I decide upon that point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the report.

The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. STEWART February 16, 1889, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3106) for the relief of Lieutenant-Colonel Eyre, submit the following report:

Your committee find the facts in the case set forth fully in the accompanying report of the House Committee on Military Affairs, which is adopted as part of this report, as follows:

"[House Report No. 1792, first session Fiftieth Congress.]

"The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3106) for the relief of E. E. Eyre, formerly lieutenant-colonel of the First Regiment of California cavalry, have had the same under careful consideration, and submit the following report:

"From an examination of the records of the War Department and from other reliable information we find the facts to be:

"That Lieutenant-Colonel Eyre, while performing duty with his regiment at Las Cruces, N. Mex., on August 14, 1862, was ordered by his commanding officer, General James H. Carleton, to relieve Capt. T. Moore, assistant quartermaster, United States Army, from duty, and to assume and perform the duties of said office, which, though under protest, he immediately did (with the understanding that on his arrival at Santa Fé, N. Mex., he should be relieved from duty as quartermaster), and received from said Capt. T. Moore, August 14, 1862, the sum of $16,705, and on August 16, 1872, the sum of $721.37, making a total of receipts of $17,426.37.

"That on the march of General Carlton's command, consisting of the greater portions of the First and Second California cavalry, from Las Cruces, N. Mex., to and into Texas, thence returning to Santa Fé, N. Mex., consuming forty-seven days' time from August 14, 1862, to September 30, 1862, he had disbursed and expended in payment of employés and in purchase of forage and quartermasters' stores the sum of $3,668.91.

"That on September 1, 1862, he turned over to Lieut. A. H. French, of the First California Volunteers, the sum of $200; on the 5th of September, 1862, to Col. J. R. West, of the First California Volunteers, the sum of $3,000; and in Santa Fé, on the 30th of September, 1862, to Lieut. B. C. Cutler, of the First California Volunteers, assistant quartermaster, the further sum of $10,557.48, together with his accounts and vouchers for the disbursement of the sum of $3,668.91, to the said quartermaster's clerk, one J. S. Barbey, which amount, together with his return of moneys, equaled the amount he had received while acting as quartermaster, or $17,426.37, and was then and there relieved from duty as quartermaster and resumed his duty as lieutenant-colonel First California Cavalry; that from that day, the 30th of September, 1862, until December, 1875, thirteen years afterwards, when he was notified by the Department, he was unaware that his accounts and vouchers had not been forwarded to the Department, and hence his account as quartermaster stood debited with the exact sum of his expenditures, to wit, $3,668.91.

"That had he been notified within any reasonable time he could have availed of the law of June 23, 1870, made and provided for the settlement of such cases as his (whose existence was limited to two years), and have settled the said balance now standing to his debit.

"We find that the character of Colonel Eyre for truth and veracity is not nor never has been questioned; that he has been and is a man of means and high social standing, well known and universally respected; and believing that the deficiency, as represented in his accounts, was expended for the uses and benefits of the United States, we therefore recommend the passage of the bill as an act of justice."

Your committee report back the bill favorably and recommend its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate now consider the bill?

Mr. COCKRELL. There are just twelve Senators in the Chamber. I should like to know if they can pass a bill?

Mr. STEWART. Let the bill be taken up and be the unfinished business when the Senate reassembles after the recess.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would not become the unfinished business in its present status unless a motion was made and carried to proceed to consider it, so as to displace the unfinished business. Will the Senate consider at this time the bill?

Mr. COCKRELL. I propounded a question to the Presiding Officer. If he will just look around the Senate Chamber he will not see twelve Senators, and business can not be conducted in such a condition of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair can not determine the question as to whether there is or is not a quorum unless the point is raised.

Mr. COCKRELL. I raise the point that there is no quorum present, and that no business can be transacted unless there is a quorum here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri suggesting the fact that there is no quorum, the Chair orders the Secretary to call the roll.

Mr. PASCO. I suggest that the hour of half past 6 has arrived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has not quite arrived. The Chair will take care of that. The roll will be called.

The Secretary called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Cullom,	McPherson,	Stewart.
Bate,	Daniel,	Pasco,
Chandler,	Gorman,	Quay,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Ransom,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 6½ o'clock having arrived, at which time the Senate agreed to take a recess from 6½ to 8½ o'clock, the Senate is in recess until the hour of 8½ o'clock to-night.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 8 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.

BARCELONA EXPOSITION OF 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate of the United States:

I have the honor to transmit herewith a report of the Secretary of State respecting the representation of the United States at the Barcelona Exposition of 1888.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 28, 1889.

BRUSSELS EXHIBITION OF 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate of the United States:

I have the honor to transmit herewith a report of the Secretary of State concerning the expenses of the representation of the United States at the Brussels Exhibition of 1888.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 28, 1889.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate resumes the consideration of the unfinished business, which is the resolution of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] instructing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate alleged election outrages in certain States.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask unanimous consent to take up the unobjected pension bills on the Calendar under Rule VIII.

Mr. STEWART. I ask the Senate to proceed——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think the Senate is in a condition to do business at this moment.

Mr. STEWART. I ask unanimous consent that an hour be devoted to the unobjected House bills on the Calendar.

Mr. RANSOM. Oh, no; I can not agree to that. I am very sorry to object, but I can not agree to the proposition. There is a Senate bill or two on the Calendar which I wish to have considered.

Mr. SAWYER. I have been trying for several days to have the House pension bills considered. There are not many of them. I do not think anybody will object to them, and if we are to pass them at all during this Congress it is absolutely necessary that we should pass them at once so that they can go to the President in time. I ask the Senate to take them up and pass them the first business we do this evening.

Mr. STEWART. I renew the request that we may have half an hour for the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Commencing on the Calendar where we left off its consideration the other day.

Mr. STEWART. Yes, commencing where we left off.

Mr. RANSOM. I do not object to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside for the consideration of House bills on the Calendar favorably reported, under Rule VIII.

Mr. HARRIS. What is the unfinished business that is to be laid aside?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to the consideration of unobjected bills.

Mr. RANSOM. I withdraw my objection to the first proposition of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. SAWYER. Let us take up the pension bills.

Mr. STEWART. I ask that we may have half an hour for unobjected House bills, and then we can take up the pension bills.

Mr. COCKRELL. That will include pension bills.

Mr. SAWYER. It will not take twenty minutes to pass the pension bills.

Mr. BUTLER. Let me suggest to the Senator from Wisconsin——

Mr. STEWART. Let unanimous consent be given to devote half an hour to pension bills.

Mr. SAWYER. I have no objection to that arrangement.

Mr. BUTLER. I was about to suggest to the Senator from Wisconsin that the proposition of the Senator from Nevada would include the unobjected pension bills.

Mr. SAWYER. It would if we should reach them on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes, they come next on the Calendar.

Mr. SAWYER. Very well; I have no objection to that.

Mr. STEWART. And then we shall have half an hour for other unobjected cases.

Mr. HARRIS. In order that the record may be kept correctly, having been in the chair when the Senate took a recess, I will state that just before it took a recess the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] moved the consideration of a bill. The question of the presence of a quorum was raised by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] and the Chair ordered a roll-call. The roll-call was made, but the report of its result was not made to the Senate before the hour of half past 6 arrived, when the Chair announced that the Senate took a recess from that hour to half past 8. Perhaps it would be proper to announce the result of that roll-call and then to ascertain whether we have a quorum now for business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Tennessee suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. HARRIS. I doubt very much whether there is a quorum present; but what is to become of the record of the former roll-call unless it is now reported?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Thirteen Senators were reported present by the roll-call. The roll will be called.

The Secretary called the roll.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the report be made of the Senators present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Twenty-four Senators have responded to their names. The Secretary will read the names of the Senators present.

The Secretary read as follows:

Bate,	George,	Paddock,	Stewart,
Butler,	Gray,	Pasco,	Stockbridge,
Call,	Harris,	Plumb,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Quay,	Vest,
Coke,	Ingalls,	Ransom,	Walthall,
Frye,	McPherson,	Sawyer,	Wilson of Iowa.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the presence of absent Senators.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee moves that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Tennessee.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant-at-Arms will execute the order of the Senate.

Mr. PADDOCK. My colleague [Mr. MANDERSON] is seriously ill, confined to his house. I ask therefore that he be excused from attendance in the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator's colleague is excused.

At 8 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m. Mr. CHANDLER entered the Chamber and was recorded as present.

At 8 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m. Mr. ALLISON and Mr. GORMAN entered the Chamber and were recorded as present.

At 8 o'clock and 47 minutes p. m. Mr. HALE entered the Chamber and was recorded as present.

At 8 o'clock and 49 minutes p. m. Mr. CULLOM entered the Chamber and was recorded as present.

At 8 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m. Mr. SABIN entered the Chamber and was recorded as present.

At 9 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m. Mr. DAWES and Mr. PALMER entered the Chamber and their presence was recorded.

At 9 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m. Mr. DOLPH entered the Chamber and was recorded as present.

At 9 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m. Mr. PLATT entered the Chamber and was recorded as present.

At 9 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m. Mr. BLAIR appeared and was recorded as present.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, at some hour this evening the Senate, by unanimous consent, agreed to take a recess from half past 6 to half past 8 o'clock to-night. The Senate met at half past 8 o'clock. I ask the parliamentary question if the record can be made to show the hour at which Senators who answer to the roll-call appear, because if there be any rule of the Senate or any parliamentary rule that authorizes it I want the record to show. We have got but three days remaining of this session; there is a large amount of public business undisposed of, and it is the duty of every Senator to be here upon the adjournment or recess of the Senate. I want the record to show who are here and who are away from here.

At 9 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m. Mr. TURPIE appeared and his presence was recorded.

Mr. VEST (at 9 o'clock and 21 minutes p. m.). I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri moves that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. On that motion I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAWES. I am paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. PASCO (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. FARWELL], reserving, however, the right to vote in case it should be necessary to make a quorum. I vote "yea."

Mr. TURPIE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. WALTHALL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER].

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. BUTLER. I have a general pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. Can his colleague tell me how he would vote?

Mr. QUAY. I am not prepared to state authoritatively, but I presume my colleague would vote "nay," if present.

Mr. BUTLER. Then I vote "nay."

Mr. DOLPH. I am paired with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN], and while I think he would have no objection to my voting on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. BATE. I do not know that there is anything political in this question. I am paired on political questions with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. As I do not know how he would vote if present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. As I have announced, I am paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON], on the other side, but I feel that I can take the responsibility of voting, and I vote "nay."

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], who is now engaged in the Appropriations Committee in conference on the sundry civil bill and is likely to be detained there for some time. I presume, however, I am at liberty to vote on this question, and I vote "nay."

Mr. BERRY. I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. HARRIS. When the vote is announced I want to give a notice to the Senate of a motion that I intend to follow the present order of the Senate with.

The result was announced—yeas 10, nays 19; as follows:

YEAS—10.

Chandler,	Frye,	Pasco,	Vest.
Coke,	Ingalls,	Platt,
Cullom,	McPherson,	Ransom,

NAYS—19.

Blair,	Gray,	Plumb,	Stewart,
Butler,	Harris,	Quay,	Stockbridge,
Call,	Hoar,	Sabin,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Paddock,	Saulsbury,	Wilson of Iowa.
George,	Palmer,	Sawyer,

ABSENT—47.

Aldrich,	Daniel,	Hampton,	Pugh,
Allison,	Davis,	Hawley,	Reagan,
Bate,	Dawes,	Hearst,	Riddleberger,
Beck,	Dolph,	Hiscock,	Sherman,
Berry,	Edmunds,	Jones of Arkansas,	Spooner,
Blackburn,	Eustis,	Jones of Nevada,	Stanford,
Blodgett,	Evarts,	Kenna,	Turpie,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Manderson,	Vance,
Brown,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Voorhees.
Cameron,	Gibson,	Morgan,	Walthall,
Chace,	Gorman,	Morrill,	Wilson of Md.
Colquitt,	Hale,	Payne,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate declines to adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. As soon as the Sergeant-at-Arms makes his report as to the absent Senators whom he has requested to attend the Senate, I shall move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to compel absent Senators to attend. When we have but three days remaining of the Fiftieth Congress, it is hardly excusable for Senators to be absent from the sessions of the Senate when we have a large amount of public business that demands the attention of the Senate; and if it requires me to sit here all night, if a majority of those who are here will stay with me, we will have the absent Senators here.

Mr. STEWART. I ask for the calling of the roll. I think there is a quorum now. A good many pairs have been announced.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to a roll-call to see if there be a quorum here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will remind Senators that during the pendency of these proceedings debate is not in order and that no motion is in order except to adjourn.

Mr. STEWART. It is in order to call the roll again, is it not?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not.

Mr. HARRIS. Can not the Chair ascertain by actual count whether there be a quorum present or not?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He can not in the present condition of things.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not so understand the rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is unfortunate for the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. HARRIS. No, it is unfortunate for the Chair.

Mr. BUTLER (at 9 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.). Is a motion to adjourn in order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is.

Mr. BUTLER. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. And I demand the yeas and nays upon the motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOAR. Has any business transpired since the last motion to adjourn?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the motion to adjourn can be made when less than a quorum is present without the intervention of business.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BERRY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON], but I believe if he were present he would vote "yea," and therefore I shall vote "yea."

Mr. COKE (when Mr. REAGAN'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. REAGAN] is paired with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES].

Mr. WALTHALL (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], but, after consultation with his colleague, I feel at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. BATE (after having voted in the negative). I withdraw my vote. I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee withdraws his vote.

Mr. DOLPH (after having voted in the negative). As the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN], with whom I am paired, is not in the Chamber, I withdraw my vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon withdraws his vote.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], who is detained in the room of the Committee on Appropriations. I do not know how he would vote if in the Chamber, and therefore I withhold my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 14, nays 16; as follows:

YEAS—14.

Butler,	Cullom,	Pasco,	Vest,
Call,	Frye,	Platt,	Walthall.
Chandler,	Ingalls,	Ransom,
Coke,	McPherson,	Sawyer,

NAYS—16.

Blair,	Hoar,	Quay,	Stockbridge,
George,	Paddock,	Sabin,	Teller,
Gray,	Palmer,	Saulsbury,	Turpie,
Harris,	Plumb,	Stewart,	Wilson of Iowa.

ABSENT—46.

Aldrich,	Colquitt,	Hale,	Payne,
Allison,	Daniel,	Hampton,	Pugh,
Bate,	Davis,	Hawley,	Reagan,
Beck,	Dawes,	Hearst,	Riddleberger,
Berry,	Dolph,	Hiscock,	Sherman,
Blackburn,	Edmunds,	Jones of Arkansas,	Spooner,
Blodgett,	Eustis,	Jones of Nevada,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Evarts,	Kenna,	Vance,
Brown,	Farwell,	Manderson,	Voorhees.
Cameron,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Wilson of Md.
Chace,	Gibson,	Morgan,
Cockrell,	Gorman,	Morrill,

So the Senate refused to adjourn.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, is it in order to move a call of the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not in order. A call of the Senate is being executed.

Mr. BLAIR (at 9 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.). I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire moves that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. Upon which I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask for a division.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 18, noes 16.

So the motion was agreed to; and (at 9 o'clock and 42 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, March 1, 1889, at 12 o'clock m.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 26, 1889.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Inspector-General's Department.

Lieut. Col. Edward M. Heyl, inspector-general, to be inspector-general with the rank of colonel.

Maj. Henry W. Lawton, inspector-general, to be inspector-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Capt. Joseph P. Sanger, First Artillery, to be inspector-general with the rank of major.

Ninth Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. Alfred B. Jackson, to be first lieutenant.

Fourth Regiment of Cavalry.

Richmond McAllister Schofield, of New York, to be second lieutenant.

Third Regiment of Cavalry.

First Lieut. Bainbridge Reynolds, to be captain.

Second Lieut. Tyree R. Rivers, to be first lieutenant.

First Regiment of Infantry.

First Lieut. Frank H. Edmunds, regimental adjutant, to be captain.

Sixth Regiment of Infantry.

First Lieut. John Carland, to be captain.

Second Lieut. Reuben B. Turner, to be first lieutenant.

Twenty-third Regiment of Infantry.

Second Lieut. Edwin P. Pendleton, to be first lieutenant.

Twenty-fifth Regiment of Infantry.

Second Lieut. Harry A. Leonhaeuser, to be first lieutenant.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 28, 1889.

COMMISSIONER FOR ALASKA.

T. Carlos Jewett, of Litchfield, Minn., to be a commissioner in and for the district of Alaska, to reside at Sitka.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Surg. Thomas N. Penrose, a resident of Pennsylvania, to be a medical inspector in the Navy.

Passed Asst. Surg. Walter A. McClurg, a resident of Pennsylvania, to be a surgeon in the Navy.

Commodore George E. Belknap, a resident of New Hampshire, to be a rear-admiral in the Navy.

Capt. John G. Walker, a resident of Iowa, to be a commodore in the Navy.

Commander Silas Casey, a resident of New York, to be a captain in the Navy.

Lieut. Commander James M. Forsyth, a resident of Pennsylvania, to be a commander in the Navy.

Lieut. Charles Belknap, a resident of New York, to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy.

Lieut. Fidelio S. Carter, junior grade, a resident of Illinois, to be a lieutenant in the Navy.

Ensign Alfred L. Hall, a resident of Ohio, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy.

Lieut. Walter S. Hughes, junior grade, a resident of Iowa, to be a lieutenant in the Navy.

Ensign Harry M. Dombaugh, a resident of Ohio, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy.

Ensign William R. Rush, a resident of Louisiana, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

First Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. Edward Anderson, of the Fifteenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Fourth Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. William H. Hart, of the Twentieth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Fifth Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. Matthew C. Butler, jr., of the Ninth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Ninth Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. Alexander W. Perry, of the Tenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Tenth Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. George E. Stockle, of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Second Lieut. William T. Littlebrant, of the Tenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

First Regiment of Cavalry.

Sergt. Henry A. Barber, Troop E, Seventh Cavalry, to be second lieutenant.

Third Regiment of Cavalry.

First Sergt. Michael M. McNamee, Troop G, Seventh Cavalry, to be second lieutenant.

Second Regiment of Artillery.

Sergt. Moses Gray Zalinski, Battery H, First Artillery, to be second lieutenant.

Fifth Regiment of Infantry.

Sergt. Robert W. Rose, Company C, Sixteenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Sixth Regiment of Infantry.

Sergt. William C. Bennett, Company H, Seventeenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Seventh Regiment of Infantry.

Corporal Frederic H. Sargent, Company G, Seventh Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Ninth Regiment of Infantry.

Sergt. William A. Campbell, Company K, Twelfth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Tenth Regiment of Infantry.

Corporal John M. Sigworth, Battery L, First Artillery, to be second lieutenant.

Fifteenth Regiment of Infantry.

Corporal Harold L. Jackson, Company F, Fifteenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Eighteenth Regiment of Infantry.

Sergt. Percival G. Lowe, Company B, Eighteenth Infantry, to be second lieutenant.

Twentieth Regiment of Infantry.

First Sergt. Wilson Chase, Troop B, Seventh Cavalry, to be second lieutenant.

Quartermaster's Department.

First Lieut. John W. Summerhayes, regimental quartermaster, Eighth Infantry, to be assistant quartermaster with the rank of captain, February 25, 1889.

Maj. William B. Hughes, quartermaster, to be deputy quartermaster-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, February 15, 1889.

Capt. Charles H. Hoyt, assistant quartermaster, to be quartermaster with the rank of major, February 15, 1889.

Tenth Regiment of Infantry.

Capt. Edward W. Whittemore, of the Fifteenth Infantry, to be major, February 17, 1889, vice Hawkins, promoted to the Twenty-third Infantry.

Eighteenth Regiment of Infantry.

Lieut. Col. Henry M. Lazelle, of the Twenty-third Infantry, to be colonel, February 17, 1889, vice Yard, deceased.

Twenty-third Regiment of Infantry.

Maj. Hamilton S. Hawkins, of the Tenth Infantry, to be lieutenant-colonel, February 17, 1889, vice Lazelle, promoted to the Eighteenth Infantry.

ON RETIRED-LIST.

William S. Rosecrans, late brigadier-general United States Army, to be brigadier-general, to date from February 27, 1889, with a view to his name being placed on the retired-list of the Army.

William F. Smith, late major in the Corps of Engineers, to be major of engineers, to date from February 27, 1889, with a view to his name being placed on the retired-list of the Army.

POSTMASTERS.

Mrs. Mary White, to be postmaster at East Tawas, Mich.

W. H. Grim, to be postmaster at Beaver, Pa.

Dayton Hale, to be postmaster at Columbus, Miss.

Theo. B. Patton, to be postmaster at Altoona, Pa.

Miss Mary S. Thompson, to be postmaster at Williamston, Mich.

Samuel B. Thompson, to be postmaster at Lake City, in the county of Columbia and State of Florida.

Leroy L. Brinkley, to be postmaster at Edenton, in the county of Chowan and State of North Carolina.

John C. Hunter, to be postmaster at Union, in the county of Union and State of South Carolina.

Adelia M. Barrows, to be postmaster at Hinsdale, in the county of Cheshire and State of New Hampshire.

Edgar H. Davis, to be postmaster at Keyser, in the county of Mineral and State of West Virginia.

William F. Weaver, to be postmaster at Will's Point, in the county of Van Zandt and State of Texas.

John S. Yearwood, to be postmaster at Sweet Water, in the county of Monroe and State of Tennessee.

Stephen C. Weaver, to be postmaster at Daytona, in the county of Volusia and State of Florida.

Mary E. Farish, to be postmaster at Farmersville, in the county of Collin and State of Texas.

Francis M. Setzer, to be postmaster at Albany, in the county of Gentry and State of Missouri.

Margaret G. Davis, to be postmaster at Biloxi, in the county of Harrison and State of Mississippi.

Horace C. Ashton, to be postmaster at Flemingsburgh, in the county of Fleming and State of Kentucky.

John H. Davis, to be postmaster at Tallapoosa, in the county of Haralson and State of Georgia.

C. G. Goodman, to be postmaster at Orange, in the county of Orange and State of Texas.

Andrew J. Sturgis, to be postmaster at Crystal Springs, in the county of Copiah and State of Mississippi.

Alvin J. Kitt, to be postmaster at Goodland, in the county of Newton and State of Indiana.

John B. Chesebrough, to postmaster at Kentland, in the county of Newton and State of Indiana.

George G. Moore, to be postmaster at Flatonia, in the county of Fayette and State of Texas.

Richard T. Hanson, to be postmaster at Donaldsonville, in the parish of Ascension and State of Louisiana.

John B. Roberts, to be postmaster at Sandersville, in the county of Washington and State of Georgia.

Jeremiah G. Fowler, to be postmaster at Milledgeville, in the county of Baldwin and State of Georgia.

C. J. Bartlett, to be postmaster at Marlin, in the county of Falls and State of Texas.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 28, 1889.

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

POLICE FORCE, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. TAULBEE. On yesterday morning the Chair laid before the House certain Senate bills, and also Senate amendments to House bills, and called attention to House bill No. 6677, which was a bill the substance of which is to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, in which amendments the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] asked unanimous consent to concur. Inquiry was made of the Chair by myself as to the nature of the bill, that is to say, whether or not the increase provided in the bill of the police force of this District, which is 1 lieutenant, 17 sergeants, and 95 privates, as well as 19 station clerks and 9 laborers, was a permanent increase or only for temporary purposes. Whereupon the Chair stated it was his understanding that the increase was temporary, and merely for the purposes of the inauguration ceremonies on the 4th of March. Thereupon I withdrew my objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana, and his request was concurred in by the House. On reading that bill I find that the increase provided by the bill is a permanent one; and I now desire to ask unanimous consent that we may reconsider the vote by which the House concurred in the amendments of the Senate. Of course I presume I would have the right to enter the motion to reconsider, but I do not think any member upon the floor desires the passage of the bill under a misapprehension or would claim the privilege derived by reason of such misapprehension.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is glad the gentleman has called attention to this case, because the Chair on looking at the title of the bill sees that in responding to the inquiry of the gentleman from Kentucky on yesterday the Chair was in error. The Chair thought this was simply a bill to authorize an increase of the police force of the District of Columbia for temporary purposes during the inauguration ceremonies.

Mr. TAULBEE. That was my understanding.

The SPEAKER. And that the increase was merely temporary, and for that purpose alone. But the Chair sees on an examination of the bill that this is a bill to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved July 31, 1883, and is a very different bill from that which the Chair supposed it was.

Mr. BREWER. There is no question, I think, Mr. Speaker, but that it was intended to be considered as a temporary measure. It came before the House from our committee and that was the design of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not examined the provisions of the bill.

Mr. TAULBEE. Here is the original act which this bill seeks to amend, and I send it to the desk and ask to have it read, if there is no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Do not take up the time in that way. It is not necessary.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, my recollection of the statement of the gentleman from Kentucky is substantially as he now suggests, and that it was his intention to object to the bill if this increase was a permanent one. His objection was withdrawn on the assurance that it was only a temporary measure, and I do not think under the circumstances that I ought to object to the request that the vote by which the bill was passed be reconsidered.

Mr. ROGERS. That is right.

Mr. ROMEIS. As a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, I wish also, in addition to what my colleague said, to state that my understanding of this bill is that it was to be temporary in its character.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendments were concurred in be reconsidered, and if there be no objection the Chair will withhold the bill for the present until gentlemen can have an opportunity to examine its provisions.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, an order will be also made directing the Clerk of the House to request the Senate to return the bill.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

SALMON FISHERIES OF ALASKA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 3993) to provide for the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, the provisions of that bill are contained in a bill reported unanimously from the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. It is an emergency bill, necessary for the preservation of the salmon fisheries of Alaska, and I ask unanimous consent that it be now considered. It contains nothing else but the necessary measures for the protection of these important fisheries.

The SPEAKER. The bill which the gentleman from Arkansas says has been reported from the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries has been read already in the House, and unless there be a demand for the reading of the Senate bill, the reading will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. Is this the bill that makes the lease to the fisheries company?

Mr. DUNN. No; this is a different bill. I shall report that from the committee and give the House ample opportunity to consider it hereafter. This is a Senate bill which relates simply to the salmon fisheries. It is identical with sections 4 and 5 of the House bill prohibiting the erection of dams or other obstructions in the rivers of Alaska which prevent the salmon from ascending to their spawning-grounds.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNN. I offer an amendment which relates also to the preservation of the herd of seals, and I ask the previous question upon the bill and amendment.

Mr. BIGGS. I reserve the right to object.

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. That section 1956 of the Revised Statutes of the United States was intended to include and apply, and is hereby declared to include and apply, to all the waters of Behring Sea in Alaska embraced within the boundary lines mentioned and described in the treaty with Russia, dated March 30, A. D. 1867, by which the Territory of Alaska was ceded to the United States; and it shall be the duty of the President, at a timely season in each year, to issue his proclamation and cause the same to be published for one month in at least one newspaper published at each United States port of entry on the Pacific coast warning all persons against entering said territory and waters for the purpose of violating the provisions of said section; and he shall also cause one or more vessels of the United States to diligently cruise said waters and arrest all persons and seize all vessels found to be, or to have been, engaged in any violation of the laws of the United States therein.

Mr. TAULBEE. I would like to ask the gentleman, in the light of his explanation, the necessity for this resolution at this time.

Mr. DUNN. The necessity is that the general bill, reported by the committee to the House, has been recommitted for the purpose of considering certain amendments relating to the reletting of the lease and the length of its term in future, and in the present condition of the House it is not at all probable that it will receive final consideration in time to pass the Senate. This amendment simply provides for the protection to the herd of seals and the salmon until there can be further legislation of a permanent character.

Mr. TAULBEE. Does it have the effect of sending up the vessels named in this amendment as patrols to protect the company which already has the control of that business?

Mr. DUNN. Not at all. It is to protect the herd of seals and enforce the laws of the United States which were enacted in 1870.

Mr. TAULBEE. Why can not the President do that by existing law?

Mr. DUNN. There has been a relaxation of the enforcement of the law heretofore so that unauthorized persons have concluded that the Government does not intend to enforce the law, and not less than one hundred and fifty vessels are to-day fitting out to go to Behring Sea. They will literally cover that sea with unlawful seal-hunters armed with guns, and the destruction of seal-life that will take place and the fusilade of fire-arms that will occur in that sea during four months of next summer will drive every seal from it that is not killed in the general and indiscriminate slaughter. It does not change the law, but commands the President of the United States to enforce it.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And is not this method of getting seals—by shooting them in the open sea—the most wasteful method that could be devised, only about one in five being recovered?

Mr. DUNN. About one out of seven is recovered. The time has come when the Government must enforce the laws for the preservation of our herd of seals with firmness and decision, or suffer an absolute destruction of the herd. The danger is imminent, and I hope no gentleman will object to it. It does not involve a dollar of expenditure.

It useless to protect the seals on the rookeries—the islands of St. Paul and St. George—and leave them to their fate in the waters of Behring Sea. If they are left without protection in the sea there will soon be none left to go to the rookeries. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DUNN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT KALAMAZOO, MICH.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3431) for the erection of a public building in the city of Kalamazoo, Mich.

Mr. BURROWS. That is a bill I asked to have considered yesterday morning before the bill was passed which was called up by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ABBOTT]. I ask unanimous consent that it be considered now. [Cries of "All right!"]

The SPEAKER. The bill was read yesterday. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. BLAND. Some time ago, when the House was proceeding to the consideration of a conference report, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER], anxious to get up consideration of the Oklahoma bill, kept the House in suspense for several days by objecting to the conference report, upon the ground that the House ought to proceed with the consideration of the Oklahoma bill. He began a line of argument based upon that position. It was objected to on the part of some gentleman on the ground that the gentleman was out of order in discussing a conference report which did not relate to the Oklahoma bill; but the Speaker ruled that, inasmuch as the gentleman stated he wanted to argue that the Oklahoma bill was such an important bill that no other bill ought to pass until that had been considered, therefore the gentleman from Iowa was in order.

Now, Mr. Speaker, for a much greater reason, sir, is it in order now for me to say, and especially to gentlemen on that side of the House, that until the Sullivan contested-election case is considered in this House it is not only an unseemly proceeding, but anomalous for this House to proceed to the consideration of private bills for the erection of public buildings throughout this country when we absolutely refuse to consider a public measure; a case, Mr Speaker, in which a majority of a committee of this House have reported that a gentleman is entitled to a seat upon this floor. When we proceed to take that case up we are met with dilatory motions and filibustering. I say it is an unseemly proceeding, and until that Sullivan contested-election case is taken up we ought not to proceed to the passage of bills which are simply a raid on the public Treasury. I do not know what objection they have to taking up the election case.

Mr. BUCHANAN. It is not in order until 11 o'clock.

Mr. BLAND. I understand Mr. Sullivan is a man of very limited means, and the amount allotted to him by law, Mr. Speaker, for a contested election will not pay his board bills. If he is entitled to a seat in this House, as your committee has stated, he is entitled to the salary and mileage; and that will not pay his expenses. It is an outrage upon justice to deny him. The gentlemen on the other side were very anxious to take up the Smalls-Elliott contest! As I understood, they were willing for this other case to follow directly afterwards; but when that was decided and this other contested-election case was called up, they refused; and I do not know but the gentleman from Michigan was one of those who failed to vote in order to prevent the taking up this case.

It is very true that Mr. Felton is supposed to be a millionaire and is able to stand this situation, but if he were in the position that Mr. Sullivan is, how would it be? Mr. Felton can wine and dine members of this House, and his position seems to have gathered around him support that my poor friend Sullivan is unable to procure. I will not say that that is the reason why our friends on the other side refuse to take up the case. My friend Sullivan is an Irish-American. I will not say that even that is the reason for the Republicans of this House refusing to give him a seat upon this floor.

He is a Democrat. I suppose that covers all and is the great crime of which he is guilty, and that must be urged here as a reason why gentlemen will refuse to do justice to this contestant. Do you suppose, Mr. Speaker, that a Democratic House will permit a single public building bill to go through here for gentlemen who sit quietly in their seats and refuse to take up that contested-election case until that case is disposed of? I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read a portion of the report of the committee upon the Sullivan-Felton contested-election case, and, so far as I am concerned, I propose to stand here to the close of this Congress, unless this case is disposed of, to see that no public-building bill shall pass for gentlemen who refuse to take up this contested-election case.

The Clerk read as follows:

LINCOLN'S CROOKEDNESS.

In addition to the evidence adduced before the board of election commissioners, showing irregularities and crookedness in the second precinct of the Forty-eighth, we refer to the testimony of the following witnesses, namely, James Kavanaugh, Rec., pp. 110, 111; Morrison, Rec., p. 1535; J. J. McAuliffe, Rec., pp. 245, 250; O'Connor, Rec., p. 123; John Lycett, Rec., pp. 901, 905; O'Day, Rec., pp. 272, 273.

Kavanaugh testifies that some days before the election this man Lincoln was hunting for an opportunity to make merchandise of himself. In a conversation with Kavanaugh he said that he would like to get on the precinct election board. Kavanaugh told him the way the Democratic party was doing, and that he understood the Republicans were doing the same way, namely, that the committeemen selected the members of the precinct boards. "Well, by George," says Lincoln, "I have got no one from my precinct on the county committee. I must get on, because there is going to be plenty of money this year." Kavanaugh asked him "who was going to use the money this year?" Lincoln answered, "Felton is going to throw out a big 'sack,' and, I guess, Sullivan, too." Kavanaugh then told him that the only way to get on that he knew of would be through Mr. Charles Tilton, city and county surveyor, and ex officio a member of the board of election commissioners. "You know him," says Kavanaugh; "he is your friend." "Yes; he is my friend," says Lincoln, "and I will see him."

Lincoln afterward told Kavanaugh that he had seen Tilton, and that he (Tilton) had promised to put him on. Lincoln was a Republican in politics, and he was put on as inspector. What part of the "sack" Lincoln was given, if any, does not appear from the evidence. That he received his reward a person not extremely incredulous would readily presume upon a close analysis of all the evidence. After the election was over, and when there was some talk about the "crookedness," and it "had come out in the papers," Kavanaugh said to him, "What the deuce were you doing with the ballots home all night?" Lincoln laughed and said, "Oh, that is all right; I have 'fixed' them all right." In another conversation with Kavanaugh, he told him (Kavanaugh) that the Republican "bosses" were after him—watching him—afraid that he would go to Frank Sullivan and give the "business away." He says, "I don't propose to starve, and wait for them to come up with the money. They promised me money, and they did not do as they agreed, and I don't care a damn for them anyhow. They promised to 'fix' me all right, and they have fooled me and kept me fooled too long. I am out of money, and am not going to starve to death waiting for them." This statement was made in reference to Spreckels and William Center, a member of the firm of Spreckels Brothers. (See Rec., p. 111.)

Strozinski testified that Lincoln said to him, "I have a notion to sue Felton." (See Rec., pp. 66, 67). Other evidence shows that for three hours after the polls opened at this precinct the clerks had no poll-books, but were keeping the names of voters on a piece of brown paper; that the ballot-box was not locked; that Lincoln, when he received a ticket of an elector, would raise the lid of the ballot-box and throw the ticket in, and that at 1 o'clock he was drunk. The evidence clearly shows these facts, and is wholly uncontradicted.

Morrison, a Democratic judge on this election board, was paid money the night before the election by Lycett and Spreckels, who knew that he (Morrison) was one of the judges. (See Rec., pp. 247-249; again, p. 381; again, p. 1535; again, pp. 272, 273, and again, 901.) In fact, the conduct of the officers and others connected with this precinct was so steeped in fraud, and surrounded with so much uncertainty as to honest and fair methods, as to make it impossible to tell anything about the vote there cast. Hence we feel called upon to throw it out.

FORTY-SIXTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT.

In this district, composed of some eight election precincts, fraud and bribery seem to have run riot—a perfect carnival of corruption. Richard Schumacher, Mitchell Phillips, and other active agents and Republican partisan workers, in the local slang of that "coin" country, were loaded down with "sacks" full, and ready to give a "piece" to every man willing to sell. Schumacher was very active in the use of money for Felton, and, according to his own evidence, induced thirty-six Democrats to vote for Felton. That he used money, and used it corruptly and effectively, his own evidence, when carefully and critically read, abundantly shows. (See his own evidence, Rec., p. 323; evidence John Twigg, p. 32; James Lowney, p. 381; John T. Crummey, p. 354.) Dan Dougherty was a "first lieutenant" under Schumacher, and rendered most "valuable aid." The whole "gang," however, was under Mitchell Phillips, who seems to have been middle-man between Spreckels, Felton, and Center. (Spreckels Brothers and Center were furnishing a large part of the "sack.") After a thorough examination of the evidence it is not hard to believe that at least two or three hundred voters were corruptly influenced to vote for Felton in this assembly district alone. Without attempting to go further into details we may say that the evidence, as a whole, presents an amount of fraud all over the whole Congressional district, and especially in the cities of San Francisco and San José, that could not have existed without a well-organized scheme to perpetrate the same.

SPRECKELS BROTHERS.

Why the Spreckels Brothers should feel such concern about the result of the election as to contribute so largely to the campaign fund it may be some satisfaction to state. The Spreckels family are largely interested in the sugar industry on the Hawaiian Islands and in the importation of sugar to the United States, free of duty, under what is known as the Hawaiian treaty. Out of the money made therefrom their colossal fortune is being greatly augmented from year to year. After a couple of vain attempts to have a clandestine interview with Mr. Sullivan on the subject of that interest, it is easy to see that they had no further doubts as to his feelings and intentions on that matter. Hence John D. Spreckels became chairman of the Congressional committee, and, besides exercising a general supervision of the district, he assigned to himself the "special charge" of two of the assembly districts of San Francisco, containing some six or eight precincts each. And one William Center, a member of the Spreckels firm, "spread" himself around in a very active sort of way. A number of witnesses testify to the fact of having received money from these men Spreckels and Center.

INTIMIDATION.

Before concluding this report we feel that we should be derelict in duty if we failed to refer to the question of intimidation and bulldozing in a number of the precincts where these methods were most potent in results—at several precincts, but more particularly at the Almaden precinct. At this precinct Felton received some 209 votes, and Sullivan 45; majority for Felton, 164. See sections 5506, 5507, 5508, and 5520 of the United States Revised Statutes, and sections 1192, 1193, 1194, 1195, 1196, 1197, of the political code of California, which latter read as follows, to wit.

Mr. OATES (interrupting the reading). Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. OATES. Is it in order during this hour, under the rule recently adopted, to discuss in this desultory way a contested-election case which is not before the House for consideration.

The SPEAKER. The House is not proceeding in any time set apart by rule or resolution. The Chair is laying before the House communications from the Executive Departments and Senate bills, in accordance with the permanent rule of the House which requires that to be done immediately after the reading of the Journal. Of course, if the point of order is made that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] is not discussing the question before the House, that is a different point.

Mr. BLAND. Upon that, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that the Chair has already ruled on the point of order. I stated in the beginning that I opposed this public-building bill upon the ground that we ought not to proceed to consider or pass it pending this contested-election case, which ought to have precedence in this House of all other proceedings. The Speaker ruled directly on that point in the case of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER] when he was discussing the Oklahoma bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not remember the exact language employed by himself on that occasion, but the recollection of the Chair is that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER] was proceeding to make an argument to show the importance of the passage of the Oklahoma bill, or, at least, of its consideration, and did not enter into the merits of the bill.

Mr. BLAND. And I have been speaking of the importance and necessity for taking up the contested-election case.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is entirely competent for the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] to make an argument to show that there are other important matters pending before the House, a contested-election case or any other matter, and that, for that reason, certain other measures ought not now be considered or passed; but the Chair does not think that under the rule of the House it is competent for a gentleman to take up for discussion some particular measure other than the one immediately before the House and discuss it on its merits, and the Chair thinks that no decision to the contrary has ever been made, because such a decision would be in direct opposition to the express rule of the House.

Mr. BLAND. I have not the decision of the Chair that I referred to before me, but my recollection is very distinct that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER] went on to state as a reason why no other measure should be taken up that in the Territory of Oklahoma murders were being committed, and that the Territory was without law, and he made an argument in favor of the passage of that bill, and did it to show the necessity of considering that before any other measure, especially before the bill then up for consideration. Now, I make the same point in regard to this contested-election case, and I have had a portion of the report read to show the importance and the merits of that case, and that it ought to be considered before any other measure in this House.

The SPEAKER. The recollection of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] accords with that of the Chair as to the character of the argument made by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER]. It was designed to show that unless the Oklahoma bill was taken up and disposed of great inconvenience and disorder would result in that part of the country, and that therefore it was important to consider it first; but the gentleman did not and could not take up the Oklahoma bill and have the report and the bill read and discuss the merits of that particular bill. He could discuss only the general subject of the importance of acting upon that measure.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. I propose, then, to proceed——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] has the floor.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I desire to know——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] has the floor, and unless he yields the gentleman from Alabama can not be recognized.

Mr. OATES. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman can not take the gentleman from Missouri off the floor by a parliamentary inquiry. Only a question of order will do that.

Mr. OATES. Then I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. OATES. Is not the object of the rule recently adopted, setting apart the hour between 10 and 11 o'clock, to allow the roll of members to be called in order, that gentlemen may ask unanimous consent to have their bills considered? Does not that rule set apart that hour exclusively to allow requests for unanimous consent? Now, if the time is consumed in the consideration of other matters, will the hour provided for by the order be allowed after 11 o'clock?

The SPEAKER. Of course not. When the hour of 11 o'clock arrives, if this or any other matter laid before the House by the Chair is still under consideration, there will be no call of members to-day for requests for unanimous consent.

Mr. OATES. Then if this hour is consumed by the matter before the House it will cut off all opportunity for unanimous consent under the order?

The SPEAKER. The Chair so understands.

Mr. OATES. Then if every member of this House were to rise and request the consideration of some measure not then in order the Speaker could not entertain the request after 11 o'clock? Such a rule is ridiculous and ought to be repealed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I had commenced to urge what I consider to be a matter of great importance to this contestant; and I hope I may have order.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Now, Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Under the order of the House the contested-election case can not be considered during this hour. This hour is set apart for another purpose.

Mr. BLAND. I am aware of that, Mr. Speaker; and I am urging why this election case should be considered——

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. I wish to state my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. I raise the question whether it is competent for a member to rise during this hour to discuss a question that can not be considered during this hour—which would be out of order if called up.

The SPEAKER. The time now being occupied is not set apart by any special order or resolution of the House. It is only after the Journal has been read and after the Chair has complied with the standing rule which requires him to lay before the House executive communications, bills, etc., that the special order to which the gentleman refers begins to operate. Now the House gave unanimous consent when this bill was laid before it for its consideration. Of course, it must be considered as any other bill. The gentleman from Missouri takes the floor and proceeds to make an argument to show that this bill ought not to be passed until some other matter of greater importance, as he insists, shall be acted on. In the opinion of the Chair that is a legitimate argument.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I will ask the gentleman from Missouri whether he would not be satisfied with unanimous consent to print, so that we may go on with the business of the House.

Mr. BLAND. I am afraid that my good friend from Kentucky would not read what I might publish, and I desire him to understand my position.

The importance, Mr. Speaker, of taking up this contested-election case must be very apparent to every member on this floor. In the first place, the very high merit of the contestant's case demands it; but above that, it is a privileged question in this House above all other questions, whether on public buildings or private bills. Not only that, but we are now in the closing hours of this Congress. There can be but few more days devoted to the public business. We have a number of appropriation bills to be considered, and unless we proceed immediately to take up this case and dispose of it, we shall accomplish the great injustice of which I have complained—the adjournment of this Congress without having this case considered at all.

If it is to be considered at all—and it certainly ought to be considered—we must take it up immediately; we must go to work and consider and determine it; for we can not further delay this matter without defeating its consideration entirely and preventing the contestant from California from obtaining his seat. In view of the fact that the case has been called up repeatedly and gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber have sat in their seats and refused to vote, in order to do the injustice of denying to this contestant a seat on this floor—knowing as they do that the closing hours of Congress will be so pressed with other business that this case if taken up will have to be laid aside from time to time to allow appropriation bills to become laws—it is absolutely necessary that the case should be considered at once.

In the hope that this morning hour may be given to the consideration of the business contemplated by the order, I should certainly cease my opposition to proceeding to the consideration of bills in this morning hour if we can take up this contested-election case right now and dispose of it during this morning hour or the morning hour to-morrow. We ought to dispose of it within an hour. Gentlemen have heard it discussed on this floor. We heard it discussed yesterday. We all have the reports in the case, which we can read, so as to determine the question for ourselves. The views of the minority of the committee are printed with the report of the majority. The case has been fully considered by the committee and reported upon, so that every gentleman in the House, if not already informed upon it, can inform himself upon it in time to vote on the question to-morrow in the morning hour, which will begin at 10 o'clock, so that we can practically dispose of this business by 11 o'clock. It must be apparent to every gentleman on this floor that unless this case is taken up, and that very soon, the contestant from California will, as I have already stated, not only be deprived of his right to a seat as a member of this House—a right which his constituents have given him by their votes—but the very means that would enable him to pay the expenses of his contest would be denied him.

Mr. Speaker, this case came up incidentally yesterday; and we had read from the Clerk's desk——

Mr. TRACEY. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it; and the House will please come to order so that the Chair may hear what is said.

Mr. TRACEY. The gentleman from Missouri has just stated that this bill came up yesterday morning——

Mr. BLAND. Oh, no—not the bill.

Mr. TRACEY. Now, it appears to me that the bill having been considered——

Mr. BLAND. The gentleman is mistaken. I made no such statement. I said that the contested-election case had incidentally been considered yesterday while we were engaged on the Indian appropriation bill; and I proceeded to discuss it from that point.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that this bill which is before the House was before the House yesterday morning, and that under the rule it is not in order to take up the time of the House now in considering it. This special rule provides—

That it shall not be in order for the Speaker to entertain a request for unanimous consent at any other time, except to concur or non-concur in Senate amendments to House bills, or to consider Senate bills when presented to the House by the Speaker.

Now, I claim that under this order this bill is not in order.

The SPEAKER. This bill was——

Mr. CHIPMAN. I wish to say a word upon the point of order raised by the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BLAND. I do not understand the gentleman to raise a point of order, and I claim my right to the floor.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Then I raise a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has the right to take the gentleman from Missouri off the floor for the purpose of making a point of order against what he is saying, but he has not the right to take him off the floor for the purpose of making any other point of order in regard to the business of the House.

Mr. CHIPMAN. The point of order I raise is that the gentleman is out of order in addressing the Chair at all at this time.

The SPEAKER. But the bill is before the House by the unanimous consent of the House.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Then there has been unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. Unanimous consent has been given for its consideration.

Mr. CHIPMAN. No gentleman objected?

The SPEAKER. Nobody.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I would hardly accuse my friends on the other side of the Chamber of refusing to take up this contested-election case because the contestee is a millionaire and can dine and wine gentlemen here and get into their good graces, or because the contentant is an Irish-American citizen, and they may have prejudice against him on that account. I supposed their opposition was because he was a Democrat and his politics probably did not suit them. That is the most charitable view to take of this matter. But here one of the gentlemen who, sitting in his seat, absolutely refused to vote at all when this election contest was called up, comes here now and asks the Democrats on this side to take up what is a private raid upon the public Treasury and put it in ahead of this contested-election case. It is against that I am inveighing; and I propose to do so as long as that bill is in the morning hour.

We can take up the contested-election case, consider and pass it during this morning hour, and it ought to be done, and I have stated the reason why it should be done. The reports in this case have been printed for a long time and every member has had an opportunity to get possession of the facts by reading the report of the committee as well as the views of the minority. They have had ample opportunity to become acquainted with the merits of the case so as to vote intelligently upon it, with limited discussion, and if they have not done so, then I commend to any gentleman who has neglected this duty to get a report, read it, familiarize himself with it, and be prepared to vote upon the question intelligently, because if this case is not considered to-day, in the morning hour of to-morrow I will again seek an opportunity to bring it to the attention of the House, and I shall insist that it be taken up and disposed of before any of these private measures—these raids upon the public Treasury—are permitted to be perpetrated in the morning hour, because the delay in this case is an injustice.

Now as I stated before, we are in the closing hours of the Fiftieth Congress. We have but a short time remaining. Consideration has been given to a case in which our Republican friends supposed they were able to make some political capital under the folds of the "bloody shirt." They were anxious to press that case to a consideration, and when that was about being laid before the House I asked the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] when he called it up, if he intended to press the other case of Sullivan vs. Felton, and he said he did intend to press it, and he has been endeavoring to call it up for consideration ever since. But the Punic faith of gentlemen on the other side was shown when that case was called up and acted upon by refusing to allow the other case, the remaining election case, to be taken up for consideration, and one of the colleagues of the contestee cast his vote in the affirmative on the question of consideration for the purpose of moving a reconsideration, and delaying action upon the case by presenting all sorts of dilatory motions to reconsider the vote by which the House determined to consider the election case, and by moving to adjourn, and to adjourn over, and thus prevent action.

That is the situation of this contested-election case. The House has already voted that it will consider it, but in order to delay and prevent its consideration motions were made of a dilatory character, and have been constantly interposed to prevent it, and when no other means were available gentlemen on the other side refused to vote at all, leaving the House without a quorum. When that system of tactics has been inaugurated certainly gentlemen who have been engaged in it can not complain of me just at this time that I am insisting here in this morning hour, the only opportunity I may have to get the floor, upon the consideration of that case before private bills making raids upon the Treasury now called up for consideration shall be disposed of. Now, in the hope that in the morning hour of to-morrow this case may be taken up and disposed of, I move to take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I desire to rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is this motion debatable?

Mr. MILLS. What is the motion of the gentleman from Missouri?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock.

Mr. SOWDEN. Will the gentleman from Missouri withdraw that motion to yield to me?

Mr. BLAND. I will do so if the gentleman desires it.

Mr. MILLS. I wish to ask, Mr. Speaker, as a matter of parliamentary information if when the hour of 11 o'clock comes this bill will not still continue before the House for consideration?

The SPEAKER. It will. The Chair will state again that this bill comes before the House as a matter laid before the House under the rules.

Mr. MILLS. That is what I supposed.

The SPEAKER. The bill did not come before the House under the special order requiring the Chair to call the names of members, which order exhausts itself on the arrival of 11 o'clock, but has been laid before the House in the regular order under the permanent rules of the House, and may remain here indefinitely unless the House disposes of it in some shape.

Mr. BLAND. I withdraw the motion for a recess.

Mr. BURROWS. I demand the previous question upon ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

The previous question was ordered.

The question recurred upon the engrossment and third reading of the bill; and on a division there were—ayes 102, noes 3.

Mr. BLAND. No quorum.

The SPEAKER appointed Mr. BLAND and Mr. BURROWS as tellers.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 164, no 1.

So the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. BURROWS. I demand the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The previous question was ordered.

The question recurred upon the passage of the bill; and on a division there were—ayes 108, noes 4.

Mr. BLAND. We had a quorum on the other vote, and we had better have a quorum on this.

The SPEAKER appointed Mr. BLAND and Mr. BURROWS as tellers.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 158, noes 6.

So the bill was passed.

Mr. BURROWS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LAND DISTRICTS, NEBRASKA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3810) to establish additional land districts in the State of Nebraska.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask unanimous consent that that remain on the table for the present.

There was no objection.

FRAUDULENT USE OF THE MAILS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9268) to punish dealers and pretended dealers in counterfeit money and other fraudulent devices for using the United States mails.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendment to this bill. The House passed a bill providing for the punishment of dealers in counterfeit money for using the United States mails, which bill has been amended by the Senate and returned to the House, and I ask concurrence in the amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. The amendment had better be read.

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

During the reading,

Mr. RANDALL. I object to the further reading, and under the circumstances I object to the present consideration of any of the bills that are now on the Speaker's table. They can remain there.

The SPEAKER. They will remain on the table, if there be no objection.

Mr. ENLOE. It would not take a moment to consider and dispose of this matter.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, an extension of leave of absence was granted to Mr. SYMES, on account of sickness.

FILING OF REPORTS.

Mr. MANSUR. I ask leave that gentlemen having reports to make from committees, either of minority or majority, may file them with the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri? The Chair hears none, and that order will be made.

The following reports were filed by being handed in at the Clerk's desk:

SPOLIATION CLAIMS.

Mr. MANSUR, from the Committee on Claims, submitted a report recommending appropriation to pay the amounts of the several findings of the Court of Claims reported to Congress; which was referred to the House Calendar, and ordered to be printed.

UNOFFICIAL MATTER IN REBELLION RECORDS.

Mr. MAISH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported their views as to whether unofficial matter was introduced into volume 20, Part II, of the Official Records of the Rebellion; which were referred to the House Calendar, and ordered to be printed.

HENRY AYRES.

Mr. BYNUM, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 8170) for the relief of Henry Ayres; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN J. S. HASSLER.

Mr. YODER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 11632) to place John J. S. Hassler on the retired-list of the United States Army; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MILLS. I call up the conference report that was under consideration last night.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERMENTROUT], from the Select Committee on Inaugural Proceedings, has a resolution which he desires to have read, that it may be well to dispose of.

Mr. RANDALL. Will it provoke debate? If it does I shall object. [To Mr. ERMENTROUT.] Ask unanimous consent to bring it up, and cut off debate on consideration.

Mr. HOLMES. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOLMES. I desire to inquire whether or not a veto message is not a matter of higher privilege than the conference report?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not, under the rules. Except for the positive rules of the House it would be; but the House has adopted a rule which makes a conference report a higher privilege than any other matter before the House.

Mr. RANDALL. Regular order.

INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I ask consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker appoint a committee of three members of the House to co-operate with a committee appointed by the Senate to take charge of the arrangements for the inaugural ceremonies at the Capitol on the 4th of March.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER subsequently appointed Mr. ERMENTROUT, Mr. CRAIN, and Mr. BAKER of New York as the committee on the part of the House.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The matter before the House is the motion made by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DIBBLE] that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment numbered 124.

Mr. DIBBLE. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE].

Mr. RANDALL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RANDALL. On yesterday evening, during the confusion incident to the close of the session, the Chair recognized, pending a demand made by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CLEMENTS] for the previous question, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DIBBLE] to make a motion to recede, which is equivalent to concurring. That, no doubt, was correctly made, and was a prior motion, because it tended to bring the two Houses together on legislation. But the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DIBBLE] took the floor and claimed the right to one hour for debate. I want to direct the attention of the Chair to the fact that the effect of that was to take the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CLEMENTS], in charge of the conference report, which he presented, off the floor and dispossess him of control of that report when there had been no adverse vote by the House in so far as the control of that bill was concerned.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that it was undoubtedly correct to recognize the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DIBBLE] for the purpose of making the motion to recede from the disagreement, notwithstanding the fact that the gentleman from Georgia had at the time pending a proposition insisting on the disagreement, and had demanded the previous question. But the Chair, upon reflection, feels disposed to say that the gentleman from Georgia, under the practice heretofore prevailing in the House, was still entitled to the floor for the purpose of controlling the matter, having charge of the general subject, there having been no adverse action, and therefore the Chair thinks that the gentleman from South Carolina was not then entitled, under this usage, to recognition for the purpose of debate, but the Chair actually recognized the gentleman from South Carolina, and he yielded to the gentleman from Kentucky five minutes.

While the Chair thinks now this action was not strictly in accordance with the practice, the gentleman states that he will not occupy more time than would be allowed if the previous question was ordered, and the Chair will not undertake to reverse the action taken, but the Chair desires that the action taken yesterday shall not be a precedent.

Mr. RANDALL. I am quite content that the proceedings shall go that way; but I wanted it just as the Chair has stated, not to go as a precedent, for I want to illustrate for a moment what the effect would be. There are two hundred amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill; and if any gentleman on this floor would have the right to make that motion of concurrence to each one of these amendments, in case they were reported back as disagreements, there would be many hours occupied, and it might take thirty days to reach a conclusion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sees the difficulty which might result from that practice. The gentleman from South Carolina yields five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I simply wanted to state in answer to certain statements made by certain gentlemen, and more particularly by my friend from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT], for whom I have great respect and whose statement ought not to go unchallenged, that there has been no haste in the presentation of this matter. It was introduced by my senatorial colleague from Kentucky, Mr. BECK, at the last session, and was put on the bill by the Senate at that session and discussed in this House. It was also introduced by me on December 17, and reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. It has been considered, therefore, at both sessions of this Congress, and favorably reported by the proper committee of the House.

There is, therefore, no ground for the statement that it has been suddenly and unexpectedly precipitated into this House at the tail-end of the session. I want to make one more statement. This being the District of Columbia and under the power of Congress, the constitutional power is absolutely clear. The question is a pure question of expediency. There can be no lack of precedents when we walk down to the museums and the other public institutions here, and it is a clear question whether such expenditure of $200,000 is a wise expenditure when we are giving millions upon millions for public buildings in Washington. I am not in favor of the national park nor of the purchase of a large tract of land under the pretense of a zoological park. I append the report of the Committee on Public Grounds that the record may show the exact object in view.

There is absolute protection from jobbery in the fact that this is to be under the supervision of the Smithsonian Institution. At this period of the session I content myself with this statement.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11810) "for the establishment of a zoological park in the District of Columbia," having had the same under consideration, respectfully submit the following report:

Appended hereto is a letter of Prof. S. P. Langley, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, portraying the necessity of such a park and the advantages to be derived from its establishment; and, for the reasons therein set forth, your committee respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION, Washington, D. C., January 18, 1889.

MY DEAR SIR: I write what follows in accordance with the suggestion of your yesterday's letter, intending it for your consideration and that of the committee.

From all parts of the country, for many years, presents of live animals have been made to the Government through the Smithsonian Institution or the Museum, but the absence of any appropriation for their care has led to their being sent away (though most reluctantly) to increase the collections of the zoological parks in Philadelphia, New York, London, and other cities. It should be better known than it is that everywhere through the country there is a disposition on the part of private individuals to give to the Government in this way, and without any expectation of return, remarkable specimens, which the donor (very commonly a poor man) sometimes refuses advantageous pecuniary offers for, and it seems hard to decline gifts made in such a spirit, or, accepting them, to give them away again.

But little over a year ago I gave instructions that these live specimens should be retained temporarily, as an experiment, and although a very few have been purchased, the collection, which is a subject of so much local popular interest, has been thus formed, substantially by gift, within perhaps fifteen months, and this though many proffers have been declined for want of means to care for them, I am persuaded that if it were generally known that the Government would receive and care for such gifts, within a very few years the finest collection of American animals in the world might be made here in this way with comparatively no expenditure for purchase.

Among the many interested in the incipient collection was Senator BECK, whose bill for the formation of a zoological park was brought before the Senate on April 23, 1888. The writer directed the Senator's attention to the fact that a piece of ground singularly suitable, by the variety of its features, to the provision for the wants of all the different kinds of animals, existed in the picturesque valley of Rock Creek, in the part nearest to the city. Here not only the wild goat, the mountain sheep, and their congeners would find the rocky cliffs which are their natural home, but the beavers brooks in which to build their dams; the buffalo places of seclusion in which to breed and replenish their dying race; aquatic birds and beasts their natural home, and in general all animals would be provided for on a site almost incomparably better than any now used for this purpose in any other capital in the world.

With this is the pre-eminently important consideration that the immediate neighborhood to the city would make it accessible not only to the rich but to the poor, and therefore a place of recreation to the great mass of the residents, as well as to the hundreds of thousands of citizens from all parts of the country who now annually visit the capital.

It may be added that, so far as is known to the writer, all those interested in the desirable but larger plan for a public park along the whole Rock Creek region—that is to say, all those acquainted with the beauties and advantages of the site—regard the establishment of the proposed zoological park there with favor. It is very difficult for any one who has not visited the region to understand its singularly attractive character, due to the good fortune which has preserved its picturesque features intact until now, although the growing city is sweeping around and enveloping it.

The Smithsonian Institution has not customarily received with favor the propositions continually made it to place different local or national interests under its charge; but the very special reasons which seem in this case to enable it to at once secure a home and city of refuge for the vanishing races of the continent, and a place for the health and recreation of the inhabitants of the city and citizens of the United States, together with an opportunity for the carrying out an enterprise of national scientific value, and the formation of what, as regards its site at least, is the finest zoological garden in existence—all these considerations have moved it to see in this an opportunity to carry out its legitimate work, "the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

When, therefore, Senator BECK made the understanding that the Smithsonian Institution would accept the charge of such a park, the primary condition on which he would undertake to recommend it to Congress, the Secretary felt authorized to say that he believed it probable that the proposition would be favorably viewed by the Regents, and the matter once brought before Congress, he has not disguised his own interest in the success of the measure.

The bill, brought in by Mr. BRECKINRIDGE in the House (and by Senator MORRILL in the Senate), appropriates $200,000 for the purchase of not less than 100 acres of land. The land actually most desired for the zoological park covers about 120 acres, being precisely that portion of the Rock Creek valley which will be soonest destroyed, as regards its picturesque and attractive features, by the laying out of streets and lots. Nevertheless, and largely owing to the very fact that the picturesqueness of the locality implies the existence of rocks, precipices, and valleys, which it would cost much to level and fill in, this land can still be obtained at rates which, considering its neighborhood to the city, are remarkably cheap. The most thorough examination that I have been able to make, the testimony of various real-estate experts and others, have satisfied me that the purchase may and will be completed for somewhat less than the sum named in the appropriation, even leaving a small margin for the erection of a preliminary shelter for the animals.

I beg most respectfully to urge upon the attention of the committee the fact that it is at once the strength and weakness of this measure that, so far as is known, it is an entirely disinterested one, the real-estate holders in the vicinity being generally indifferent or opposed to it, for reasons which can be explained, if desired, and that it is being thus pressed upon Congress by those who have the measure at heart because anything that is done must be done soon. It is probable that within a year or two more the good fortune which has kept this singularly interesting spot intact, while the growing city is encircling it, will protect it no longer. It is not the mere space on the map which is to be secured, but natural advantages which have no relation to the number of acres, and which can not be restored if once destroyed, since it is not in the power of Congress itself by any expenditure of money to recreate a rock or a tree.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

S. P. LANGLEY, Secretary.

Hon. SAMUEL DIBBLE,
House of Representatives.

Mr. DIBBLE. Mr. Speaker, the bill providing for the establishment of a zoological park in the District of Columbia was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and, after due consideration, that committee determined to report it favorably to the House. I will print with my remarks the report of the committee, but in the mean time will state briefly, for the purpose of saving time, the reasons which induced the committee to recommend the passage of the bill.

In the first place, Mr. Speaker, the project as set forth in the bill is for the purchase of not less than 100 acres of land. As members will see from the design and plan in front of the Reporters' desk——

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. DIBBLE. I must decline to be interrupted now, because my time is so limited. Otherwise I should be glad to hear the gentleman's question.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I merely wanted to ask the gentleman whether his remarks were directed to the amendment of his colleague, or rather to that part of it embraced in the bill introduced in the House by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE], relating to the zoological garden?

Mr. DIBBLE. I am speaking to the zoological park bill, a bill reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, in accordance with the design and plan now in front of the Reporters' desk.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. But does the amendment——

Mr. DIBBLE. Mr. Speaker, I have answered the gentleman's question, and I must decline to yield further, although I would gladly do so if I had the time. This piece of land embraces about 120 acres. The bill provides for the purchase of not less than 100 acres. It is estimated, as the committee are informed, that the sum of $200,000 will purchase the land and will provide for the structures that will be immediately necessary. But, Mr. Speaker, even if the entire $200,000 were expended for the land alone, gentlemen will find that that would be a very reasonable price, because it can be ascertained by calculation that the cost per foot would be only about 4½ cents, which is much less than property commands in that vicinity. Therefore I say that even if we purchase with this amount of money 100 acres of land it will cost us only 4½ cents per foot, and if we purchase 120 acres of course the cost per foot will be less; and I am informed, in fact, that a large portion of the land can be purchased at less than that price, so that the committee will be enabled by this appropriation not only to purchase 20 acres in excess of the limit of the bill, but also to erect the necessary structures.

The reason of this is that the ground is very undulating and therefore is not so suitable for the erection of dwellings, as has been suggested by gentlemen who oppose this measure. It is just because of the natural beauty of the ground that it is not suitable for buildings, and the establishment of some such park is necessary for the purpose of preserving certain species of animals which are rapidly becoming extinct. Mr. Speaker, I shall not go into platitudes about the benefit of scientific education or the advantages of fostering scientific institutions. We have the Smithsonian Institution. We are proud of the Smithsonian, and the Smithsonian has already, by gift, not by purchase, the nucleus of a collection. It has the buffalo; it has the white bear; it has other animals which are passing away in this country, and I am informed by the Secretary of the Smithsonian, Professor Langley, that this place furnishes the right kind of location and the proper temperature for the propagation and perpetuation of these rapidly disappearing species of American animals, while at the same time it will serve the purposes of a public park. This is an enterprise to be connected with a Government institution, for a Government purpose, and I do not think that the Government should stand upon expending this small amount of money, in view of the important objects to be attained, especially when the property to be acquired will never depreciate in value, so that if the Government should hereafter choose to abandon the experiment it will be able to get back its money two, three, or four fold.

Mr. HATCH. As this subject has been before the gentleman's committee, will he state, for the information of the House, whether he wishes to be understood as saying that this $200,000 is all that is necessary to establish this zoological garden, or is this merely the first installment?

Mr. DIBBLE. I am informed that the inquiries, estimates, and offers indicate that the 120 acres which are included in the design now in front of the Reporter's desk can be purchased for something less than $200,000; that is, for a sum which will leave enough to erect the structures necessary in the mean time for the accommodation of the animals. Of course there will have to be further appropriations in the future; and as to that gentlemen are informed from the estimates of others. I have not examined the subject; but the statement was made here yesterday that this will add about $25,000 a year for a couple of years or so to the annual appropriations for the Smithsonian Institution.

I publish as a portion of my remarks the report to which I have referred:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11810) "for the establishment of a zoological park in the District of Columbia," having had the same under consideration, respectfully submit the following report:

Appended hereto is a letter of Prof. S. P. Langley, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, portraying the necessity of such a park and the advantages to be derived from its establishment, and for the reasons therein set forth your committee respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION, Washington D. C., January 18, 1889,

MY DEAR SIR: I write what follows in accordance with the suggestion of your yesterday's letter, intending it for your consideration and that of the committee.

From all parts of the country, for many years, presents of live animals have been made to the Government through the Smithsonian Institution or the Museum, but the absence of any appropriation for their care has led to their being sent away (though most reluctantly) to increase the collections of the zoological parks in Philadelphia, New York, London, and other cities. It should be better known than it is that everywhere through the country there is a disposition on the part of private individuals to give to the Government in this way, and without any expectation of return, remarkable specimens, which the donor (very commonly a poor man) sometimes refuses advantageous pecuniary offers for, and it seems hard to decline gifts made in such a spirit, or, accepting them, to give them away again.

But a little over a year ago I gave instructions that these live specimens should be retained temporarily, as an experiment, and although a very few have been purchased, the collection, which is a subject of so much local popular interest, has been thus formed, substantially by gift, within perhaps fifteen months, and this though many proffers have been declined for want of means to care for them. I am persuaded that if it were generally known that the Government would receive and care for such gifts, within a very few years the finest collection of American animals in the world might be made here in this way, with comparatively no expenditure for purchase.

Among the many interested in the incipient collection was Senator BECK, whose bill for the formation of a zoological park was brought before the Senate on April 23, 1888. The writer directed the Senator's attention to the fact that a piece of ground singularly suitable, by the variety of its features, to the provision for the wants of all the different kinds of animals existed in the picturesque valley of Rock Creek, in the part nearest to the city. Here not only the wild goat, the mountain sheep, and their congeners would find the rocky cliffs which are their natural home, but the beavers brooks in which to build their dams; the buffalo places of seclusion in which to breed and replenish their dying race; aquatic birds and beasts their natural home, and in general all animals would be provided for on a site almost incomparably better than any now used for this purpose in any other capital in the world.

With this is the pre-eminently important consideration that the immediate neighborhood to the city would make it accessible not only to the rich but to the poor, and therefore a place of recreation to the great mass of the residents, as well as to the hundreds of thousands of citizens from all parts of the country who now annually visit the capital.

It may be added that, so far as is known to the writer, all those interested in the desirable but larger plan for a public park along the whole Rock Creek region—that is to say, all those acquainted with the beauties and advantages of the site—regard the establishment of the proposed zoological park there with favor. It is very difficult for any one who has not visited the region to understand its singularly attractive character, due to the good fortune which has preserved its picturesque features intact until now, although the growing city is sweeping around and enveloping it.

The Smithsonian Institution has not customarily received with favor the propositions continually made it to place different local or national interests under its charge; but the very special reasons which seem in this case to enable it to at once secure a home and city of refuge for the vanishing races of the continent, and a place for the health and recreation of the inhabitants of the city and citizens of the United States, together with an opportunity for the carrying out an enterprise of national scientific value, and the formation of what, as regards its site at least, is the finest zoological garden in existence—all these considerations have moved it to see in this an opportunity to carry out its legitimate work, "the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

When, therefore, Senator BECK made the understanding that the Smithsonian Institution would accept the charge of such a park the primary condition on which he would undertake to recommend it to Congress, the Secretary felt authorized to say that he believed it probable that the proposition would be favorably viewed by the Regents, and the matter once brought before Congress, he has not disguised his own interest in the success of the measure.

The bill, brought in by Mr. BRECKINRIDGE in the House (and by Senator MORRILL in the Senate), appropriates $200,000 for the purchase of not less than 100 acres of land. The land actually most desired for the zoological park covers about 120 acres, being precisely that portion of the Rock Creek Valley which will be soonest destroyed, as regards its picturesque and attractive features, by the laying out of streets and lots. Nevertheless, and largely owing to the very fact that the picturesqueness of the locality implies the existence of rocks, precipices, and valleys, which it would cost much to level and fill in, this land can still be obtained at rates which, considering its neighborhood to the city, are remarkably cheap. The most thorough examination that I have been able to make, the testimony of various real-estate experts and others, have satisfied me that the purchase may and will be completed for somewhat less than the sum named in the appropriation, even leaving a small margin for the erection of a preliminary shelter for the animals.

I beg most respectfully to urge upon the attention of the committee the fact that it is at once the strength and weakness of this measure that, so far as is known, it is an entirely disinterested one, the real-estate holders in the vicinity being generally indifferent or opposed to it, for reasons which can be explained, if desired, and that it is being thus pressed upon Congress by those who have the measure at heart because anything that is done must be done soon. It is probable that within a year or two more the good fortune which has kept this singularly interesting spot intact, while the growing city is encircling it, will protect it no longer. It is not the mere space on the map which is to be secured, but natural advantages which have no relation to the number of acres, and which can not be restored if once destroyed, since it is not in the power of Congress itself by any expenditure of money to recreate a rock or a tree.

I am, very respectfuly, yours,

S. P. LANGLEY, Secretary.

Hon. SAMUEL DIBBLE,
House of Representatives.

Mr. HERBERT rose.

Mr. DIBBLE. I do not yield for further questions, and I do not wish to detain the House longer. I yield five minutes to my colleague [Mr. HEMPHILL]. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. HEMPHILL. I desire simply to submit an amendment to the amendment of my colleague [Mr. DIBBLE], which I will ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by adding:

"And agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

"That the sum of $1,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to procure a national park in the District of Columbia of not less than 1,000 acres: Provided, That one-half of said sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the balance from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided further, That the abutting property that may be benefited by the laying out of said park shall be charged with the amount of the increased value arising from the same, and the sum so assessed and recovered shall be returned to the United States Treasury and the District of Columbia in the proportion in which their funds are herein appropriated."

Mr. RANDALL. I do not think that proposition is in order as an amendment to the proposition of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DIBBLE].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania makes a point of order against this amendment. The Chair thinks that while no point of order can be made in the House against any provision inserted in a conference report, except upon the ground that it changes or strikes out some provision previously agreed to by both Houses, yet when the House itself comes to adopt amendments to Senate amendments, the amendments offered here must be germane and are governed by the rules which govern the ordinary proceedings of the House in the consideration of appropriation bills.

Mr. RANDALL. The point I make, however, is that this amendment is not admissible as an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from South Carolina, for it would not have been in order originally in the House.

The SPEAKER. This is a proposition to agree to a Senate amendment with an amendment which the Chair thinks is not germane to the Senate amendment.

Mr. HEMPHILL. If I change my proposition so as to provide for a zoological park of 1,000 acres, will not that be in order?

The SPEAKER. Anything relating to the zoological park, which is the subject of the Senate amendment, would be in order if germane to the provisions of that amendment, which the Chair has not yet read.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I modify my amendment by striking out "national park" and inserting "zoological park."

Mr. RANDALL. I submit that the gentleman can not do indirectly what he can not do directly.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] proposes now to withdraw his previous proposition and offer one for the purchase of a zoological park, which is the subject of the Senate amendment, as the Chair understands, though he has not read the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. BUCHANAN. It seems to me that the proposition even as modified by the gentleman from South Carolina is subject to another point of order. I submit that it involves new legislation because it provides that a certain proportion of this expense shall be borne by the owners of the adjacent property.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not yet read the Senate amendment himself; he will examine it.

Mr. RANDALL. I desire to call attention to this point—that the proposition now presented would not in my judgment have been in order if it had originated in the House as an amendment to this bill before it went to the Senate.

The SPEAKER. That is the very point which the Chair is examining; for the Chair thinks, as he has already stated, that if the committee of conference should embrace in its report to the House an agreement upon some proposition which would not have been in order in the House originally, a point of order could not be made against it; but when it is proposed that the House shall concur in a Senate amendment with an amendment, the latter must be of such a character that it would have been in order if the original proposition were before the House. Upon this ground the Chair thinks that the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina is not in order.

Mr. HEMPHILL. On what grounds?

The SPEAKER. On the ground that it would not have been in order in the House in the consideration of this bill originally; and it is not in order simply as an amendment to the Senate amendment, because it proposes to change existing law in regard to the payment for this property. The law now provides that the expenditures in connection with the District shall be borne one-half by the United States and one-half by the District of Columbia.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I then withdraw that part of my proposition which proposes to assess owners of adjoining property.

The SPEAKER. If the amendment in the shape now offered relates simply to the purchase of a park for zoological purposes the Chair thinks it is in order; beyond that it is not.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I withdraw all except that part of the proposition.

Mr. RANDALL. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I desire to inquire of the Chair whether the amendment of the gentleman from South Carolina as now modified does anything to enlarge the Senate amendment except in the matter of price?

The SPEAKER. That is all; but that is a matter for the House; it does not present any question of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I did not raise a question of order; I submitted a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. RANDALL. I am unwilling to permit this amendment to be disposed of without a statement on my part that I deny the right of a conference committee to originate, either directly or indirectly, a proposition on a subject which was never considered by either House when the bill was passed by the respective Houses.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not say that a conference committee has the right to originate legislation on a subject not previously considered in either House.

Mr. HATCH. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HATCH. I ask whether the Chair has decided the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has decided it.

Mr. HATCH. The point of order is that the motion of the gentleman from South Carolina, that the House recede from its disagreement, is not amendable.

The SPEAKER. The effect of receding is to concur in the amendment, but the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] moves to amend it by agreeing with an amendment.

Mr. RANDALL. The effect will be to involve the Government of the United States in the expenditure of many hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment moved by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL].

Mr. RANDALL. Let us have the yeas and nays on that.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I believe my time has not expired.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has five minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. DIBBLE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIBBLE. I desire the amendment to be read for the information of the House.

The SPEAKER. It will be read if gentlemen will resume their seats and preserve order.

The Clerk read as follows:

And agree to the same with an amendment as follows: That $1,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to purchase a zoological garden in the District of Columbia of not less than 1,000 acres: Provided, One-half of said sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia, and the balance from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. HEMPHILL rose.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Certainly.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Is it not a fact the proposition, as the gentleman now offers it, is an increase in the amount the Senate put on the bill from $200,000 to a million of dollars; and is it not the fact further that instead of purchasing 200 acres, as the Senate recommends, it provides for the purchase of over a thousand acres?

A MEMBER. Eighteen hundred acres.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, the object of the proposition submitted to the House, and upon which it is called to vote, is to procure a suitable park for this city. I do not say the city needs it especially now, but it will need it if it continues to grow, and this is the proper time to get it. It is not only a proper expenditure but it is economy to do it, for if this Rock Creek is allowed to flow through the city and be an open sewer to the people along its banks it will cost us not only more in the loss of health but in money than the expenditure here proposed.

Mr. RANDALL. There is no healthier city on the Atlantic coast than the city of Washington.

Mr. HEMPHILL. There is a difference of opinion about that. If it be true that it is the healthiest city on the Atlantic coast, then it is the duty of Congress to keep it so. In one part of the city this stream is so polluted that it has become a stench to everybody living along its banks.

Mr. ENLOE. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Certainly.

Mr. ENLOE. Would the gentleman have any objection to agreeing to an amendment to his amendment providing for the distribution among members of Congress of the increase of animals in this zoological garden, to be franked through the mails by members of Congress to their constituents? [Great laughter.]

Mr. HEMPHILL. That has nothing at all to do with it, any more than the flowers that bloom in the spring have. The question is, whether this city shall have a park like every other city or whether it shall not.

Mr. DIBBLE. Let me call attention to the fact that if the proposition prevails in its present shape you will not only appropriate $200,000 for a zoological park, but you will appropriate in addition $1,000,000 for another zoological park. What I want to say is, so far as the zoological part is concerned, $200,000 is all that is asked and all that is needed to purchase the ground desired for that purpose. That appropriation is accomplished by voting for the motion I made to recede from disagreement to amendment 124, as published in the RECORD. That will accomplish the plan in front of the Official Reporters' desk.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I demand the previous question.

Mr. DIBBLE. I promised to yield to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COMPTON].

The SPEAKER. There are two minutes remaining.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not know that the gentleman has any time under the decision of the Chair.

Mr. DIBBLE. I ask how long a time I have occupied.

The SPEAKER. There have been over thirty minutes consumed; but a part of the time, it is true, was in the discussion of the point of order. The Chair understands the gentleman from Maryland to desire only two or three minutes.

Mr. CLEMENTS. As the gentleman is a member of the District Committee and wants but a short time I shall not make any objection.

Mr. COMPTON. Mr. Speaker, I regret very much that my colleague on the committee has seen proper to press this proposition at this time. For one, sir, as a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, I have never been in favor of this scheme for a national park. I have never, I will confess, expressed my views fully in the committee or stated the opposition that I had to it, as perhaps I should have done in view of my position, because I never expected to be called upon to debate the proposition before the House. I supposed from the action taken by the committee that the proposition would never come before the House for consideration at all, and hence that it was unnecessary to interpose objection at that time. But as it is here now, I feel impelled to say what my views are on the subject.

In the first place, I maintain that no city can be found on this continent or elsewhere where the demand for a park of this nature has so little weight or is entitled to so little consideration as in this city. Why, look around your great capital and what do you see? Here are the Arlington Heights within easy reach, the Soldiers' Home in our immediate vicinity; here are four railroads running in every direction leading from the capital city of the nation; here are our street railroads running on almost every street that points to your center; here are the various city parks, the broad streets, beautified with shade trees, and broad, ample walks, perhaps to a greater extent than any city in this country.

Mr. DUNN. Or any other.

Mr. COMPTON. And while I do not charge, because I do not know, that there is a real-estate scheme behind this, and I do know, sir, that my honored colleague and those associated with him in the Committee on the District of Columbia have no knowledge of it or any apprehension of such a state of things, still, sir, there is one thing which can not be denied, and that is that this will add immensely to the real-estate boom in the immediate vicinity of where this park is to be located.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And add to the taxes in every other part.

Mr. COMPTON. In conclusion, but a single word. My friend, Mr. DIBBLE, of South Carolina, has, in my judgment, struck the keynote of this whole controversy; that is to say, that the national park is a park for the city of Washington, while the zoological park is a park for the nation at large, and as between the two I am for the zoological park as against the other.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question on the report of the committee and the amendment of the gentleman from South Carolina.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The first question is on the proposition submitted by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL], which will be again read, if there be no objection.

Mr. RANDALL. I object to its being again read.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman from Pennsylvania to demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. RANDALL. I will take the vote first by sound and division.

The question was taken; and the Speaker stated that the noes seemed seemed to prevail.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Let us have a division.

The House proceeded to divide; and the Speaker announced—ayes 57——

Before the negative vote was counted,

Mr. CLEMENTS said: I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. HEMPHILL. That is not necessary, let this vote decide.

Mr. CLEMENTS and others. Yes, it is necessary.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. NELSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Are we voting upon the amendment of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL]?

The SPEAKER. That is the pending amendment.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. We are to vote for the $200,000 proposition now, or the $1,000,000 proposition, which?

The SPEAKER. The $1,000,000 proposition.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced that in accordance with the request of the House the Senate returned the bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883.

It also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment House bills of the following titles, namely:

A bill (H. R. 12515) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at the most accessible point between the mouth of the Femme Osage Creek and a point 2 miles above the city of St. Charles, in the county of St. Charles, in the State of Missouri;"

A bill (H. R. 10588) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the St. John's River in the State of Florida; and

A bill (H. R. 11649) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between the city of Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, and Platte County, in the State of Missouri.

It also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which concurrence was requested, namely:

A bill (S. 2299) for the construction of an iron bridge from the military reservation at Fortress Monroe to Elizabeth City County, Virginia; and

A bill (S. 3900) to authorize the Secretary of War to make a survey, plan, and estimate of the cost of constructing a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River in the District of Columbia.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL].

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 94, nays 131, not voting 98; as follows:

YEAS—94.

Adams,	Campbell, T.J., N.Y.	Harmer,	Lodge,
Allen, Mass.	Cannon,	Hayden,	Long,
Atkinson,	Cheadle,	Hayes,	McComas,
Bayne,	Clark,	Hemphill,	McCormick,
Belden,	Cogswell,	Henderson, Iowa	McKinney,
Bingham,	Conger,	Hiestand,	Milliken,
Bliss,	Dalzell,	Hopkins, N. Y.	Moffitt,
Bowden,	Dargan,	Hunter,	Morse,
Bowen,	Davenport,	Jackson,	Newton,
Brewer,	Davidson, Fla.	Johnston, Ind.	Nichols,
Browne, T.H.B., Va.	De Lano,	Kean,	O'Neill, Pa.
Brown, Ohio	Dorsey,	Kennedy,	Osborne,
Brown, J. R., Va.	Gaines,	Ketcham,	Parker,
Burrows,	Grosvenor,	Laidlaw,	Patton,
Butler,	Grout,	Lawler,	Perkins,
Campbell, Ohio	Guenther,	Lehlbach,	Phelps,

Plumb,	Rowell,	Stewart, Vt.	Whiting, Mass.
Post,	Russell, Conn.	Taulbee,	Wilber,
Pugsley,	Sawyer,	Thomas, Ky.	Wise,
Reed,	Scott,	Thomas, Ill.	Woodburn,
Rice,	Scull,	Thomas, Wis.	Yardley,
Robertson,	Shaw,	Thompson, Cal.	Yoder.
Rockwell,	Spooner,	Walker,
Romeis,	Stephenson,	Weber,

NAYS—131.

Abbott,	Crisp,	Hopkins, Va.	Penington,
Allen, Miss.	Crouse,	Hudd,	Perry,
Anderson, Iowa	Culberson,	Hutton,	Pidcock,
Anderson, Miss.	Cummings,	Johnston, N. C.	Posey,
Anderson, Ill.	Darlington,	Kelley,	Randall,
Anderson, Kans.	Davidson, Ala.	Kerr,	Rogers,
Bacon,	Dibble,	Kilgore,	Rowland,
Baker, Ill.	Dockery,	Laffoon,	Sayers,
Bankhead,	Dougherty,	La Follette,	Sherman,
Barnes,	Dunham,	Landes,	Shively,
Biggs,	Dunn,	Lane,	Simmons,
Bland,	Elliott,	Lanham,	Smith,
Blount,	Enloe,	Lind,	Snyder,
Booher,	Finley,	Macdonald,	Sowden,
Bound,	Fisher,	Martin,	Stewart, Tex.
Breckinridge, Ark.	Forney,	Matson,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ky.	Fuller,	McAdoo,	Stone, Ky.
Brower,	Funston,	McClammy,	Stone, Mo.
Bryce,	Gay,	McCreary,	Taylor, J. D., Ohio
Buchanan,	Gear,	McKenna,	Thompson, Ohio
Butterworth,	Gest,	McKinley,	Tillman,
Bynum,	Gibson,	McMillin,	Tracey,
Campbell, F., N. Y.	Glass,	McRae,	Turner, Ga.
Candler,	Greenman,	Mills,	Vandever,
Caruth,	Hall,	Moore,	Wade,
Catchings,	Hare,	Morgan,	Warner,
Chipman,	Hatch,	Morrill,	Washington,
Clardy,	Haugen,	Nelson,	Wheeler,
Clements,	Henderson, Ill.	O'Ferrall,	Whiting, Mich.
Cobb,	Herbert,	O'Neall, Ind.	Wickham,
Compton,	Hitt,	Outhwaite,	Wilkinson,
Cothran,	Holman,	Payson,	Wilson, W. Va.
Cowles,	Hopkins, Ill.	Peel,

NOT VOTING—98.

Allen, Mich.	Fitch,	Lynch,	Seney,
Arnold,	Flood,	Maffett,	Seymour,
Baker, N. Y.	Foran,	Mahoney,	Spinola,
Barry,	Ford,	Maish,	Springer,
Blanchard,	French,	Mansur,	Stahlnecker,
Boothman,	Gallinger,	Mason,	Steele,
Boutelle,	Glover,	McCullogh,	Stewart, Ga.
Browne, Ind.	Goff,	McShane,	Struble,
Brumm,	Granger,	Merriman,	Symes,
Buckalew,	Grimes,	Montgomery,	Tarsney,
Bunnell,	Heard,	Morrow,	Taylor, E. B., Ohio
Burnett,	Henderson, N. C.	Neal,	Townshend,
Carlton,	Hermann,	Norwood,	Turner, Kans.
Caswell,	Hires,	Nutting,	Vance,
Cockran,	Hogg,	Oates,	Weaver,
Collins,	Holmes,	O'Donnell,	West,
Cooper,	Hooker,	O'Neill, Mo.	White, Ind.
Cox,	Houk,	Owen,	White, N. Y.
Crain,	Howard,	Peters,	Whitthorne,
Cutcheon,	Jones,	Phelan,	Wilkins,
Davis,	Lagan,	Rayner,	Williams,
Dingley,	Laird,	Richardson,	Wilson, Minn.
Ermentrout,	Latham,	Russell, Mass.	Yost.
Farquhar,	Lee,	Rusk,
Felton,	Lyman,	Ryan,

So the amendment was rejected.

Pending the announcement of the vote,

Mr. DIBBLE said: I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the names.

There was no objection.

The following pairs were announced until further notice:

Mr. PHELAN with Mr. MASON.

Mr. GRANGER with Mr. DINGLEY.

Mr. JONES with Mr. COOPER.

Mr. COCKRAN with Mr. NUTTING.

Mr. BARRY with Mr. BUNNELL.

Mr. HOGG with Mr. SYMES.

Mr. BURNETT with Mr. GOFF.

Mr. NEAL with Mr. HOUK.

Mr. MCSHANE with Mr. LAIRD.

Mr. WHITTHORNE with Mr. LYMAN.

Mr. COLLINS with Mr. ALLEN, of Massachusetts; also on election contest of Sullivan vs. Felton. Mr. COLLINS would vote for Mr. Sullivan; Mr. ALLEN would vote for Mr. Felton.

For this day:

Mr. COX with Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana.

On this vote:

Mr. RICHARDSON with Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan.

Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina, with Mr. HOPKINS, of New York.

Mr. MONTGOMERY with Mr. FARQUHAR.

Mr. SENEY with Mr. STRUBLE.

Mr. WILKINSON with Mr. PETERS.

Mr. WILKINS with Mr. STEELE.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HATCH). The question recurs on the motion of the gentleman from South Carolina that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment numbered 124.

Mr. CLEMENTS. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. SOWDEN. I request that the amendment be reported so that we may know how to vote.

Mr. DIBBLE. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIBBLE. The question I desire to ask is whether a vote "ay" now is an agreement to an expenditure of $200,000 for a zoological garden reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is the pending question. The gentleman from South Carolina submitted a motion to the House that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 124, appropriating $200,000 for a zoological garden, and upon that question the gentleman from Georgia demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 131, nays 98, not voting 94; as follows:

YEAS—131.

Adams,	Dibble,	Lehlbach,	Seymour,
Allen, Mass.	Dorsey,	Lodge,	Shaw,
Arnold,	Dougherty,	Long,	Shively,
Atkinson,	Dunham,	Maish,	Sowden,
Bayne,	Ermentrout,	McComas,	Spooner,
Belden,	Farquhar,	McKenna,	Steele,
Bingham,	Gaines,	McKinley,	Stephenson,
Bliss,	Gay,	McKinney,	Stewart, Vt.
Bound,	Gear,	Milliken,	Taulbee,
Bowden,	Gibson,	Moffitt,	Taylor, J. D., Ohio
Bowen,	Greenman,	Morrow,	Thomas, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Grosvenor,	Morse,	Thomas, Ill.
Brewer,	Grout,	Nelson,	Thomas, Wis.
Brower,	Guenther,	Nichols,	Thompson, Ohio
Browne, T. H. B., Va.	Harmer,	O'Donnell,	Thompson, Cal.
Brown, Ohio	Haugen,	O'Neill, Pa.	Tillman,
Brown, J. R., Va.	Hayden,	Osborne,	Tracey,
Burrows,	Hemphill,	Outhwaite,	Wade,
Butler,	Henderson, Iowa	Parker,	Walker,
Butterworth,	Hermann,	Patton,	Weber,
Caswell,	Hiestand,	Perry,	Wheeler,
Cheadle,	Hires,	Plumb,	White, Ind.
Chipman,	Hitt,	Post,	White, N. Y.
Clark,	Hopkins, N. Y.	Pugsley,	Whiting, Mich.
Compton,	Hudd,	Rice,	Whiting, Mass.
Cothran,	Hunter,	Robertson,	Wilber,
Cutcheon,	Jackson,	Rockwell,	Williams,
Dalzell,	Kean,	Romeis,	Wise,
Dargan,	Kelley,	Rowell,	Woodburn,
Darlington,	Kennedy,	Russell, Conn.	Yardley,
Davidson, Fla.	Ketcham,	Sawyer,	Yoder,
Davis,	La Follette,	Scott,	Yost.
De Lano,	Lawler,	Scull,

NAYS—98.

Abbott,	Cobb,	Hopkins, Va.	O'Neall, Ind.
Allen, Miss.	Cowles,	Johnston, N. C.	Payson,
Anderson, Iowa	Crisp,	Kerr,	Peel,
Anderson, Miss.	Culberson,	Kilgore,	Penington,
Anderson, Ill.	Cummings,	Laffoon,	Pidcock,
Anderson, Kans.	Davidson, Ala.	Landes,	Posey,
Bacon,	Dockery,	Lane,	Randall,
Baker, Ill.	Dunn,	Lanham,	Rogers,
Bankhead,	Elliott,	Lind,	Rowland,
Barnes,	Enloe,	Lynch,	Sayers,
Biggs,	Finley,	Macdonald,	Sherman,
Bland,	Fisher,	Mahoney,	Smith,
Blount,	Flood,	Mansur,	Snyder,
Booher,	Forney,	Martin,	Stewart, Tex.
Boothman,	Fuller,	Matson,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Funston,	McAdoo,	Stone, Ky.
Bryce,	Gest,	McClammy,	Stone, Mo.
Bynum,	Glass,	McCreary,	Turner, Ga.
Campbell, F., N. Y.	Hall,	McMillin,	Vandever,
Campbell, Ohio	Hare,	McRae,	Warner,
Campbell, T. J., N. Y.	Hatch,	Mills,	Washington,
Candler,	Henderson, Ill.	Montgomery,	Wilson, Minn.
Cannon,	Herbert,	Moore,	Wilson, W. Va.
Caruth,	Holman,	Morgan,
Clements,	Holmes,	O'Ferrall,

NOT VOTING—94.

Allen, Mich.	Felton,	Latham,	Russell, Mass.
Baker, N. Y.	Fitch,	Lee,	Rusk,
Barry,	Foran,	Lyman,	Ryan,
Blanchard,	Ford,	Maffett,	Seney,
Boutelle,	French,	Mason,	Simmons,
Browne, Ind.	Gallinger,	McCormick,	Spinola,
Brumm,	Glover,	McCullogh,	Springer,
Buchanan,	Goff,	McShane,	Stahlnecker,
Buckalew,	Granger,	Merriman,	Stewart, Ga.
Bunnell,	Grimes,	Morrill,	Struble,
Burnett,	Hayes,	Neal,	Symes,
Carlton,	Heard,	Newton,	Tarsney,
Catchings,	Henderson, N. C.	Norwood,	Taylor, E. B., Ohio
Clardy,	Hogg,	Nutting,	Townshend,
Cockran,	Hooker,	Oates,	Turner, Kans.
Cogswell,	Hopkins, Ill.	O'Neill, Mo.	Vance,
Collins,	Houk,	Owen,	Weaver,
Conger,	Howard,	Perkins,	West,
Cooper,	Hutton,	Peters,	Whitthorne,
Cox,	Johnston, Ind.	Phelan,	Wickham,
Crain,	Jones,	Phelps,	Wilkins,
Crouse,	Lagan,	Rayner,	Wilkinson.
Davenport,	Laidlaw,	Reed,
Dingley,	Laird,	Richardson,

So the House receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 124.

Pending the announcement of the vote,

On motion of Mr. HERBERT, by unanimous consent, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The following additional pairs were announced:

On this vote:

Mr. SENEY with Mr. STRUBLE.

Mr. OATES with Mr. MORRILL.

Mr. RICHARDSON with Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan.

Mr. RAYNER with Mr. PERKINS.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. DIBBLE moved to reconsider the vote by which the House agreed to recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I now move that the House insist upon a further disagreement to the remaining amendments and ask a further conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint the same gentlemen as conferees.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HATCH. I rise to a question of privilege, and present the following conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

Mr. HATCH. I ask to have the statement of the House conferees read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the formal report, and that the statement of the House conferees be read.

Mr. TAULBEE. Let us have the report read first.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Kentucky demand the reading of the report?

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not, until I can hear the statement read; but I reserve the right to do so.

The report of the conferees is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12485) making an appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 5, 9, 12, 13, 18, and 35.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 37, 38, 40, and 41, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$1,400;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named insert "$83,060;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

In line 17, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$2,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,500."

In line 18, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$3,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,500."

In line 20, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$2,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,500."

In lines 21 and 22, page 2 of the bill, strike out "$3,200" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,700."

In lines 1 and 2, page 4 of the bill, strike out "two clerks of class 4, $3,600" and insert in lieu thereof "one assistant statistician, $2,000; one clerk of class 4;" and in lieu of the sum named in line 7, page 4 of the bill, insert "$34,500."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$10,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 28: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 28, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$7,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of "$50,000" named in said amendment insert "$25,000," and insert after the word "Congress," in said amendment, the following: "On or before the 1st day of February, 1890;" and the Senate agree to the same.

W. H. HATCH,
A. C. DAVIDSON,
E. H. CONGER,
Managers on the part of the House.

P. B. PLUMB,
C. B. FARWELL,
WILKINSON CALL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT OF HOUSE CONFEREES.

Senate amendments 1, 2, 15, 16, 17, 20, 21, 23, 27, 30, 31, 33, 34, 36, 37, 38, 40, and 41 are merely verbal amendments changing the word "Commissioner" to that of "Secretary," and rendered necessary by the passage of the act making the Department of Agriculture an Executive Department and the chief officer Secretary of Agriculture.

Amendments 3 and 4 provide for the additional salary of $8,000 for the Secretary of Agriculture, and $4,500 for the Assistant Secretary.

Amendment numbered 6, providing an assistant librarian at a salary of $1,600, was agreed to with an amendment reducing the amount to $1,400.

Amendment numbered 7 is simply one of addition, made necessary by the foregoing changes.

Amendment numbered 8 provides for an increase in the salary of the botanist, who is the chief of that division, from $2,000 to $2,500. This was agreed to with an amendment increasing the salaries of the pomologist and the microscopist in like manner from $2,000 to $2,500, thus equalizing the salaries of all the chief officers of the scientific divisions in the Department.

The Senate receded from amendment numbered 9, and the managers on the part of the House agreed to amendment numbered 10.

Amendment numbered 11 is simply one of addition.

The Senate receded from its amendments numbered 12 and 13.

Amendment numbered 22 was to correct a clerical error in the bill as it passed the House, the reports called for having been made.

Amendment numbered 28, increasing the amount appropriated to the division of economic ornithology and mammalogy to the sum of $10,000, was agreed to with an amendment striking out "ten," and inserting "seven."

Amendment numbered 35 was agreed to with an amendment striking out "superintendent" and the words "to be immediately available," and inserting "assistant statistician," and also striking out "two clerks of class 4," and inserting "one;" this increases the expenditure in this division $200.

Amendment numbered 39 is the largest in amount and the most important of any placed on the bill as it passed the House. It provides for the appropriation of $50,000 to continue the experiments in the manufacture of sugar from sorghum and beets, and reappropriates the unexpended balance of the present fiscal year for this purpose, which is stated by the disbursing clerk of the Department to be $60,256.12.

In view of the decisive action of the Senate upon this amendment, and the action of the House at the last session, the managers on the part of the House, while earnestly protesting that the amount appropriated is excessive and unnecessary, felt compelled to agree to the amendment with such reduction as it was possible to secure, and therefore agreed to the same with an amendment reducing the amount appropriated to $25,000, and fixing a date, February 1, 1890, at which the Secretary shall report to Congress the results of his continued experimentation, with an itemized account of his expenditures.

The Senate amendments increased the appropriations in the bill as it passed the House $70,460. The report submitted by the managers on the part of the House reduces this sum to $41,800, of which sum $9,400 was made necessary by the change of the Department of Agriculture from a bureau to a Cabinet position.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. HATCH,
A. C. DAVIDSON,
E. H. CONGER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. Speaker, a single word of explanation to accompany the written statement. The most important amendment placed upon the bill by the Senate was that providing for further experiments in sugar production, and, taking the vote of the House at the last session as indicating its will in the matter, the managers on the part of the House did not feel authorized to stand out against the Senate amendment except to see that it was reduced within the limit that was necessary for that purpose. At the last session the Senate put an amendment upon the agricultural appropriation bill of $100,000 for this purpose, and according to the report of the disbursing clerk $60,215 of that sum is now unexpended. The Senate, by an amendment placed upon this bill, proposed a further appropriation of $50,000, which in conference was reduced to $25,000, and the appropriation for this purpose stands credited now with the unexpended balance of $60,215 and an additional appropriation of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary. The only other amendment of the Senate increasing appropriations more than a few hundred dollars is that increasing the salary of the botanist, who is chief of one of the scientific divisions. All of the chiefs of division there will now receive salaries of $2,500 per annum. There were three chiefs in this Department, the botanist, the microscopist, and the pomologist, at the heads of their several divisions, who were receiving salaries of only $2,000 each.

Mr. TAULBEE. Will the gentleman answer a question?

Mr. HATCH. With pleasure.

Mr. TAULBEE. I want to ask the gentleman if that is not in excess of the salaries received by the chiefs of division in other Departments?

Mr. HATCH. I have no doubt that it is in excess of the salaries received by the chiefs of division in some Departments——

Mr. TAULBEE. Is it not in excess of all?

Mr. HATCH. Not by any means. There are chiefs in the Treasury and in the Interior Department and in other Departments also receiving salaries of $2,500, and some who are receiving more. But the House should remember that these divisions in the Agricultural Department are scientific divisions, and that these positions can be filled only by men of eminence in their particular lines. I state as a fact, which is well known by gentlemen familiar with the subject, that the establishment of the experimental stations in connection with the agricultural colleges in the different States has caused a large demand for botanists, entomologists, pomologists, and experts in these different sciences, and the Department has lost within the last year several of its brightest men, who have been offered largely increased salaries elsewhere. For these reasons the managers of the conference on the part of the House agreed to the amendment increasing the salaries of these three officers, so that now the salaries of the heads of divisions in the Bureau of Agriculture are uniform and are all $2,500.

Mr. OWEN. I wish to ask the gentleman whether the amendment numbered 9 as printed in the bill which I hold in my hand is not an error?

Mr. HATCH. That was an amendment which the Senate receded from. The Senate receded from the amendment numbered 9, and the House agreed to amendment numbered 10.

Mr. OWEN. That was my understanding with the gentleman, but I thought this bill was printed as the conference committee had agreed upon it.

Mr. HATCH. Oh, no.

Mr. WASHINGTON. I want to ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH] a question with regard to this Department which I have heard asked about several others. Has the gentleman heard of any of these employés who are going to resign if their salaries are not increased?

Mr. HATCH. I have not only heard that some of those gentlemen will resign, but it is a fact that several of them have resigned, and I think it is creditable to the Department that——

Mr. WASHINGTON. Let me ask the gentleman another question.

Mr. HATCH. Let me get through with my answer to your first question and then I will answer another with great pleasure. It is creditable to the Department, I think, that several of these gentlemen have resigned, and that they are now employed by the agricultural colleges in different sections of the country at a very considerable advance over the salaries paid by the Government, and if I am not mistaken—I do not know about this, but I think—the agricultural college in the State of Tennessee has taken out of the Department here one of its brightest young men.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Do you not think it would be very much to the advantage of the Agricultural Department if two or three others who are there should resign?

Mr. HATCH. I do not think that is a fair question. I do not think I ought to be called upon to make that criticism; but if I were going to be Secretary of Agriculture after the 4th of March, or if I had been during the past four years, I think there are a good many gentlemen there now whose places would have been vacant a long while ago.

Mr. WASHINGTON. That is what I wanted to know.

Mr. TAULBEE. Are any of these provided for in the increased appropriations in this bill?

Mr. HATCH. There is not a single increase of salary in the bill except as distinctly set forth in the statement which has been read. The increases amount to only a few hundred dollars. Three chiefs of division get, each, $500 more per annum than they have been getting. There is an increase of $200 in one other office, that of assistant librarian. There is an assistant already assigned to that duty who has been drawing a salary of $1,200 a year, and the Senate proposed an amendment putting the salary at $1,600, but the House conferees declined to assent to that, and finally, as a matter of compromise, it was fixed at $1,400.

Mr. TAULBEE. Will the gentleman please state whether there was any controversy between the House and the Senate in regard to the salaries of any of these chiefs of division except the one named in the amendment—amendment No. 10, I believe?

Mr. HATCH. There was a controversy over every one of them, and the managers on the part of the House endeavored in conference to induce the Senate conferees to recede from every single increase that had been put on the bill in regard to salaries, because the House and the Senate a year ago had gone over this question, and so far as they could had tried to equalize these salaries. But we had left this matter unprovided for; the Senate insisted on its amendment, and we were compelled to accede in order to get a report.

Mr. TAULBEE. Is it not a fact that the chiefs provided for in this conference report are all in the employ of the agricultural bureau now and will continue in its employ, performing the same services, if the increase of pay now recommended be made?

Mr. HATCH. When the gentleman speaks of the "agricultural bureau" he means the Department of Agriculture; it is not a bureau.

Mr. TAULBEE. Well, it used to be a bureau.

Mr. HATCH. That was a good while ago. The Congress of the United States, with the aid of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE], elevated it to a Department.

Mr. TAULBEE. Certainly; but I am not in favor of everything that has followed.

Mr. HATCH. Of course this bill does not take effect until the 1st of July——

Mr. TAULBEE. But do not the same officers go on?

Mr. HATCH. Unquestionably; and some of them have been there for a great many years.

Mr. TAULBEE. And now you provide this increase of their pay.

Mr. HATCH. I want to say right here, if gentlemen are particular about this matter, that there is one gentleman whose salary is increased from $2,000 to $2,500, who, in my judgment, has rendered more service to the farmers of the United States during the ten years that I have been on the Committee of Agriculture than any other one scientific man in the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. TAULBEE. What does he do?

Mr. HATCH. I refer to the microscopist, the gentleman who is at the head of the microscopical division of the Department of Agriculture, whose investigations and reports upon questions of adulteration of food and other scientific subjects have not only been published throughout the length and breadth of the land, but are being copied and republished in every foreign language, being regarded to-day as authority in every country on the globe.

Mr. TAULBEE. Does that gentleman propose to resign if his salary is not increased?

Mr. HATCH. Well, I have not said a word to him about this. If the gentleman from Kentucky wants to know whether he will resign or not I respectfully refer him to that gentleman.

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not know him.

Mr. HATCH. I have had no conversation with him on this subject.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Does this bill increase the salary of the statistician?

Mr. HATCH. It does not.

Mr. TAULBEE. But it gives him an assistant.

Mr. HATCH. If the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON] had listened to the reading of the statement——

Mr. WASHINGTON. I could not hear it, there was so much confusion.

Mr. HATCH. The statistician has two clerks of class 4, receiving each a salary of $1,800 per annum; and those two clerks, being next to the statistician, receive the largest salaries of any clerks in that division. But the Senate in their amendment wanted to provide for a superintendent or assistant to the division who could act in the absence of the statistician; and we simply change——

Mr. WASHINGTON. He ought to be absent all the time.

Mr. HATCH. Well, I have thought so myself on account of his political convictions, but that is not an issue now. Mr. Speaker, I now demand the previous question on the adoption of the report.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JUDICIAL DISTRICTS IN TEXAS, ETC.

Mr. CULBERSON. I rise to present a privileged report—the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes.

The Clerk proceeded to read the report, which is published in the Senate proceedings of yesterday.

Mr. CULBERSON (before the Clerk had concluded the reading of the report). Mr. Speaker, this report is printed in the RECORD this morning as part of the proceedings of the Senate, that body having already adopted the report. I presume members of the House are entirely familiar with this matter. The reading of the report would occupy some time; and unless some member especially desires it, I ask that the further reading of the report be dispensed with.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does the bill provide only for a change of boundaries?

Mr. CULBERSON. No, sir; it embraces the establishment of a court in the Indian Territory.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the report will be read.

Mr. HOOKER. Let the gentleman from Texas make an explanatory statement.

Mr. HOLMAN. I shall be satisfied with a statement of all the facts.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana withdraws the demand for the reading of the report.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, I can, in a very short time, if the House will permit, explain this report.

The House bill 1874, which is the basis of this conference, has passed the House in four consecutive Congresses. The object of that bill was to relieve the United States district court for the western judicial district for the State of Arkansas of the burden of business imposed upon it by its jurisdiction over the Indian Territory, occupied by the five civilized tribes. It is well known that the criminal business of that court has grown to such proportions during recent years that it is impossible to dispose of it. Another object sought to be obtained by the House bill was to promote the convenience of the people of the Territory, and also lessen the expenses of litigation to ligitants and Government.

In order to accomplish these purposes, the House bill provided that the Chickasaw and half the Choctaw territory should be detached from the western judicial district for Arkansas and attached to judicial districts in Texas, thus relieving the court at Fort Smith, and promoting the commerce of the people of the territory occupied by the Chickasaw and part of the Choctaw tribes.

The Senate amended the House bill by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof provisions, which provided for the establishment of a court in the Indian Territory and repealed all laws which authorized the United States courts for the western judicial district for Arkansas, the courts for the district of Kansas, and of the northern judicial district for Texas to exercise criminal jurisdiction in the Indian Territory.

Mr. HOOKER. Where is this court to be located?

Mr. CULBERSON. The report provides for its location at Muscogee.

The Senate amendment conferred upon this court unlimited criminal and civil jurisdiction over this vast Territory.

After many and prolonged conferences the conference committee agreed upon the report which is now under consideration.

The provisions agreed upon, and which are embodied in this report, provide for the establishment of a court in the Indian Territory with civil and criminal jurisdiction over the entire Indian Territory.

The civil jurisdiction, Mr. Speaker, conferred upon the court is substantially unlimited, but the criminal jurisdiction is limited to offenses above the grade of misdemeanor.

Under the provisions of this report the United States courts for the western judicial district of the State of Arkansas will retain criminal jurisdiction of offenses above the grade of misdemeanor committed in that part of the Indian Territory occupied by the Chickasaw tribe of Indians and that part of the Territory occupied by the Choctaw tribe south of the mountains, and that portion of the Territory is particularly and definitely defined in the bill.

That part of the Territory which, as I have just said, is withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the United States court at Fort Smith, in the State of Arkansas, is attached to the eastern judicial district of Texas for judicial purposes. I ought to state also that that portion of the Indian Territory occupied by the Kiowa and Comanche tribes of Indians is also attached to the eastern judicial district of the State of Texas for judicial purposes.

If the bill becomes a law, therefore, the United States courts for the eastern district of Texas will exercise jurisdiction in that part of the Territory attached to said district over offenses above the grade of misdemeanor.

Mr. HOLMAN. What, if any, new offices are created for the court?

Mr. CULBERSON. The bill provides for a judge, district attorney, marshal, etc.

Mr. HOLMAN. What amount of salary is provided for the judge?

Mr. CULBERSON. Thirty-five hundred dollars.

I ought to say, Mr. Speaker, that this court is constructed upon the most economical principles.

As the court is limited in its criminal jurisdiction to offenses below the grade of felony no grand juries will be needed and none are provided for. Crimes below the grade of felony, that is to say, all offenses not punishable by death or confinement at hard labor, may be prosecuted by information.

This, Mr. Speaker, outlines substantially the provisions of the report. Of course it would not be proper for me at this time to present my views upon the merits of this proposed legislation. I may be allowed to say, however, that I believe it is the best solution of the questions growing out of existing conditions in the Indian Territory that is practicable at this time.

I demand the previous question on the adoption of the report.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the conference report was adopted.

Mr. CULBERSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WHEELER. I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. HOLMES. I rise to call up a privileged matter.

The SPEAKER. Is it a conference report?

Mr. WHEELER. No; a privileged bill.

Mr. HOLMES. I call up the bill (H. R. 1368) to quiet title of settlers on the Des Moines River lands in the State of Iowa, and for other purposes, returned by the President with his objections thereto.

Mr. HERBERT. I desire to raise the question of consideration.

Mr. WHEELER. Is it not in order to move the reference of this message and bill to the Committee on the Public Lands?

The SPEAKER. It would be in order if the House determined to consider it; but the question of consideration is raised.

Mr. MILLS. I hope my friend from Iowa will wait until we finish the consideration of this naval appropriation bill.

Mr. HOLMES. I have been waiting for an opportunity to get this bill before the House without interfering with other matters for several days. There seems to be a disposition on the part of a great many members to occupy the time of the House, and I do not wish to delay any longer.

Mr. MILLS. We must pass this appropriation, however.

Mr. HERBERT. It is important that action should be taken upon the Senate amendments without delay.

Mr. HOLMES. How long will it take?

Mr. HERBERT. I can not say; but I will state to the gentleman that I will urge its consideration and expedite its passage as fast as possible.

Mr. HOLMES. This bill also has to go to the Senate.

Mr. MILLS. This bill has come back from the Senate with amendments which must be acted upon.

Mr. HOLMES. If unanimous consent can be obtained that this Des Moines bill shall be made a special order immediately after the naval bill is disposed of I will yield the floor for that purpose.

Mr. MILLS. You do not want any special order to be made in reference to it; it retains its privileges.

Mr. McMILLIN. The gentleman does not lose his right to call it up.

Mr. HOLMES. Very well; then I will yield the floor for the naval bill.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. I desire to submit a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. I have a conference report on a bridge bill.

Mr. HERBERT. I raise the question of consideration against that or any other report until this naval bill is disposed of.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill on which the conference report is made by the gentleman from Iowa.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa.

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration is raised.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. I withdraw the report for the present.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HERBERT. Now, Mr. Speaker, I submit a conference report on the naval bill, and ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendments to this bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. HERBERT. I now ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the report.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the report.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But we want to know first what the matter is on which we are called to vote.

The SPEAKER. Unanimous consent was asked to dispense with the reading of the report. No objection was made, and that order was entered.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I know, but I presumed that some statement would be given.

Mr. BOUTELLE. A statement will be given of the amendments.

Mr. HERBERT. We can take up, if desired, the items of difference between the two Houses one by one.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I only want a general statement of the differences.

Mr. BOUTELLE. A statement will be made.

Mr. HERBERT. I will make a brief explanation of the Senate amendments.

The amendments put upon this bill, Mr. Speaker, by the Senate are thirty-nine in number, the most of them being unimportant. Among those of importance are amendments adding certain sums for electric lighting of certain ships named. In some of these the House recommend concurrence. Another amendment of some importance is an appropriation of a hundred thousand dollars for the erection of a building for a war college and torpedo school, which have been combined under a recent order of the Secretary of the Navy and located upon Goat Island, and Coasters' Harbor Island, heretofore occupied for the war college, is to be given to the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting. Then there is an amendment providing for the purchase of additional land at the Naval Academy. In this we recommend non-concurrence.

The other amendments of importance relate to the construction of new ships. The first of these is to that portion of the bill which provides for the construction of a cruiser according to plans furnished by Hon. JOHN R. THOMAS, of Illinois. The Senate amends by striking out his name, and so far as that is concerned the House conferees recommend concurrence. The Senate further amends, however, by providing that the ship shall make 19 instead of 17 knots an hour. That is an impossibility; it destroys the project, and hence we recommend non-concurrence.

Then the Senate has added a provision for four new ships, two of these to be between 800 and 1,200 tons displacement, one to be of 2,000 tons displacement, and another to be a ram after the plans—as the Senate amendment has it—recommended by a naval board in 1881. The House committee recommend non-concurrence in these amendments, and the effect of non-concurrence would be to strike out all of these four new vessels, passed in September, 1888.

The bill provides for the construction of eight new vessels. This bill as it went from the House to the Senate provided for two others, making ten ships which have not been touched and which will go over to the new administration, to be laid down within the coming fiscal year. In addition to these a ship heretofore authorized, a submarine boat, has not yet been contracted for. So that there are eleven ships without the four new ones that go over to the new administration—twice as many as the present Administration ever laid down in any one year. That is fully as many, in the opinion of the committee, as any administration ought to undertake to lay down within twelve months, or within the time which will be given under this act. We had before us the Secretary of the Navy. We examined him upon this question, and it was his opinion (and in that opinion the majority of the Committee on Naval Affairs heartily concurred) that this will be fully as many, if not more, than with present appliances the Department will be able to manage properly during twelve months.

Mr. RYAN. Is the report of your committee unanimous?

Mr. HERBERT. Not exactly unanimous, but a large majority of the committee favor it.

The effect of refusing these new ships will be to strike out $3,000,000 added by the Senate towards the construction of these ships. In brief, the result of the adoption of the report of the committee will be, if it is finally concurred in, that we agree to increase the amount carried in the bill as it first went over to the Senate by $92,402.85. There are several minor amendments striking out certain things, as, for instance, $15,000 for the repair of an old hospital at the Naval Academy. We concur in that.

I understand, Mr. Speaker, that my colleague [Mr. BOUTELLE] desires to speak upon the bill, and I yield to him, but reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, it would seem desirable in the consideration of this important measure at the close of the four years of Democratic administration that some misconceptions which have obtained currency of late should be corrected, and that the exact condition of the naval establishment of the United States should be more accurately placed before the people than it has been in some of the enthusiastic and extravagant expressions which have found their way through official and other sources to the public mind. I have been reading within the last two or three weeks statements in regard to the Navy which, if I depended entirely upon these sources of information, would have impressed me with the belief that during the past four years the problem of re-establishing the Navy of the United States had been successfully solved, and that to-day we have reached a position in which our naval establishment is so strong, so complete, and so effective that very little will be needed beyond completing what has already been nearly accomplished.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that is very flattering to the outgoing Administration. It may be very flattering to our national pride, if we desire to flatter ourselves at the expense of facts. But it seems to me that it will comport very much more with the interests of the Navy itself and with the interests of the country at large if we look at this matter of rebuilding the Navy of the United States with a candor unobscured by personal enthusiasm or by political prejudice. It is not true, Mr. Speaker, that the Administration just now coming to a close has succeeded in placing the United States Navy upon a footing equal with those of other naval powers, the enthusiastic statements which have been made in the newspapers and in this and the other legislative branch of the Government to the contrary notwithstanding.

DEMOCRATIC OPPOSITION TO THE NAVY.

I think I will be able to demonstrate very clearly that it is not true that the administration which is about going out of power has manifested and developed such an exceptional degree of ability and accomplishment in regard to this work as to present a contrast humiliating to the administration of the party of which I have the honor to be a member, in its dealing with that subject in the past. Facts and figures are more convincing and more eloquent than words. It is a well-known fact that for many years after the late war the Democratic party in Congress persistently refused to furnish the Republican executive administration with the financial means to commence the rebuilding of the American Navy upon a modern basis. The first beginning of this modern reconstruction of the Navy is found in the appropriation of March 3, 1883, when the Republican administration was provided with $1,300,000 to commence the construction of modern steel ships of war.

Following that appropriation there was a resumption of Democratic control of the House of Representatives, and a resumption of the refusal to grant money for the carrying on of this rehabilitation of the Navy. So that under Republican auspices up to the present hour there has been available for the purposes now under consideration only the appropriation of March 3, 1883, of $1,300,000, and that of July, 1884, of $921,500 for the Bureau of Construction, $620,000 for the Bureau of Steam Engineering, $78,600 for the Bureau of Equipment, $30,000 for the Bureau of Navigation, and $500,000 for the Bureau of Ordnance, for the completion of the vessels contracted for by John Roach, making an aggregate of $3,450,100 as the entire amount placed at the disposal of the Republican administration for the purpose of constructing modern vessels for the increase of our Navy; and nearly half of that amount was appropriated only eight months before the Republicans went out of executive power.

In the Forty-eighth Congress, in which I first served in this body, it was a well-understood purpose of the Democratic majority that not one dollar of appropriation would be made to enable the Republican executive to extend the work of building new vessels for the Navy. To such an extent was that refusal carried that even the one proposition emanating from the Naval Committee—a bill to construct a small steel gunboat at a cost of $250,000, designed by the Admiral of the Navy, with the aid of naval architects—met its fate upon the floor of the House on the 18th day of February, 1884, when the Democratic representative in regard to naval matters—the mouthpiece of the Democratic party—the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, Mr. COX, who had himself introduced the bill, took the floor and made a speech which resulted in the defeat of the measure.

In the closing session of the Forty-eighth Congress Mr. Talbott, of Maryland, made an effort to get an appropriation of $1,780,000 as an amendment to the naval bill, to provide for the construction of some additional ships. It encountered violent opposition upon the Democratic side. An attempt was made to rule it out upon a point of order, but an old law being found upon which the appropriation could be based, that shoal was avoided, and, upon an appeal to the House, we finally succeeded in carrying the amendment by a viva voce vote of 91 to 64 and a record vote of 111 to 100; the Republicans furnishing two-thirds of the affirmative votes and the Democrats all but one of the opposing votes.

That measure went to the Republican Senate and as a result of conference and increase by the Senate the naval appropriation bill of that year carried $1,895,000 for the construction of new ships for the Navy; an appropriation made at the very close of the Republican administration to enable the Democratic Executive to take up and carry on the work for which supplies had been persistently refused to the Republican administration. That was the inception of that generous and liberal Republican policy which has been maintained throughout this administration, and under which, from that date, March 3, 1885, until to-day, not including the present appropriation bill, the Democratic Executive has been provided with $22,203,362 for the rebuilding of the Navy.

Here is the record of appropriations made available for the Democratic administration for the construction of steel war-ships:

Congress and session.	Date.	Amount.
Second session Forty-eighth Congress	Mar. 3, 1885	$1,895,000
First session Forty-ninth Congress	Aug. 3, 1886	3,500,000
Second session Forty-ninth Congress	Mar. 3, 1887	11,048,362
First session Fiftieth Congress	Sept. 3, 1888	5,760,000
Total		22,203,362

I beg, Mr. Speaker, that you will note the contrast, for the sake of the comparisons which I may institute, between the $3,450,000 made available for Republican administration in 1883 and 1884 and the twenty-two millions and a quarter provided for the Democratic administration, which, with the addition of subsidiary appropriations in the deficiency bills, for the purchase of armor and other details, brings the grand aggregate up to $28,421,408 that has been appropriated and made available for this Democratic administration to show what it could do in the rebuilding of the Navy.

I will not, at this late hour of the session and in the scarcity of time, try the patience of the House by citing in detail the instances and illustrations of the opposition manifested by our friends of the Democratic party to the providing of funds for this work of rebuilding the Navy, even after a Democratic administration came into power.

It will be pertinent, however, for me to show here that so far has the habit of opposition controlled the Democratic party in Congress that even in the Forty-ninth Congress, with a Democratic Executive in power, with a Democratic Secretary ready and anxious, as he declared, to carry on the work, with a Committee on Naval Affairs which started out with the most enthusiastic fanfaronade of trumpets ever heard in this country as to what it was going to accomplish, and which brought into this House, on the 10th of March, 1886, a bill appropriating $10,128,046 for new ships for the Navy, the same committee changed front in July of that year, before action could be obtained upon that bill, and we had the anomalous spectacle presented of the chairman and the majority of the Committee on Naval Affairs coming into the House and demanding that its own appropriation bill should be cut down more than one-half; should be emasculated and reduced to $3,500,000, while I, acting for the Republican minority, took the floor and made such battle as I could to carry the original appropriation of ten millions to supply the Democratic administration with funds to build ships for the Navy.

The leaders of the Democratic party succeeded in rallying their forces in sufficient number to reduce their own appropriation bill from over ten millions to three million five hundred thousand dollars by a vote of 118 to 103, the affirmative vote being given by 116 Democrats and 2 Republicans, while the negative vote, which favored the larger sum, was given by 89 Republicans and 14 Democrats. In that debate (I refer to page 7482 of the RECORD) the following remarks were made:

Mr. SAYERS. Is not the only difference between yourself [meaning me] and the majority of the committee, that you want more ships built, and the majority of the committee think it advisable, under the circumstances, to provide for building the number indicated in the substitute?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I have been exceedingly unfortunate, Mr. Chairman, in my endeavor to explain my views if I have failed to make it clear that that is exactly what I have been talking about.

Later in the same debate these remarks were made:

Mr. CURTIN. I say to the gentleman from Maine that the administration now in power and the man who occupies the Presidential mansion stands by the measure proposed, and we on this side of the House will stand by it.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Which bill do you understand the administration to stand by?

Mr. CURTIN. As I understand it, the substitute, the smaller bill.

The substitute was adopted in the House, as I have said, by a vote of 118 to 103.

It may be noted also in this connection that the amendment offered by myself July 24, 1886, to provide that the armor for our war-ships should be of American manufacture was carried in Committee of the Whole, after a sharp debate, by a vote of 101 to 67, and then was defeated in the House by a vote of 111 to 108, the Democrats voting almost solidly against it and the Republicans solidly for it. The Senate afterward incorporated in the conference report substantially the measure which I had proposed in the House. It thereby became a law and furnished the means by which Secretary Whitney has been enabled to establish the plant at Bethlehem, Pa., to which he now points as the proudest achievement of his naval administration. And it ought to be a proud one for him, because it is an achievement in spite of the tendency, the spirit, the effort, and the votes of his own political party in this House.

On March 3, 1887, we had another illustration of the fact that it was the Republicans and not the Democrats who were furnishing the sinews of war to carry on this work of rebuilding the Navy. A brief extract from the debate on the report of the conference committee will bring this to the minds of those who were present. I quote from the proceedings of the House on March 3, 1887, page 2726 of the RECORD, where I said:

Mr. Speaker, I think it due to the House that some attention should be called to the fact that the conference committee—has succeeded, according to its own statement, in bringing down the demands of the Republican Senate by some $20,000,000.

The House conferees on the naval appropriation bill were reporting—

A voice on the Democratic side here cried out "Good." I continued—

Gentlemen say "good." Very well; I am glad to hear that come from the Democratic side because it is sincere; and you shall have the benefit of such advertisement as I can give to the country of the statement that you say it is "good," when your conferees succeed in forcing the Senate to recede to the amount of $20,000,000 from its own proposition for the increase of the Navy.

I might go on indefinitely in this direction. I might cite to you the remarks made on February 26, 1887, by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], a representative Democrat, who closed his speech against the rebuilding of the Navy with these words:

But I protest even against the beginning of the revolution, silent as it may be, of placing this Republic on a military footing. If our people, in the dream of peaceful security, shall permit this vast accumulation of wealth in the national Treasury to be the pretext and the occasion for entering upon this scheme of military power to bolster up the Government, instead of the old reliance on the patriotism of the American people, sanctified by a century of prosperity and peace such as elsewhere the world has never witnessed, it will be the greatest misfortune that ever befell the human race. The day should be forever accursed that witnessed its beginning.

That was the spirit manifested by the Democratic party in regard to providing even a Democratic administration with funds for the rebuilding of the Navy.

I might also cite—and I will do so because it is so pertinent and so representative of the sentiment on that side—the remarks of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MCMILLIN] (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 65, page 1601) who, in his eagerness to prevent the squandering of the public money to build up the defenses of the nation upon the high seas said, in reply to Mr. Kasson, of Iowa, a Republican advocate of liberal appropriations for the Navy:

Mr. MCMILLIN. The gentleman [Mr. Kasson] says that there is not a nation in Europe that is not well posted as to the condition of our Navy. Who cares if they are well posted? The proudest boast of every American citizen is that there is not a power upon which the sun shines strong enough or arrogant enough to attack an American citizen upon the high seas, even if he had nothing but two logs pinned together and the American flag over him.

That was the Democratic estimate and idea of the rebuilding of the Navy at a time when the Republican party as represented in this body stood in solid phalanx seeking to force upon an unwilling Democracy the means to carry on this work which their executive officers claimed they desired to promote.

Mr. DOUGHERTY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I would prefer that the gentleman should wait until I have completed this portion of my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCCREARY). Does the gentleman from Maine yield to the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I prefer not to do so at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman declines to yield.

CONTRAST OF ADMINISTRATIVE EFFICIENCY.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Now, Mr. Speaker, I propose to call the attention of the House to a contrast between what the Republican party could do in two years through its executive officers with less than three and a half million of dollars, and what the Democratic party has done in four years with between twenty and thirty million dollars. The appropriation made for the construction of modern war-ships was first applied to the construction of the Chicago, the Atlanta, the Boston, and the Dolphin; and I call attention to the illustration which the figures and facts in the following table afford of the relative efficiency and promptitude of the Republican and the Democratic administrations.

First, I give the statement received by me from the Bureau of Construction:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR,
Washington, D. C., February 19, 1889.

SIR: As requested in your letter of the 15th instant, I have the honor to forward herewith a statement of the appropriations made for steel vessels for the Navy, embracing date of appropriation, date of contract, date of completion, date of launching, and the present status of each vessel.

Very respectfully,

T. D. WILSON,
Chief Constructor United States Navy, Chief of Bureau.

Hon. C. A. BOUTELLE,
House of Representatives, Washington.

Ships.	Date of appropriation.	Amount.	Date of contract.	To be completed.	Time extended.	Launched.	Present status.	Remarks.
Chicago	Mar. 3, 1883	$1,300,000.00	July 26, 1883	Jan. 26, 1885		Dec. 5, 1885	Battery being placed on board.	Ready to put into commission; a few jobs to complete.
Boston	July 1, 1884	921,500.00	July 23, '83	Jan. 23, 1885		Dec. 4, 1884	New York yard	Repainting; fumigated after yellow fever.
Atlanta	Mar. 3, 1885	75,357.23	...do	...do		Oct. 9, 1884	In commission	On a cruise.
Dolphin	July 26, 1886	95,861.00	...do	July 23, 1884		Apr. 12, 1884	...do	Do.
	Mar. 30, 1888	40,000.00
Newark	Mar. 3, 1885	1,895,000.00	Oct. 27, 1887	Oct. 27, 1889			$\frac{3}{10}$ completed
Charleston	...do		Dec. 28, 1886	June 28, 1888	Nov. 20, 1888	July 20, 1888	$\frac{7}{10}$ completed
Yorktown	...do		Jan. 31, 1887	Jan. 31, 1888	May 20, 1888	Apr. 20, 1888		Virtually completed; had trial trip.
Petrel	...do		Dec. 22, 1886	Dec. 22, 1887		Oct. 13, 1888	$\frac{8}{10}$ completed	Ready for trial in a few weeks.
Baltimore	Aug. 3, 1886	2,500,000.00	Dec. 17, 1886	June 17, 1887	Nov. 20, 1888	Oct. 6, 1888	$\frac{9}{10}$ completed
Vesuvius	...do		Feb. 11, 1887	Feb. 4, 1888	May 20, 1888	Apr. 28, 1888	...do	About completed; had trial trip.
Maine	...do						$\frac{1}{10}$ completed	Building, New York yard; keel laid, and a large number of frames raised.
Texas	...do							Laying off mold loft, Norfolk yard.
Torpedo-boat	...do		Mar. 1, 1888	June 1, 1889
Puritan	...do							At navy-yard, Norfolk; machinery all in, completed; plans nearly ready to finish hull.
Monadnock	...do							Machinery being built at Mare Island yard; work of finishing hull commenced.
Amphitrite	...do							Machinery completed; vessel still at Harlan & Hollingsworth's, Wilmington, Del.
Terror	...do							Machinery completed; work on hull under way at New York yard.
Philadelphia	Mar. 3, 1887	1,500,000.00	Oct. 27, 1887	Oct. 27, 1889			$\frac{5}{10}$ completed
San Francisco	...do		Oct. 26, 1887	Oct. 26, 1889			$\frac{5}{10}$ completed
Concord	...do		Nov. 15, 1887	May 15, 1889			$\frac{5}{10}$ completed
Bennington	...do		...do	...do			...do
Miantonomoh	...do	*2,420,000.00					Hull $\frac{8}{10}$ completed	Machinery all completed; turrets being erected in place.
Coast and harbor defense vessel.	...do	1,000,000.00						Advertised; bids to be opened next month.
Four cruisers	Sept. 3, 1888	3,500,000.00						Plans being prepared.
Three gunboats	...do
One practice-ship	...do	260,000.00

*Increase of the Navy, monitors and vessels, authorized March 3, 1885, and August 3, 1886. Section 4. For expenditure towards the construction and completion (exclusive of armament) of the five double-turreted monitors, the four vessels authorized by the act of March 3, 1885, and the vessels authorized by the act of August 3, 1886.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.—The amount appropriated for the Roach ships under the act of March 3, 1883—$1,300,000—included all the bureaus. The amounts appropriated subsequently were for the Bureau of Construction and Repairs only.

From the foregoing I have compiled the following history of the construction of the vessels:

The Roach ships.

Vessels and data.	Years.	Months.	Days.
CHICAGO.
Contract signed after date of appropriation		4	23
Time to be completed after date of contract	1	6
Vessel launched after date of contract	2	4	9
Over time		10	9
Time from appropriation to launching	2	9	2
BOSTON.
Contract signed after date of appropriation		4	20
Time to be completed after date of contract	1	6
Vessel launched after date of contract	1	4	11
Under time		1	19
Time from appropriation to launching	1	9
ATLANTA.
Contract signed after date of appropriation		4	20
Time to be completed after date of contract	1	6
Vessels launched after date of contract	1	2	11
Under time		3	19
Time from appropriation to launching	1	7
DOLPHIN.
Contract signed after date of appropriation		4	20
Time to be completed after date of contract	1
Vessel launched after date of contract		8	19
Under time		3	11
Time from appropriation to launching	1	1	9
Aggregate over time, Roach ships		10	9
Aggregate under time, Roach ships		8	19
Net over time, Roach ships		1	20

Vessels contracted for by Secretary Whitney.

Data.	Charleston.	Yorktown.	Petrel.	Baltimore.	Vesuvius.
	Y.M.D.	Y.M.D.	Y.M.D.	Y.M.D.	Y.M.D.
Contract signed after date of appropriation	1 9 25	1 10 28	1 9 19	0 8 21	0 6 8
Time allowed for completion	1 6 0	1 0 0	1 0 0	1 6 0	0 11 23
Date of canceling	1 6 22	1 2 19	1 9 21	1 9 19	1 2 9
Over time	0 0 22	0 2 19	0 9 21	0 3 19	0 2 16
Time from appropriation to launching	3 4 17	3 1 17	3 7 10	2 6 10	1 8 17

Aggregate over time on five vessels, 1 year 7 months and 7 days.

Data.	Newark.	Torpedo-boat.	Philadelphia.	San Francisco.	Concord.	Bennington.
	Y. M. D.	Y. M. D.	Y. M. D.	Y. M. D.	Y. M. D.	Y. M. D.
Contract signed after date of appropriation	2 7 24	1 6 28	0 7 24	0 7 23	0 8 12	0 8 12
Time allowed for completion	2 0 0	1 3 0	2 0 0	2 0 0	1 6 0	1 6 0

Status, March, 1889: Newark, three-tenths completed; Torpedo boat, to be launched June 1, 1889; Philadelphia, five-tenths completed; San Francisco, three-tenths completed; Concord, five-tenths completed; Bennington, five-tenths completed.

Coast-defense vessel: Bids to be opened February, 1889, two years after appropriation.

ARMORED SHIPS.

Texas, appropriated for August 3, 1886, over two and a half years ago; in February, 1889, just laying off her lines in mold loft.

Maine, appropriated for August 3, 1886, over two and a half years ago; in February, 1889, keel laid and some frames raised.

Double-turreted monitors, appropriation for completing made August 3, 1886. State of progress given in chief constructor's foregoing report.

NEW VESSELS PROVIDED FOR BY APPROPRIATION OF SEPTEMBER 3, 1888.

Four cruisers, three gunboats, one practice-ship. Plans being prepared.

Average time of Chicago, Atlanta, Boston, and Dolphin, from date of appropriation to date of launching, one year nine months eighteen days.

Average time of Charleston, Yorktown, Petrel, and Baltimore, from appropriation to date of launching, three years two months.

The four Roach ships built and launched in two years nine months from date of appropriation, aggregated 12,363 tons displacement.

The five vessels built and launched by the present administration, in five years, aggregate 11,466 tons displacement.

The contract for the Chicago was signed four months and twenty-three days after the date of the appropriation; one year and six months was allowed for her completion; she was launched in two years four months and nine days, the delay being largely attributable to the action of the Democratic administration, which interposed and prevented the proper carrying on of the work. The contract for the Boston was signed four months and twenty days after the appropriation; a year and a half was allowed for her completion; she was launched in one year four months and eleven days. The contract for the Atlanta was signed four months and twenty days after the appropriation; eighteen months were allowed to complete her; she was launched in one year two months and eleven days. The Dolphin was contracted for four months and twenty days after the appropriation; one year was allowed for her completion; she was launched in eight months and nineteen days.

The Atlanta was finished three months and nineteen days inside of the contract; the Boston one month and nineteen days; the Dolphin three months and eleven days; and taking the aggregate of over time and under time, including the delay upon the Chicago, caused by the action of the Democratic administration, the net aggregate over time of those four ships was but one month and twenty days.

Now, let us compare this record with that of the ships which have been launched under Democratic administration. The contract for the Newark was signed two years seven months and twenty-four days after the appropriation. That was a second contract, however. I give the administration the benefit of that excuse. The Charleston was not contracted for until one year nine months and twenty-five days after the appropriation. A year and six months were allowed for her completion. She was launched in one year six months and twenty-two days—only twenty-two days over time.

The Yorktown was contracted for one year ten months and twenty-eight days after the appropriation, allowed a year for building, launched in one year two months and nineteen days. The Petrel was contracted for one year nine months and nineteen days after the appropriation, and launched nine months and twenty-one days over time. The Baltimore was contracted for in eight months and twenty-one days. She was allowed one year and six months to build, launched in one year nine months and nineteen days—three months and nineteen days over time. The Vesuvius was two months and sixteen days over time. So the aggregate over time of the vessels contracted for and launched under Secretary Whitney's administration has been one year seven months and seven days against one month and twenty days for the four Roach ships, including the delay caused by Mr. Whitney himself.

The contrast between the date of appropriation and the date of launching is even more conspicuous. The Chicago was launched in two years four months and nine days from the date of appropriation; the Boston one year four months and eleven days; the Atlanta one year two months and eleven days; the Dolphin one year and one month. On the other hand, the Charleston was launched three years four months and seventeen days after the appropriation; the Yorktown three years one month and seventeen days; the Petrel three years seven months and ten days; the Baltimore two years six months and ten days; the Vesuvius one year eight months and seventeen days. In other words, the average time of the four Roach ships from the date of appropriation to the date of the launch was one year nine months and eighteen days, while the average time of the four Whitney ships from appropriation to date of launching was three years and two months.

I beg, Mr. Speaker, to call atention to the fact that the building of the Roach ships was a new departure. It was the first attempt at building steel men-of-war in this country. Our facilities had to be created as we went along. It is a well-known fact that Mr. Roach was obliged to build his own steel plant to furnish metal for his ships, and yet so marvelous in comparison was the promptitude and efficiency of a Republican administration that the average time in the construction of those ships was one year nine months and eighteen days, while the average time of the ships built under the Democratic administration was over three years. All of the material for the Roach ships was of American manufacture, while I understand that the shafting for the Baltimore was made in England and that of the Charleston made by Krupp in Germany.

Carrying this comparison farther it is shown, and I now take the longest time occupied in building any one of these ships—the Chicago—bearing in mind the fact I have already mentioned that the responsibility for the delay in her case was not Republican responsibility, the record shows that in two years and nine months a Republican administration put afloat 12,363 tons of modern steel war-ships, while a Democratic administration, with nearly $30,000,000 at its command, in four years' time succeeded in getting afloat, simply launching the hulls, of 11,466 tons of similar vessels. Yet to read some of the current literature of the day we would suppose that the Navy had been reconstructed in these four years—we would suppose nothing was to be done except to name and christen the new Navy created by Mr. Whitney in the name of the Democratic party. [Laughter and applause.]

Why, Mr. Speaker, what else have we? We have the New York three-tenths completed. We have a torpedo boat yet to be launched; we have the Philadelphia said to be five-tenths completed, the San Francisco three-tenths completed, the Concord five-tenths completed, the Bennington five-tenths completed, and, as a peculiar and conspicuous illustration of Democratic efficiency, we find an appropriation made March 3, 1887, for the construction of a coast-defense ship—every dollar of the money made available, a million of dollars provided, with a contingent million ready—and we learn by the report of the Secretary himself, in his report last December, that we had got so far along in the construction of this coast-defense ship that the bids were expected to be opened in February, 1889, about two years after the appropriation. Every gentleman here who has followed the newspapers on this subject has been regaled with glowing accounts of our great Navy, and of the fleets of powerful war ships which have been put afloat (mentally) by the present Administration. [Laughter.]

Where are they? In what waters are they steaming to-day? What batteries are they carrying? Where are their flags to be seen floating in the breeze? Why, Mr. Speaker, read the Secretary's own report as quoted by my colleague, the chairman of the committee, in his speech of a few days ago, and see the "beggarly array" at which the people of the United States must gaze to find the picture of a restored Navy, so beautifully painted in newspaper literature and in Congressional speeches.

The Texas is one of the armored class. Where is she? This vessel whose plans were purchased at a great expense in England, and subsequently subjected to so much criticism in this country as to the possibility of her floating when launched. This armored battle-ship, for which you and I voted money in ample appropriation on the 3d of August, 1886, two and a half years ago, where is she?

The Secretary tells us that the "keel-blocks are laid." Do you know what that means? Why, it means that the timbers are laid down in the ship-yard on which the keel can be laid when there is a keel to be put there. [Laughter.] We are, however, vouchsafed the information that the lines of her hull are being laid down in the yard-loft; "the outer body has been laid off on the mold-loft floor;" and I judge that some of my Democratic brethren from the interior, as well as some enthusiastic newspaper gentlemen, labor under the impression that the hull of the ship is being laid down in the loft and will be carried out bodily some day and placed upon the stocks. As a matter of fact this battle-ship, appropriated for in August, 1886, has been practically untouched up to to-day.

The Maine, the other great battle-ship appropriated for at the same time, two and a half years ago, is where? Again let us refer to the report, which states that her keel has been laid in New York and some of her frames have been raised.

That, Mr. Speaker, is the armor-clad Navy upon the strength of which we are to bid defiance to the war powers of all the rest of the world.

So, Mr. Speaker, I might go on and cite illustration piled upon illustration, showing a record—and I speak advisedly—compared with the facilities afforded in money, with the facilities of obtaining material and our advanced ability to construct ships, a record and result in shocking and scandalous disproportion to the means furnished by the American people to this Democratic administration. Four years have elapsed, and to-day all that we have afloat to show for the time and the appropriation of more than twenty millions is four vessels that are entitled to be called war-ships—the Charleston, the Yorktown, the Petrel, the Baltimore, and one torpedo-boat, the Vesuvius. Just think of it; this magnificent navy which has been put afloat during the last four years, and which has inspired even some of our Republican writers and speakers to such a degree of enthusiasm that they have gone off into ecstatic congratulations of the country that we have made such rapid progress under President Cleveland that in a few years we shall be able to whip the navies of the world.

THE YORKTOWN.

Now, sir, what have we as the actual results of the past four years? Upon what can we put our finger to-day and say this is the achievement of Democratic naval administration? But two vessels have yet reached a stage on which reports can be made as to their achievements, one a gunboat of 1,700 tons, and one a torpedo-boat of 800 tons, and unfortunately in one aspect for my friends on the other side in their pride of administration, the Yorktown herself, so far as the means of building her are concerned, is of Republican paternity, because she was built from the funds appropriated by the amendment of the Senate in 1885.

But we have the Yorktown afloat. She has been given a trial, and how far does the contrast between that vessel and her Republican predecessors reflect glory upon her and discredit upon them? The record shows that the first war vessel of steel upon which the American craftsman tried his 'prentice hand, the little Dolphin, so much abused, depreciated, decried, and contemned, when tested, in 1885, by men who knew what the desires of the people in power were in regard to her, tested by men some of whom have since verified the adage that thrift doth follow fawning, the Dolphin in 1885, on a six hours' trial, as reported by Captain Belknap, made an average of 15½ knots an hour (although that telegram to the Secretary of the Navy by some curious circumstances failed to reach the public for more than a year), while the Yorktown, launched four years afterwards, in 1889, a vessel of 1,708 tons to the Dolphin's 1,485 tons, made for four hours only an average of 15.85 knots an hour, as I find reported in the Army and Navy Register of February 16, 1889. And in contrast with the fact that every speech made upon this floor, every utterance by the Administration, has declared the pre-requisite for a naval ship the attainment of high speed, this vessel just put afloat, the only ship that Mr. Whitney has had subjected to test of speed, is not so fast a vessel in proportion to her size as the Dolphin, and it is doubtful whether she is so fast a vessel now, ship for ship.

I give the figures and you can compare them. The Dolphin, of 1,485 tons, made 15½ knots as an average of six hours' run, and the Yorktown, of 1,708 tons, made 15.85 knots as an average of four hours' run.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that has been proclaimed as a great triumph of naval construction and naval administration. It was heralded in advance. My distinguished friend, the chairman of the committee, in his speech only a few days ago, on the 5th of this month, declared that speed is a very essential thing in a modern vessel, and then he went on to say that these vessels were expected to show high speed. He said:

> The Yorktown has also been launched, but there has been no official trial. She is estimated to make 16 knots an hour. At the unofficial trial in shallow water she made 16.81 knots. When tried in the same water the Vesuvius was 2½ knots short of the speed which she made in deep water, where the official trail of the Yorktown is shortly to take place. If the Yorktown shall exceed in deep water her speed in shallow water as much as the Vesuvius exceeded hers, she will certainly be superior to any other vessel of her class in the world. She has only 1,704 tons displacement. At any rate, she will very greatly exceed the estimate of 16 knots an hour.
>
> Gentlemen who will examine carefully these tables and see what the estimates are, and take into consideration the fact that the Vesuvius, which was guarantied to make only 20 knots, has exceeded that speed by 1.64 knots, and that the Yorktown has already, in shallow water, exceeded it by eighty-one hundredths of a knot and will probably go up to 18 knots, will, I think, justify me in coming to the conclusion that all the vessels we have recently laid down will be at least equal to if not better than any other vessels of a similar type in the world.

Note his prediction that she would "probably go up to 18 knots." Now, the trial has been made on the Yorktown and I have given the report from the Army and Navy Register. I desire to say that I tried to obtain the report of the test of this ship by applying to the Secretary some ten days ago, but I have been unable to obtain information, and therefore have to rely upon an unofficial statement which I believe to be correct, made in the Army and Navy Register of a recent date, giving the substance of a telegram from Commodore Fitzhugh, and stating that the Yorktown had made 15.85 knots an hour on an average on a four hours' run. It must be borne in mind that the Yorktown ran upon a clean bottom from the fresh water at Philadelphia, while the Dolphin's trial was made when she was covered with barnacles which had accumulated in New York Harbor.

The chairman of the committee predicted the other day that this vessel was going to make 18 knots an hour and prove to be the fastest ship of her class in the world. The Yorktown is said to be an exact copy of the Archer, a British gunboat, and the reports of the Archer's trial giving the mean of several four hours' runs is reported in the very table that my friend the chairman of the committee cited here, at 17.58 knots. And still, Mr. Speaker, the newspapers of the country are resounding with a praise of this vessel that is markedly in contrast with the detraction of the Dolphin. In the Philadelphia Press, containing an account of her trial, it is said that the builders were expecting a large bonus of money, thousands of dollars, for the development of horse-power in excess of that required by the contract. I understand from the reports received here that she has developed 3,400 horse-power. That will give her contractors something like $40,000 premium for providing the American Navy with a ship that makes 15.85 knots an hour, while the Archer made 17.58 and developed 3,755 horse-power, if the table given by the chairman in his recent speech is correct.

THE CONTRACTS FOR ENGINES.

Mr. Speaker, if after all the accusations that have been made of favoritism exhibited toward the Roach contractors it shall prove true, as alleged to me, that the designs for the engines and machinery of this gunboat Yorktown were submitted to the naval board on the construction of new ships and rejected, and that these designs as made by the contractors when submitted proposed to develop 3,500 horse-power; if it be true that when advertisements called for 3,300 horse-power engines these same designs were submitted with the figures reduced to 3,300, and that after the bids were made the Secretary reduced the requirement to 3,000 horse-power and that the contractors used the designs which they had originally presented as representing 3,500 horse-power—I say, Mr. Speaker, in brief, if it is true that under the Democratic administration the contracts have been so arranged that the builders of a ship are expected to receive a bonus of $40,000 or any other number of thousands of dollars for furnishing horse-power in advance of the contract requirement, while that horse-power falls below the estimate they themselves made upon their original designs, I do not think it will be a matter for great boasting by the Department or by the country.

Mr. HERBERT. Will the gentleman say upon what information he makes that statement?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I have made it upon what I believe to be reliable information.

Mr. HERBERT. Are you willing to give the authority?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I do not think it necessary. I think my statement on the floor that I regard it as reliable is all that is necessary. I say that this is alleged by persons in whose integrity I place the utmost reliance, and if it is not true it is easily susceptible of contradiction. But I will be more specific in this matter, for I am not in the habit of dealing by indirection; and I beg the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs now, if this is new to him. I have been informed that the successful bidders for the Yorktown did not comply with the requirements in several particulars, but that the contractors were given an opportunity to make new plans; that the next highest bidder, Charles Reeder & Sons, of Baltimore, protested, but were overruled. I am informed that the plans of the Yorktown's engines were previously submitted to the Naval Board on Additional Vessels and rejected; that on those plans, when submitted to that board, the engines were marked for 3,500 horse-power; that when the bids were made the figures on the plan were changed to 3,300 horse-power; and then, after the bids were made, the Secretary cut the horse-power down to 3,000 and offered a bonus of $100 for every additional horse-power.

In the case of the Baltimore I am told that the original drawings as purchased in England called for 10,750 indicated horse-power, and that after the bids had been made the Secretary cut the requirement down to 9,000 horse-power and offered the premium referred to, which, if the vessel should develop the horse-power originally designed, would bring the bonus up to $175,000 for providing the power originally indicated on the plan.

I have thus referred to one cruising vessel that this administration has put afloat, from which it would seem that we are to pay $40,000 bonus for getting afloat a 16-knot ship in the year 1889.

THE VESUVIUS.

Then we have the torpedo-boat Vesuvius (for she is nothing else), with a displacement of 800 tons, originally designed to be about 700 and to carry dynamite guns for the purpose of experimenting with that weapon upon the water. I had occasion a few days ago to make some criticism of the methods of the tests applied to that vessel, and I find some contemptuous criticisms of my remarks in a place where I hardly expected to find it and given publicity from a source from which it might still less be expected. A few days ago, in another place, a speaker saw fit to make "a part of his remarks," as "an authoritative statement in regard to the Vesuvius," some comments upon my statements that have been given considerable publicity. That statement proceeds, in detail and with considerable persiflage, to traverse, contradict, and characterize the statements I had made upon this floor.

I desire to say in the first place that that statement was not authoritative. It could only be authoritative by emanating from the Navy Department. I relieve the Secretary of the Navy and his officers at the outset from all responsibility for that statement, erroneously characterized as "authoritative." It is more probable that the statement was prepared by the attorney or agent of some contractor with the Government, which would be a very curious source for an "authoritative statement" in regard to the testing of a ship to decide her acceptance by the United States Government. My statements in regard to that vessel and her trial are, however, practically unanswered and undisturbed by this voluminous review, to which I will now pay brief attention.

In the first place it states that I was incorrect in saying that the report of the failures of the Vesuvius in two original trials had not been made public, and it is alleged that the report was made to the Department and is on file there. I never stated anything contrary to that; but the report had never been given to the public, and my statement on the floor was the first advertisement of the facts. This writer ridicules the idea that a vessel like the Vesuvius should have any protection. Attempting to ridicule my suggestion that it was inconsistent to complain that the top of the Dolphin's cylinder was above the water line and then to boast about a vessel one-half of whose machinery was equally unprotected, this writer goes on to say that it "betrays a total ignorance of the most primitive problems of naval construction" to suggest that a vessel like the Vesuvius should have any protection. It is only necessary to state the fact, reported in the current publications of the Navy Department, that a vessel about one-half the size of the Vesuvius, the Spanish torpedo-vessel, Destructor, has the protection of steel bulkheads and "complete coal protection around the machinery space."

I dislike to dignify such an anonymous production by noticing it; but its appearance in an official publication seems to justify a few words of comment. In one place the writer says:

> But there never was any intention that the Vesuvius should nor any pretense that she could keep the sea in the cruising sense for any considerable length of time, or that her sea-going duty would ever be more than to run along the coast, from port to port, as her defensive functions might require.

Yet in the next paragraph he says:

> The Vesuvius should be considered as a sea-going torpedo-vessel of large size.

In another paragraph he declares:

> Still, it was deemed advisable that the vessel (Vesuvius) should have sufficient coal capacity to cross the Atlantic or reach any of the Atlantic ports of South America at a moderate speed—that is, say, 10 or 12 knots an hour.

In still another he says:

> There can be no doubt that the Vesuvius type will prove a most formidable factor in the national scheme of coast and harbor defense, as well as an important adjunct to offensive operations away from our shores, should it unfortunately become necessary to undertake them.

And again he says, in conclusion:

> The Vesuvius has a greater coal capacity and sea-going endurance than any of the European boats except the Tripoli, which has about the same.

These citations illustrate the "authoritative" character of the article. But this writer informs me that the Vesuvius—> belongs to that class of vessels which find their protection in their speed.

And he remarks that she could show a—> sustained rate of speed that would make a chase of her by a hostile ship or squadron an interesting performance for the enemy.

Well, Mr. Speaker, it does not seem to me that a race of that kind would be a very edifying spectacle for the people of the United States.

This writer says the dynamite guns of the Vesuvius have a range of one mile and a half and an effective fire at one mile. As even the 5-inch high-power rifles of the lightest cruisers have an effective range of more than twice that distance, it certainly would be an interesting spectacle for American citizens on the Highlands of Navesink, at the entrance of New York Bay, or for my committee colleague [Mr. MCADOO] to sit on top of one of the big grain elevators at Jersey City and witness a contest of speed in which the Vesuvius should be running for home at her highest power, with her stationary guns pointed away from her chasing enemy, who, if even such a vessel as the Dolphin, would destroy the fugitive boat if it did not keep at such distance that its own projectiles could not reach half way to the pursuer.

Mr. MCADOO. I should feel entirely safe if my distinguished colleague on the committee [Mr. BOUTELLE] was in charge of the Vesuvius. [Laughter.]

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, it was not my intention in the remarks which I made the other day to decry this vessel for the purposes for which she was constructed—the purposes of a torpedo-boat—and I have no desire to do it now. It was against the foolish assumption set up the moment she was completed, that Secretary Whitney had put afloat a "cruiser" of 21.65 knots an hour—the fastest "cruiser" in the world—that was what I found fault with, and it was that against which my criticism was directed. The Vesuvius is not a "cruiser" in any such sense as would warrant a comparison of her speed with that of the "cruising ships" of other navies.

I hasten on to where an attempt is made to show that the Vesuvius is the fastest vessel of her class by stating in this article that the report as to the Destructor where it is stated to have made 22.68 knots is "unofficial." In the London Engineer of December 17, 1886, I find a statement of the conditions of the trial which I will print, with the names of the Spanish board of naval officers who were present. It is there stated that her speed was required to be maintained for three hours at 22½ knots; that the mean speed made was 22.68 knots for three hours, and that her speed at deep-load displacement for three hours was 20.2 knots. And this statement is confirmed by our own authorities. Instead of my statement being incorrect, it is based upon the authority of the reports of our Navy Department and other reliable records which I will quote here:

[From the London Engineer, December 17, 1886, page 481.]

> The conditions of trial * * * were that she was first to be run three times upon the measured mile, then to run at full speed for three consecutive hours; after this she was again to be run three times upon the measured mile. From the results of the mile runs the speed upon the three consecutive hours' run was to be determined.
>
> The same trial was successfully carried out on the 13th instant, in the presence of a commission of Spanish naval officers appointed by the minister of marine. The following were the members of the commission:
>
> Commodore Casariego, Commodore Montojo, Captain Villaamil, Remero, Elduayen, Goitia.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> In addition to the members of the Spanish commission there were present at the trials Mr. Bakewell and Mr. Bennett, of the admiralty, etc.

The conditions are also stated by Mr. Biles, in the Transactions of the Institution of Naval Architects, 1887, page 222.

> Speed to be maintained for three hours, 22½ knots. Speed made, 22.68 (mean) for three hours. (Page 223.)

On page 225, a table shows the mean speed (deep-load displacement) for three hours 20.2 knots.

Under the head of "steam trials," in General Information, series No. 6, Office of Naval Intelligence, United States Navy Department, this Spanish vessel is described and her trials reported specifically on pages 272 and 273, as follows:

DESTRUCTOR.

> Partially described on page 208 of "No. V," the chief elements of the design of this vessel as she was finally built are as follows:
>
> Length, b. p., 192 feet 6 inches; beam, 25 feet; depth at center, 13 feet; normal mean draught, 6 feet 3 inches; mean load draught, 7 feet; normal displacement, 350 tons; deep load displacement, 458 tons. The armament consists of one 4-inch B. L. pivot, four 6-pounder R. F. G., two 47^{mm} H. R. C., and five torpedo-tubes—two in the bow, one in the stern, and two on deck on a turn-table. Six 15-foot torpedoes will be carried. The motive power consists of two sets of vertical triple-expansion engines driving twin screws, the cylinders being 42, 27, and 18½ inches diameter, and the stroke 4 feet.

Four cylindrical boilers supply the steam. The hull is divided into thirty-nine water-tight compartments, each set of engines and each boiler being in a separate compartment. There is complete coal protection around the machinery space, and the bunker bulk-heads are three-quarter inch steel. Forward of the boilers and magazines a curved steel bulk-head, 1¼ inches thick, gives protection from raking fire. The normal coal supply is 45 tons, and the total bunker capacity 110 tons. With the former amount a distance of 2,050 knots, at 10 knots per hour, can be covered, and with the latter amount, at the same speed, 5,500. The complement of officers and men is placed at forty-five.

Launched on July 29, 1886, this vessel has had a very successful series of trials. Although of such small size, she is provided with engines of 4,000 estimated I. H. P., has proven herself a good sea-boat, able to make a long passage at high speed, and is the fastest vessel now afloat, exclusive of torpedo-boats.

To facilitate maneuvering she is cut away considerably at each end, and is also fitted with an auxiliary bow-rudder. The three masts have a fore-and-aft rig and are hinged to lower on deck.

The first trials were made by the contractor the last week in November, 1886, during two days, when the maximum speed attained was 23¾ knots. On December 13, 1886, a series of trials was had with all weights on board, except that the coal was for 1,800 miles at 11¼ knots, the vessel displacing 385 tons. The trials were to consist of three runs over the measured mile; then three hours' continuous run at full speed, followed by three more runs over the measured mile. The results were all satisfactory.

The mean speed for three hours on the first trial was 22.56 knots; revolutions, 292; I. H. P., 3,784 with forced-draught pressure equivalent to 2 inches water. On the second trial the results were: Speed, 22.68 knots; 2,923 revolutions; 3,829 I. H. P. At her deep-load displacement of 458 tons the maximum speed was 20.2 knots.

By running 135 knots her coal endurance was determined to be 5,100 miles at 11¼ knots, and 700 miles at full speed. In a heavy sea 22 knots was made for four hours.

The turning trials were also highly satisfactory, a complete circle being made in one and three-fourth minutes, with a diameter of slightly less than three lengths of the vessel.

In January, 1887, she crossed the Bay of Biscay from Falmouth to Muros in twenty-four hours, at a mean speed of 21 knots, the distance being 495 knots. The wind was southeast, force 4 to 6. The cost, complete for sea, is about $245,000.

The Destructor is a vessel of about half the tonnage of the Vesuvius; and she made a maximum of 23¾ knots and a mean speed for three hours of 22.68 knots as against 21.65 knots of the Vesuvius in a spurt of a few minutes. The 22.68 of the Destructor is reported for a three hours' run; and so far as the public has any information, the only trial to which the Vesuvius has been subjected was a trial one way over the course of six minutes and thirty-nine seconds and the other way seven minutes and thirty seconds. The prime condition of these trials was that the vessels should be equipped and armed as required by the act of Congress. I am informed that this vessel was 100 tons below the requirement of weights. A condition of the contract is that "the steam is not under any circumstances to be even partially shut off while off the course for the purpose of securing a higher result while on it." I am told on such authority as I have been able to get (for the Secretary has failed to furnish me the official report), that the steam on this trial was bottled up to 175 pounds for the first run, and that on that run the steam went down some 18 pounds; that she was then slowed down, and the steam bottled up again to about 175 pounds, and the second run made.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BOUTELLE. I would like ten minutes more.

Mr. HERBERT. I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Maine be extended ten minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BOUTELLE. The opinion has been expressed that a vessel which could maintain this speed with her steam thus accumulated for a short spurt would not be able to maintain it under the conditions of the contract. I do not know how that may be, but I am surprised at the statement made to me that no representative of the engineer department of the Navy was on duty during those trials to attend to the valves or see that the conditions in regard to the steam were complied with. If that information is correct it is a remarkable fact. For the purpose of reference I will cite here some of the terms of the Vesuvius contract relating to the conditions of trial:

A. The vessel, equipped and armed as required by the aforesaid act of Congress and by this contract, shall, in addition to her stores, have not less than 4 tons of ammunition or its equivalent in weight on board, and not less than 28 tons of coal in her bunkers; and the trial shall take place in smooth water in Delaware River or Bay, or in such other proper or convenient locality as shall be agreed on in advance by the parties to this contract.

B. A nautical mile shall be laid off and marked at each end by two stakes placed in a line at right angles to it. If practicable the mile shall be laid off in the direction of the tidal current.

C. There shall be four successive runs at full power over the measured mile at a speed of not less than 20 knots an hour

D. The steam is not under any circumstances to be even partially shut off while off the course for the purpose of securing a higher result while on it.

E. In lieu of the runs over a measured mile as above provided for, there may, at the option of the contractors, be two successive runs over a course of 10 measured nautical miles, or one continuous run over a course of 20 nautical miles, under the conditions above stated, applicable to runs over 1 measured mile, and in such case allowance shall be made for current.

I find in the New York Daily Graphic of February 16, 1889, the following, purporting to be a portion of the report of the naval officers who attended the test of the Vesuvius:

UNITED STATES STEAMER DESPATCH,
Off Delaware Breakwater, January 17, 1889.

SIR: * * * In obedience to the orders from the Department, the Despatch planted two can buoys at the entrance to Delaware Bay, marking a course 2.5433 knots long in 16 fathoms least water. On the morning of January 11, 1889, two runs were made over this course, at nearly the end of ebb tide, with the following results:

Runs.	Time.	Distance.	Speed.
	′ ″	Knots.	Knots.
First run, with tide	6 39	2.5433	22.947
Second run, against tide	7 30	2.5433	20.346
			43.293
Average speed in knots			21.646

REMARKS.—Wind west, force about 2, slight ground swell.
The weights on board were specified in the contract.

Very respectfully, your obedient servants,

WILLIAM S. COWLES,
Lieutenant, United States Navy, Senior Member.
SEATON SCHROEDER,
Lieutenant, United States Navy, Member.
BRADLEY A. FISKE,
Lieutenant, United States Navy, Member.

Hon. W. C. WHITNEY,
Secretary of the Navy.

There is one line that I do not understand, where it is said:

The weights on board were specified in the contract.

They do not say, or this printed statement does not say, that the weights specified in the contract were on board, but that the "weights on board were specified in the contract," which might be a very different matter.

I have here a very graphic picture, so to speak [holding up the illustrated paper], of the contrast between the trial of the Dolphin in a gale of wind off Cape Hatteras, driven at full speed into a head-beat sea, and the trial of the Vesuvius with the wind gently blowing at "2 knots an hour" on the glassy waters of Delaware Bay.

Mr. Speaker, I want to call another witness in regard to my statement of my impressions of this trial—that whereas it was complained that the Dolphin had to have some water played upon her bearings, I think I used the expression that when the Vesuvius came out of her trial trip her engine-room was like a Turkish bath. It seems that I did not paint the picture vividly enough. Here is a statement published on the 16th of January in a paper of my own State—the Portland Press—in which an expert who was on board—I suppose he was an expert, as he had been employed in the business connected with these ships for some years—says:

I went down the river on the dynamiter Vesuvius on her trial trip a couple of weeks ago and enjoyed a novel experience. She is, practically speaking, merely a machine, so full she is of engines and guns. The trip was more of an acrobatic feat than anything I have ever seen in that line. The engine-room was full of steam overhead and the water was pouring on the engines to keep her cool, and it fairly rained in torrents. All the engineers wore oil-skin clothes and southwesters, and were running from bearing to bearing like a swarm of bees, heads down and hands out ahead to clear the way. It made me think of the rush line in a foot-ball contest. The engines were running two hundred and seventy-five turns a minute, and everything looked like the spokes of a wheel. There was a sound of escaping steam, a sort of general swish like a rocket, and the whole sensation was like being on a fast locomotive crossing a bridge.

On deck the sensation was again very striking. The boat seemed to be plowing two great furrows at the bow and a great wave was following the stern, thrown up to a level above the deck a little way from the boat by the action of the propellers which took the water from under her so fast that the stern sunk down at times below the water. She was going for a short time at the rate of 21 knots, but owing to an accident to the engines did not fulfill the contract speed. She will undoubtedly do so when put in repair. I wouldn't have missed the experience for a great deal, as there is probably no one outside of the other visitors with us that has ever had the same experience in this country.

It does not seem to me advisable to indulge in national pride over alleged achievements of speed to the extent of demanding that vessels shall be accepted without being subjected to fair and proper trials of their speed and their endurance. I have no desire to detract in the slightest degree from whatever good qualities any of these ships may develop. I have given them the full benefit of the record I have been able to obtain of their performance, showing the Yorktown to be a 15.85-knot ship, and that the Vesuvius, "a box of machinery," makes 21.65 knots in a six-minute run with her steam bottled up. But I am informed that she never has complied with the requirements of the contract; and it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that before we set the American eagle screaming too loudly, before we launch out recklessly upon the duplication or multiplication of this class of ships, we should subject them at least to the tests that were laid down by the very Department which claims the honor of their creation.

I will ask indulgence for a few moments more and I will be done. I will copy into my remarks entire some observations I read the other day as copied admiringly in a newspaper—a sort of congratulation of the people of the United States that the Navy is practically rebuilt—and I will comment on a few phrases which struck me as rather remarkable. This statement goes on to say:

But I say, as I said when I began, I am out of the woods for one on this question of a naval establishment. We are going to have, in five or six years from now, the very best navy in the world, not in number of ships equaling Great Britain and France, and possibly some of the other great powers, but we shall have no refuse in our Navy. That Navy will be like a clean-limbed, thoroughly-equipped wrestler, with no impediment, with nothing to hinder it, with no old and useless ships; and, thanks to the policy that has been pursued, none of those vast, unwieldy, and monstrous structures which have consumed millions upon millions of the moneys of other powers, and which to-day naval officers and men dare not go upon the waters in for fear of the dangers that lie inherently in the construction of these ships.

We shall have none of these, but we shall have a few of the best armored ships in the world, with the best of modern gunnery placed upon them, manned by American sailors, who have never met their equal in the history of naval wars, and in addition to that, sailing cruisers of types ranging from eight to ten hundred tons up to forty-five hundred and five thousand tons that will dart over the waters of the earth and penetrate into remote regions at a speed that no other power can attain, and in numbers, if we go on as we have been going on in the last four years, we shall equal any navy in the world with the exception, as I have said, of France and England, and possibly one or two other European powers. Already we have, including those provided for in this bill, in process of construction or in readiness for the new Secretary to take up and contract for and build, thirty-six first-class vessels. These are all new, with the exception of the turreted monitors, which came to us as a legacy from the years immediately succeeding the war. With that exception there are thirty-one new first-class modern-built armed ships, with modern machinery.

This is supposed to be a Republican tribute to the accomplishment of the rebuilding of the Navy under a Democratic administration. We are told that "if we go on as we have been going on in the last four years, we are going to have in five or six years from now the very best Navy in the world." What is that Navy going to be?

Not in number of ships equaling Great Britain and France, and possibly some of the other great powers, but we shall have no refuse in our Navy. That Navy will be like a clean-limbed, thoroughly-equipped wrestler with no impediment, with nothing to hinder it, with no old and useless ships; and, thanks to the policy that has been pursued—

I suppose by Secretary Whitney and the Democratic administration, we shall have—

None of those vast, unwieldy, and monstrous structures which have consumed millions upon millions of the moneys of other powers, and which to-day naval officers and men dare not go upon the waters in for fear of the dangers that lie inherently in the construction of these ships.

We are going to have none of those big iron-clads—then what are we going to have?

We shall have none of these, but we shall have a few of the best armored ships in the world.

I suppose that means the Texas and the Maine, which in two years have so far advanced that one has the keel laid.

We shall have a few of the best armored ships in the world with the best of modern gunnery placed upon them,

I do not know exactly what that means, but perhaps the chairman of the committee does.

Mr. HERBERT. I was not aware I used that word.

Mr. BOUTELLE. You did not. I am not commenting upon the chairman's speech, but that of another, but I supposed he might know what this phrase referred to. It is said "we shall have a few of the best armored ships in the world with the best of modern gunnery placed upon them." Perhaps the idea is that every well-regulated gunboat should be provided with a "gunnery." [Laughter.]

Manned by American sailors, who have never met their equal in the history of naval wars, and in addition to that sailing cruisers.

I do not know what they are to be in these days of steam. I will not hold the chairman of the committee responsible for that, because he did not make that speech. [Laughter.]

And in addition to that, sailing cruisers of types ranging from eight to ten hundred tons up to forty-five hundred and five thousand tons that will dart over the waters of the earth—

I suppose that is to distinguish them from ordinary navies, which simply go upon the waters of the sea. But this new Navy of ours is not to be confined to the earth, but is to—penetrate into remote regions at a speed that no other power can attain.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I want but a minute or two more to complete my sentence.

Mr. HERBERT. I move that the gentleman's time be extended for five minutes.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will read further:

At a speed that no other power can attain.

That is to be done, I suppose, by the Yorktown running at 16 knots while the British Archer has a speed of 17.58 knots.

And in numbers, if we go on as we have been going on in the last four years, we shall equal any navy in the world with the exception, as I have said, of France and England, and possibly one or two other European powers.

That is, we shall have "the best navy in the world" except France, England, or any other nation that pretends to have a navy. [Laughter.]

Already we have, including those provided for in this bill, in process of construction or in readiness for the new Secretary to take up and contract for and build, thirty-six first-class vessels. These are all new, with the exception of the turreted monitors, which came to us as a legacy from the years immediately succeeding the war. With that exception there are thirty-one new first-class modern-built armed ships, with modern machinery.

Note the effectiveness of employing the present tense! With the "exception" of those that are not in existence, we are told that—

There "are" thirty-one new first-class modern-built armed ships, with modern machinery.

It is a pity to bring in contrast with this exuberant flight of fancy the cold, hard facts that we have to-day only the four completed Roach ships and four hulls of gunboats and cruisers, and one torpedo-boat afloat, with the further assurance that this month there will be advertised bids for proposals for a coast-defense ship for which the appropriation was made in 1887. In contrast with the exaggerated boasting of which we hear so much, the facts remind me of the story of the boy who went into a store and asked the price of a pair of skates, to which the clerk responded that they were sold for $1 a pair. The boy said, "Thank you for the information; I wanted to know because I have got 1 cent and when I get 99 more I am going to buy a pair." [Laughter.]

In closing I repeat, what I have frequently said before, that I am ready and willing to give the Democratic administration any reasonable degree of credit for so much as it has done with the liberal means placed at its disposal. If Secretary Whitney had not been more progressive and more favorable to the Navy than his party we should have had no ships built under his administration. In several instances I have commended his readiness to take hold of Republican ideas and carry them forward as in the case of the inducements for establishing plants for heavy steel forgings in this country. He started in wrong, however, in seeking to destroy the character of the Roach ships because they were of Republican origin, and the extravagant boasting of his claquers has challenged comparisons that are not flattering.

I hope to see the vessels projected under his direction prove themselves capable of fulfilling every requirement of contract and design. For whatever contribution they shall make toward the restoration of our naval prestige his administration will receive due recognition. But half a dozen swallows do not make a summer, and the sort of extravagant laudation by over-zealous friends that bubbles up over the terrapin and champagne can not expand the comparatively meager results of the last four years into a restoration of the Navy.

Mr. HERBERT withholds his remarks for revision. [See Appendix.]

Mr. HERBERT. Some of my colleagues on the committee desire to be heard on this question; among them the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO] wished to say something. I do not see him in his seat.

Mr. BOUTELLE. While we are waiting for the gentleman from New Jersey, I only desire to say briefly——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Alabama yield to the gentleman from Maine?

Mr. HERBERT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I wish to say that as I understood my friend, the chairman of the committee [Mr. HERBERT], he made an error in saying that I had omitted to mention the San Francisco, the Baltimore, etc. I mentioned those vessels specifically, and stated the progress that is reported to have been attained in their construction.

Mr. HERBERT. I think the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Oh, no; I did mention those vessels.

Mr. HERBERT. I think the notes of the stenographer would bear me out in the statement that the gentleman omitted them entirely.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I referred to them, as the report will show.

In regard to the statement made by me as to my information in reference to the horse-power required in the contracts, it is only necessary to say that my friend, in his very natural zeal as champion of the committee and champion of the Administration, finds it necessary to denounce as a calumniator a gentleman whom he admits he does not know, and concerning the truth or error of whose statement he admits he is not informed. I think I can leave the matter there.

Mr. HERBERT. I was satisfied that my colleague on the committee [Mr. BOUTELLE] was in error when he stated that the Yorktown had made a speed of less than 16 knots. I immediately telegraphed to the Bureau of Construction and Repair, and have received a reply, which I ask to have read at the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, February 28, 1889.

To H. A. HERBERT:

Telegram received. Yorktown's trial was not for speed, but for horse-power. Neither the law nor contract has any requirement as to speed. If it had been a trial for speed she would have been entitled by custom to smooth water, whereas her trial was at sea. She averaged, however, a speed of 16.4 for the four hours; maximum speed, 17.2.

Horse-power developed considerably above the guaranties.

T. D. WILSON,
Chief Constructor, U. S. N.

Mr. HERBERT. It will be seen that instead of the speed of 15.8 knots an hour, as stated by the gentlemen from Maine, the average speed was 16.4 knots an hour, and the maximum speed over 17 knots. This is another illustration of how easy it is for the gentleman to believe reports that he likes to believe.

Mr. BOUTELLE. The chairman of the committee, having made that statement, will unquestionably yield to me for a brief reply. I repeat the statement I made before, that I requested the Secretary of the Navy ten days ago to afford me, as a Representative in Congress, access to the reports of the trial of the Yorktown and the Vesuvius, but I have been unable to get them. The statement I made, as I said at the time, was based upon this publication in the Army and Navy Register of February 16, 1889:

The Secretary of the Navy on Thursday received a telegram from Commodore Fitzhugh, president of the naval board to conduct the trial trip of the Yorktown. It was as follows:

"Yorktown's sea trials outside Cape Henlopen completed. Satisfactory and successful in all respects. Maximum speed about 17 knots; average for four hours, 16 knots."

A dispatch from Philadelphia says: "Yorktown returned to Cramp's. In another four hours she made an average of 15.85 knots per hour.

That was my authority for the statement I made. I do not know that Commodore Fitzhugh sent that telegram; but I have no more doubt about it than has my friend, the chairman of the Naval Committee. It never would have been printed in the Army and Navy Register if it had not been authentic.

I made my statement on such authority as I had; and that authority has not yet been refuted.

Mr. HERBERT. Does my friend from Maine know that Secretary Whitney received the note which he sent?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I do not.

Mr. HERBERT. I am sure that if the Secretary had received it there would have been a courteous reply.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I simply gave that as my reason for not giving official figures, which I would have been very glad to give. I should like to examine those official reports. I say I am justified in making the statement I did upon that public report, which has never been contradicted.

Mr. HERBERT. I am only anxious to show that the gentleman is in error; not that he is willfully so.

Mr. BOUTELLE. But you have not shown that I am in error.

Mr. HERBERT. I think I have by the telegram which has been read.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Even that statement does not bring the Yorktown up to 18 knots, which the gentleman predicted, nor does it bring her up to the speed of other vessels of her class, for instance, the Archer, which has made an average speed of 17.85 knots.

Mr. MCADOO. Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Democratic Administration and the present very efficient head of the Navy Department on the labored efforts which the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE] has made by way of criticism. The distressing frankness and manliness of the distinguished Senators of the Republican party in the adjoining Chamber who paid their tribute and gave their evidence in that body to the efficiency, honesty, and ability with which this Department has been managed is no doubt very irritating to my colleague on the Committee on Naval Affairs. But the country has given its verdict on the success of this Administration, so far as the Navy is concerned, and my friend might stand on this floor from now until the next Presidential election and make as many labored efforts as he has to-day without taking a single iota of the credit, honor, and glory which belong to the Democratic Administration in laying the foundations of a new Navy. [Applause.] You may rail at but you can not change impartial history.

The gentleman makes this criticism. He says we have been slower than the former administration in building these vessels; that while the Congress of the United States has voted the money, we have not proceeded as fast as the Republicans did. I admit that to a certain extent. We followed the policy that it was better to go slow to get an honestly built and efficient ship than to pour money into the laps of contractors without regard to what kind of vessel we were getting for our expenditures.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Does my friend say the original ships built by the United States are not cheaper?

Mr. MCADOO. Not cheaper than those built by this Administration. The present head of the Navy Department has been careful. In getting the navy-yards in condition it was necessary to put in improved machinery. He advertised for bids. A clique was made up here to raise the price against the Government, and he was unwilling to buy foreign machinery. If he had been willing for political purposes in the heat of the Presidential campaign to rush in this machinery, I am here as a witness to say he could have 100, ay, 200 per cent. more on the labor rolls of the yards in the doubtful States of New York and Virginia; but he consistently and stubbornly followed the policy of going slowly and safely so the Government might be protected in the kind of ships that were built and in the machinery which was supplied, and so that the United States Treasury might not be put under the control of the contracting and political cormorants who have fattened and battened on it during preceding years.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Do I understand the gentleman from New Jersey to give the amount expended during the last campaign?

Mr. MCADOO. During the months of last summer and up to election day there was no more expended in the yards in any one month than during the administration of the preceding Secretary of the Navy.

And there is this additional fact, that under the last Secretary of the Navy you were simply patching up old wooden hulks, while we were turning out new work and laying down new machinery and improving the plant of our navy-yards in every respect.

Mr. BOUTELLE. My friend is entirely mistaken as to the repairs made on the Atlantic squadron.

Mr. MCADOO. My friend has had two years to talk over this.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I do not desire to interrupt the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. MCADOO. I will publish a statement of the expenditures under the present Secretary of the Navy.

This statement has been read and now appears in the remarks of the chairman [Mr. HERBERT], and bears out my assertion.

My friend has selected the Vesuvius for his attack. He never takes the floor but he is "still harping on my daughter"—"my daughter, oh, my daughter." [Laughter and applause.] He constantly cries out, "Oh, the Dolphin!" "Oh, Mr. Roach!" The tears he has shed over that lamented patriot, Mr. Roach, would float the vessels of our Navy. [Renewed laughter.] You have only to mention the name of the Dolphin, to speak of Mr. Roach, to start him on the floor, and that magnificent ship, the Dolphin, is floated at once upon a sea of tribulation. [Great laughter and applause.]

You are all religious men and have read that magnificent allegory "The Pilgrim's Progress." Well, the pilgrim never fared half so badly among the snares and pitfalls of devils and bad men as the Dolphin among the wicked Democrats. What pitfalls, snares, obstructions, unfair trials, misrepresentations, slanders, lies, and conspiracies did not the virtuous and awful Dolphin overcome! Joseph, sold into Egypt and finally triumphant in sterling worth and inherent virtue, is the Republican idea of this little ship the Dolphin.

The Dolphin, the Dolphin, the powerful Dolphin, the omnipotent Dolphin, the destructive Dolphin, that will be our protection and support when all of the Democratic navy, built by a Democratic administration, will be driven by the fury of the onslaught before the fleet of the enemy. [Laughter.] England may bully, France threaten, and Germany become aggressive, but thank Heaven we yet possess the Dolphin. The lachrymose muse of my colleague when he strikes a fresh run in the epic history of the Dolphin is as sad, sweet, melancholy, and plaintive as Gray's "Elegy in a country church-yard."

But my friend from Maine talks of the Vesuvius. He was a gallant sailor during the war; he sailed a "double-ender," I understand, an old tin-clad, not an iron-clad, and he ran his tin-clad gallantly, as I am told, up on an iron-clad—a bold, brave man, I have no doubt, and a good sailor. But my friend's knowledge of steam-vessels and of ironclads, I am afraid, is restricted to his experience during the war with the tin-clads. [Laughter.] His experience is restricted to the engines of vessels revolving twenty-eight times a minute, while the engines of these magnificent steamers of our day make three hundred revolutions a minute; indeed, they go as fast as sewing-machines.

And I want to tell my friend something in regard to this matter, although I do not claim to be a nautical expert by any means, as the one who wrote that article in the Maine newspaper which he quoted; but I want to tell my friend that in the engine-rooms of these fast trans-Atlantic steamers, where the powerful engines, in order to make the voyage in the short time these steamers now make, revolve three hundred and more revolutions a minute, they have water pouring upon all the bearings during the whole time, and that on every steamer that leaves the dock at New York, from the time she leaves here until the time she arrives at Liverpool or her destination on the other side, wherever it may be, its engineers and oilers have to wear oil-cloth clothing as a means of protection from the water and steam thus generated by plentifully sprinkling the revolving machinery; and when the passenger, as is often the case, desires to go down into the engine-room and inspect the workings of the machinery he is compelled to wear oil-cloth clothing in order to protect himself from the dripping of this moisture and the steam and water pouring down in all directions upon him.

That is the custom on these ships. The tremendously fast action necessitates the use of water to keep cool the bearings. The friction is necessarily very great. This pouring of water would of course mislead a land-lubber or sailor-man of the old type. My friend speaks of it as a wonderful thing that water was poured upon the bearings of this vessel. I refer him to this as a matter of fact and tell him that they must bathe the bearings on all of these fast vessels when going at full speed. They did not need to do so in the Sassacus, or in the old double-end tin-clads that my friend commanded during the war, but they have to do it now with these fast-going steam-vessels. Those old-style engines made about twenty-eight revolutions as against over three hundred now. You might as well compare the stage-coach and the vestibule express train.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I hope the gentleman will be permitted to proceed.

Mr. MCADOO. I should like to have but a few minutes longer.

Mr. HAYDEN. I will take the floor in my own right and yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. How much time does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. Ten minutes, or as much as may be desired.

Mr. MCADOO. I thank my friend from Massachusetts, but five minutes will be all I need, I think.

I was highly amused, Mr. Speaker, to hear my friend from Maine talking about that "expert," whose testimony he paraded here before the House, an old sailor-man, or, for all I know, a clerk in the Department from somewhere up in Maine, who knows all about "snorters" and "fo' topgallant sails" and "flying-jibs" and "royal yards," and tries to impress us with our ignorance of nautical matters by citing the language of the sea. He says that the Vesuvius, when he saw it, was "full of guns and machinery!" Why, what on earth did he expect the vessel to be full of? Did he expect to find turnip-patches in it? [Great laughter.] She was not built for that. She is not an agricultural experiment station. Machinery was put in there to make her go; and yet the "expert from Maine," who writes in a little country paper up there, and is read approvingly by my colleague and is paraded here as an expert, finds fault with the Vesuvius because she was filled with guns and machinery.

Mr. Speaker, that is what the Vesuvius was built for. We might have made her for a floating boarding-house, but we preferred to have her a war vessel.

Now, this Democratic Administration, I think, does not need to rest upon the Vesuvius. She is a good boat, but a faster will yet be built, although with an experience of twenty-five years gentlemen who had the control of the Navy on the other side have not succeeded in building one as fast. I have no doubt, though, that in time new, larger, and better boats will be afloat. All that I am claiming is that the Democratic government of the Navy Department has been cleanly and honestly administered, and for that you may take the evidence of the Republican contractors themselves.

It is a fact, Mr. Speaker, which the gentleman seems to have lost sight of, that there has not been a hammer struck in a ship-yard in the United States on any of these new naval vessels under the Democratic Administration that the yard was not owned by a Republican. Mr. Cramp, of Philadelphia, is an honest gentleman, an able ship-builder, but he is a stanch and unrelenting Republican. Mr. Scott, of San Francisco, is a Republican, and every other yard in the United States where the vessels have been contracted for belongs to a Republican. The contracts have been made with Republicans, and when the gentleman from Maine stands up here to insinuate by indirect charges or otherwise that the amount of horse-power has been altered or the contracts changed, or that there was an effort on the part of the Administration to aid somebody in the way of favoritism in regard to these contracts, then the gentleman should frankly admit that if such be true it was favoritism to Republican contractors.

My friend becomes almost wildly rhetorical about the press. He says the press, the newspapers are "resounding" with praises of the Administration, "resounding" with praises of the Navy Department, "resounding" with praises of the new ships and the Secretary of the Navy, and the Philadelphia Press he instances as one of the papers that is "resounding" with praises of the new naval management. Now, reflect a moment, and say is not this going out on the court-house steps to let off your feeling against an impartial jury which has just rendered against you an adverse but honest verdict. If only Democratic papers had sounded the praises of Mr. Whitney my colleague could slumber easily, but these Republican newspapers—"Et tu, Brute!" That we wicked Democrats should pay just tribute to Mr. Whitney is from his standpoint to be expected, but that from all sections of the Republican camp chief singers should join in the chorus stirs his righteous soul, and his gorge rises. He is struggling with his better nature.

Right here need I say that the Philadelphia Press is the most pronounced leading Republican newspaper in the United States? Why, my friend need not call on Democratic testimony, but I can give him the testimony of Republican newspapers, the Republican contractors, the Republican Senators, and of all honest men out of this House and out of this Capitol of the Republican party as witnesses to the honesty, patriotism, and efficiency, and to the ability with which the Navy has been managed under the Democratic administration. [Applause.] As to how the money for construction and repairs was expended during this fiscal year and as showing that we spent a great deal on the ships of the new Navy built under the former administration, I append this letter from Chief Constructor Wilson. This completely answers any charge of using up the money in ordinary repairs for election purposes. The facts are hard for would-be partisan critics:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR,
Washington, D. C., February 13, 1889.

SIR: The bureau having seen from the record of debate in the Senate on the naval appropriation bill that the bill as it passed the House has been amended so as to make the total appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, read $900,000 instead of $1,000,000, and striking out the House proviso that $150,000 be made immediately available, has consulted the Department in relation thereto, and, with its permission, desires to state that on the 1st instant the balance in the Treasury to the credit of this bureau was $191,322, and the indebtedness on account of contracts for annual supplies and requisitions was $140,466, leaving a balance at that time of $50,856. There has been allowed to navy-yards and stations for this month $27,100, leaving an available balance for the remainder of the fiscal year of $23,756. Unless the $150,000 provided for by the House of Representatives is allowed the work under this bureau must come to an immediate stop, as the balance would be probably wanted to pay for labor and materials on vessels on foreign stations.

The training-vessels Portsmouth, Saratoga, and Jamestown are now progressing slowly and should be completed in March in order that the apprentices now on the Constellation can be transferred to them, and the latter vessel again turned over for the use of the cadets at the Naval Academy for the summer cruise; but this can not be done under the present condition of the bureau's funds.

The Pensacola, flag-ship of the North Atlantic station, is now at Norfolk, in commission, with work suspended for want of funds to complete. The work on the Iroquois in the Mare Island navy-yard is also suspended. The Boston and the Yantic having had yellow fever on board have been fumigated and cleaned, but require repainting and other minor repairs before they can again proceed to sea, which can not be done with present funds. The Juniata has just arrived at the New York navy-yard, and the Adams at the Mare Island navy-yard, and are now being surveyed; both will require repairs before they can be again made available for service.

The bureau has constantly to meet demands for expenditures made abroad for labor and materials on vessels on foreign stations which it is impossible to foresee.

Out of its appropriation for the present fiscal year, independent of the amount that has been expended for labor and materials on wooden vessels, and for the pay of permanent organization of foremen and quartermen in charge, the bureau expended on the Atlanta at New York, in removing and replacing broken gun-port sills and general repairs and additions to the vessel, the sum of $30,582; and on the Dolphin at the Mare Island and New York navy-yards, in docking, painting, and minor repairs, the sum of $4,151.

In preparing to build the armored cruiser Maine at the New York navy-yard, and the battle-ship Texas at the Norfolk navy-yard, the tools authorized under a special appropriation had to have proper foundations put down for them, and in most cases had to be erected at the Government expense, while the tools had to be erected and secured under the protection of proper sheds, line shafting put up, and the tools belted ready to run. The angle and plate iron furnaces for heating and bending frames at the Norfolk yard had to be built, and a new mold-loft floor laid. In both yards a number of tools that were considered necessary to the economical building of the Maine and the Texas were purchased, and in doing the work mentioned, all of which was necessary as preparatory to building the new vessels mentioned, but not properly chargeable to them, there has been expended in tools, labor, and materials of all kinds $162,643.60 out of the appropriation for the present fiscal year.

Unless the $150,000 is made immediately available, as provided for in the bill when it passed the House, the Department will be seriously embarrassed for the remainder of the fiscal year for want of the services of vessels now under repair, and will not be in condition to meet the least emergency that may arise, for want of the necessary funds.

Very respectfully,

T. D. WILSON,
Chief Constructor, U. S. N., Chief of Bureau.

Hon. H. A. HERBERT,
Chairman Committee on Naval Affairs,
House of Representatives.

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE] asked my colleague from New Jersey a question which the gentleman did not answer fully, because he had not the figures at hand. It was as to how much was expended in the navy-yards of the United States during the months that were comprised in the election campaign of last year. I have the figures at hand, and I propose to answer that question.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced the passage of bills of the following titles, in which concurrence was asked:

A bill (S. 3957) to establish a railway bridge across the Illinois River, between a point within 5 miles of Columbiana, in Greene County, and a point within 5 miles of Kampsville, in Calhoun County, in the State of Illinois;

A bill (S. 2029) granting a right of way to the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company through the Sioux Indian reservation;

A bill (S. 3918) granting to the Duluth and Winnipeg Railway Company the right of way through the Leech Lake and White Earth Indian reservations in the State of Minnesota;

A bill (S. 2806) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to fix the amount of compensation to be paid for right of way for railroads through Indian reservations in certain contingencies;

A bill (S. 3728) authorizing the Midland Railroad Company to build a bridge over White River at Aberdeen, Ark.;

A bill (S. 1228) granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railroad through the Devil's Lake Indian reservation, in the Territory of Dakota; and

A bill (S. 2828) granting right of way and other privileges to the Hampton and Old Point Railroad Company.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the Senate of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 3431) for the erection of a public building at the city of Kalamazoo, Mich.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 157) correcting the military history of Robert McNutt;

A bill (H. R. 1874) to establish a United States court in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 10588) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the St. John's River in the State of Florida;

A bill (H. R. 11197) for the removal of the political disabilities of Henry A. Ramsay;

A bill (H. R. 11649) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between the city of Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, and Platte County, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (H. R. 12515) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at the most accessible point between the mouth of the Femme Osage Creek and a point 2 miles above the city of St. Charles, in the county of St. Charles, in the State of Missouri;" and

A bill (H. R. 12485) making an appropriation for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message, in writing, was received from the President, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced the passage with amendment of the bill (H. R. 12490) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890; requested a conference, and had appointed Mr. PLUMB, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. GORMAN as conferees on its part.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HERBERT. I have not only those figures, Mr. Speaker, but I have the figures going back into the Republican administration. In the years 1882, 1883, and 1884, summing up a recapitulation showing the actual expenditures of the appropriations actually made in the construction and repair for the five months which include the whole canvass—July, August, September, October, and November of the years 1882, 1883, 1884, and 1888—make this showing: The average expenditure in those first three years, during which there was a Republican Secretary of the Navy, during those months was $108,893.79. The expenditure in the same months for the year 1888 were $90,933.49; making a difference during this Presidential year of the campaign lately through in favor of the expenditures under the Democratic administration over those during the Republican administration, of $9,963.30.

And that is not all, Mr. Speaker. The appropriations for this Bureau of Construction and Repair for the repairing of old vessels in 1884, the last year in which the Republican House made an appropriation, amounted to $1,334,000. After that, in the Forty-seventh Congress, the appropriations gradually went down to $1,000,000 and stood there for two years. Then in 1887 and 1888 they amounted to $900,000, and staid there for two years. For this current year the expenditures were cut down to $835,000; making a difference from 1884 to 1889 of over a half a million dollars appropriated for that single bureau for repairing ships. And that amount would have been unprecedented had it not been for the fact—and I have a letter here which I will add from the Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair—that it was necessary in order to provide for the plant for the new ships, to fix shelters and otherwise provide accommodations for that plant, to expend $162,000 in addition to the amount spent upon the Chicago and the Dolphin, which were new ships; so that when you take out these amounts it would bring the expenditure down to $825,000 for the Bureau of Construction and Repair, which will be the amount of the current fiscal year as against $1,334,000 five years before that. I think that is an answer to the question of the gentleman from Maine about the expenditures for campaign purposes. Now, I ask to proceed with the bill section by section.

INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That the Sergeant-at-Arms shall cause to be printed and signed by the Speaker, three thousand tickets, entitling the holders thereof to admission to the House end of the Capitol on the 4th day of March, 1889, the tickets to be of a different color from those issued by the Senate, and no person shall be allowed to enter the House end of the Capitol without such tickets except Members and Delegates, Members and Delegates elect, ex-Members and Delegates, officers and employés of the House; that the Sergeant-at-Arms shall, on the 2d day of March, 1889, deliver to each Member and Delegate, and the Clerk, Doorkeeper, Postmaster, and each Official Reporter of debates, six of said tickets, and shall, if called for, deliver to each Member and Delegate elected to the Fifty-first Congress a like number.

It shall be the duty of the Sergeant-at-Arms to keep the main corridor leading north from the House to the Senate clear of all persons on that day, except members, officials, and employés of the House and Senate, and he is hereby directed to employ a sufficient force to execute this order.

Mr. BUCKALEW. I desire to inquire whether it is understood that members re-elected get an additional number.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Each member gets six tickets.

Mr. BUCKALEW. It reads so that they get more.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. It is six to each member.

Mr. MILLS. I suggest as an amendment that "no person shall receive more than six."

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I accept that.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of North Carolina. Is that for the main stands?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. No, sir; we have no authority over that.

Mr. HEARD. I desire to suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERMENTROUT] that it would be well to insert words providing, in substance, that the tickets shall be delivered only upon personal application of the party entitled thereto or upon his written order.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

Mr. HEARD. Recently I was informed by the Speaker that some parties not authorized applied, through pages, for tickets of admission to this Hall on the occasion of the counting of the electoral vote, and that the gentlemen in whose name the tickets were taken afterwards applied for them and other tickets had to be issued. Now, I believe that such a thing as that ought to be provided against by inserting language here which would limit the delivery of the tickets to the party entitled to them upon his personal application or upon his written order.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I will accept that amendment, and now I move the previous question.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. I understand that this Hall will hold about three thousand persons, and that the tickets have been distributed with reference to that fact?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Yes.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. I observe, further, that your resolution gives to one district twenty tickets while to another it gives only ten.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. How does the gentleman make that appear?

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. For this reason: A gentleman who is a sitting member here on this 2d day of March gets ten tickets——

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Six.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Well, six; and a member-elect also gets six.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Yes.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. That makes twelve for a district where there is a new member-elect, while another district which has re-elected its old member will get only six.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. How is that?

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Because there will be only one member entitled to tickets for that district. Now, I do not want to punish a district because it has been pleased to return the same gentleman a second time. [Laughter.] Therefore I think it would be only fair that to each district there should be apportioned so many tickets. If my successor was here I would divide my tickets with him, but I do not see why we two together should have double as many tickets as my friend from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE] whose constituents have re-elected him. [Laughter.]

Mr. ERMENTROUT. The committee considered that matter——

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. I would like to have the resolution so modified as to obviate the difficulty I have pointed out.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I would like to have my friend from Ohio [Mr. BUTTERWORTH] indicate how it can be done.

Mr. BOUTELLE. He has just done that.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. How is it to be done?

Mr. BOUTELLE. By assigning so many tickets to each district.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I think the resolution is all right as it is. I call the previous question.

Mr. BRUMM (to Mr. BUTTERWORTH). Your plan would discriminate against members who were not re-elected.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Not at all.

Mr. BRUMM. Yes, it would. I am entitled to as many tickets as any gentleman who is re-elected to the next Congress. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERMENTROUT].

Mr. CUMMINGS. I ask to have my amendment read.

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been moved, and unless the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ERMENTROUT] withdraws the motion the resolution can not be read.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I should like to know what privileges these tickets will give.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. The privileges of admission to this end of the Capitol.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. What will be going on in this end that will draw people here?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. It has been customary to admit no one into the Capitol on inauguration day except by ticket.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Then this is a mere sop which means nothing. The ticket does not admit the holder to the inauguration platform, I understand.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. No.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be still some misunderstanding as to what privileges will be conferred by a ticket of this kind. Does it admit to the inauguration ceremonies or only to this Hall?

Mr. ERMENTROUT. It simply gives entrance into the Capitol on the House end. The Senate has exclusive jurisdiction of the other end.

The SPEAKER. The Senate has adopted a programme for admission to the Senate end of the Capitol, where the inauguration ceremonies are to take place. The House has control only over the south end of the building.

The resolution was adopted—ayes 67, noes 7.

Mr. ERMENTROUT moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WHEELER. I rise to a privileged matter.

The SPEAKER. There is a matter before the House.

Mr. HERBERT. I call for the reading of the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 1, strike out the comma after "papers" and insert a semicolon.

The amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 19, insert "Electric-lighting plant: For installing the monitors Terror and Monadnock with electric-lighting plants, $45,000."

Mr. HERBERT. The committee recommend non-concurrence in this amendment and the transfer to another point in the bill of part of what is recommended by the Senate. I ask unanimous consent to non-concur in amendment No. 2.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, after line 19, insert "For increasing the electric-lighting plant of the Baltimore, to be immediately available, $2,600."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, after line 19, insert "For increasing the electric-lighting plant of the Charleston, to be immediately available, $2,600."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, after line 19, insert "For installing the gunboat Petrel with electric-lighting plant, to be immediately available, $5,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, after line 19, insert "For installing the dynamite-gun cruiser Vesuvius with electric-lighting plant, $5,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Seventh amendment: Insert the following:
"For installing the receiving-ship Vermont with an electric-lighting plant, $6,000."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to concur.

The amendment was concurred it.

Eighth amendment: After "building," in line 6, page 8, of the printed bill, insert "and."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to concur.

The amendment was concurred in.

Ninth amendment: Insert the following:
"For the construction of a building for use by the naval torpedo station and war college as consolidated by order of the Secretary of the Navy January 11, 1889, $100,000, to be immediately available."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to concur in the amendment of the Senate with an amendment adding, after the word "available," the words "said sum to be in full for all expenses of designing, erecting, and furnishing said building."

Mr. BOUTELLE. Is the question now on concurring in the Senate amendment or on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT]?

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Alabama, who moves to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I desire to move to non-concur in the original amendment of the Senate.

Mr. HERBERT. I ask the gentleman to withhold that question for a moment, until my amendment is acted upon.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment of Mr. HERBERT to the amendment of the Senate, it was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is now upon concurring in the amendment of the Senate as amended.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is the result of a controversy which has been going on for some time in regard to the establishment of a war college in Newport Harbor As members of the House are aware, a post-graduate course has for a number of years been pursued at Coasters' Harbor Island under authority of previous legislation, by an institution known as the War College, which I believe to be one of the most useful adjuncts of our naval service. The State of Rhode Island, as I understand, ceded Coasters' Harbor Island to the United States; and a building on the island was granted for the purposes of this college. The proposition is now to transfer the War College to what is known as Goat Island, and on that island to erect a structure to cost $100,000. I am strongly urged by distinguished officers of the naval service, including the author of this War College experiment, to oppose the transfer of the War College from Coasters' Harbor Island (which is well situated, which has a fine site, and is, I believe, a proper location for this building) to Goat Island, where the torpedo station is now located. There is no connection necessarily between this War College and a torpedo station; and the proposition to erect this large and expensive building upon this small island—a mere bowlder, so to speak, in Newport Harbor, when we have authority to use Coasters' Harbor Island, where there is a fine site, is, as one of my correspondents expresses it, very much like a proposition to put the Puritan's turret on the deck of the Yantic.

I am told that Goat Island is a narrow strip of land forming a sort of breakwater for the inner harbor, being less than half a mile long, with an average width of about 110 or 115 yards, and that it is already overcrowded with buildings for the purposes of the torpedo station. Coasters' Harbor Island, on the contrary, is a magnificent piece of property containing about 92 acres, with two or three fine sites, including the one on which there is now a building erected. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that Goat Island is not at all such a place as should be selected for the erection of a building so expensive as this. I am told by a gentleman familiar with the subject that there is absolutely no question of choice between them, and I am urged to ask this House to pause before fixing irrevocably the location of so expensive an establishment upon so inadequate a site, for officers in whose ability and judgment I repose great confidence assure me that no committee of Congress, if the matter were examined into, would ever think of making such a location.

In 1885 an appropriation was made of $45,000 for a "rigging-loft" and "drill-hall" on this island, and yet at this time, as I understand, they have transferred the naval training station to Coasters' Harbor Island; and a clipping from a newspaper, which I have here and which I commend to my friend from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO], who referred to the officers going over to Newport to take part in the German, says:

The building recently occupied by the War College is now used for training-station purposes, the singing classes having rooms on the first floor, and the classes in boxing and fencing being accommodated on the second floor.

Now, I believe implicitly, knowing that I differ with some few of the distinguished officers in the service, knowing also that I am in accord with a large number of the most distinguished officers, including Admirals Porter and Luce, than whom no more accomplished sailors exist or have ever graced our record, that this appropriation which has transferred the War College to Goat Island is a part of an enterprise which is resulting in overturning our training system as well. The occupancy of the large grounds on Coasters' Harbor Island for a training school has carried with it the taking of the old school-ship New Hampshire from her moorings and placing her alongside the dock, where she is tied up, fitted with electric lights, steam-heating apparatus, and, for all I know, a bicycle track, and the War College is occupied for the purpose of a singing school and for the boxing classes. The tendency is to take more and more the apprentices from the training-ships and from the ocean and get them as far inland as possible away from the proper school of the seamen of this country, and that is on board of the ship itself. These two things go side by side, as I understand it, and the location of the War College upon Goat Island is the complement of the plan of locating the apprentices' school upon Coasters' Harbor Island.

Mr. Speaker, I deprecate that tendency. I deprecate the tendency which leads to dismantling our old ships and sloops of war for use as training-ships, and on which our boys were taught to be seamen. I deprecate the plan which brings these ships from their moorings and ties them up to the wharves, and which takes the boys from the training-ships and puts them into these classes in schools not adapted to the requirements of the profession they are to be taught, but which have a tendency gradually to teach our young men to seek any kind of service except that upon the ocean. I believe the tendency is all wrong. I think we are getting away further and further from the proper policy in regard to the training of our officers and naval apprentices. So that we are reaching that condition which forcibly recalls the old homely song of the girl—

Oh, mother, may I go out to swim?
Yes, my darling daughter;
Hang your petticoats on the limb,
But don't go near the water.

[Laughter.]

I believe we should establish this War College on this large and sightly island where there is a fine location and ample room, and where the buildings would be creditably located, and then I want to see the training-ships taken away from their moorings by the wharf and put out where the boys can go to and from the vessel only by bending to the ashen oar and exercising some of the qualities of seamanship, and that is in harmony with the desires of the eminent officers of the Navy to whom I have already referred. And I want to see our old sloops, the craft of the olden time, restored to the waters, as they can be by a slight expenditure, and made to do duty as gymnasiums and training-schools for the sailors of the United States Navy.

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Speaker, I wish to reply briefly to the points made by the gentleman on the other side. The committee found, on investigating this matter, that there were two of these graded schools within a half mile of each other, one a torpedo school on Goat Island and the other the War College on Coasters' Harbor Island. Coasters' Harbor Island, with a suitable building upon it, was given by the State of Rhode Island for training-school purposes to the United States Government. But it so happens that one of these establishments was nearer to Newport than the other, and afforded better facilities for reaching that place, so that it was gradually taken possession of by the officers, and the uses for which it was originally intended were practically lost sight of. Here, then, we had two schools, two sets of officers, different clerks, different employés, and the question began to be agitated of the advisability of concentrating these, and the contest has been going on from that time until, during the last Congress, a bill was passed which authorized and empowered the Secretary of the Navy to concentrate and consolidate both of these schools into one, so we would have but one school and one set of officers. The efficiency of the War College will be facilitated by the arrangement, and not impaired or hampered, and the efficiency of the torpedo school has also increased, we believe, both being made more efficient by the consolidation; and the purpose of this is to confirm that act of the Secretary of the Navy. That is all this amendment seeks to do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. Speaker, I have some personal impressions concerning the proper site of the War College, and I believe that all the friends of that institution should certainly unite at this time in providing such means as will be to the interest of the War College. The amendment just now under consideration is one favored by the Navy Department. It will provide a proper building and accommodations for the use of the War College. The site proposed in that amendment is a very proper site.

My friend from Maine is mistaken to some extent concerning the size of the little island where the torpedo station is located. It covers an area of 27 acres, if I am correct, as I believe I am. It is something more than a mere bowlder in the harbor of Newport. It is not at present overcrowded with buildings. It is true that the torpedo station is located there, and, as I understand, the fact that the torpedo station is located there is considered by the Department as one reason why it is desirable to locate the War College at the same place, in order that in the course of instruction that is to be given in the War College there will be an opportunity to give objects lessons, which can be given at the torpedo station, of those matters which are elucidated there practically. I trust that those who are in favor of doing anything to provide for the interests of the War College will take the opportunity afforded here by the adoption of the proposed amendment.

Mr. HERBERT. I will state to the gentleman from Rhode Island that I understand that this little island contains 19 acres.

Mr. SPOONER. I was informed that it contained 27 acres.

Mr. BOUTELLE. In what I have said upon this subject, so far as I have been able to inform myself, I have expressed the sentiments of the men most prominently identified and most earnestly interested in the success of the War College. In regard to this auxiliary college and the abolition of our present training system, and for the establishment of a training system on Coasters' Harbor Island following the putting of our training-ships out of commission, I desire to cite the testimony of the Admiral of the Navy in a letter addressed to me last summer, which I was unable to use. He is certainly a gentleman whose record and experience are entitled to some consideration.

His letter is as follows:

OFFICE OF THE ADMIRAL, Washington, D. C., June 12, 1888.

DEAR SIR: Great efforts have been made to do away with the training-ships of the Navy, which for want of repairs are about being laid up.

This is all wrong. These vessels should never be allowed to go out of service as long as they can be kept together.

In this letter I will not go into an argument to demonstrate why it should be so, but I send you an article I once wrote on the subject, which you can fully appreciate from your long service in the Navy.

I think the article covers the ground. Please read it carefully, and submit it to the Naval Committee with my respects.

The deadliest blow that could be dealt to the apprentice system would be the substitution of steam-vessels for the magnificent sailing-sloops that have done so much for the system.

Seventy thousand dollars would put all the ships in thorough condition to last some years, and there ought to be a law passed that the act of August 5, 1882, should not apply to the practice-ships of the Navy.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, yours,

DAVID D. PORTER, Admiral.

Hon. CHARLES A. BOUTELLE, M. C.

I ask that the following document also be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks, following that letter:

NAVAL-APPRENTICE SYSTEM.

One of the best institutions in the Navy, although on a limited scale, is the apprentice system, or school, where boys are trained to become petty officers, seamen-gunners, and seamen. Like everything else in the Navy, this appendage to the service has had a continued struggle for existence, and one would suppose that instead of the training system being considered a necessity, the officer in charge, whose whole soul is enlisted in the matter, was receiving some private benefit from the appropriations necessary to keep this desirable institution afloat.

The training system is not only beneficial to the boys by giving them a practical education, but it is a most admirable school for officers. Nowhere else in the Navy can young officers acquire so readily those habits of thought so necessary in the service and which can only be acquired in sailing-vessels. A different state of things exists on board a sailing-vessel to what prevails on board a steamer. For the preservation of the former is required the quick eye, ready command, and prompt obedience, and habits of prompt obedience on the part of the embryo seamen can not well be obtained in any school but the sailing-ship.

The value of an apprentice system is shown by the time and money devoted to it by the British navy in order to keep up the supply of well-trained petty officers and seamen for that great organization. Our apprentice system is on a small scale compared with that of Great Britain, for where we have hundreds she has thousands of boys, and no pains are spared to attach them permanently to the service.

In some respects our apprentice system is better than that of Great Britain, particularly in our custom of using vessels propelled by sail alone, which keeps the attention of officers and men fixed upon seamanship, that most essential part of the naval profession. Without a complete knowledge of this branch neither officer nor sailor will ever be entirely efficient. The officer may be useful in ordinary times on board a steam-ship, and the sailor, having passed a considerable portion of his apprenticeship in hoisting ashes, may answer to fill up a gap on a topsail yard, but neither will be equal to the emergency if left to his own resources in time of great need.

None but a thorough seaman is fit to command a ship of war. In time of danger all his resources will be called in play; and to enable him to manage his ship with dexterity it is necessary that he should have the aid of the intelligent seaman—the product of the apprentice system—who perhaps a few years before was an idle city or country boy eating more than he earned. Views favorable to an apprentice system are gaining ground in Great Britain, and even while the five or six thousand boys who are intended for the royal navy will ultimately serve on board steam-ships, every effort is made to send none afloat who have not been brought up exclusively as seamen, for in the new class of vessels the engineer element is so abundant that it is absolutely necessary to leaven it with a modicum of old-time seamanship not learned from books, but by actual contact with the elements.

We have experienced much difficulty in filling vacancies in the Navy from the apprentices, owing to the fact that we aimed too high in the first place, requiring too much from the apprentice boy on his entering the service. He was to be of good stock, descendant, perhaps, of the Otises, Derbys, and Grays. Boys were selected who were the least fitted for the Navy, to whose parents hopes had been held out that their enlistment was the stepping-stone to high positions in the service. When the fallacy of such hopes became evident, the parents moved heaven and earth until their boys were discharged from their uncongenial employment.

How many hundreds of poor boys in the large cities would have been delighted to obtain the positions at which their more aristocratic brethren turned up their noses, and how much more aptitude they would have shown for the service. True policy would indicate that the farmer's son should be left to till the soil and follow in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessors, but the contrary policy has prevailed, and the waifs in the streets of our cities have received no encouragement to enlist in the Navy and fight for their country. Some persons seemed to think that every apprentice should be of the highest moral character before he could be permitted to go on board a ship of war lest he might contaminate the firemen and coal-heavers, but who knows what noble sailors these waifs we have mentioned would have made after having passed through the moral-reform school of the Navy?

In a great Christian country like the United States it is the duty of the Government to stretch out a hand and rescue a portion of the boys from perdition by placing them on board the receiving-ship New Hampshire at Coaster's Harbor Island, Newport, where with good example and under kind treatment they would improve morally, mentally, and physically. To vary the couplet of Pope a little, we might say:

'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is used, the boy's inclined.

As a general rule there is too great a desire on the part of commanding officers to try and introduce a higher system of education than is called for among the apprentices. To read, write, and cipher would be a boon that the ordinary apprentice boy would highly appreciate. He could learn that well in the few months he was attached to the receiving-ship, while the study of Neo-Platonism, cosmogony, dialectics, metempsychosis, logic, and conic sections had better be left to the Naval Academy where such things are affected, and where, perhaps, seamanship—the life of the Navy—may not be considered on a par with the high sciences.

I by no means object to the introduction of the farmers' sons into the naval-apprentice ship, with their sturdy limbs and moral attributes, but that has been run into the ground, to use a homely phrase. But 17 per cent. of all that class of boys have up to this time remained in the Navy, not enough in fact to make the necessary number of petty officers required for the service. Leaving out the want of aptitude for the service which generally induces the boys to leave when their apprenticeship is at an end, there are too few boys allowed by law and not enough to supply the ships of war with a sufficient number to fill up their quota, for the more of these boys a commanding officer can get to leaven the crowd of foreign seamen now on board an American ship of war the better the commanding officer feels, for it would scarcely be believed that the crews of our ships of war are generally made up of sailors from every part of the world, but mostly from the old Scandinavian race, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, etc., good reliable men who do not care what flag they sail under.

They are the same old Huns, Germans, Goths, and other barbarians who once debauched upon the plains of Italy and France and helped themselves to what did not belong to them. They come and enlist in our Navy, softened down in character, it is true, but they are the same free-lances as of old. They ship for money—they have no sentiment for flag or nationality, and possibly if it came to an action with a ship of their own or a neighboring nation they would haul down the American flag and hoist their own.

This is a contingency we should provide against, and we have the means of doing it through the vast number of American boys who are roaming the streets at will and who would consider Government employment a boon. But a few years ago one of our sloops of war, with a cosmopolitan crew, was anchored in the harbor of Ville Franche. The crew was composed of nineteen different nationalities, and so indifferent and inefficient was the organization that some wag painted on a board and hung in the gangway, "Ici on parle Anglais," like the signs hung out in Paris.

When our finest ship, the Trenton, lately went to sea, as fine a body of Goths, Germans, Huns, Norsemen, Gauls, Chinese, and other outside barbarians, softened down by time and civilization, as one could wish to see, went out in her. Out of the whole crew not more than eighty could speak the English language. Is this not a commentary upon the American Navy? Is it not a defect to be corrected? The thing wanted is a larger number of native apprentice boys and an enlargement of the convenience for their introduction into the Navy. The English have five line-of-battle ships with one brig-tender to each. There is also a hulk attached to each ship of the line for newly entered boys, and for various other matters. We have but one regular receiving-ship at Coasters' Harbor Island, and if our Navy is to be enlarged we should have larger accommodations for apprentice boys.

We have three sloops of war in which apprentices are trained previous to being transferred to a regular ship. This is the best feature in our training system, for the boys receive a training in seamanship. There is no steam here to interfere with the exercising. With a steam-capstan and steam-winch half a dozen men can get a vessel under way. An officer on deck, a man at the wheel, and one at the lead, with half a dozen on deck for general purposes, and the ship can go to sea with the rest of the crew in their hammocks. The simplicity of this maneuver may perhaps be cited to show the advantage steam has over seamanship, but in the case of the sailing-vessel, the entire crew, officers, seamen, boys, and all, must be on deck at their posts of duty and be keenly alive to all that is going on, quick to comprehend and full of alacrity and life to obey orders. There is a spirit of life here which is never seen in a steam-ship of war, the difference between a well man and a paralytic, for while in the practice ship there is a soul beaming from the eyes of every one on board, the seamen and boys in a steam-ship of war look on with apathy and idleness at machine work in which they have no part and which excites no enthusiasm.

Although the service performed in these practice ships of ours which sail to the coasts of Europe and all through the West Indies is not exactly that which is performed in the new-fashioned ship of war denuded of sail-power, yet the qualities developed by this service, be it remembered, are of the utmost value to the Navy on board the modern cruiser. The officer who can properly handle one of these ships of war can safely be trusted with the deck of the largest commerce-destroyer. To apprentice boys who have been trained in these ships the work of a steam-ship is mere child's play.

There is not an officer in the Navy who has served on board these training-ships of war who does not congratulate himself on the service he has passed in them and the experience he has gained, such experience as could be gained nowhere else, and although the original intention of establishing this little squadron was for the purpose of training boys, yet it has the double effect of serving as a training-school for officers, and it goes without saying that in the years to come the officers who have received this training will make the best commanders of steam-ships afloat.

The sailing-ship of war has no rival as a school of instruction. It is the school that has made the sailors of years gone by proverbial for strength, activity, readiness of resource, adaptability to circumstances, patience under severe trial, and contempt of danger. These are the qualities absolutely necessary in a true sailor, which will be essential in the future as heretofore in any class of vessel that may be used in the Navy.

What was it that gave the volunteer officers in our civil war such great value but the early training they received on sailing-vessels? That training produced as fine a body of men as ever went to sea. We could not have done without them any more than we can do without them in future wars, where they will prove to be a powerful factor. Notwithstanding the training system has stood the test of time and is without doubt the best of the kind afloat, though on a small scale, and has received the approval of some of the oldest and most distinguished officers who have spent a lifetime in the study and practice of the apprentice system, it is proposed to abolish the time-honored training-ships of war and put the whole system under steam.

It has taken years to build up the apprentice system on its present plan, and so far it has been properly cared for and the Navy is just beginning to reap the advantage of it. The greatest demand in the service is for seaman-gunners, and the high estimation in which that class of men is justly held proves conclusively not only the value of the plan hitherto pursued, but that it is necessary to consider carefully before making changes that may mar the service, if they do not destroy it.

Some persons may think that by making radical changes in a system they are making themselves the father of it, but they should reflect that we can not afford to surrender the high character for practical seamanship enjoyed by our Navy from the time of Paul Jones to the present day. If officers of the Navy do not try to maintain that character for the service, who will? A steam bark is no doubt a good thing to produce lazy boys and hybrid seamen, but give me—

A wet sheet and a flowing sea,
A wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail,
And bends the gallant mast.

In a letter received at the same time from the admiral of the Atlantic squadron is a recognition of the same thing by one of the most competent men living to-day to speak in regard to everything connected with the personnel of the Navy. And in his letter he utters an equally significant protest against this movement. This amendment is part of a movement to do away with our sailing-ship training-schools and substitute training on our steam-vessels in the future, and more and more tending to educate our seamen upon the land.

So earnest was Admiral Luce in the matter that he addressed me a letter from his flag-ship in last June to enter his protest against doing away with the training squadron of sailing-ships and authorizing training-schools and says:

The training squadron is a school of practical seamanship, not a school of gunnery. The young seaman gets all the great-gun practice he needs in the general service with modern guns. I hope you will save the squadron, which is now all but gone.

He utters his protest against this tendency to do away with our training-school system, under which the apprentices of the Navy were being educated upon salt water to that familiarity with the winds and waves as the best school in which to educate them in handling a ship. It is proposed to locate this building on Goat Island, which carries with it the establishment of Coasters' Harbor Island as a rendezvous of the training system; and to that, for one, I am opposed.

Admiral Luce writes:

NEW YORK, June 29, 1888.

DEAR CAPTAIN BOUTELLE: If Congress does not come to our aid it is almost certain that the very important school of practical seamanship known as the training squadron will soon become extinct. It is believed that the House Naval Committee was very favorably disposed toward the training squadron, and had expressed a determination to appropriate $50,000 for the repairs of the Portsmouth, Saratoga, and Jamestown. That sum would have been ample to put those ships in a condition to run for several years longer, but the appropriation bill as passed by the House contains no item of that kind. My object in writing you now is to ask if you can not even now save the training squadron by an appropriation sufficient to put the three ships above referred to in repair.

In this connection I beg leave to call your attention to House bill 10556, page 6, line 131, which appropriates $50,000 for modern guns and ammunition for instructing the apprentices of the training squadron. It seems to me that there must be some mistake about this, for Congress could hardly intend to spend $50,000 for guns for the training squadron, when the squadron itself is about to be wiped out. If that $50,000 could be devoted to putting the training-ships in repair there will be no difficulty in getting the guns when they are wanted.

Very respectfully,

S. B. LUCE,
Rear-Admiral United States Navy,
Commanding United States Naval Force on North Atlantic Station.

Hon. CHARLES A. BOUTELLE.

P. S.—The training squadron is a school of practical seamanship, not a school of gunnery. The young seaman gets all the great-gun practice he needs in the general service with modern guns. I hope you will save the squadron, which is now all but gone.

S. B. L.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced the passage of bills of the House of the following titles with amendments; requested conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed on each of the bills Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE as conferees on its part:

A bill (H. R. 11735) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Fort Smith and Choctaw Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Poteau River, in the Choctaw Nation, near Fort Smith, Ark.;"

A bill (H. R. 12389) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Osage River at some accessible point in the county of Benton, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (H. R. 12524) to authorize the construction of a bridge over Green and Barren Rivers, in the State of Kentucky, by the Henderson State Line Railroad Company;

A bill (H. R. 10721) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River at or near Cummings Landing, Lincoln County, Ark.; and

A bill (H. R. 11782) to approve and ratify the construction by the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company of a bridge over the Red River, at Shreveport, La., and a bridge over the Ouachita River, at Monroe, La., and to authorize said railroad company to maintain said bridges over said water ways, subject to certain stipulations and conditions.

It also announced that the Senate had passed a bill (S. 3995) to authorize the Montgomery and Sylacauga Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Tallapoosa River; in which concurrence was requested.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HERBERT. I hope that we may have a vote now, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE] to non-concur.

The motion was rejected—ayes 35, noes 72.

The amendment was then concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 13, line 14, strike out "325" and insert "754."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to concur in that amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment numbered 11, page 13, line 7, strike out "Home" and insert "Asylum."

Mr. HERBERT. Amendments 11, 12, and 13 are the same. The House bill calls the Naval Asylum the Naval Home. The Senate has struck that out. There is a petition from the occupants of the institution that it be called the Naval Home instead of the Naval Asylum, and as no expenditure of money is involved the committee think there is no good reason why the request should not be granted. I therefore move to non-concur in those three amendments.

The amendments were non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment numbered 14, page 14, line 4, strike out "twelve" and insert "seventeen."

The amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment numbered 15, page 15, strike out all after "clothing," in line 15, down to and including line 22, and insert: "For provisions for the seamen and marines, commuted rations for officers, naval cadets, seamen, and marines, and commuted rations stopped on account of sick in hospital and credited to the hospital fund, $965,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 16: Page 15, line 24, after "ships," insert "$11,000."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 17: Page 15, line 25, after "store-houses," insert "and paymasters' offices in yards."

Amendment 18: Page 15, line 25, strike out "not to exceed ninety" and insert "seventy-nine."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to non-concur in both those amendments.

The amendments were non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 19: Page 16, strike out lines from 8 to 21 inclusive.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 20: Page 19, at the end of line 15, insert:

"And for the purpose of utilizing accumulated naval supplies, the transfer is authorized, after requisition upon the Paymaster-General of the Navy, of any supplies belonging to the bureau and available for the use of another, without reimbursement therefor by the bureau receiving the supplies so transferred: Provided, That supplies obtained for a specific object and still needed therefor, and supplies bought within the fiscal year in which the requisition is made, and provisions, clothing, and small stores shall not be subject to transfer without charge under the terms of this act."

The amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 21: Page 19, line 27, strike out "one million" and insert "nine hundred thousand."

Amendment 22: Page 19, line —, strike out all after the word "dollars" down to and including the word "available."

The amendments were non-concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 23: Page 22, line 2, strike out "the navy-yard" and insert "navy-yards."

The amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 24: Page 25, strike out lines 22 and 23.

The amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 25: Page 25, after line 23, insert:

"For the purchase of the land and buildings thereon, situated adjacent to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and between the Academy grounds and the Naval Hospital grounds, a sum not exceeding $90,000: Provided, however, That the Secretary of the Navy may, if he deems it for the best interests of the United States, proceed and acquire title to said land and buildings by condemnation thereof by judicial proceedings to be commenced in the appropriate circuit court of the United States, which court shall, for the purpose of ascertaining the true value of said land, appoint three commissioners, who shall be competent and disinterested appraisers, and all the proceedings for the condemnation aforesaid shall be in accordance, except as herein provided, with the act of Congress of August 1, 1888, entitled 'An act to authorize condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes.'"

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Twenty-sixth amendment: In lines 1 and 2, page 37 of the printed bill, strike out "$94.20" and insert "$93.35."

Mr. HERBERT. I move concurrence in this amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

Twenty-seventh amendment: In lines 13 and 14, page 37, of the printed bill, strike out "$9.20" and insert "$8.25."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to concur in this amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

Twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth amendments: In the paragraph relative to "transportation and recruiting Marine Corps," strike out "$12,500, of which sum $2,500 shall be immediately available," and insert "$10,000."

Mr. HERBERT. I move concurrence in these amendments.

The amendments were concurred in.

Thirtieth amendment: In lines 2, 3, and 4, page 40 of the printed bill, strike out "per diem of enlisted men employed on constant labor for a period of not less than ten days."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to non-concur.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Thirty-first amendment: In the paragraph providing for the "increase of the Navy," strike out in lines 2, 3, 4, and 5, page 42 of the printed bill, the words, "and to be constructed according to plans and specifications to be furnished to the Navy Department by Hon. JOHN R. THOMAS, of Illinois," and insert "approved and recommended by a naval board in their report to the Secretary of the Navy, and by him referred to and approved in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives, dated January 9, 1889, and to be constructed according to plans and specifications furnished by the Navy Department."

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, when this question was under consideration before in the House, I made such observations as I felt called upon to make; and at this time I desire simply to say that when this matter came up in the Senate, attention was called to the question of horse-power and speed-premium; and when the bill again reached the House it had been so amended as to require that the proposed vessel should show a maximum speed of not less than 19 knots per hour, with a provision that the contractor should receive a premium of $50,000 for every quarter knot above 19, and that there should be deducted from the contract price $50,000 for every quarter knot that she should fall short of that speed. Not being myself, or pretending to be, an expert in naval architecture I am obliged to fall back upon the statements which were made in the other branch of Congress when this matter came up.

The statement was there made that this vessel with her displacement and her horse-power ought to maintain a speed of 19 knots, and that therefore it would not be proper to offer a premium of $50,000 for every quarter knot above 17 knots. I think the computation was made that on this basis, if this vessel ought naturally to attain a speed of 19 knots, the premium of $50,000 for each quarter knot above 17 would carry with it a bounty of $400,000 for bringing the ship up to the speed which she ought to reach. When that was stated in the Senate the member of the Senate Naval Committee in charge of the bill immediately accepted the suggestion, stating that it could not have been intended to incorporate in the bill an obsolete rate of speed; that we have ceased to appropriate for ships of as low a speed as 17 knots; that there was no reason why this vessel should not make 19 knots an hour; and on his motion "17 knots" was stricken out and "19 knots" inserted.

Now, I was not present (not being a member of the subcommittee) when the evidence was taken upon which the House Naval Committee have restored this provision, offering a bonus of $50,000 for every quarter knot above 17; therefore I do not know how strong the testimony may have been upon this point. I have understood it to have been stated that this vessel should not reasonably be expected to make more than 17 knots, because she is an armored ship. But I find that the Texas, which approximates somewhat to this proposed vessel (having a length of 290 feet as against 235 on the proposed ship; 64 feet 1 inch beam as against 55; 22 feet 6 inches mean draught as against 14 feet 6 inches; 6,300 tons displacement as against 3,030 tons, and 8,600 horse-power as against 7,500), is expected to show a speed of 17 knots. Now, if the Texas with 6,300 tons displacement and 8,600 horse-power ought to make a speed of 17 knots ought not this other vessel of 3,030 tons displacement and 7,500 horse-power to make more than 17 knots? I do not know.

It is not a question which falls within the scope of my professional experience. And the fact it is proposed to fix in this bill detailed limitations and specifications concerning the construction of a vessel to cost a million and a half of dollars, yes, $1,900,000, if the bonus runs up so high, is gloriously illustrated by this attempt of the Senate and House of Representatives to fix the maximum of speed that a vessel ought to reach and then offering a premium of $50,000 for every quarter of a knot above a certain rate developed. It seems to me it emphasizes my criticism of this legislation, that Congress should confine itself to the appropriation of money, indicating in a general way the character and type and size and shape, and then leave to the Department and its professional experts the fixing of the terms of the contract.

In accordance with the action in the Senate on such information as I have, I move to concur.

Mr. HERBERT. So far as I know, the gentleman from Maine is the only member of the committee who is in favor of concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Thirty-second and thirty-third amendments: Strike out "17" and insert "19;" so it will read:

"The contract for the construction of said cruising monitor, her boilers, engines, and machinery, shall contain provisions to the effect that, under conditions to be prescribed by the Navy Department, the contractor shall guaranty that the collective horse-power developed by the engines of said vessel shall equal 7,500 indicated horse-power, and that said vessel when completed and tested for speed, under conditions to be prescribed by the Navy Department, shall exhibit a maximum speed of not less than 19 knots per hour; and the contract for said vessel shall contain a further provision that for every quarter of knot of speed so exhibited above said guaranty of 19 knots the contractor shall receive a premium, over and above the contract price, of $50,000, and for every quarter knot that said vessel fails of reaching said guarantied speed there shall be deducted from the contract price the sum of $50,000. The material, boilers, engines, and machinery shall be of domestic manufacture and of the latest and most approved quality and type."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to non-concur.

The amendments were non-concurred in.

Thirty-fourth amendment: Insert as follows:

"The President is hereby further authorized to have constructed by contract two steel cruisers or gunboats of the most approved type, of 800 to 1,200 tons displacement, to cost in the aggregate, exclusive of armament, not more than $700,000; one steel cruiser of about 2,000 tons displacement, at a cost not to exceed $700,000, exclusive of armament and any premium that may be paid for increased speed; and one ram for harbor defense of the type approved by the naval advisory board in their report to the Secretary of the Navy of November 7, 1881."

Mr. HERBERT moved to non-concur.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Thirty-fifth amendment: Insert as follows:

"The provisions of the act of September 7, 1888, relating to premiums or deductions for increase or decrease of speed over or under that guarantied by the contractor building the said 2,000-ton cruiser shall be observed and followed."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to non-concur.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Thirty-sixth amendment: Insert as follows:

"The act of August 3, 1886, entitled 'An act to increase the naval establishment,' so far as applicable, shall govern the construction of the two steel cruisers or gunboats, the 2,000-ton cruiser, and the ram herein authorized; and all of said vessels shall be of domestic manufacture."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to non-concur.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I would like to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs what is the character of the ram provided for in the thirty-fourth amendment of the Senate?

Mr. HERBERT. The Naval Board of 1881 spoke in general terms of a ram. At that time Admiral Ammen had devised a ram which he presented to the board, but the board did not specify any particular ram. It spoke in one place of a ram making 13½ knots an hour. The reference in the report of 1881 was supplemented by the report of the board of 1882 of a ram making 13 knots an hour. We have recommended non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Thirty-seventh amendment: Insert as follows:

"To enable the Secretary of the Navy to test and, if found satisfactory, to purchase three or more rapid-fire rapid-twist 1-pounder breech-loading rifled guns, and an equal number of the same type of 3-pounder guns, and an equal number of the same type of 32-pounder guns, as the Secretary of the Navy may designate, said test to be made with the cartridge known as the reinforce cartridge, and for such purpose the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated."

Mr. HERBERT. I move non-concurrence.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, I hope on further consideration the House will agree to concur in that amendment. It is important. In the Army bill an appropriation has been made for a like purpose. The purpose is to produce gradual discharge of powder in the gun, by which we can obtain high power without excessive strain. This appropriation has the same object in view for the Navy. These experiments may not succeed, but if they do it will put us at the head of all other powers without subjecting us to the enormous expense which other nations have incurred to secure this result.

Mr. HERBERT. In reply to what the gentleman from Illinois has said I want to be heard briefly. If the experiment which is proposed shall succeed, under the law as provided here by the Senate amendment we would have no possible advantage over any other nation who chose to avail itself of the same patents. The gentleman says it would place us far ahead of them. On the contrary, it would result simply in this, that we would have developed at the expense of the United States, without attaching any other conditions whatever to it, a patent belonging to a gentleman or to a company, who would have the right to sell thereafter to the United States at any price they might see proper to fix, as well as to any other government who chose to purchase, the very same guns that had been successfully tested here, without any expense to them for development on their part, but the whole expenditure borne by the people of the United States.

Mr. ADAMS. But I did not say that the gentleman should concur without reasonable limitation. It occurred to me that we had done the same thing with regard to the Vesuvius.

But I make no motion in regard to the amendment.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The Clerk read amendment numbered 38, as follows:

Strike out, in the paragraph relating to "construction and steam machinery," on page 45 of the printed bill, the words "three million five hundred thousand dollars" and insert the words "five million dollars."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to non-concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HERBERT. At this point, Mr. Speaker, I move to add, after the word "dollars" in this paragraph, what I send to the desk. This is a transfer, as I gave notice this morning, from a previous page of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Where does the gentleman propose to insert this?

Mr. HERBERT. Immediately after the word "dollars," in the paragraph on which we have just taken action, on page 45 of the bill.

The SPEAKER. But the House has non-concurred in the Senate amendment and there is nothing here to amend.

Mr. HERBERT. It did non-concur; but this is simply a transfer from a previous portion of the bill of a provision which should be incorporated here.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman, however, is endeavoring to amend a portion of the bill which has been agreed to by both Houses.

Mr. HERBERT. I think I can make it clear to the Chair. When we reached the Senate amendments relating to the electric plants for certain vessels I moved to non-concur, stating at the time that a portion of the amendments should be transferred to the proper bureau over on this page. Our non-concurrence at the time was with the understanding of the House that these amendments were to be inserted in some section of the bill where they properly belonged. Certainly it would seem to be within the power of the House to consider the amendments now when that understanding was had in regard to them. We desire, in other words, to concur in a part of the Senate amendments to the electric plants for certain ships and non-concur in other words.

The SPEAKER. Upon the gentleman's motion the House has just non-concurred in the Senate amendment here.

Mr. HERBERT. Yes; but it is not to the Senate amendment that I propose to add this, but simply to transfer it from a portion of the bill where it had been improperly placed by the Senate over to this point.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, of course, will not make any objection, but will suggest that it can only be done by unanimous consent, and then it will change the bill as the Senate passed it.

Mr. HERBERT. I ask unanimous consent to insert it here.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will suggest this difficulty: Suppose the Senate should take the amendment up and agree to it; the gentleman will see that it would bring about a very awkward situation. It might be done in conference.

Mr. HERBERT. Very well, I will omit it for the present, and will arrange to have it inserted in the conference committee.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that would be the better plan.

Mr. HERBERT. Then I will not ask the reading of it at present, but will withhold it and insert it in conference.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment numbered 39, as follows:

Under the head of "armament," on pages 45 and 46 of the bill, strike out the sum of "$1,600,000" and insert "$3,000,000."

Mr. HERBERT. I move to non-concur.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, before we pass entirely from the consideration of this bill, it is perhaps proper that I should say a word in reference to the remarks of the chairman about the expenditures in the navy-yards of the country during political campaigns. I am not going into it at any great length, because it is not perhaps a very profitable subject of discussion now when the hours are so short; but I think it proper to call the attention of the House to some facts in connection with it, particularly the fact that there is a very marked contrast between the condition of things under which expenditures were made in the navy-yards this year for alleged repairs and alterations of vessels from that which has characterized the action of former parties to which he refers.

We are to-day engaged spending millions of money in the construction of modern steel war ships on liberal appropriations by private contract, and in two instances preparing to build some vessels in the navy-yards. To-day there has not been a particle done in connection with the rebuilding or re-establishment of the Navy in the navy-yards excepting laying the keel-blocks of the Texas and some slight work upon the ironclad Maine in New York. Therefore the amount of expenditure this year is glaringly large, because it has been almost entirely devoted to expenditures upon old wooden ships that have been discarded, which have been replaced by modern vessels, and under an entirely different policy from that which the Republican party were compelled to pursue when there was a refusal to appropriate money enough for repairs.

Mr. HERBERT. I hope my colleague will yield now. We have only two minutes before we shall have to take a recess.

The SPEAKER. The hour is not fixed at which the House is to take a recess.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I simply wish to state the figures and let them go into the RECORD with those of my colleague, the chairman of the committee. There were expended in the navy-yards of the United States almost entirely for the repair of wooden ships in July last sixty-two thousand and odd hundred dollars; in August, $65,000; in September, $103,600; in October, $141,087; in November, $58,745; in December, $45,369. And if you will follow the wave, with the rise and decline, you will follow pretty nearly the exigencies of the late campaign. The entire appropriation for these six months I find aggregated $486,796.18. We were left with a balance of $86,818 on hand, and a few days ago we were compelled to appropriate $150,000 to make up for the deficiency in that Department. This is shown in the following table furnished by the Secretary of the Navy February 8, 1889, in response to a resolution of the Senate:

Expenditures for labor in navy-yards for each of the first six months of the present fiscal year from the appropriation for the construction and repair of vessels, together with a statement of the unexpended balance of said appropriation on the 1st day of January, 1889.

Navy-yard.	July.	August.	September.	October.	November.	December.	Total.
Kittery	$6,249.75	$7,223.31	$11,841.24	$16,954.85	$8,315.08	$9,080.96	$59,665.19
Boston	1,140.62	1,288.02	1,611.61	1,728.49	938.75	1,098.92	7,806.41
New York	26,000.00	30,000.00	39,770.89	62,768.35	28,292.26	12,694.50	199,526.00
League Island	2,893.42	2,482.74	2,541.14	3,992.61	1,782.61	1,240.12	14,932.64
Washington	1,779.47	2,147.50	1,870.02	2,481.18	189.68	459.20	8,927.05
Norfolk	7,046.48	10,610.23	20,042.71	22,278.30	9,813.05	12,614.59	82,405.36
Pensacola	448.19	464.48	378.25	420.60	299.79	358.96	2,367.27
Mare Island	16,932.77	21,285.48	25,547.88	30,463.61	9,113.82	7,882.70	111,166.26
Total	62,490.70	75,501.76	103,600.74	141,087.99	58,745.04	45,369.95	486,796.18

Unexpended balance, C. and R., 1888-'89, January 1, 1889	$259,575.97
Less bureau indebtedness on account of contracts, requisitions, etc.	172,757.97
Balance	86,818.00

Mr. MCADOO. I will not tire the House with any explanation, but it is due to this side of the House and to the present Secretary of the Navy that there should be printed in the RECORD figures and facts in reference to what the gentleman has said. I make this one statement. The gentleman has spoken of the Atlanta, which was built under the former administration.

Mr. BOUTELLE. The Atlanta?

Mr. MCADOO. You spoke of that during the afternoon. Out of the regular appropriation for the Bureau of Construction and Repair there was expended $30,580 in taking out the "old and decayed sills" that had been put in her, which were unfit for use; and that money was expended upon the new ships and not upon old ones.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Decayed what?

Mr. MCADOO. To take out the "old and decayed sills of the gun-ports." I simply state to the House that out of the amount given in lump to the Bureau of Construction there was given to new ships $162,643.60.

Mr. BOUTELLE. What were these decayed sills?

Mr. MCADOO. They were decayed sills of the gun-ports.

Mr. BOUTELLE. What were they?

Mr. MCADOO. Sills.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Sills of what?

Mr. MCADOO. They were cast-iron sills that should have been steel.

Mr. BOUTELLE. And they became decayed?

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the amendments will be non-concurred in and a conference requested.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT], the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO], and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS] as conferees.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOLMES. I call up as a privileged matter the bill (H. R. 1368) "to quiet title of settlers on the Des Moines River lands, in the State of Iowa, and for other purposes," with the President's veto thereon.

Mr. CRISP. Upon that I raise the question of consideration for the purpose of presenting conference reports.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia presents a conference report, which, under the rules of the House, is of superior privilege, and suspends the motion of the gentleman from Iowa for the present.

Mr. MILLS. We have a standing order for an evening session, commencing at 7.30 p. m., and it will therefore be necessary to take a recess in a short time. I want to move that the order be modified, so that it shall not only be for the consideration of bills from the Committee on the District of Columbia not objected to——

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It also includes the acceptance of the Cass and Muhlenburg statues.

Mr. MILLS. I want to complete my statement. I want it to include conference reports.

Mr. RANDALL. I think that would be in order without present mention.

Mr. MILLS. I want it understood that there are a number of appropriation bills now before Congress yet to be acted upon, including the naval, Post-Office, Indian, deficiency, and sundry civil bills, and there should be provision made for conference reports to be taken up during the night session.

Mr. RANDALL. I maintain that conference reports can come in anyhow.

Mr. HOLMES (to Mr. MILLS). I will ask you to incorporate in your motion a provision that the bill which I desire to call up be made the special order for 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. MILLS. I will accept that.

Mr. RANDALL. I object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Iowa that a conference report is of superior privilege and suspends all proceeding upon the matter called up by him until disposed of.

LIGHT-HOUSE STATION ON ST. CATHARINE ISLAND, GEORGIA.

Mr. CRISP. These are reports from the committees of conference and will not take but five minutes. There are four or five of them.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12324) making appropriations for the establishment of a light-house station on St. Catharine Island, State of Georgia, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
T. H. B. BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

T. W. PALMER,
S. M. CULLOM,
M. W. RANSOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is the reading of the statement required?

Several MEMBERS. No.

Mr. CRISP. The bill is exactly as it passed the House.

The statement is as follows:

STATEMENT OF THE MANAGERS ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE.

Your conferees report that the Senate recedes from its amendment to H. R. 12324, which consisted in making an appropriation for the light-house which was proposed to be established. The agreement reported by the conferees leaves the House bill in the state in which it passed the House.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
TH. H. BAYLY BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12430) making an appropriation for a light and fog-signal at Humboldt, Cal., and light-ship near wreck of steam-ship Oregon, in New York Harbor, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
T. H. B. BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

T. W. PALMER,
S. M. CULLOM,
M. W. RANSOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement is as follows:

STATEMENT OF THE MANAGERS OF THE HOUSE.

Your conferees report that the Senate recedes from its amendment to H. R. 12430, which provided for an appropriation to construct the proposed light-house, thus leaving the bill as passed by the House.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
TH. H. BAYLY BBOWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

LIGHT-HOUSE, OYSTER-BED SHOALS.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10832) for the establishment of a light-house and fog-bell on Oyster-Bed Shoals, in the Hudson River, New York, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
T. H. B. BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

T. W. PALMER,
S. M. CULLOM,
M. W. RANSOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The managers on the part of the House submitted the following statement:

STATEMENT OF THE MANAGERS ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE.

Your conferees report that the Senate recedes from its amendment to H. R. 10832, which consisted in making an appropriation for the light-house to be erected, thus leaving the House bill in its original shape.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
TH. H. BAYLY BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

LIGHT-HOUSES ON THE GREAT LAKES.

The conference report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11678) providing for the erection of sundry light-houses and fog-signals in Lakes Erie, Huron, Michigan, and Superior, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
T. H. B. BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

T. W. PALMER,
S. M. CULLOM,
M. W. RANSOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The managers on the part of the House submitted the following statement:

STATEMENT OF THE MANAGERS ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE.

Your conferees report that the action of the Senate in receding from their amendment to H. R. 11678, which provided for making appropriations for the various lights proposed to be erected, leaves the bill as passed by the House.

MARTIN L. CLARDY,
M. D. LAGAN,
TH. H. BAYLY BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. CRISP moved to reconsider the votes by which the conference reports were severally agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN SOLDIERS.

Mr. STEELE. I desire to present a conference report.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R 6106) for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House of Representatives agree to the amendment of the Senate to the said bill with amendment as follows: At the end of section 2 of the amendment add: "Or was prevented from so returning by reason of such wounds, injuries, or diseases before such muster-out or expiration of service.

"3. That such soldier was a minor, and was enlisted without the consent of his parent or guardian and was released or discharged from such service by the order or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction in habeas corpus or other proper judicial proceedings, and in any such case no pay, allowance, bounty, or pension shall be allowed or granted."

Strike out section 5 of the amendment.

Strike out in section 9, line 2 of the amendment, the words "section 7 of."

And the Senate agree to the same.

R. W. TOWNSHEND,
GEO. W. STEELE,
Managers on the part of theHouse.

JOSEPH R. HAWLEY,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. STEELE moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

On motion of Mr. BLOUNT, the amendments of the Senate to the Post-Office appropriation bill (H. R. 12490) were non-concurred in, the request of the Senate for a conference was agreed to, and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. BLOUNT, Mr. DOCKERY, and Mr. BINGHAM.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI NEAR SIOUX CITY.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a conference report.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same.

CHAS. F. CRISP,
ALBERT R. ANDERSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

G. G. VEST,
P. SAWYER,
JAS. F. WILSON,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The report of the committee of conference was adopted.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SIOUX RESERVATION, DAKOTA.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11970) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 1.

That the House recede from its amendments to all the amendments of the Senate except those numbered 1 and 2, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Leave in the bill the words proposed to be stricken out, and strike out of the amendment the words proposed to be inserted, and in lines 10, 11, and 12, on page 2 of the bill, strike out the words "the source of the principal branch of Pass Creek; thence due north to the said source of the said principal branch of Pass Creek; thence down Pass Creek to White River," and insert in lieu thereof the words "the mouth of Black Pipe Creek; thence due north to the mouth of Black Pipe Creek;" and the Senate agree to the same.

S. W. PEEL,
KNUTE NELSON,
JNO. M. ALLEN,
Managers on the part of the House.

H. L. DAWES,
JAS. K. JONES,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The managers of the conference on the part of the House submitted the following STATEMENT.

The managers upon the part of the House upon the disagreement of the two Houses on Senate amendments to H. R. 11970 submit the following:

Amendments 1 and 2 relate to the boundaries of Pine Ridge, Rosebud, and Standing Rock reservations. The effect will be to enlarge Pine Ridge reservation some 50,000 acres.

Amendment 3 changes distance to conform to amendments 1 and 2.

Amendment 4 restricts allotments to Santee Sioux in Nebraska who have not received allotments heretofore.

Amendment 5 conforms the bill to the act known as the general allotment.

Amendment No. 6 leaves title of the six smaller reservations to the Indians receiving rations at each reservation, respectively, as stipulated in the treaty of 1868.

No. 7 is merely verbal.

No. 8 changes phraseology of the submission clause, but makes no change in the effect or substance.

No. 9 conforms present bill to the bill passed on same subject last session of present Congress in regard to right of way to certain railroads through said Indian reservation.

No. 10 is to same effect.

No. 11 is the same.

No. 12 changes per capita payment to each Indian taking allotments from twenty to fifty dollars.

No. 13 is change of phraseology merely; protects rights of Santee and Flandreau, Sioux, and Ponca in the proceeds of the lands.

No. 14 requires religious denominations to pay $1.25 instead of 50 cents per acre for lands taken or held by them.

No. 15 strikes out line 6 down to word "acre" in line 9, which is in bill at another place.

No. 16 leaves the law regulating town sites in force as now.

No. 17 gives the Indians $1.25 for the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections or school lands instead of 50 cents.

No. 18 merely verbal.

No. 19 authorizes Secretary of the Interior to pay men under Chief Red Cloud for ponies taken from them by the United States as allowed by the Department.

No. 20 merely renumbers a section.

No. 21 provides new section, provides money to carry out the act.

No. 22 repeals all acts in conflict with this act.

All of which the managers recommend to the House and ask that the report be adopted.

S. W. PEEL,
KNUTE NELSON.

The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. PEEL moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WHEELER. I rise to a privileged question.

The SPEAKER. There is already a privileged question before the House. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HOLMES] has called up for consideration a veto message of the President of the United States.

Mr. MILLS. I want to ask unanimous consent that at the session to-night, after District business is disposed of, conference reports on appropriation bills may be received, and that the hour of adjournment be extended sufficiently for that purpose.

Mr. RANDALL. I ask the gentleman from Texas to modify his proposition so that conference reports may be received at any time this evening. I think they would be in order at any rate.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is in some doubt on that point, because the order for the evening session specifies the business to be transacted, and it might be construed as excluding all other business. Unanimous consent is asked that at any time during the session this evening conference reports on appropriation bills may be presented.

Mr. DUNHAM. Let us have the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the regular order.

Mr. CRISP. I desire to raise the question of consideration against the measure called up by the gentleman from Iowa.

The SPEAKER. The Chair so understands. The title of the bill which the gentleman from Iowa calls up will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1368) to quiet title of settlers on Des Moines River lands, in the State of Iowa, and for other purposes.

Mr. CRISP. I raise the question of consideration, my object being to bring up the contested-election case.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] raises the question of consideration, which is not debatable.

Mr. HOLMES. I rise to a point of order.

Mr. MILLS. I move that the House now take a recess till half past 7 o'clock to-night.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa will state his point of order.

Mr. HOLMES. I claimed the floor some time ago, and gave way for conference reports; and I submit that the question of consideration now raised by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] in antagonism to this bill comes too late.

The SPEAKER. It does not.

Mr. CRISP. The bill has not yet been read.

The SPEAKER. The time to raise the question of consideration is really after the measure has been read. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] moves that the House now take a recess until half past 7 o'clock to-night for business under the special order.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. MILLS, there were—ayes 61, noes 43.

Mr. GEAR. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. HOLMES. I desire to make the proposition that this bill be fixed as a special order for to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

Mr. RANDALL. I can not agree to that.

Mr. MILLS. Let my friend from Iowa be content with the fact that his bill is privileged and can be called up in the morning.

Mr. WEAVER. But that privilege has been sacrificed here at the expense of seven or eight hundred people of our State.

Mr. MILLS. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I hope that will not be agreed to; there is already an order for a recess.

The question being taken, the motion to adjourn was not agreed to; there being—ayes 44, noes 60.

Mr. MILLS. I move that the House take a recess until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER. The motion for a recess is now pending. The point of no quorum being raised, the Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GEAR] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. The question is, Will the House now take a recess until seven and a half o'clock?

The tellers took their places and proceeded with the count.

Mr. HOLMES (before the tellers had reported). I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry: Will this question come up to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock by virtue of the standing that it now has?

The SPEAKER. It would. When the regular order of business is resumed this matter would be before the House, subject, of course, to the question of consideration which the gentleman from Georgia has raised.

Mr. WHEELER. I hope the gentleman from Iowa will consent to allow me to get through a small pension bill.

Mr. GEAR. I withdraw the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER (at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.). The gentleman from Iowa withdraws the point of no quorum. The ayes have it; and the House takes a recess until half past 7 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House (at 7 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) was called to order by Mr. DOCKERY, who directed the reading of the following communication:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
February 28, 1889.

I hereby designate Hon. A. M. DOCKERY to preside as Speaker pro tempore at the session of the House this evening.

JNO. G. CARLISLE, Speaker.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the order under which the House reassembles this evening.

The Clerk read as follows:

That on Thursday, the 28th instant, the House shall take a recess until 7.30 o'clock p. m., the evening session to be given to the consideration of the following business:

1. Not exceeding one hour to the ceremonies relating to the acceptance of the Cass and Muhlenberg statues.

2. To the business reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, together with conference reports on bills heretofore reported by said committee, not including the national park bill or the trust bills.

The session not to continue beyond 10.30 o'clock p. m.

STATUES OF MUHLENBERG AND FULTON.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Mr. Speaker, I present for adoption the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas by an act of Congress approved the 2d day of July, 1864, the President of the United States is authorized to invite each of the States to provide and furnish statues in marble or bronze, not exceeding two in number for each State, of deceased persons who have been citizens thereof and illustrious for their historic renown or their distinguished civil or military services, such as each State may determine to be worthy of that national commemoration, and when so furnished the same shall be placed in the old Hall of the House of Representatives in the Capitol of the United States, which is set apart, or so much as may be necessary, as the National Statuary Hall for the purpose therein indicated; and

Whereas the State of Pennsylvania has provided the statues of Robert Fulton and John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg, both natives of the State, and illustrious and distinguished citizens thereof: Therefore,

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the thanks of Congress be presented to the governor and through him to the people of the State of Pennsylvania for said statues.

Resolved, That these works of art are accepted in the name of the nation, and assigned a place in the old Hall of Representatives already set apart by act of Congress for statues of eminent citizens; and that a copy of this resolution, signed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, be transmitted to the governor of the State of Pennsylvania.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the resolutions presented by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

MUHLENBERG AND FULTON.

Hoch in den Lüften flattert stolz die Fahne!
Was ist's, was ihre gold'ne Inschrift nennt?
Gott gebe es, dass sie den Weg Euch bahne;
Es ist die Fahn' vom deutschen Regiment!

Then Fulton looked: beneath his wondering eyes
Gay streamers lengthen round the seas and skies;
The countless nations open all their stores,
Load every wave and crowd the lively shores;
Steamers in mingling mazes streak the air,
And commerce triumphs o'er the rage of war.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Mr. Speaker, in rising to move the adoption of the resolutions just read within the time I have allotted myself, it is not my purpose to detain the House with all the remarks I have prepared to note this occasion. But so important a matter as the erection of statues to represent the great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in the Statuary Hall set apart by the nation at its Capitol demands more than the mere comment of formal resolutions. The relation which I bore to this work as a member of the commission that selected the subjects and under whose direction the work was performed forbids my silence.

With nearly two centuries and a half of history, beginning with the landing of William Penn in 1640, with a State the theater of some of the most stirring events of colonial history and on whose soil was first proclaimed the Declaration of Independence, with a people who took so large a share in the glorious struggle that created us an independent nation, there was no dearth of great names worthy to represent her. Inseparably connected with her history was William Penn.

But full justice had already been done him. The name of the empire granted him in seignority and sovereignty in the soil, and as proprietary, its progress and glory are sufficient honor. Not only was he recompensed in honor, but he and his descendants have been recompensed in wealth and tribute. He was born and died a British subject. The religious doctrines he taught were not new. The liberty he proclaimed was the birthright of the Saxon and the heritage of every branch of the race. The religious toleration he promised as part of his frame of government was the strongest inducement he could offer to attract immigration in the then religious condition of Germany and other parts of Europe.

The Dutch and Swedes who preceded him on the Delaware had anticipated his policy of pacification with the Indians. Much of the luster that surrounds this policy in the eyes of after-generations is the reflected splendor of the great Conrad Weiser's labors and wisdom in the same direction. This intervening halo has tended much to gild William Penn's great and justly deserved fame. Then there was Conrad Weiser himself—the Pennsylvania statesmen and Indian diplomat of the colonial era. The story of his life combines to a remarkable degree elements of adventure, romance, and religion.

In the severest time of that period, often single-handed and alone, encountering every imaginable hardship, Providence seemed to have raised up and prepared him for the special purpose of rendering services indispensable to the preservation and continued existence of the Pennsylvania colony. His presence and mind exerted a magical power over the untutored savage. Unquestionably to him the Pennsylvania colonists were indebted for the safety of their lives and property, and the whole province to the prosperity resulting from the peace maintained with the Indians through his influence. The Father of his Country on the 13th of November, 1793, in company with other distinguished persons, paid the homage of a visit to his grave and bore testimony to the many services rendered by him to his country.

But Weiser was born abroad. So were others born abroad, who, like Morris, had distinguished themselves in Pennsylvania history. Others, like Franklin, were born in other Commonwealths. Pennsylvania, whose soil had been trodden by the foot of the white man for over two hundred years, would be a barren mother indeed if she had not given birth to and nurtured on her bosom two sons worthy of this honor.

The commission charged with this duty believed that they found in the persons, career, and achievements of General John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg and Robert Fulton the two persons best fitted to represent the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

They do not represent military glory alone, nor statesmanship alone, nor science nor art alone, nor manhood alone. They represent in their combined persons all the qualities and attributes that men delight to love and Commonwealths to honor—all that makes illustrious the lives of men, all that makes glorious the pages of history. They represent the pen and the sword, the gown of the priest and the cloak of the soldier, the triumphs of war and peace, of religion and science, the successful domination of the hidden forces of nature and the harnessing of them subject to the will of man so as to make them minister to the happiness, comfort, grandeur, and material progress of nations. The two subjects also in the races from which they have respectively descended, namely, the Pennsylvania-German and Scotch-Irish, represent the two nationalities whose combined character, energy, and services have contributed—during the hardships of the colonial era, in the resolution to fight for independence, in the dangers of war, in the councils of the state and church, and in the peaceful pursuits of science, art, agriculture, and commerce—to make Pennsylvania the great empire she is to-day.

General Muhlenberg was the son of Dr. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, a learned and distinguished theologian of the German Lutheran Church, who came into this country and settled at the Trappe, Montgomery County, in 1742, and of Anna, daughter of Conrad Weiser, before mentioned. He was born October 1, 1746, at that place. The father came here to take charge of the spiritual welfare of the large German emigration already in this State, as Conrad Weiser was called from New York to look after the temporal welfare of the same people. The home of Dr. Muhlenberg became the source of great influence for good to this colony; from thence young men were sent, prepared to disseminate religious truth, among them Dr. Muhlenberg's own three sons—Peter, Frederick, and Ernest. Peter Muhlenberg thus unites very largely in his person, by natural inheritance, the most important traditions of that early era, flowing from its temporal and spiritual life. He adorned them by his long and useful career, and showed himself worthy of this noble inheritance. In April, 1763, a boy of sixteen, he started for Germany, in company with his two brothers, to prosecute his studies at the University of Halle.

He had been there barely a year when his fighting propensities impelled him to knock down his tutor, for which he was expelled, and his military tastes led him to join a regiment of German dragoons. It is related that at the battle of Brandywine, where he commanded a brigade, he was recognized by former comrades, who exclaimed as they saw him, "Here comes Devil Pete." Released from the German army through the good offices of some friends of his father, he returned to America in 1766. He applied himself vigorously to the study of theology, and was in 1768 ordained a minister of the Evangelical Church. Up to 1772 he officiated for various German congregations in New Jersey, when he went to London, where, in company with Mr. (afterward Bishop) White, he was again ordained according to the rites of the Episcopal Church. Thus anointed with two consecrations, he was called in 1772 to the Shenandoah Valley to minister to the German Lutherans there. This was, in a great measure, a missionary enterprise, as the population of that valley consisted for the most part of Pennsylvania Germans.

He there became the right man in the right place. The young priest had come among them to minister to their spiritual welfare, but he soon found other matters, in addition, to engage his attention. He actively participated in the great questions of the day, and in public meetings expressed himself in favor of the policy of armed resistance. June 16, 1774, he was chosen moderator of a meeting held at Woodstock, Dunmore County, to organize a committee of public safety, his active coadjutors being Abraham Bowman and Peter Helfenstein. The same year he was elected member of the house of burgesses; he was present when Patrick Henry, at the memorable convention of Richmond, March 22, 1775, delivered his irresistible appeal for the arming of Virginia, and supported effectively this decisive step against the doubting thoughts of many others. All the German delegates from the valley voted with Muhlenberg for the resolutions.

They were sufficient in numbers in the divided state of opinion to turn the scale. It was a most decisive step in the struggle. The proceedings of that convention were then proclaimed treasonable. The same year, December, 1775, additional regiments to the number of six, making eight in all, were directed to be raised. Muhlenberg, still connected with his charge, received the colonelcy of the Eighth Regiment, being, with Patrick Henry, the only civilian appointed colonel. The time had now come for him to bid farewell to the peaceful calling of shepherd of souls. The news that the Reverend Colonel Muhlenberg was about to deliver his parting sermon assembled, in the month of January, 1776, an unusually large audience at Woodstock, so that even the resting-place of the dead around the church was filled with persons. In all the glorious history of that glorious era of self-sacrifice, of heroism and grand deeds, no figure stands out before us so baptized, so anointed with the divinity of holy faith and warlike heroism. That spot, that time, that hour, are forever sanctified by the halo of religion and of patriotism.

In impressive manner Muhlenberg spoke of the duties which the common weal of the fatherland imposed on all, and closed with the significant, earnest words that there was a time to fight, and that the time had come. Then he pronounced the benediction. His career as pastor was ended. He laid aside his priestly gown and stood before them in the full panoply of the armed warrior. He stepped down from the pulpit, and caused the trumpet to sound and the drums to beat. Patriotism broke out in bright flames, and three hundred men of the neighborhood on that day flocked to Muhlenberg's banner. The scene will forever live in history as it has been immortalized in verse by a Pennsylvania poet, and is now sculptured in marble by a Pennsylvania artist:

And now before the open door—
The warrior priest had ordered so—
The enlisting-trumpet's sudden roar
Rang through the chapel, o'er and o'er,
Its long reverberating blow,
So loud and clear, it seemed the ear
Of dusty death must wake and hear,
And then the startling drum and fife
Fired the living with fiercer life;
While overhead, with wild increase,
Forgetting its ancient toll of peace,
The great bell rung as ne'er before;
It seemed as it would never cease,
And every word its ardor flung,
From off its jubilant iron tongue
Was "War! war! war!"

"Who dares"—this was the Patriot's cry,
As striding from the desk he came—
"Come out with me, in Freedom's name,
For her to live, for her to die!"

Henceforth his career was inseparably interwoven with the history of the war of independence. Early in the progress of thought preceding the struggle it had been made a matter of special inquiry, by a committee appointed for that purpose, to ascertain the mind of the Germans in Pennsylvania on the subject of independence. In August, 1775, the united German Lutheran and Reformed Churches of Philadelphia, in connection with the German Society, had addressed a message to the Germans of North Carolina and New York in favor of independence. No doubt the elder Muhlenberg was connected with the movement as the leading man of the Lutheran Church. It needed no message to the Pennsylvania Germans of Shenandoah Valley. Their leader in the sacred cause of liberty was with them already in the person of Peter Muhlenberg. There is no telling how the movement in favor of the cause would have fared without the support of this large and influential body of the population.

Muhlenberg, at the head of his German regiment, which was more numerous than the others, first participated in Lee's campaign against Lord Dunmore, in Virginia. Ordered to South Carolina, he arrived in the nick of time to render effective service with his brave troops at the battle of Sullivan's Island, or Fort Moultrie. May 27, 1776, his regiment was taken into service by the Continental Congress. In July, his regiment was at Savannah; September, he was ordered to Virginia; in December, to Philadelphia. February 21, 1777, he was made a brigadier-general. After equipping thoroughly his regiment he was ordered to join the main army of the North at Middlebrook, N. J. Here his brigade and the German regiment, composed of Marylanders and Pennsylvanians, were combined, and his brigade, with Weedon's, formed General Greene's division, which, in the unfortunate battles of Brandywine and Germantown, gained honor by its bravery and good discipline.

After the battle of Brandywine, August 11, 1777, Muhlenberg's brigade showed the most stubborn resistance to the pursuing troops of Cornwallis, and successfully covered the retreat of the American army at the battle of Germantown. Muhlenberg's brigade was the last to leave the field, after having brought the right wing of the enemy to a stand by a splendid bayonet charge. In fact, Greene's division and Muhlenberg's brigade bore the brunt of the day, and alone performed the part assigned by Washington in the plan of the battle of Germantown. Muhlenberg had voted to defer the attack. He also sat on the court-martial of Wayne, for surprise at Paoli; of Stephen, for intoxication at Germantown; of Maxwell, for the same cause, at Brandywine. He shared, with the rest of Washington's army at Valley Forge, the sufferings, cold, want, and discouragement that hung like a cloud over the gallant host.

April 10, 1778, owing to some dispute about rank, he sent his resignation to Washington, but that great man, unwilling to dispense with his services, requested him to remain, a request with which he complied. In the same year, the day after the evacuation of Philadelphia, Washington left Valley Forge, and Muhlenberg took part in the battle of Monmouth on that hot 28th day of June. In 1779 Washington selected him to cover Mad Anthony's rear in the attack upon Stony Point. In 1780 he was busied with the reorganization of the State troops of Virginia. Not only men, but arms, clothing, and supplies were wanting. After the capitulation of Charleston, March 12, 1780, his small command was the only organized force in the South, and the responsible duty of creating a new army devolved on him. The following year, when General Greene, supplied with greater forces, assumed command of the Southern department and Baron Steuben commanded in Virginia, Muhlenberg operated against Benedict Arnold, the traitor.

His vigilance shut him up in Portsmouth. At an engagement at City Point, near Petersburgh, April 25, 1781, he threw himself against Arnold's superior forces with such gallantry that Steuben made his warmest acknowledgments and gave particular prominence to his services in the official report. July 6, 1781, in the action between Cornwallis and Lafayette, when both the latter and Wayne had been deceived as to the enemy's movements in crossing the James River at James City, Muhlenberg, upon hearing the enemy's fire, without orders marched to the scene of action and arrived in time to extricate Wayne from his difficulties and save the advance from capture or rout. September 29, 1781, Muhlenberg was placed in command of the advance posts around Yorktown, and it was permitted him to play a prominent part at the important battle that crippled the English power in America and brought peace in its train.

At the assault of the heights of Yorktown, October 15, 1781, he commanded the light infantry brigade which stormed the left redoubt of the enemy's fortifications with the bayonet—an heroic act, ranking with the most glorious achievements of the war. He was, however, slightly wounded at this attack. Alexander Hamilton was the second in command. He continued in the Army till the treaty of peace was signed, along with Wayne and others, in 1783. On the 30th of September of that year he received the well-earned honor of promotion to the rank of major-general. In 1783 he returned permanently to Pennsylvania, was elected vice-president of Pennsylvania in 1785, 1786, 1787. In 1788, together with his brother Frederick, he warmly pressed the acceptance of the proposed Constitution of the United States. In the same year, December, he was elected one of the eight members to the First Congress of the United States from Montgomery County, to serve from March 4, 1789, to 1791. Of this body his brother, Frederick Augustus, was elected Speaker.

In 1790 his influence was greatly efficient in securing the adoption of the new constitution of Pennsylvania. He also rendered important services in the First Congress in matters pertaining to the Army and national defense. He was a member of the Second and Sixth Congresses. He was always a decided adherent of the Republican party. When the election of a President, in consequence of the tie vote between Burr and Jefferson, devolved on the House, he voted for Jefferson on every ballot, till the thirty-sixth ballot resulted in the election of Jefferson. When it was in contemplation to designate the President with the same title as the Stadthalter of Holland, "His High Mightiness," Washington asked Muhlenberg's opinion. He treated the matter with frank ridicule, much to the distaste of Washington. This circumstance may have contributed to prevent the appointment of Muhlenberg to be commander-in-chief of the Army, as had been expected. Previous to St. Clair's appointment he was warmly pressed for the position.

In 1801 he was elected United States Senator. After a few months' service, however, he resigned and was appointed inspector of internal revenue for Pennsylvania, and in 1802 collector of Philadelphia. He was, like his brother Frederick, president of the German Society of Pennsylvania, an association which rendered such useful services to the country from the date of its foundation, in 1764, through the colonial, pre-Revolutionary period, during the Revolution, and afterwards. Peter Muhlenberg was president in 1788 and from 1802 to 1807. His last appearance at their meetings was April 9, 1807, on the occasion of the dedication of the new hall of the society, built under his auspices. He died October 1, 1807, on the anniversary of his sixty-first birthday, at Philadelphia.

He was of tall stature, robust, and animated. In some measure nature molded him for a soldier, and he glided into his vocation as soon as the opportunity arose. In him courage and decision were allied with a cool deliberation which comprehended thoroughly the situation, and thus Washington found in him not only a consummate officer but a trustworthy adviser. In his character he was open, amiable, and without arrogance. But if there was one trait which controlled his life, his political principles, and his conduct, and which stamped his inner being, it was a love of liberty.

His earthly remains found their last resting place in the peaceful village of Trappe, where he was born, where he spent the wild days of boyhood, and where his reverend father also sleeps. This is the unvarnished record of the long career of the scholar, the priest, the soldier, the statesman, and the citizen, illustrious by the distinguished services of his ancestors, illustrious by the traditions he centers in his person, and illustrious and pre-eminent not for one thing alone but for the achievements of a varied career and of a many-sided mind, crowned with a well-ordered life. As such he has been selected to be clothed in sculptured marble and set up in the national rotunda as one of Pennsylvania's representative men, a bright and shining example for future generations to honor and to emulate.

It has been hinted that the field of his renown was Virginia. We deny it. The field of his usefulness and renown was in the South and North—in the Carolinas, Virginia, Pennsylvania. His sword was unsheathed in all these States. His voice in the Virginia house of burgesses and committee of safety was but that of the Pennsylvania German missionary speaking for and leading the Pennsylvania Germans of the Shenandoah. He went there in 1772, was there but two years as a pastor, and then from that time on he was wherever duty called, rendering his services to the whole country. The struggle over, liberty achieved, covered with the honors of war, he returns to his native State, and again his counsel and his voice are given to mold her government and the nation's laws. The boundaries of Virginia, great a State as she was, were too narrow to hem in his deeds, his usefulness, or his glory. His cradle was rocked in Pennsylvania, his mind was formed there. In the darkest days of the war he with his right arm and his wisdom guarded his home and defended her soil. After the war he led in her councils, and in death her bosom became his grave.

Robert Fulton, the son of an Irish emigrant, was born on his father's farm in the township of Little Britain (now called Fulton), in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, in 1765. A short time after his birth his father, also named Robert, sold his farm and removed to the town of Lancaster, where he died in 1768. His training thereby devolved on his honored mother, and under her direction he acquired some knowledge of reading and writing at home. In his eighth year she sent him to school to acquire the rudiments of an English education. He did not make much reputation as a scholar. He was born with a genius that ill comported with droning over school books. He preferred to frequent the shops of mechanics where he could indulge his taste for mechanism and drawing.

Neither punishment nor entreaty availed to make a scholar of him. When his teacher wished to punish him by the ancient method of the ruler on his knuckles, Robert refused, and said, "Sir, I have come to have something beat into my brains and not into my knuckles." To his entreaty he replied "that his head was so full of original notions that there was no vacant chamber to store away the contents of any dusty books." But while not a student he was busy with his "notions," and when a youth of fourteen he attempted the manufacture of an air-gun and planned and completed a small working model of a fishing-boat with paddle-wheels. This device was actually used by him in 1779 on the Conestoga River in Lancaster County, to propel a fishing-boat. At the age of seventeen years he went to Philadelphia to paint portraits, landscapes, and follow mechanical draughting.

On his twenty-first birthday he returned to Lancaster and devoted his first savings to the purchase of a farm in Washington County, Pennsylvania, for the benefit of his mother and sisters. In the deed he is described as a miniature-painter. After providing for the comfort of his father's family he proceeded to England and became for several years an inmate of the family of Benjamin West, the great American artist, also a Pennsylvanian, and born in Chester County, near Fulton's birthplace, then living in London. He still followed the profession of a painter, but still his mind was taken up with invention.

In 1797 he went to Paris and lodged in the same house with Joel Barlow, American minister, and afterward became a member of his family. The friendship then begun continued through life. It was to Fulton that Barlow dedicated his patriotic and historical poem of the Columbiad, or Vision of Columbus. It was Fulton who, at his own expense, designed the elegant plates which adorn that work. It should be here noted that Fulton was an artist of no mean merit.

In person Fulton was about six feet high. His person was slender, but well proportioned and well formed. Nature had made him a gentleman and bestowed upon him ease and gracefulness. His features were strong and of a manly beauty; he had large dark eyes and a projecting brow, expressive of intelligence and thought. There is an excellent portrait of him by Benjamin West still in existence. His temper was mild and his disposition lively. He expressed himself with energy, fluency, and correctness.

In his domestic and social relations he was zealous, kind, generous, liberal, and affectionate. He knew of no use for money but as it was subservient to charity, hospitality, and the sciences.

During his residence in Paris, in addition to modern languages, he studied higher mathematics, physics, chemistry, and perspective. He thus added to his natural genius the aid of science. At no time of his life was he idle. The talent given him was never hidden away in a napkin. Responsive to the spirit of the motto of his youth, "There is nothing impossible," he added the power and light of science to his natural genius. He thus made possible the accomplishment of so much in the short period of life allotted him, for he died at the age of fifty years. Above all, it made possible the realization of the prophecy made by him while pointing out to a visitor the sketch of a plan of a steamboat on the wall of his room at Paris, "There is the image of what will yet traverse the river and the ocean"—a prophecy first realized in the world's history when he, on the 7th day of August, 1807, started the steam-boat Clermont, constructed, engine and hull, under his directions, on her first successful trip to Albany on the Hudson.

This was some eighty years ago, some thirty years after the Declaration of Independence, twenty-four years after the close of the Revolutionary war, and eighteen years after the adoption of the Constitution of 1789. A succession of events unparalleled in the political history of the world, ancient or modern, from whatever standpoint considered, whether in the causes that led to them, the means and instruments used in their creation, development, and perfection, or their effect on the condition of mankind for all time. Stupendous as these events were on the political world, the successful trip of the Clermont was equally so in the domain of trade and commerce. The achievements of our fathers in war and the creation of a free constitutional Government were well complemented by the success of Fulton in realizing the great dream of his life.

God created the new world with great capacities. He lavished with unsparing hand untold wealth upon her mountains, plains, and valleys. He poured out upon her seamed surface mighty rivers, whose currents traverse the entire continent to be swallowed up in the greater waters that roll their resistless waves around her rock-bound shores. These mighty rivers were first rippled only by the canoe of the Indian, then by the flat-boat, the raft, and the ark of the early explorer, settler, and trader. The more dangerous ocean was traversed by the slow sailing ship.

Fulton, by his successful application of steam to purposes of water navigation, as by the wand of a magician, revolutionized the commerce and trade of his day and of the world. By experiments in naval torpedo warfare he pioneered the way for the wholesale destruction of navies, to remedy and ward off which great governments are spending countless sums. The immense streams of the country were made tributary to the nation's greatness. Old ocean rolled his waves submissive to the paddle of the steamer, and found a master despite adverse winds. To-day rivers, bays, gulfs, and oceans, the world over, are dotted with innumerable rich argosies propelled by steam, moving monuments bearing unmistakable testimony to the triumph of mind over matter, to its domination over the forces of nature, to the unflagging zeal, to the skill, and to the genius of Robert Fulton.

The State of New York, after first selecting, rejected him because he was born and reared on Pennsylvania soil. Pennsylvania now crowns him in the national rotunda as one of her greatest sons—as a man who is second to no other in the country's history in contributing to the comfort and happiness, glory and power, the wealth and progress, not of his State or his country, but of the entire world. For though the Hudson was the scene of the first signal success of his greatest work, yet the State of New York, great as she is, does not limit either the field of his labors or his distinction. His fame does not belong to States, for his genius embraced empires. Coextensive with the known world, it is bounded only by the barriers which nature has set to trackless and unknown oceans.

APPENDIX.

I.—BRIEF OF THE LIFE AND SERVICES OF JOHN PETER GABRIEL MUHLENBERG.

Born at Trappe, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, October 1, 1746, son of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg and Anna, daughter of Conrad Weiser.
Henry Melchior Muhlenberg emigrated from Germany, 1742.
Peter, eldest son of H. M. and Anna Muhlenberg.
April 27, 1763. Peter and his brothers, Frederick Augustus and Henry Ernestus, sent to Europe to be educated.
June 15, 1763. The three brothers arrive in London.
1763. They arrive at Halle in the autumn.
1764. Knocks his tutor down; is expelled from the University of Halle, and enlists in a regiment of dragoons.
1765. About this time he obtained his discharge from the dragoon regiment through the kind offices of a colonel in the English army, known to his father.
1766. Returns to America.
1768. Ordained a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church.
May 12, 1768. Appointed assistant rector of Zion's and St. Paul's Churches, situated at New Germantown and Bedminister, Hunterdon and Somerset Counties, New Jersey.
February 5, 1769. Begins to officiate in his new charge.
November 6, 1770. Married to Anna Barbara Meyer.
March 2, 1772. Sails for London.
April 10, 1772. Arrives at London.
April 23, 1772. Ordained a priest with Mr. (afterwards Bishop) White, by the Bishop of London.
Autumn, 1772. Removes to Virginia—Woodstock.
June 16, 1774. Chosen moderator of meeting held at Woodstock, Dunmore County, Virginia, to organize a committee of public safety.
1774. Chairman committee public safety.
1774. Elected a member of the house of burgesses.
March, 1775. Supports resolution of Patrick Henry to put colony of Virginia in a state of defense.
1775. The proceedings of the convention proclaimed by Lord Dunmore to be treasonable.
1775. Two regiments raised under Colonels Henry and Woodford.
December, 1775. Resolution passed to raise six additional regiments.
December, 1775. Chosen colonel Eighth Virginia Regiment. Patrick Henry and he only civilians appointed colonels.
January, 1776. Preaches farewell sermon at Woodstock. After sermon, 300 men enlist.
1776. Served under General Lee at the attack on Charleston, S. C.
May 27, 1776. Eighth Virginia Regiment taken into service Continental Congress.
July, 1776. Muhlenberg's regiment sent to Savannah.
September, 1776. Regiment ordered to Virginia.
December, 1776. Regiment ordered to Philadelphia.
February 21, 1777. Promoted to rank of brigadier-general.
April, 1777. The First, Fifth, Seventh, and Thirteenth Regiments, Virginia line, assigned to his brigade.
May, 1777. Sets out for headquarters army, Morristown, N. J.
May 28, 1777. Muhlenberg's and Weedon's brigades formed into division of General Greene.
September 11, 1777. Battle of Brandywine. Wayne's, Muhlenberg's, and Weedon's brigades stationed at Chadd's Ford.
The preservation of the whole army at Brandywine due to the conduct of Greene's division, Muhlenberg and Weedon's brigades. Muhlenberg's brigade the last to leave the field.

October 4, 1777. Battle of Germantown.
October and November, 1777. Detailed for duty upon court-martial to try Wayne, for surprise, at Paoli; Stephen, for intoxication, at Germantown; and Maxwell, for intoxication, at Brandywine.
October 29, 1777. Council of war to decide upon the expediency of an attack upon Philadelphia.
November, 1777. Second council of war to decide same point. Muhlenberg one of four who voted in favor.
April 10, 1778. Tenders his resignation to General Washington, on account of dispute as to rank; asked by Washington to remain.
1777–1778. Remains at Valley Forge during whole winter.
May 28, 1778. General Lee appointed to command Muhlenberg's and Scott's brigades.
June 18, 1778. English evacuate Philadelphia.
June, 1778. Battle of Monmouth.
July–October, 1778. With main army at White Plains.
November 2, 1778. Appointed by Washington to command a division, to succeed General Putnam.
November 28, 1778–June 2, 1779. Muhlenberg's division in winter quarters at Middlebrook.
1779. General Muhlenberg selected to cover Wayne's rear at the attack on Stony Point.
December, 1779. Goes into winter quarters at Morristown, N. J.
December 14, 1779. Whole Virginia line ordered South. Muhlenberg to command those regiments.
January, 1780. Named commander of all forces in Virginia.
February 25, 1780. Sets out for Virginia.
April, 1780. Arrives in Richmond.
May 12, 1780. Charleston capitulates.
April–December 3, 1780. Commander of all forces in Virginia.
December 3, 1780. Major-General Steuben takes command in Virginia.
January and February, 1781. Opposed to Arnold in Virginia. Shuts Arnold up in Portsmouth, Va.
April 29, 1781. Lafayette takes command in Virginia.
April 24, 1781. Fight at Petersburgh between Arnold and Philips with three thousand English and General Muhlenberg.
May, 1781. General Muhlenberg takes command of the regular troops brought south by Lafayette.
July 6, 1781. Action between Lafayette and Cornwallis; Muhlenberg saves Wayne's forces.
July. Cornwallis retreats to Yorktown.
August 28, 1781. French fleet arrives in the bay.
September, 1781. Muhlenberg sent south of James River to prevent projected retreat of Cornwallis to the south.
September 14. General Washington and Count Rochambeau arrive at Williamsburgh.
September 29. Muhlenberg placed in command of the advanced forts around Yorktown.
September 29. Investiture of Yorktown completed.
October 15, 1781. The "twin batteries," called the two flank redoubts, stormed and taken at the point of the bayonet by troops led by Alexander Hamilton and Peter Muhlenberg. General Muhlenberg slightly wounded in attack.
October 19, 1781. Yorktown capitulates.
1781–March, 1783. Continues in army till signing of treaty of peace.
September 30, 1783. Promoted to be major-general, Anthony Wayne being his immediate senior and General Clinton his immediate junior on the list.
November, 1783. General Muhlenberg removes permanently to Pennsylvania.
February to July, 1784. Makes a trip to locate county lands in Kentucky.
1785. Elected vice-president of Pennsylvania. Franklin president during the same time.
1786. Re-elected vice-president of Pennsylvania.
1787. Re-elected vice-president of Pennsylvania.
Conflict between Pennsylvania and Connecticut.
Civil war in Wyoming. Vice-President Muhlenberg asks Congress, in 1788, to send regular troops there.
September, 1787. Convention to frame Constitution assembles at Philadelphia. General Muhlenberg an ardent advocate of its adoption.
December, 1788. General Muhlenberg chosen one of eight members of First Congress, to serve from March 4, 1789 to March 4, 1791.
April, 1789. General Muhlenberg, member of committee of national defense, militia, and bounty lands of Virginia.
1790. New constitution of Pennsylvania adopted; great influence in its favor exercised by General Muhlenberg.
1793. Elected to Congress from Montgomery County district for term 1793–1795.
1797. Elector from Pennsylvania.
1799–1801. Member of Congress.
1801. In Burr and Jefferson contest for Presidency voted for Jefferson on every ballot until, on the thirty-sixth ballot, the latter was declared elected.
February 18, 1801. Elected United States Senator.
June 30, 1801. Resigns, and is appointed supervisor of internal revenue of Pennsylvania.
July, 1802. Appointed collector of Philadelphia.
October 1, 1807. Dies at Philadelphia.

II.—MUHLENBERG'S FAREWELL SERMON.

The pastor rose, the prayer was strong;
The Psalm was warrior David's song;
The text, a few short words of might,
"The Lord of hosts shall arm the right."
He spoke of wrongs, too long endured,
Of sacred rights to be secured.
When from his patriot tongue of flame
The startling words for freedom came,
The stirring sentences he spake
Compelled the heart to glow or quake,
And rising on his theme's broad wing,
And grasping in his nervous hand
The imaginary battle brand,
In face of death he dared to fling
Defiance to a tyrant king.

Even as he spoke his frame, renewed
In eloquence of attitude,
Rose, as it seemed, a shoulder higher,
Then swept his kindling glance of fire,
From startled pew to breathless choir,
When suddenly his mantle wide
His hands impatient flung aside,
And lo! he met their wondering eyes
Complete in all a warrior's guise.

A moment there was awful pause,
When Berkley cried "Cease, traitor! cease!
God's temple is the house of peace!"
The other shouted "Nay, not so,
When God is with our righteous cause
His holiest places then are ours,
His temples are our forts and towers,
That frown upon the tyrant foe.
In this the dawn of freedom's day,
There is a time to fight and pray!"

And now before the open door—
The warrior priest had ordered so—
The enlisting-trumpet's sudden soar
Rang through the chapel, o'er and o'er,
Its long reverberating blow,
So loud and clear, it seemed the ear
Of dusty death must wake and hear,
And then the startling drum and fife
Fired the living with fiercer life;
While overhead, with wild increase,
Forgetting its ancient toll of peace,
The great bell rung as ne'er before;
It seemed as it would never cease,
And every word its ardor flung
From off its jubilant iron tongue
Was "War! War! War!"

"Who dares"—this was the patriot's cry,
As striding from the desk he came—
"Come out with me, in freedom's name,
For her to live, for her to die?"
One hundred hands flung out reply,
One hundred voices answered, "I!"
—Buchanan Read's Wagoner of the Alleghanies.

III.—PASTOR MÜHLENBERG'S ABSCHIEDSREDE, JANUAR, 1776.

Der Orgel Töne waren schon verklungen,
Und Gottes Schutz auf sie herabgefleht;
Die letzte Dankeshymne war gesungen,
Doch scheidend Vater Mühlenberg noch steht.
Da sprach er von vergang'nen frohen Tagen,
Die sie in Fried' und Gottesfurcht verlebt,
Von eich'nem Fleiss, von männlich kühnem Wagen,
Das wilde Land zum Paradies erhebt.

Von Gottes Schutz und Seinem reichen Segen,
Den Er verlieh den Heerden und dem Feld;
Dass sie auch ferner Ihm vertrauen mögen,
Dann sei ihr Haus auf Felsen fest gestellt.
Doch auch von schlimmen Zeiten war die Rede,
Von Zeiten, die die nächste Zukunft bringt;
Von Druck und Schmach, von blut'ger Kriegesfehde,
Zu der sie England's blinde Feindschaft zwingt.

Sie sind dahin, des Friedens heit're Stunden!
Der Tag erschien für männlich kühne That!
Für ruhiges Gebet ist jetzt die Zeit verschwunden,
Die Zeit des Kampfes ist herangenaht!
Der Orgelton, der friedevolle, weichet
Der Kriegestrommel, die der Feind gesandt;
Die Hand, die segnend euch den Kelch gereichet,
Greift jest zum Schwert, für's theu're Vaterland!

Da gleitet plötzlich zu des Altar's Stufen,
Der geistliche Ornat, der ihm umschloss,
Und unter Freud' und lautem Jubelrufen
Stand er enthüllt, ein Krieger, hehr und gross!
Und vor die Kirche führt er die Gemeinde,
Zum stillen Platz, wo Trauerweiden steh'n;
Wo früher nur der stille Kummer weinte,
Da hört man jest die Werbetrommel geh'n!

IV.—BRIEF OF LIFE AND SERVICE OF ROBERT FULTON.

1765. Born in township of Little Britain, now Fulton, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania.
1766. Moved to the town of Lancaster, where his father died in 1768.
1773. Sent to school to acquire rudiments of English language.
1779. Constructs model of fishing boat with paddle wheels.
1782. Removes to Philadelphia and follows portrait and landscape painting and mechanical draughting. He here makes the acquaintance of Benjamin Franklin.
1786. Returns to Lancaster, purchases a home in Washington County for his mother and sisters, after which he sails for England and becomes a member of the family of Benjamin West, the great American painter, then residing at London. He also lived two years in Devonshire, following painting, where he becomes intimate with Bridgewater and Stanhope. Removing to Birmingham, he forms a friendship with Watt, the inventor of the steam-engine.
1787. He goes to Paris and becomes a member of the family of Joel Barlow, the American minister, and author of the Columbiad. He there pursues scientific studies.
1793. Conceives the idea of propelling vessels by steam.
1794. Obtains patent for a mill to saw marble from the British Government, and receives an honorary medal from Society for Promotion of Arts and Commerce.
1795 and 1796. Prepares and publishes treatise on the improvement of canal navigation.
1797. He invents and patents:
1. Double inclined planes for canals.
2. A machine for spinning flax.
3. A machine for making ropes.
4. A machine to scoop out the earth to form channels for canals and aqueducts.
5. Cast-iron bridges and aqueducts.
6. A market or passage boat.
7. Another called dispatch boat.
8. Another called the Trader.
9. A perpendicular lift.
10. Air-guns.
11. A cable-cutter.
12. Torpedoes, so named by him.

1801. He proposes to Bonaparte to relieve France and the whole world from British oppression by submarine boats and torpedoes. Under the direction of a government commission he experiments with the boat in the waters of Brest and blows a vessel to pieces.
1804. The British minister appoints a commission to examine his projects.
1805. He blows up a Danish brig with torpedoes in Walmer Roads, England.
1806. He embarks for New York and marries Miss Harriet Livingston.
1807. Under Government authority he blows up with torpedoes a large hulk brig in New York Harbor; and soon after publishes a work on submarine explosives.

13. In 1807 was built the first steam packet that ever sailed against wind and tide, called the Clermont. This was followed by the invention of—

14. The first submarine plunging boat, as a terrible engine of war, constructed for carrying torpedoes and submarine guns, adapted for a mode of maritime warfare which he called the "torpedo war."

15. Submarine guns.

16. A beautiful steam-ship called the Car of Neptune, of 295 tons.

17. In 1811, the Paragon, of 331 tons. In this year he was one of the commissioners to explore route for inland navigation from the Hudson to the Lakes.

18. In 1812, the Firefly, of 118 tons.

19. In 1812, the Jersey ferry-boat, Camden.

20. In 1813, the Richmond, steamer, of 370 tons.

21. In 1813, the steamer Washington, of 275 tons.

22. In 1813, the York, ferry-boat.

23. In 1813, the Nassau, ferry-boat.

24. December, 1813, the steam-boat Vesuvius, 140 feet keel, 400 tons burden, was launched at Pittsburgh, designed as a regular trader between the Falls of the Ohio and New Orleans.

A contract was made by the United States Government with Mr. Fulton December 27, 1814, for the purpose of employing his steam-boats Vesuvius, Ætna, New Orleans, and Natchez on the Mississippi, in transporting troops and munitions of war, and the Buffalo, steam-boat, on the Ohio.

The celebrated battle of the 8th of January took place about a week afterwards, and it was upon the possession of the Vesuvius, this auxiliary instrument of war, that the commanding general relied, in his anticipations of safety to the city and the accomplishment of a brilliant victory. Both John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson certified to Congress the invaluable services rendered to the country by Mr. Fulton at the battle of New Orleans.

25. In 1813 the steam-ship Fulton, of 327 tons. In 1813 letters patent were granted him for improvements in the art of submarine warfare, to destroy ships and vessels of war by submarine cannons.

26. In 1814, the Fulton the First, the first steam-vessel of war in the world. January 5 a number of influential and patriotic gentlemen of the city of New York assembled at the house of Robert Fulton, esq., to investigate the principles and utility of a steam-vessel of war invented by that gentleman. After examining the plan and hearing the reasons submitted, they immediately adopted measures to raise $120,000 for the purpose of giving a trial to the experiment, proposing to build one to carry 24-long-pounders to aid in the defense of that city.

January 3, 1814, the committee, Stephen Decatur, Evans, Perry, Warrington, Lewis Jones, etc., reported having examined the model and plans, and that it was among the best interests of the United States to carry the plan into immediate execution.

October 31, 1814, the steam-frigate; Fulton the First, authorized by Congress, was launched at New York, of 2,475 tons burden. She was cannon-proof. She carried thirty 32-pounder carronades, and two 100-pounder columbiads, to fire hot shot. The gallant Porter commanded her. This frigate was 145 feet deck, 55 feet in breadth, and drew 8 feet of water.

November 22 she was moved from the wharf of Messrs. Brown, in the East River, to the works of Mr. Fulton, on the North River, to receive her machinery—cost $320,000. On the 4th of July she made a passage to the ocean and back, 53 miles, in eight hours and twenty minutes. She was used by the United States as a receiving-ship until June 4, 1829, when by some accident her magazine blew up, causing the complete destruction of the vessel.

27. The Olive Branch.

28. The Emperor of Russia. The vessel was built as substantial and strong as a sloop-of-war, and no doubt was entertained by naval men of the practicability of the attempt. The Savannah was, however, afterwards built, and sailed to Russia.

29. The Chancellor Livingston, of 526 tons.

30. Mr. Fulton's last boat, which he called the Mute.

1815. February 24, he died at New York in the fiftieth year of his age, and was buried in Trinity churchyard, New York. He left surviving him a widow, who soon followed him. His son, Robert Barlow Fulton, died in 1841. A daughter, Julia, in 1848. Two other daughters, Mary L. and Cornelia L., both married, were yet living in New York in 1856.

1846. Congress does him the tardy justice by passage of bill appropriating $76,300 to his heirs for services.

V.—AUTHORITIES.

"Life of Maj. Gen. Peter Muhlenberg, citing in notes the original sources of information and original letters," Carey & Hart, Philadelphia, 1849; "Geschichte der deutschen Gesellschaft." Seidensticker, Schafer & Korado, Philadelphia, 1876; "New Sweden," Acrelius, translated by Reynolds, published by Historical Society of Pennsylvania, 1877; "Life of Conrad Weiser," Daniel Miller, Reading, 1876; Mann's "Life of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg," 1886; Colden's "Fulton," 1817; Reigart's "Fulton;" Sparks's "American Biography;" "American Encyclopædia;" "Journals of Congress" and "Reports of Departments;" "Tenth Census United States," volume 4, Steam Navigation.

VI.—AN ACT PROVIDING FOR A COMMISSION TO HAVE STATUES EXECUTED AND PLACED IN THE OLD HALL OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, IN THE CAPITOL OF THE UNITED STATES, AND MAKING AN APPROPRIATION THEREFOR.

Whereas by the second section of an act of Congress, entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending the 30th of June, 1865, and for other purposes," approved the 2d day of July, 1864, the President of the United States is authorized to invite each and all of the States to provide and furnish statues in marble or bronze, not exceeding two in number for each State, of deceased persons, who have been citizens thereof, and illustrious for their historic renown, or from distinguished civil or military services, such as each State shall determine to be worthy of that national commemoration, and when so furnished, the same shall be placed in Old Hall of the House of Representatives, in the Capitol of the United States, which is set apart, or so much thereof as may be necessary, as a national Statuary Hall for the purposes therein indicated; and

Whereas many of the States of the Union have complied with the invitation, causing to be erected in the Capitol at Washington such statues of their most illustrious citizens, and as it is desirable that Pennsylvania should also be so represented: Therefore,

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the governor shall appoint six citizens of the Commonwealth, who shall constitute a commission to have executed in marble or bronze the statues of two deceased persons who have been citizens of the Commonwealth, illustrious for their historic renown, or for distinguished civil or other services, previous to or during the Revolution, to be placed in that part of the national gallery reserved for this State, with power to select an artist, and to contract for the execution of said statues at a price not to exceed the sum of $15,000.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of the persons composing said commission to meet in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth, in Harrisburg, at the call of the governor, within six months after the passage of this act, and effect an organization by electing one of their number president of the commission, and one secretary of said commission; shall have the power to adjourn from time to time and place to place, and make such rules and regulations not inconsistent with their appointment as may be necessary to accomplish the purpose of this act.

SEC. 3. That the sum of $2,000 be, and is hereby, appropriated out of moneys in the State treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose herein named, and for defraying the actual traveling expenses of the commissioners; the said sum to be expended under the direction and in the discretion of the commission hereby created, and to be paid by warrants drawn on the State treasurer, signed by the president and secretary of said commission.

SEC. 4. That the said commission shall make an annual report to the Legislature of the progress made in the work contemplated by this act.

Approved the 18th day of April, A. D. 1877.

J. F. HARTRANFT.

October 16, 1877. Governor John F. Hartranft appointed as the commission Hon. Simon Cameron, of Dauphin; George DeB. Keim, esq., and Hon. Francis A. Osbourn, of Philadelphia; Dr. Thomas C. Kennan, of Washington; John C. Hagar, esq., of Lancaster; and Hon. Daniel Ermentrout, of Berks.

October 18, 1877. Commission organized at Harrisburg by electing Hon. Simon Cameron president, and George DeB. Keim secretary.

December 18, 1878. Contracts made by the commission with Mr. Howard Roberts, of Philadelphia, for statue of Fulton, and with Miss Blanche Nevin, of Lancaster, for statue of Muhlenberg.

January 9, 1879. Report of commission made to Legislature.

The resolutions were agreed to.

Mr. ERMENTROUT moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolutions were agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I now ask unanimous consent that any gentleman who desires to do so may have leave to print remarks in the RECORD upon the resolutions which have just been adopted by the House.

There was no objection.

STATUE OF LEWIS CASS.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Library be discharged from the further consideration of the Senate concurrent resolutions providing for the acceptance of the statue of Lewis Cass, presented by the State of Michigan to the United States, and put the same upon their passage.

There was no objection.

The concurrent resolutions were considered; they are as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the thanks of Congress be tendered to the governor and through him to the people of the State of Michigan for the statue of Lewis Cass, whose name is so conspicuously connected with the development of the Northwest Territory and with eminent services to his State and country both at home and abroad.

Resolved, That the statue is accepted in the name of the nation, and assigned a place in the old Hall of the House of Representatives, and that a copy of these resolutions, signed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, be transmitted to the governor of the State of Michigan.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Mr. Speaker, the State of Michigan presents and asks the United States to accept a statue of General Lewis Cass. A man ought to have exemplified the civic virtues nobly while he was living to deserve this tribute when he is dead.

It is a solemn act to place a name on the nation's roll of honor. That roll is a message to posterity. It ought never to exploit the accident of divine right—fates' most cruel jest on men—or be sullied by meretricious greatness. Fortunate, indeed, is the country who has children worthy of this glory, and fortunate, thrice fortunate, is America in a goodly company of sages, patriots, statesmen, whose fame illuminates her history and deserves the reverence of her people. High in the ranks of this company stood General Cass.

He was conspicuous even among them for his robust Americanism. He was fortunate in opportunities as a man of action and as a man of counsel. His career was varied and remarkable. As a soldier in the war of 1812, as governor of the Territory of Michigan and pacificator of the Indian tribes, as Secretary of War and minister to France, as Senator in Congress and Secretary of State, in speech and in action, his patriotism shown pure and strong in the light of his great abilities. He loved his country. He believed in her institutions—in the capacity and the right of her people to govern themselves. He was not shamefaced in this faith. He was not a servile imitator of foreign manners but of simple American life, delighting in literature and art and content with the ways of the folk among whom his lot was cast.

The patriotism we honor here to-night was at one time the subject of ridicule and attributed to unworthy motives. This was when he made his declaration of "fifty-four forty or fight" on the northwestern boundary question. Perhaps, sir, we of this generation will see how mean the passions of the hour made us to our political opponents and be ashamed that we vilify men who are worthy of statues erected by a grateful country. But, sir, General Cass's patriotism was far-reaching. It was the love of country which inspires a statesman with grand thoughts for her prosperity and independence. He knew our place among the nations. His opposition to the quintuple treaty, unless it was accompanied with a renunciation of the right of search as a principle of international law, and his broad interpretation of the Monroe doctrine, prove that he pierced the future with his prescience.

Room, freedom for our commerce are the great necessities if we would keep abreast or ahead of the nations. We see now with a clearer vision. The horizon of civilization has expanded. There are no longer dark continents, waste places, but the earth rounds before us like an open book, each page of which is radiant with the destiny of our commerce. This is the world in which General Cass desired his country to be pre-eminent.

Sir, we know that he is worthy of this honor we do to his memory. Patriotism is the virtue of statesmen. It casts a glamour over their lives and throws their shadows boldly on the future.

There is, sir, an aspect of General Cass's career which brings him very near to the hearts of the men of the West. The great States of Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, are all indebted to his facility in the management of the Indian tribes. To us of Michigan he was as a father—a benefactor. He reared the roof-trees of our homes and kindled the fires on our hearth-stones.

So we, the children and grandchildren of the men who fought side by side with him against savage man and untamed nature, do him this reverence.

We ask the nation to rear his image in the nation's Pantheon, that our children's children may gaze on the "counterfeit presentment" of a virtue which adorned her history and blessed mankind. My fervent prayer is that that sacred shrine shall never be desecrated by honors showered on kings or oppressors of God's people; but that forever it shall chronicle the freedom, the greatness, the prosperity, and the happiness of our country. [Applause.]

Mr. RANDALL. I unite with the Representatives of the State of Michigan with all my heart in doing honor to the memory of Lewis Cass. He was, as much as any one man could be, the founder and builder-up of that prosperous Commonwealth which sits so proudly amid our northern inland seas.

He foresaw with the instinct of a statesman the coming glory of his country, and at the beginning as at the close of his career he advocated the principles and supported the public policy upon which our liberties and independence as a nation depend for preservation.

If I were to select one characteristic in his public life which dominated all his thoughts, words, and actions, it would be his intense love of country. No matter how dark and threatening was the outlook, our enemies might be many and their hatred bitter, yet his heart never quailed; but with pen, voice, and sword he battled for the rights and honor of his country, for the general welfare, and for the melioration of the human race.

When Burr's mysterious conspiracy was hatching in the then wilderness of Ohio, Thomas Jefferson detected and exposed the treason before it got beyond control, and Lewis Cass, then a young lawyer and member of the Ohio Legislature, drafted legislation which had the effect to destroy the projected expedition and restore public tranquility.

When appointed superintendent of Indian affairs his unsurpassed mental and physical energy was tested and strained to the utmost. Throughout Michigan Territory, of which he was second Territorial governor, wandering bands of Indians were a constant menace to the peace and growth of the white settlements. "They had in two wars been employed by the British against the Americans, and they were regular pensioners on British bounty." He made seventeen treaties with the Wyandotte, Seneca, Delaware, Shawnee, Pottawatomie, Ottawa, and Chippewa tribes of Indians, won their respect and confidence by honest dealing and firm and resolute administration, and from a position of hostility made them our good and fast friends.

He explored the whole country, and in his birch canoe traversed thousands of miles unvisited before, save by the Jesuit fathers or the hunters who pursued the valuable fur-bearing animals of that region. He communicated to the North American Review at the time some of the ablest articles which have ever been written on the Indian languages, character, and history. He was amongst the first to appreciate them and improve their condition.

He was a man of sword, pen, and voice, and in all his varied career won renown in each and every position. At the breaking out of the war with Great Britain he served with distinction, as might have been expected of the son of Major Cass, who had fought in the Revolutionary army for seven bloody years to help win our independence. He afterward took part in the campaigns of Harrison, which ended in the destruction of the British army in Western Canada, the killing of Tecumseh, and the flight and disgrace of Proctor.

Cooley, in his "Michigan: A History of Governments," sums up this part of Cass's public life as follows:

> There was some feeling of Territorial pride that Jackson had looked to this distant region for a member of his Cabinet, but the people of the Territory parted with the governor with great reluctance. He had not only managed the public affairs with ability and unquestioned integrity, but his example had been excellent and his influence of the best. Governing frontier settlements, where rough characters abounded and roystering habits prevailed, he was always in his own deportment courteous and complacent, always abstemious, always self-respecting; and as unexceptionable in his private character and in all his domestic and social relations as he was in his public capacity and deportment. Permanent American settlement may be said to have begun with him; and it was a great and lasting boon to Michigan when it was given a governor at once so able, so patriotic, so attentive to his duties, and so worthy in his public and private life of respect and esteem.

As Secretary of War in Andrew Jackson's Cabinet, he was pronounced, vigorous, and emphatic in his hostility to the doctrine of nullification of the laws, and long afterward, in his old age, when Secretary of State in Buchanan's administration, in 1860–'61, he spoke with no uncertain voice in favor of the maintenance of the Union at all hazards and at every cost. He lived to see the civil war brought to a successful close in behalf of the Union, and to see the country out of her evil days start upon a career of prosperity and greatness which is the marvel of the age and without parallel in ancient times.

When Great Britain delayed, upon one pretext and another, to turn over to the United States the fortifications within our lines, and harassed our border with threatened Indian forays, contrary to the stipulations of the treaty of peace, and when upon the high seas Great Britain assumed the right to visit and search our ships, as minister to France he drew up an impassioned appeal to that country, which had much to do in exposing the arrogance and injustice of the claim.

Whenever the way was to be cleared for the future which he saw so clearly opening up for his country he was among the first to set to work and was among the most able and successful leaders. He denied the doctrine of perpetual allegiance, assisted in making our flag respected on every sea, stoutly defended the Monroe doctrine in respect to the American continent, and so far as one man could, promoted the peace, happiness, and glory of his country.

In 1850, when the slavery agitation pervaded the whole land, and the wisest and most fearless stood aghast at the threatened danger to the Government, in that hour of great peril Lewis Cass's name was put second by a solemn resolve of the Senate—second only to that of Henry Clay, the great pacificator, in behalf of honorable adjustment. Nothing could better display the confidence then reposed in his ability and sense of justice.

While he was resolute and exacting for his country, he was in his private life retiring, unostentatious, frugal, sympathetic, and considerate in his relations with those he came in contact with.

Let me close by repeating two sentences from General Cass's writings, which give a good insight into his character. He said:

> For myself, I have no belief in that greatness which is too great to mingle with the details of life.

In another place he said:

> He who occupies the loneliest cabin upon the very verge of civilization has just as important a part to play in the fate of our country as the denizen of the proudest city in the land.

These utterances I commend heartily, both in spirit and letter, as a guide to all in public life. [Applause.]

Mr. O'DONNELL. Mr. Speaker, in the year 1864 an invitation was extended to the different States of this Union by the national Congress to present the statues of two of their deceased citizens, to be placed in Statuary Hall, in the nation's Capitol. The works in sculpture were to represent those "illustrious for their heroic renown or distinguished by civil or military services." Nearly a quarter of a century has elapsed since this action of the Congress. The State of Michigan to-day makes its contribution in the statue of her illustrious pioneer, soldier, and statesman, General Lewis Cass, who served the State and nation for more than half a century, always to the advantage of the people and promotion of the glory of the Republic. His fame was not built upon the fluctuating wave of popular party favor, but on service for his country and achievements for the welfare of the nation. Now the people of the Peninsular State, who cherish his memory and the deeds of his life, unite in presenting this memorial to the worth of the foremost man in their history, the man who aided so much in building up their Commonwealth and making secure the great experiment of self-government on this continent.

Lewis Cass was the second governor of Michigan Territory. As its executive he governed wisely for seventeen years, taking office in 1813 and continuing until 1830. His sword had helped to win freedom to the great Northwest. He was the fifth citizen chosen to represent the young State in the Senate of the nation, and in that high body he served for twelve years. He was called to the Cabinet of President Jackson, and held the portfolio of War for four years, to be transferred to the French court as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary, which place he graced for six years. His wisdom and discretion averted trouble between the two countries and restored friendly relations.

While at this post he prevented the ratification of the quintuple treaty and thereby prohibited the establishment of the right of search on the high seas, so strenuously asserted by England. As Secretary of State he served for nearly four years, resigning a few weeks prior to the close of the administration of President Buchanan. I have given a hasty review of the official life of Lewis Cass. It embraces a period of fifty-seven years of service as legislator, soldier, executive, cabinet officer, and diplomat. I believe but one citizen exceeded that length of service—John Quincy Adams.

Michigan owes much to Lewis Cass for its proud eminence in the States of the Union. As its governor his great abilities were devoted to the development of its wonderful resources. His management of affairs connected with the Indians was tempered with wisdom and justice, and his treatment of the original occupants of the soil was followed by friendly feeling between the races. His administration solved the Indian problem by its firmness and equity. His life began at the close of the last century. His years from early manhood were devoted to the advancement of civilization, the glory of his country, and the progress of the people. His service was so conspicuous that in 1848 he was rewarded by the great Democratic party by the nomination for the Presidency.

In the election of that year Lewis Cass received 127 electoral votes to 163 for Zachary Taylor. The popular vote aggregated 2,871,908, divided as follows. Cass, 1,220,544; Taylor, 1,360,101; Van Buren (Free Soil), 291,263, giving a plurality of 139,557 for Taylor, leaving him a minority President. In the light of the situation of parties political to-day, a study of that election is of interest. There were thirty States, and each of the leading candidates succeeded in fifteen, an equal division. General Cass was successful in eight Northern States and seven Southern, while General Taylor received a preponderance of votes in eight Southern States and seven Northern. In the North Cass had 810,460 and Taylor 925,472 votes, while in the South the vote stood 410,084 for Cass and 434,629 for Taylor. In this eight to seven contest the result was determined by a small majority in three States of the South. A change of 1,021 votes in each of the three States of Delaware, Georgia, and Louisiana would have given the victory to General Cass, and might have changed the history of the country.

The pivotal States of the North were taken from General Cass by the letter to Nicholson, dated December 30, 1847. In that letter General Cass took strong grounds against the Wilmot proviso. He believed, to use his own words, its adoption—

Would weaken, if not impair, the union of States, and would sow the seeds of future discord, which would grow up and ripen into an abundant harvest of calamity.

It would seem as if he was forecasting by his fears the horoscope of the future; to his prophetic eye the mists of coming years were lifted. In the same letter, while endeavoring to protect what he thought the constitutional rights of the South by opposition to this measure of the anti-slavery sentiment, he failed to solidify that section by his utterance against the institution of slavery. He said:

We may well regret the existence of slavery in Southern States and wish they had been saved from its introduction.

In the great States of the North the waves of an adverse popular sentiment beat against him, provoked by his espousal of what he thought the rights of the South, while that portion failed him at the last.

Having hastily sketched the political life and public services of the statesman of the Northwest, I desire to speak of him as a patriot. He loved his country and her institutions; his life was panoplied in honest and simple patriotism. A reference to his services in the Army in the early days of the Republic attest his devotion to the Union. His words and votes in the Senate during the war with Mexico were always for the nation's glory and in aid of its soldiers, and to promote their triumph.

In the war for the Union he occupied grounds of exalted patriotism. He deplored the conflict, and fervently hoped the Union would be undisturbed, that the storm would pass. He quitted the Cabinet of President Buchanan, being unwilling to share longer the councils of an administration where the Government was not strongly maintained. He was unable to discover the intentions of a Government that scarcely knew its own intentions, and withdrew from its deliberations. With the change of administration Cass still hoped for reconciliation between his countrymen. He abhorred war, but believed in protecting the Government. In 1847 he wrote:

All wars are to be deprecated as well by the statesman as by the philanthropist. They are great evils; but there are greater evils than these, and submission to injustice is among them. The nation which should refuse to defend its rights and its honor when assailed would soon have neither to defend.

He held that in times of peril—

There is one ark of safety for us, and that is an honest appeal to the fundamental principles of our Union and a stern determination to abide their dictates.

No one thought General Cass would hesitate when the hour of trial came. As he saw the country he realized that the quarrel was in its nature irreconcilable and eternal as the warfare between right and wrong. He found the people of the North divided, their views being aptly defined as some holding to the wisdom that desired war that we might have perpetual peace, against the folly that clamored for peace that we might have perpetual war. At last the people of the North learned the maxim of William of Orange that "war was preferable to a doubtful peace."

Lewis Cass spoke for the Government of his country in the hour when every breaker and billow of the political ocean was beating upon its shore. The flag of the nation was fired upon by those in revolt; the forts of the Government were seized by armed foes; then there came the great uprising in the North. The avenging genius of the Northmen resented the attack on the nation and its flag. The State of Michigan became a giant in the fray. At the war meeting in Detroit, April 17, 1861, the venerable statesman was present. He was aided to the platform, and there the old man spoke for his country. He said:

I come to-day to do honor to the old flag that you have raised to the breeze, and which has maintained itself at home and abroad. I was born under it, and have lived under it, and I hope that the last hour that comes to all may come to me before its stars are diminished in number. Though I recognize the duty of every American citizen to stand by the Government, I hope that that Almighty Being who has so often and so wonderfully kept us may preserve us from civil war, and that he will keep us still.

The utterances of the old man eloquent kindled the patriotic fires. His words shone through the darkness of the political atmosphere like characters of light.

It is a pleasing coincidence that the next speaker was Cass's old political antagonist and successor in the Senate, Zachariah Chandler, he of rugged words and patriotic heart, loving the Union and liberty.

Then Michigan was the home of patriotism. As in ancient Rome, the cry "the Republic is in danger!" stilled all division, effaced all partisanship, and men became only patriots. Party lines were obliterated, and the Commonwealth became the abode of patriotic fervor. In a few days the First Regiment of Michigan Volunteers was organized, and it was the first military organization from the West to defend the capital. This regiment was partly equipped by Lewis Cass. May I be pardoned, sir, if I mention the fact that a private soldier in that command in these Halls to-day, with loving reverence, speaks of the great statesman. In a fortnight the people of the metropolis again assembled to take counsel and prepare for the conflict.

The sage and patriot, Lewis Cass, the warrior who broke his sword on that spot nearly fifty years before rather than surrender it to a foreign foe, presided over the concourse of patriots. His words kindled anew the patriotic fires, which burned fiercely through the long contest, and before the end Michigan sent 91,000 of her sons to defend the Union. At this gathering he spoke for his country and her institutions. He declared there was but one path—there was no neutral position; all must sustain the Government. He solemnly averred that he who is not for his country is against her.

His words were like beacons in the upward path of mankind. They were uttered in those moments in our history when they served to influence the course of events during a long future. They were potent in the period of the great war that made ambition virtue. He who nearly a third of a century ago had issued the order which put down nullification now called the people to aid in perpetuating the Government. Although he was approaching that age in life when shadows foretell the nearness of evening, his days were prolonged that he might see the flag for which he had given his early manhood triumphant, the Union he had loved so well re-established and again form one of the main bulwarks of our civilization.

During all those terrible years of conflict the aged warrior watched with anxious solicitude the issue of the greatest war of modern times—a conflict which illustrated in crimson colors the grandeur, even sublimity, of American valor. He saw the Government restored—the epoch of transition from the old to the new—where servitude should not have dominion in a country of liberty. Ere the great heart ceased to throb he saw the last furrow of war closed, the transforming and renewing hand of time laid upon the fortunes of his country, and its people and the nation enter upon a new and greater career of progress. Peace came to the troubled land, and then the old man slept in the peace of the grave.

The life of Lewis Cass was one illustrative of the genius of our institutions. His youth was one of poverty, devoid of advantages. His education was imperfect. When he attained the age of seventeen years he left his native New Hampshire to join the pioneers of the West. Being without means he made the journey through the mountain wilds from New England to Ohio on foot. In his new home the people recognized the resources and courage of the young man, starting him on the road that led to highest places. Though of limited education, his writings exhibit native ability and high literary taste. In all positions he was conscientious, industrious, and faithful. All his life he was simple-minded, pure, and admirable, attaching friends and retaining them. He came from the people and never forgot them. He was devoid of the arts of the demagogue and ignorant of political charlatanry. To such a fame and such a life those to come can well look for encouragement and inspiration.

Michigan presents this statue to the nation. It represents one who blazed the way in her struggles to greatness whose life was a gracious emphasis to the loftiest patriotism, usefulness, pureness of life, and devotion to duty and country. More than two decades have passed since he entered into rest. His memory was destined to wait long for the reward and vintage of his toil. When our times have melted into haze others will recover from distance the unstained record of his illustrious career.

We place him to-day in the American Pantheon, among the memorials of those of heroic renown who have long since passed to the solemn shades, with that other company of distinguished service who people the silent continent of eternity. In that assemblage he will stand—a step to his left the murdered Executive, whose career began as his reached its zenith; to the right another warrior in the rugged leader of the Green Mountain boys, while to the front the eyes of stone forever gaze on the marble lineaments of the noblest of the noble, the Father of his Country.

Just beyond the author of the Magna Charta of our rights—the declaration of a people's freedom—silently watches the constellation. The mournful and careworn features of the liberator, the martyr President, surrounded by warriors and statesmen, hold eternal vigil over the nation he lifted up into God's rays of freedom. Orators, commanders whose souls went up to heaven amid the clouds of battle, and those who suffered and died, or who toiled and wrought for the elevation of mankind, are there. It is a noble array of the Republic's best and good, a glorious company of Liberty's apostles. And now the circle of glory widens to admit Lewis Cass to a well-earned place. He is welcome to the "silent senate of the dead"—a congress of fame in perpetual session, "whose members have received their high credentials at the hands of history and whose terms of office will outlast the ages."

The State of Michigan presents the statue of Lewis Cass in lasting marble. It may perhaps in coming years crumble to dust, but his memory is indestructible to all ravaging time. He will live in the sunlight of national gratitude and enduring fame. [Applause.]

Mr. SEYMOUR. The marble statue which Michigan has placed in Statuary Hall is that of a representative American. Born at Exeter, amidst the rugged hills of New Hampshire, where he received an academic education—sprung from a sire of Revolutionary fame, Lewis Cass removed with his parents in 1799 to Wilmington, Del., where he became employed as teacher. Subsequently the family emigrated to Ohio and settled on a tract of land on the Muskingum River, near Zanesville, while Lewis remained at Marietta and commenced the study of law in the office of Governor Meigs. He married Elizabeth Spencer, of Virginia, was elected a member of the Legislature of Ohio, and attracted the attention of Jefferson by a communication to the President setting forth the views of the Legislature in relation to the alleged treasonable intentions of Aaron Burr. He was appointed marshal of Ohio in 1807, which office he held until 1813.

At the beginning of the second war with England he joined the forces of General Hull, was made colonel and afterwards promoted to brigadier-general. He was stationed in command at Detroit and appointed governor of the Territory of Michigan. and as a part of his labor negotiated twenty-two distinct Indian treaties, and conducted the expedition for the exploration of the Northwestern Territory, in which he traveled upwards of 4,000 miles. He was appointed Secretary of War by General Jackson in 1831, which position he resigned to accept that of minister to France. Elected as United States Senator in 1845, he resigned when nominated for President in 1848, and after his defeat was re-elected to the Senate, and subsequently, in 1857, he was appointed Secretary of State by President Buchanan, but resigned the position when the President refused to re-enforce Major Anderson and reprovision Fort Sumter. His resignation terminated a public career of fifty-six years. His varied experience as teacher, lawyer, soldier, and statesman gave him that cosmopolitan character so pre-eminently American. Drifting from Eastern to frontier life, engaging in different avocations, he acquired those elements of self-reliance and self-confidence which qualified him for the positions of trust and responsibility offered him during his eventful life. His industrious habits fitted him for every sphere he was called upon to fill. Practice made him a speaker and eloquence waited on his toil. He was a thorough partisan and as consistent a practical Democrat as the constitutional mixture of personal and State rights would allow. He loved his race and his country. His inner feelings, and ofttimes his outward expressions, reached out to humanity and caused him to deplore, like Jefferson, his great teacher and idol, a condition which confronted his country, but which both were unable to mend.

To keep in check two opposing forces continually seeking opposite directions, and by the friction engendered continually requiring concessions, was the problem he always attempted to solve on the line of constitutional right and unity. He was formed in that stern mold in which New England climate and New England teachings impressed and reared their hardy sons. The town meeting, that school and basis of New England politics, educated him in strict construction of delegated or Federal powers, with a liberal belief in the large reservation of popular or State rights. The study of the law confirmed his mental leanings, and frontier life broadened out his views of popular and squatter rights in local and territorial control. As a soldier, he was aggressive and confident.

Indignation possessed his soul when he found himself and his army included, as he believed, in the unnecessary capitulation of Hull. His military ability found insufficient scope in the extent or range of his military experiences. The times were not ripe for its development. What success might have been his in a wider field with larger service the prophets or panegyrists of his time have not intimated. As a diplomate, he was tenacious and defiant. He roused the ire of the British public by his vigorous protest against the quintuple treaty, and strengthened the efforts of party friends by his persistent advocacy of the line of "fifty-four forty" in the Oregon controversy. As a legislator, he distinguished the commencement of his official career in the Ohio Legislature by the framing and passage of a law authorizing the arrest of men and boats in a supposed treasonable expedition down the river.

Loyalty and love of country marked the beginnings of his public life. In fealty to party he had few superiors. He critically analyzed the measures presented on the line of constitutional power, and attempted to smooth obedience by concession to popular rights. On the passage of the fugitive-slave law he refrained from voting, though occupying his seat in the Senate, because the amendment he offered was defeated allowing trial by jury if demanded in the State where the fugitive resided. He gave his adhesion and support to the law after its passage. He regarded with disfavor the practical repeal of the compromise measures of 1820, but voted for the Kansas and Nebraska bill on the ground of squatter and constitutional right. He favored the election of James Buchanan, but repudiated his inaction towards Anderson and Sumter. As the Declaration of Independence was the basis and groundwork of the Constitution, so was the nullification proclamation of Andrew Jackson the guide and basis of national action in the subsequent maintenance of the Union.

To this creed of principles Lewis Cass adhered and left the Cabinet of Buchanan in support of a necessary construction of Federal power preservative of the nationality of his country. He brooked no action or theory in early or later life which aimed at the impairment of Federal unity. He was a unionist with all the conditions of compromise and interpretation which seemed necessary to the maintenance and enforcement of the Constitution. That instrument was, in his view, the ultima thule of national life and the only substantial protection to popular rights on this continent. He represented in his life a connecting link between the early development and later growth of our country, and left the impress of his character and statesmanship not only upon Michigan but the growing West. Industrious, temperate, and economical in his habits, he lived neither in parsimony nor ostentation. Simplicity and frugality ever distinguished him.

The purity of his life was unquestioned. Cultured, self-reliant, and determined, he was the embodiment of firmness and courage. Some one wrote, "He is now ill with the ague, the only thing that can shake him." Conservatism restrained his impulses. The key-note of his political career was the maintenance of the Union under the Constitution. For this his sacrifices were made. When that Constitution was assailed and the integrity of the Union threatened he left an administration he could no longer indorse, returned to his people and gave the influence of his character and the wisdom of his counsel in declining years to his practical and only political creed. Covering himself with glory as with a garment by this crowning act of his official life, his name went down to history honored with the plaudits of his countrymen. As we review his character so much the more shall we revere his memory. It was permitted him to see the Union preserved through the arbitrament of arms and catch a glimpse of its increasing strength when purged of the disturbing cause.

The empty sleeve, the heavy thud of crutch and artificial limb upon the floor of this Capitol, are constant reminders of the cost and terrific character of the struggle, where patriotism was equaled only by sectional devotion, and which left us a people of freemen and marked us a nation of braves. That something of the extent of the conflict, should it ever occur, was early realized by him is evidenced by the language he uttered and the concessions he made; yet when the day of trial came he voiced his position in no uncertain sound. His body rests in the city and State of his adoption, and Michigan sends his statue to this Capitol as a memorial of his worth and a tribute to his official services and public virtues. The cold marble will look down with stern and relentless gaze upon the passing crowd, and men in turn will revere his character and honor his patriotism and greatness as they appreciate his motives, and throw the mantle of charity on the times in which he acted. [Applause.]

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, when Michigan determined to avail herself of the invitation of the National Government to place in the old historic Hall of the House of Representatives statues of two of her most illustrious citizens, she had no difficulty in designating the first worthy of this national commemoration, and so chiseled in marble the form and features of Lewis Cass. Cass and Michigan! Names linked in indissoluble union. His life is interwoven with her own, and his ashes repose in her eternal embrace. No other of her citizens was so long or more honorably connected with her history; none other reflected greater or more enduring glory upon her name. Identifying himself with her interests and going to her defense while yet a Territory, he followed her fortunes in war and peace through a lifetime of more than half a century with unwavering fidelity and unflagging zeal.

For a period of more than fifty years he was in her service and the nation's; and at the close of his official career he continued until the hour of his death her counselor and friend. Soldier, governor, Cabinet officer, diplomate, Senator, nominee of his party for the Presidency, premier; there was no place within the gift of his party he could not command; there was no position to which he was called that he did not adorn. In the judgment of the State, therefore, he fills the full measure of the nation's invitation, for he was "distinguished" both in "civil and military life."

I shall not attempt a detailed statement of his eventful career. As a soldier, in the wilds of Michigan resisting the aggressions of a foreign foe, he gave enduring proof of his patriotism and courage. Assigned to the civil administration of that Territory in 1813, for eighteen years he devoted his energies to the advancement of her material interests, and laid the foundationsbroad and deep for her rapid development and future prosperity. While yet in the discharge of the civil administration of the Territory he was summoned by President Jackson to a seat in his Cabinet as Secretary of War, the duties of which position, augmented by difficulties with Indian tribes and the graver conditions growing out of the spirit of nullification, he discharged with signal ability.

The steady yet firm hand with which he held the United States military forces at Charleston, on the dividing lines between national supremacy and State sovereignty, maintaining the supreme authority of the one without infringing upon the integrity of the other; his patriotic appeal to the State of Virginia to use her influence to dissuade South Carolina from a course fraught with such disastrous consequences to the "integrity of the Union and the cause of free government," evinced the highest statesmanship and contributed in no small degree to the restoration of harmonious relations and the recognition of the supremacy of the lawful authority of the National Government.

Forced to resign the War portfolio in 1836, by reason of impaired health, he was appointed minister to France, in which position he rendered his Government most illustrious service. It was during his mission to this court that England sought by a masterly stroke of diplomacy to secure the right of search on the high seas, a right the American Government had persistently denied, under the pretext of suppressing the African slave trade. It well-nigh succeeded in uniting the five great powers of Europe—England, Austria, Russia, Prussia, and France—in a declaration of this right and ingrafting it into the code of international law. It was a moment of supreme peril to the Republic. England, Austria, and Prussia had already executed the treaty, and its consummation only required the approval of France. There was no time to communicate with and receive instructions from the home Government; he must take the responsibility of prompt, decisive action or the alliance would be concluded. He therefore at once addressed a communication to the French minister of foreign affairs protesting in the most vigorous terms against the consummation of this conspiracy. In the course of that communication he said:

But the subject assumes another aspect when the American people are told by one of the parties that their vessels are to be forcibly entered and examined in order to carry into effect these stipulations. Certainly the American Government does not believe that the high powers, contracting parties to the treaty, have any wish to compel the United States by force to adapt their measures to its provisions or to adopt its stipulations. They have too much confidence in their sense of justice to force any such result, and they will see with pleasure the prompt disavowal made by yourself, sir, in the name of your country, at the tribune of the Chamber of Deputies, of any intention of this nature. But were it otherwise, and were it possible they might be deceived in their confident expectations, that would not alter in one tittle their course of action. Their duty would be the same and the same would be their determination to fulfill it. They would prepare themselves, with apprehension indeed, but without dismay; with regret, but with firmness, for one of those desperate struggles which have sometimes occurred in the history of the world, where a just cause and the favor of Providence have given strength to comparative weakness and enabled it to break down the pride of power.

In closing his protest he said:

It is proper for me to add that this communication has been made without any instruction from the United States. I have considered this case as one in which an American representative to a foreign power should act without awaiting the orders of his Government. I have presumed, in the views I have submitted to you, that I express the feelings of the American Government and people. If in this I have deceived myself, the responsibility will be mine. As soon as I can receive dispatches from the United States, in answer to my communication, I shall be enabled to declare to you either that my conduct has been approved by the President or that my mission has terminated.

He supplemented this protest by a pamphlet addressed to the French people, in which he laid bare the pretenses of the English Government, and exposed her real purpose in conceiving and consummating the alliance. It was a document so forceful, so statesmanlike, so comprehensive, and so illustrative of the character and ability of the man that I can not refrain from quoting a few paragraphs therefrom:

The right of maritime search now in discussion between the British and American Governments is a grave question interesting to all nations to whom freedom of the seas is dear. Its connection with the African slave trade is but incidental, and can not affect the nature of the question. Great Britain proposes to push this point, in order to destroy the yet existing relics of that trade. Naval supremacy she had acquired and naval supremacy she seeks.

It is impossible that the intelligent Government and people of Great Britain should shut their eyes to the effect of this claim of a right of search upon their interests, whatever motives of philanthropy may have led to its first suggestion. To their flag it will give the virtual supremacy of the seas. During twenty-five years the British Government has urged the Government of the United States to consent to this measure. The application has been steadily repelled, and now this principle of the right of search, in a time of profound peace, heretofore never claimed as a question of right, for the first time since the last general war in Europe is claimed by Great Britain to be a part of the law of nations which she has both the right and the will to carry into effect.

Who made England the great prefect of police of the ocean, searching and seizing at pleasure? Once establish this right of search, and the scenes of violence which have checkered the ocean for twenty years will again be renewed. The nation which should tamely submit to such pretensions, would merit, as surely it would receive, the contumely of the world.

The American Government and people will never submit. With them it is a question of life and death. They went to war thirty years ago to oppose it, when comparatively young and weak, and now, after having advanced in the elements of power with a rapidity unknown in human history, they will not be found wanting to their duties and honor in the day of trial.

An American at home or in Europe may safely predict that the first man impressed from a ship of his country and detained with an avowal of the right by order of the British Government will be the signal of war. A war, too, which will be long, bitter, and accompanied, it may be, with many vicissitudes; for no citizen of the United States can shut his eyes to the power of Great Britain nor to the gallantry of her fleet and armies. But twice the Republic has come out honorably from a similar contest, and with a just cause she would again hope for success. At any rate, she would try. Even if England were clearly right, as in our opinion she is clearly wrong, she might forbear much without any imputation upon her honor.

She has won her way to distinction by a thousand feats in arms, and what is her better title to renown by countless feats in peace, triumph of genius, of skill, of industry, and of enterprise which have gained her a name that the proudest may envy, and that few can hope to equal. She has given birth to an empire in the West, an empire whose extent and duration it passes human sagacity even to conjecture. There are planted her laws, her language, her manners, her institutions. A thousand ties of interest unite these kindred people. Let England cherish this as her most glorious work; but let her recollect, too, that her spirit equal to her own animates the Republic, and though she may be crushed she will not be dishonored.

The result of this protest and appeal arrested the course of negotiation, secured the rejection of the treaty by France, thwarted the designs of the English Government, averted the catastrophe of war, and maintained the rights and honor of the American Republic.

Returning home from his foreign mission, he was everywhere received with public honors and demonstrations of regard, and was prominently mentioned as the candidate of his party for the Presidency. Another, however, was chosen. In 1845 the State of Michigan elected him to the United States Senate, where he won fresh laurels in the arena of debate with such intellectual athletes as Webster, Calhoun, and their compeers. In the great debate on the Oregon question he gave utterance to sentiments which should be perpetuated in the hearts of the American people:

It pains me, sir, to hear allusions to the destruction of this Government and the dissolution of this Confederacy. It pains me, not because they inspire me with any fear, but because we ought to have one unpronounceable word, as the Jews had of old, and that word is "dissolution." We should reject the feeling from our hearts and its name from our tongues.

He continued to represent the State of Michigan in the United States Senate until 1848, when he resigned to accept the nomination of his party for the Presidency; but failing of election he was returned for the remainder of his unexpired term, and at its close, in 1855, re-elected for the full term of six years. While a firm believer in the tenets of his party, his entire Senatorial career was marked with a broad statesmanship and a conscientious discharge of duty as he saw it, from the performance of which no flattery could seduce and no power swerve.

Retiring from the Senate on the 4th of March, 1857, he assumed the duties of Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Buchanan, bringing to the discharge of its delicate functions the same comprehensive statesmanship which had marked the long course of his official life.

The events of 1860 and 1861 brought on a crisis in public affairs which forced General Cass to resign from the Cabinet of President Buchanan, which he did on the 12th of December, 1860. His letter of resignation and the President's reply will best serve to disclose the reason why he felt called upon to sever his connection with the administration:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, December 12, 1860.

SIR: The present alarming crisis in our national affairs has engaged you serious consideration, and in your recent message you have expressed to Congress and through Congress to the country the views you have formed respecting the questions, fraught with the most momentous consequences, which are now presented to the American people for solution. With the general principles laid down in that message I fully concur, and I appreciate with warm sympathy its patriotic appeals and suggestions. What measures it is competent and proper for the Executive to adopt under existing circumstances is a subject which has received your most careful attention, and with the anxious hope, as I well know from having participated in the deliberations, that tranquillity and good feeling may be speedily restored to this agitated and divided Confederacy.

In some points which I deem of vital importance it has been my misfortune to differ from you.

It has been my decided opinion, which for some time past I have urged at various meetings of the Cabinet, that additional troops should be sent to re-enforce the forts in the harbor of Charleston, with a view to their better defense, should they be attacked, and that an armed vessel should likewise be ordered there to aid if necessary in the defense, and also, should it be required, in the collection of the revenue, and it is yet my opinion that these measures should be adopted without the least delay. I have likewise urged the expediency of immediately removing the custom-house at Charleston to one of the forts in the port and of making arrangements for the collection of the duties there by having a collector and other officers ready to act when necessary, so that when the office may become vacant the proper authority may be there to collect the duties on the part of the United States.

I continue to think that these arrangements should be immediately made. While the right and the responsibility of deciding belong to you, it is very desirable that at this perilous juncture there should be as far as possible unanimity in your councils with a view to safe and efficient action. I have, therefore, felt it my duty to tender you my resignation of the office of Secretary of State and to ask your permission to retire from that official association with yourself and the members of your Cabinet which I have enjoyed during almost four years without the occurrence of a single incident to interrupt the personal intercourse which has so happily existed.

I can not close this letter without bearing my testimony to the zealous and earnest devotion to the best interests of the country with which during a term of unexampled trials and troubles you have sought to discharge the duties of your high station.

Thanking you for the kindness and confidence you have not ceased to manifest toward me, and with the expression of my warmest regard both for yourself and the gentlemen of your Cabinet,

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

LEW. CASS.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

WASHINGTON, December 15, 1860.

SIR: I have received your resignation of the office of Secretary of State with surprise and regret. After we had passed through nearly the whole term of the administration with mutual and cordial friendship and regard, I cherished the earnest hope that nothing might occur to disturb our official relations until its end. You have decided differently; and I have no right to complain.

I must express my gratification at your concurrence with the general principles laid down in my last message, and your appreciation "with warm sympathy of its patriotic appeals and suggestions." This I value very highly; and I rejoice that we concur in the opinion that Congress does not possess the power under the Constitution to coerce a State by force of arms to remain in the Confederacy.

The question on which we unfortunately differ is that of ordering a detachment of the Army and Navy to Charleston, and is correctly stated in your letter of resignation. I do not intend to argue this question. Suffice it to say that your remarks upon the subject were heard by myself and the Cabinet with all the respect due to your high position, your long experience, and your unblemished character; but they failed to convince us of the necessity and propriety, under existing circumstances, of adopting such a measure. The Secretaries of War and of the Navy, through whom the orders must have issued to re-enforce the forts, did not concur in your views; and whilst the whole responsibility for the refusal rested upon myself, they were the members of the Cabinet more directly interested.

You may have judged correctly on this important question, and your opinion is entitled to grave consideration; but under my convictions of duty, and believing as I do that no present necessity exists for a resort to force for the protection of the public property, it was impossible for me to have risked a collision of arms in the harbor of Charleston, and thereby have defeated the reasonable hopes which I cherish of the final triumph of the Constitution and the Union. I have only to add that you will take with you into retirement my heartfelt wishes that the evening of your days may be prosperous and happy.

Very respectfully, yours,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

Hon. LEWIS CASS.

Believing as President Buchanan did, that—

Congress does not possess the power under the Constitution to coerce a State by force of arms to remain in the Confederacy—

it was perfectly natural that he should refuse to re-enforce the United States garrison at Charleston, fearing that such a step might provoke hostilities on the part of South Carolina.

Under his view of the Constitution, the only way to preserve the Union was to dissuade a State from secession. Once seceded the Union was hopelessly destroyed. Whatever may have been the views of General Cass upon this question, it is certain that he believed it to be the duty of the Executive of the National Government to execute its laws, hold its forts, and collect its revenues, and to employ whatever military or naval forces might be necessary to accomplish such end. Hence General Cass insisted that—

Without the least delay additional troops should be sent to re-enforce the forts in the harbor of Charleston, and that armed vessels should be ordered there to aid in their defense, and in the collection of the revenues.

A disagreement with the Executive upon this point caused him to sever his connection with the administration. Returning to his home in Michigan, he passed the remainder of his days in the seclusion of private life, but giving the full weight of his counsel and influence to the national cause. In a speech delivered in Detroit on the 24th of April, 1861, he said, among other things:

I feel it my duty, while I can do but little, to do all I can to manifest the deep interest I feel in the restoration to peace and good order and submission to the law of every portion of this glorious Republic. Our war to-day is a domestic one, commenced by and bringing in its train acts which no right-feeling man can contemplate without most painful regret. In the midst of prosperity, without a single foe to assail us, without a single injury at home caused by the operations of the Government to affect us, this glorious Union, acquired by the blood and sacrifices of our fathers, has been dishonored and rejected by a portion of the States composing it—a union which has given us more blessings than any previous government ever conferred upon man. Here, thank God, its ensign floats proudly and safely, and no American can see its folds spread out to the breeze without feeling a thrill of pride in his heart and without recalling the splendid deeds it has witnessed in many a bloody contest from the day of Bunker Hill to our time.

The loyal American people can defend it, and the deafening cheers which meet us to-day are a sure pledge that they will defend it. You need no one to tell you what are the dangers of your country, nor what are your duties, but meet and avert them. There is but one path for every true man to follow, and that is broad and plain. It will conduct us, not indeed without trials and sufferings, to peace and to the restoration of the Union. He who is not for his country is against her. There is no neutral position to be occupied. It is the duty of all zealously to support the Government in its efforts to bring this unhappy civil war to a speedy and satisfactory conclusion by the restoration in its integrity of that great charter of freedom bequeathed to us by Washington and his compatriots.

In 1866, at the ripe age of eighty-four, after fifty-six years of public service, his connection with earthly affairs was finally severed. But the memory of his public and private virtues remains forever to be cherished by the State and emulated by the people. With a just pride we place his statue in the nation's Capitol; his fame we intrust to his countrymen. [Applause.]

Mr. WHITING, of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, Michigan, in placing in Statuary Hall, at the national capital, the statue of Lewis Cass, becomingly does honor to the memory of the greatest man Michigan has yet given to history. He was distinguished as a soldier, explorer, statesman, savant, and diplomat. He loved his State and his country and he gave them fifty-five years of uninterrupted and devoted service.

He loved the old flag, and he served it well in his young manhood, in his prime, and in old age. He was one of the greatest and he was the last of our second generation of statesmen, sons of Revolutionary sires, who carried on the great Government their fathers founded.

To Lewis Cass, as to the other great statesmen of his time, the Constitution was sacred. He believed in the rights of the States as protected by the Constitution, but he believed also in the majesty of the Union.

He was a strong arm of the Government in the great Northwest at the dawn of the century against the machinations of Aaron Burr and the soldiery of Great Britain.

He was Andrew Jackson's right hand in suppressing nullification in South Carolina. As American minister to France he defeated the ratification of the quintuple treaty, involving Great Britain's right of search on the high seas, and in the last days of his long life he threw his great influence against secession.

He was the last survivor of the great men who framed the Missouri compromise and averted war; but when war came he was for the restoration of the Union.

He resigned from James Buchanan's Cabinet because the President did not take that course with South Carolina that Andrew Jackson took a quarter century before.

He gave expression to his ideas of the suppression of the rebellion when he sent word to Secretary Cameron:

Do not defend Washington; do not put batteries on Georgetown Heights; but shove your troops directly into Virginia and quarter them there.

Lewis Cass participated actively in the thrilling events of half a century of national history. But Michigan cherishes his name most closely for the fostering care that he bestowed upon her during her years of infancy. He was governor of Michigan for twenty years. That venerable and noble Democrat, Alpheus Felch, who was contemporaneous with Cass in public life, says of his administration:

These years constitute an epoch in the history of Michigan. The executive powers of the Government have never been more assiduously or more successfully exercised in building up a new country, or in promoting the growth of agricultural, mechanical, or educational interests.

* * * In the administration of Indian affairs General Cass was most fortunate. He early succeeded in securing the confidence and respect of the Indians. The justice and kindness of his dealings did much to pacify and quiet them and dispel the fears of the settlers of hostile attacks. * * * His administration as governor was one of decided success, and while it secured great results to the Territory, it bound him to the people by the strongest ties of respect and love. He well deserved the rewards due to a faithful, honest, and able public servant. The statue to be placed in the Capitol is a just tribute to his memory. Michigan honors herself in honoring her most illustrious statesman.

I may well conclude by adding to this review of Lewis Cass's services to his State, the distinguished Judge Ross Wilkins's epitome o his services to his country. Judge Wilkins said:

Identified with the State since the war of 1812, Michigan claims him for her own, but the national record can not be accurate without the frequent recurrence of his name in the annals of the United States for more than sixty-five years—from the treason of Burr to the insurrection of 1860. He, by timely action, exploded the one, and in his eightieth year aided in giving the death-blow to the other. [Applause.]

Mr. CUTCHEON. Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose at this late hour to indulge in any extended remarks upon the life and character of Lewis Cass. Michigan's first contribution to the National Statuary Hall is made this day, and whoever may be the subject of the second there can be no doubt but that Lewis Cass should be the first contribution from that State.

It is a remarkable fact, sir, that the two men who have dominated the politics of the State of Michigan for a period of nearly seventy years, from 1813 to 1880, were born in the same State of New Hampshire, and within a few miles from each other in adjoining counties. I refer to Lewis Cass and Zachariah Chandler. Mr. Chandler was the junior of Mr. Cass by about thirty years, and followed him in his removal at about the same age from New Hampshire to the State of Michigan.

I shall not attempt, Mr. Speaker, to draw any comparison between the characters of these two men. They were opposites in many respects. General Cass was a conservative among conservatives, while Chandler was a radical among radicals. Cass was a Democrat in politics, while Chandler was a Whig and a Republican. Cass entered public life almost as soon as he reached manhood. Chandler remained a merchant until past middle life. But these two men, so different in their characters and in their lives, successively were the master spirits of the political parties of the Peninsular State.

I desire to speak, sir, for a moment, in regard to the statue itself which Michigan to-night tenders to the nation.

And, first, in regard to it as a portrait. It was my fortune as a young man, in the last years of his life, frequently to see General Cass, as a young man sees and looks up to a man of a past generation. I can say, Mr. Speaker, that the likeness is a most excellent one. The countenance, the head, and pose of the body, everything in regard to the statue, presents before you a likeness of General Lewis Cass as I saw him in his lifetime. Of course there is in it more of strength and vigor than he exhibited in those declining days, for he was already well past seventy years, the usual allotted span of life, before I saw him. Secondly, as a work of art. I do not profess to be a connoisseur of the art of the sculptor. I do not know what others may think of this portraiture of General Cass; but as for myself, when I enter Statuary Hall, there is no figure there that strikes me more impressively and as more worthy of a place in this Pantheon of the Republic than the statue of Lewis Cass. It is the likeness of a man of force. It has a vigor which speaks of positive opinions and of strong convictions. It is the very embodiment of his famous alliteration "fifty-four forty or fight." It reminds one of the words of Tennyson:

That tower of strength
Which stood four-square to all the winds that blew.

In the few further moments allotted to me I shall not speak of him in political capacities as legislator, marshal, governor, foreign minister, Senator, Secretary of State, or Presidential candidate. Others have amplified upon these. I shall speak of him in the less conspicuous aspect of his many-sided character—that of a soldier, or, I should say, a military man. And here let me say that in the State which he served so well, so long, and so honorably, he was always known as General Cass. He was Senator; he was governor; he was Commissioner of Indian Affairs; he was foreign minister, but we always spoke of him as General. General Cass was a volunteer soldier, and he was the son of a volunteer soldier. His father, Capt. Jonathan Cass, of Exeter, N. H., enlisted as a private soldier in the army of the Revolution immediately after the first clash of arms; and it perhaps may be that I have an added interest in him and in this ceremony from the fact that my grandfather marched in the same battalion with Jonathan Cass under the command of Col. Andrew McCleary to the battle of Bunker Hill. He was reared as the son of a soldier. While yet a boy he engaged in the profession of teaching—as so many of our great men have done—in the State of Delaware.

Following this he marched in the advance of empire towards the great West, and found himself in that modern mother of Presidents, the State of Ohio, at Marietta. Here he engaged briefly in the practice of the law, was elected to the Legislature of the State, and was appointed United States marshal, in which office he continued from 1806 until 1813.

In 1812, anticipating war with Great Britain, the then administration commenced the work of putting our Canadian frontier in a condition of defense. Several regiments of volunteers were raised in the State of Ohio for the protection of the line of the Detroit River. Among these marched young Cass, then thirty years of age, as colonel of the Third Ohio Volunteers. He joined the force of General Hull at Dayton, Ohio, and marched through a nearly unbroken wilderness to Detroit, which was reached on July 9, 1812, and which, unknown to him, was to be his future home and the place of his burial.

General Hull being ordered to cross into Canada, Colonel Cass was the first of the American force to put foot upon Canadian soil. He was ordered by General Hull to make an advance with his regiment in the direction of Fort Malden and feel the force of the enemy. He encountered them at the crossing of the Canards, or, as it is called, "Aux Canards," about 5 miles from Fort Malden, and there the first blood of the war of 1812 was spilled under the command and in the presence of General Cass. I will not attempt at this hour to go into details. Instead of advancing and capturing Fort Malden, as Cass urged General Hull, the Detroit River was recrossed, apparently without reason, and the British commander, General Brock, with a small force of about a thousand British soldiers and Indians, was permitted to cross that broad and rapid stream in the face of the superior force of General Hull without opposition. Then followed the surrender of Detroit, which has always been considered, in Michigan at least, a pusillanimous affair and a blot upon her history. It is said, I know not how truly, that so indignant was young Cass at this disgrace that, rather than surrender his sword into the hands of the enemy, he broke it in two. He then hastened to Washington to lay before the administration the history of this first military disaster of the war of 1812. General Hull was tried and convicted of cowardice and sentenced to death, but the sentence was never executed, and he died in peace long years afterward in his New England home. The controversy will never be settled whether he was a coward or a scapegoat. In the spring of 1813 Colonel Cass was exchanged and appointed colonel of the Twenty-seventh United States Infantry, and soon after was made a brigadier-general.

He rejoined the American forces under General W. H. Harrison at Senecaville, Ohio, and marched with him to Lake Erie. The way to Canada had but just been opened by Perry's victory, announced to the country in the laconic words, "We have met the enemy and they are ours." General Harrison debarked his forces at Sisters' Island, near the mouth of the Detroit River, and moved upon Fort Malden, only to find it abandoned and dismantled. General Cass participated in the battle of the Thames, where General Proctor was overcome, his army routed, and a large proportion of them taken prisoners. In this action General Cass acted as volunteer aid to General Harrison, and distinguished himself for his intrepidity. General Harrison in his report of the battle of the Thames spoke of General Cass as "an officer of the highest promise." Upon the close of the war, or rather before the close of the war, in October, 1813, General Cass was appointed governor of Michigan, which had been, partly at least, through his efforts, redeemed from the domination of a hostile power. After serving as governor of the Territory of Michigan, then an empire in extent, from 1813 to 1831, during which time he acted as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, negotiating many treaties and visiting all parts of his domain, he was called into the Cabinet of General Jackson as Minister of War. It had been my purpose to speak somewhat at length in regard to his policy in that capacity as regards the defenses of the country.

In the year 1836 he submitted to Congress an elaborate and able report on the subject of national defenses, accompanied by a more exhaustive scheme of fortification by Colonel Totten, then Chief of Engineers.

From the report of General Cass I make the following extracts. He says:

> And I would suggest that the works which are determined on be pushed with all reasonable vigor, that our whole coast may be placed beyond the reach of injury and insult, as soon as a just regard to circumstances will permit. No objections can arise to this procedure on the ground of expense, because whatever system may be approved by the Legislature, nothing will be gained by delaying its completion beyond the time necessary to the proper execution of the work. In fact, the cost will be greater the longer we are employed in it, not only for obvious reasons, arising out of general superintendence and other contingencies, but because accidents are liable to happen to unfinished work, and the business upon them is deranged by the winter, when they must be properly secured; and the season for resuming labor always finds some preparations necessary which would not have been required had no interruption happened.
>
> But the political considerations which urge forward this great object are entitled to much more weight. When once completed we should feel secure. There is probably not a man in the country who did not look with some solicitude during the past season at our comparatively defenseless condition when the issue of our discussions with France was uncertain, and who did not regret that our preparations, during the long interval of peace we have enjoyed, had not kept pace with our growth and importance. We have now this lesson to add to our other experience. Adequate security is not only due from the Government to the country, and the conviction of it is not only satisfactory, but the knowledge of its existence can not fail to produce an influence upon other nations as well, in the advent of war itself, as in the mode of conducting it. If we are prepared to attack and resist, the chances of being compelled to embark in hostilities will be diminished much in proportion to our preparation. An unprotected commerce, a defenseless coast, and a military marine, wholly inadequate to the wants of our service, would indeed hold out strong inducements to other nations to convert trifling pretexts into serious causes of quarrel.

Out of the past of more than half a century comes this voice of one of our greatest statesmen admonishing us of our dereliction, and I commend now these words to the American Congress and to the American people:

> If we are prepared (says General Cass) to attack and to resist, the chances of being compelled to embark in hostilities will be diminished much in proportion to our preparation.

I also heartily commend to those who have charge of appropriation and expenditure of money for the construction of public works the following from the same report. He says:

> Secondly. I think that when the plan of a work has been approved by Congress and its construction authorized the whole appropriation should be made at once, to be drawn from the Treasury in annual installments to be fixed by the law. This mode of appropriation would remedy much of the inconvenience which has been felt for years in this branch of the public service. The uncertainty respecting the appropriations annually deranges the business, and the delay which biennially takes place in the passage of the necessary law reduces the alternate season of operations to a comparatively short period. An exact inquiry into the effect which the present system of making the appropriations has had upon the expense of the works would probably exhibit an amount far greater than is generally anticipated.

But, Mr. Speaker, I must close. The last public act of General Cass was to resign from the Cabinet of James Buchanan because his administration refused to defend the flag upon Fort Sumter against incipient rebellion. That act won anew for General Cass the heart of Michigan, which had been in part alienated by the compromise measures of 1850–'54. Though almost eighty years of age, he still had fire enough in his heart to cause him to resent that action on the part of his executive chief. I thank God, Mr. Speaker, that he lived long enough to see that flag restored upon Sumter and over every foot of American soil. The storm was past; the sun again shone out unclouded; the Union that he loved and for which he had fought was restored, and he saw her about to enter upon her second century redeemed, glorified, resplendent, secure. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time assigned for these exercises expired some ten minutes ago, but the Chair suggests that perhaps some arrangement can be made by which the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ALLEN], who is next on the list, can be heard.

Mr. POSEY. I ask unanimous consent that the time for this evening's session be extended for ten minutes, and that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ALLEN] be allowed to proceed now for that time.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, it is a striking commentary on the rapidity of the age in which we live that scarcely an hour can be given to the consideration of the character of the man whose impress for good upon this great country equals that of any other statesman of his day. But time moves rapidly, great interests press heavily, and Cass, who did so much to make this nation mighty, and whose life will always be an example for the young men and the patriotic men of this country, can have only a brief hour for his virtues to be spoken of in this Hall of the people.

Lewis Cass was governor of the Northwest Territory from 1813 to 1831—nearly twenty years. He never was elected to an office by the people. He held his office of governor by appointment from the President of the United States. In 1831 he was called to the Cabinet of Andrew Jackson as Secretary of War. His first appearance in public in the city of Washington, fifty-six years ago this month, was to address a temperance meeting in the Hall of the House of Representatives, where his statue now stands. Lewis Cass, who never drank a drop of intoxicating liquor in his life, at that early day, surrounded as he was by the great men of the nation, very few of whom were not addicted to their cups, used this striking language:

No man can indulge in this habit with impunity, and there is only one way by which all danger may be avoided, that is, by entire interdiction.

Those were brave words to be uttered at that time in this city, and they indicate the moral character and stamina of Lewis Cass, which stood him in hand at all times and under all circumstances. He showed the same sterling loyalty to his convictions by always refusing to meet with the Senate on the Lord's day, believing it contrary to the divine command to "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

His residence abroad for several years made him more intensely American. He believed that the people of this country were immeasurably superior in happiness to any nation upon the face of the globe, and he was not afraid to enunciate his belief. He had an American policy; he believed in an American policy; and he uttered it in words like these:

This country could lose nothing at home or abroad by establishing and maintaining an American policy—a policy decided in its spirit, moderate in its tone, and just in its objects—proclaimed and supported firmly.

These are good words to speak now; they are as true now as they were then, and they will always be true so long as this nation is worthy of its own respect or the respect of the nations of the world.

General Cass was not only an American but he believed in the American Union. He never would harbor the thought of a dissolution of the Union; and his voice was always raised upon the side of the Union in the Senate, upon the side of the Constitution; and among other strong words in the debates in those days he used these:

It pains me, sir, to hear allusions to the destruction of this Government and the dissolution of this Confederacy. We ought to have one unpronounceable word, as the Jews of old had, and that word is "dissolution." We should reject the feeling from our hearts and its name from our tongues. Plots and insurrections have no place in this country. We have nothing to fear but ourselves.

Mr. Cass was no friend to slavery, but he knew that slavery was a constitutional institution, and he did not propose to disturb it except in a constitutional way. His twofold object was to preserve the nation and to see to it that no institution which the Constitution sanctioned should be torn away by unconstitutional measures. And this constituted one of the strongest marks of his statesmanship and of his power.

General Cass never believed that the Union could be lawfully dissolved, and when the fiery ordeal came he was found upon the side of the Union. His quick military intuition discovered the road to success, and in the first months of the war he did not hesitate to give his advice to the Government, although he was then a private citizen. Among other things he said to Secretary Cameron these words:

Don't defend Washington; don't put batteries on Georgetown Heights; but shove your troops directly into Virginia and quarter them there.

What Cass urged should be done in the first months of the war had to be done before the rebellion could be subdued.

Michigan is the home of two millions of people. There you will find upon every hill-top the school-house; you will find on almost every square mile a church. That great and mighty and intelligent Commonwealth has grown upon the sure foundation stones that Lewis Cass, among the other early and few pioneers of the great Northwest, laid.

He was a Democrat in the broad sense of that word. He believed, however, that Democracy could only flourish where it was founded upon intelligence. Consequently throughout all his long public life, under all circumstances, he advocated the education of the people as the only safety for a republican form of government.

Among the mighty men who have lived in this country Lewis Cass is the peer of any one of them. He stands with Seward; he stands with the best men and the best thinkers of this nation; and it is with no small degree of pride that I to-night am permitted to recall to the present generation a few of the attributes of that noble man who belonged to the strong generation now passed away. He was so wise that, unlike scores and hundreds of statesmen in this country, he avoided the abyss that finally swamped their reputation and destroyed their influence, because he stood firmly for the Union of the States.

We in the sweet name of charity forgive all south of Mason and Dixon's line who went with their section, but the time has never come, and never will, when a man who lived in the Northern States and proved himself disloyal to the flag can have forgiveness. Lewis Cass stood for the Union; and I thank God that he in his last days was permitted to see the flag again floating over a peaceful and powerful country; that his dying eyes beheld the banner of the Union that he loved floating over the reunited States, never again to be broken. [Applause.]

Mr. CHIPMAN. I now ask a vote on the adoption of the resolutions.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

STATUES OF CASS, MUHLENBERG, AND FULTON.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. Mr. Speaker, I ask the adoption of the joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 268) to authorize the printing of the proceedings in Congress in accepting the statue of the late Lewis Cass, an illustrious citizen, presented by the State of Michigan; and the statues of the late Maj. Gen. John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg, and Robert Fulton, illustrious citizens, presented by the State of Pennsylvania.

Be it resolved, etc., That there be printed of the proceedings in Congress upon the acceptance of the statue of the late Lewis Cass, presented by the State of Michigan, 12,500 copies, of which 3,000 shall be for the use of the Senate, and 9,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives; and in a separate volume, that there shall be printed of the proceedings in Congress upon the acceptance of the statues of the late John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg and Robert Fulton, presented by the State of Pennsylvania, 12,500, of which 3,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, and 9,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to have printed engravings of said statues to accompany said proceedings, and for engraving and printing said pictures the sum of $1,500, or so much as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The joint resolution was read a first and second time and ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passsd.

Mr. ERMENTROUT moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, I now call up the business from the Committee on the District of Columbia under the special order for to-night.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will indicate what bill he desires considered.

WASHINGTON AND WESTERN MARYLAND RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I ask to take from the Speaker's table, with a view to moving non-concurrence in the Senate amendments thereto, the bill (H. R. 9418) to incorporate the Washington and Western Maryland Railroad Company.

The bill was taken from the Speaker's table, the Senate amendments non-concurred in, and the conference asked by the Senate thereon agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced the appointment of Mr. HEARD, Mr. COMPTON, and Mr. ROWELL as managers at the conference on the part of the House.

GEORGETOWN AND TENNALLYTOWN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Private Calendar from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 11811) to amend "An act to incorporate the Georgetown and Tennallytown Railway Company of the District of Columbia," which was received by the President August 10, A. D. 1888, and became a law without his approval, and consider the bill in the House.

There being no objection, the bill was taken up and considered.

It is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Georgetown and Tennallytown Railway Company of the District of Columbia" be, and the same hereby is, amended by substituting, after the words "and along High street, in Georgetown, to the Tennallytown road," the words "and thence along and in said road," for the words "but wholly outside of the limits of said road and along the side of the said road."

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

After the word "road," in line 8, insert "but outside the improved limits thereof."

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEMPHILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

HOLDERS OF SPECIAL-ASSESSMENT LIEN CERTIFICATES.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I now call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 3737) for the relief of the holders of District of Columbia special-assessment lien certificates, and for other purposes. This bill is on the House Calendar, and I ask its present consideration.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the commissioners of the District of Columbia and their successors are hereby authorized to receive and audit all claims that may be presented to them by holders of special-assessment lien certificates, scrip, or stock issued by the government of the District of Columbia or former municipal corporations in said District, whether on account of paving or other special or local improvements or general taxes, in cases where the security for the payment of such certificates, scrip, or stock has been impaired or destroyed by action of Congress, the courts, the government of the District, or former municipal corporations in said District, or where such certificates, scrip, or stock have been issued upon property exempt from tax by law or are or hereafter may become from such or any cause not enforceable against the property in respect of which they were issued; also all claims for the amount of reduction in special assessments which have been paid subsequent to June 18, 1878, and revised according to the rules for revision of special assessments under acts of June 19, 1878, and

June 27, 1879; and said commissioners and their successors are hereby authorized to hear and determine all such claims and to issue to the person or persons found entitled to relief thereon drawback certificates for the amounts respectively found due on account of such certificates, scrip, or stock and interest thereon, as therein specified, to the date of this act, and for the amount of said reduction.

SEC. 2. That the drawback certificates herein provided for shall be receivable for all arrears of general taxes due and unpaid on and prior to the 13th day of June next preceding the issue thereof.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Strike out all of the bill after the twenty-second line and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"And said commissioners and their successors are hereby authorized to hear and determine all the facts connected with such claims, not only as to the amount of the same, but also the name and residence of each present holder of any of said lien certificates, scrip, or stock, and a specific statement of the time when he became such owner; also the time when such claim or claims came into his possession and the name and address of the person or persons from whom he purchased said lien certificate, scrip, or stock, and the amount paid for the same by the present owner, and whether the payment therefor was in cash or in other property; and if in other property, its market value at the time of the purchase of the same, and report these facts to Congress as soon as may be; said commissioners shall also ascertain and report by what act or acts of Congress the security for the payment of such lien certificates, scrip, or stock have been invalidated; also in what way by municipal action, in what way by the courts, and in what way by any other cause, and the amount invalidated by each of the above causes, and the names and residences of the holders of each of the above classes so invalidated; said commissioners shall also ascertain and report the amount of reduction in special assessments under the acts above referred to, and give the rules under which said reduction was made; also the names and residences of present owners of these claims, and the time of their purchase and amount paid, and from whom purchased, if not now in the hands of the original owners of said claims; said commissioners shall also report by what authority, whether by act of Congress or otherwise, the lien certificates scrip, and stock were issued, and the date when the same were issued.

"SEC. 2. The said commissioners shall give notice to all holders of any of the claims mentioned in this act that they will hear and determine the facts concerning the same, by advertising in two daily papers of general circulation in the city of Washington, and shall also give personal notice, or notice by letter, to such persons as are known by them to be the owners of any of the claims described in this act, and shall, if practicable, make their report to the next Congress."

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEMPHILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

COMPILATION OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA LAWS.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I now call up for present consideration the bill (H. R. 8309) to secure for the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the supreme court of the District of Columbia be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to appoint three persons learned in the law as commissioners to compile, arrange, and classify, with a proper index, all statutes and parts of statutes in force in the said District, including the acts of the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, and relating to all such matters as would properly come within the scope of a civil and criminal code; and the said court shall have power to fill any vacancies occurring in said commission.

SEC. 2. That each of the said commissioners shall receive for his services such sum, not exceeding $1,500, as said court has deemed reasonable; said sum to be paid upon the completion of the work and the approval thereof in writing by the court; which sums, together with the reasonable costs incurred by the commission for clerical assistance and incidental expenses, not exceeding the sum of $1,000, shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated, one-half to be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. That the said commissioners shall report such compilation to the next session of Congress, if practicable.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

In line 4 strike out "three" and insert "two."

In line 7 strike out "first" and insert "second."

Strike out all after the word "that," in section 3, and insert:

"Of said compilation when completed, upon order of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, there shall be printed 5,000 copies at the Government Printing Office, said copies to be sold at 10 per cent. above cost."

The amendment was concurred it.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEMPHILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The title of the bill was amended to conform.

WASHINGTON AND SANDY SPRING RAILROAD.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I call up next the bill (S. 1631) to incorporate the Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railroad and Street Railway Company.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Henry M. Baker and A. G. M. Prevost, of the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, and J. L. Husband, G. G. Kimball, H. Maurice Talbott, O. P. H. Clark, and G. O. B. Cissell, of the State of Maryland, and E. J. Evans, of the State of Virginia, and all such persons as shall or may be associated with them and their successors, are hereby created a body politic and corporate in fact and in law, by the name of the Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railroad and Street Railway Company, and by that name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, defend and be defended, in all courts of law and equity, and may make and have a common seal, and the same alter at their pleasure; and said corporation is hereby authorized to lay out, locate, construct, furnish, maintain, operate, and enjoy a continuous railroad and telegraph line with all the necessary appurtenances, namely: Beginning at a point in the city of Washington, D. C., at the intersection of Boundary street and New York avenue and extending parallel with the line of the Metropolitan Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to a point at about 1 mile from said Boundary street; thence leaving the line of the said Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and going in a northeasterly course to the northeastern boundary line of the District of Columbia at or near the intersection of the said northeastern boundary line and the Riggs road, as may hereafter be surveyed and agreed on by and between the parties named, or their successors, and the commissioners of the District of Columbia; and it shall be lawful for said company, in the operation of said street railway, to run its cars at a speed not to exceed 9 miles an hour. That the capital stock of said corporation shall consist of three thousand shares at a par of $50 per share each, which shall in all respects be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable in such manner as the by-laws of said corporation shall provide.

The persons (or their assigns) hereinbefore named, or a majority thereof, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The first meeting of said incorporators shall be held within twenty days from the passage of this act, in the city of Washington. A notice of said meeting, to be signed by seven of the incorporators named herein, shall be published for not less than fifteen days, in one or more newspapers published in the city of Washington, and no other notice of said meeting shall be required. At the first meeting of said incorporators they shall select seven of their number as a board of commissioners of the Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railroad Company. Said board of commissioners, as soon as practicable after being selected, shall organize by the choice from its members of a president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer. The said board of commissioners shall cause to be opened books in the city of Washington, and to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of said corporation: Provided, That the said board of commissioners shall first give ten days' notice of the opening of books for the subscription to the capital stock of said company; and a cash payment of 5 per cent. of all subscriptions shall be made at the time of subscribing, and it shall be receipted for by the treasurer of said board of commissioners, who shall be a bonded officer in an amount to be fixed by said board of commissioners; and as soon as an amount equal to two-thirds of the capital stock of said company shall have been subscribed, and 5 per cent. paid in on the same to the treasurer of said board of commissioners, then the said board of commissioners shall appoint a time and place for the first meeting of the subscribers to the stock of said company, and shall give notice thereof in one newspaper published in the city of Washington, at least five days previous to the day of said meeting; and such subscribers as shall attend the meeting so called, either in person or by lawful proxy, then and there shall elect by ballot seven directors for said corporation; and at such election each share of said capital stock shall entitle the owner thereof to one vote. The president and the secretary of the board of commissioners, and in the case of their absence or inability any two of the officers of said board, shall act as inspectors of said election, and shall certify under their hands the names of the directors elected at said meeting; and the said commissioners, treasurer, and secretary shall then deliver over to said directors all the properties, subscription-books, and other books in their possession, and thereupon the duties of said commissioners shall cease, and thereafter the stockholders shall constitute said body politic and corporate, and said corporation shall be deemed to be completely organized and constituted with all the faculties, rights, and privileges hereby granted.

SEC. 2. That the said corporation shall have all the powers, qualities, faculties, rights, and privileges which lawfully belong to corporations generally, so far as the same shall be necessary for the purposes of its incorporation.

SEC. 3. That there shall be seven directors of said corporation, who shall be a board to transact and manage all the affairs of the corporation and exercise all its powers, subject to the control of the stockholders in general meeting. A majority of the board shall be a quorum. They shall be elected annually by the stockholders in general meeting, and shall hold their offices for one year and until successors shall be elected. They shall be stockholders of the corporation. They shall be elected under regulations and supervision as the board of directors or stockholders shall prescribe after the first election.

SEC. 4. That the board of directors shall elect one of their own number as president of the corporation, and his term of office shall be the same as their own, and he shall exercise such powers as the board or stockholders shall prescribe.

SEC. 5. That the general meeting of the stockholders shall be held annually, at such time and place as the by-laws shall prescribe; and a general meeting may also be called at any time and place by the board of directors, at least ten days' notice thereof being given by advertisment in one or more newspapers published in the city of Washington. In all elections, and in the decision of all questions each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for every share of stock held by him or her. A number of stockholders holding a majority of the shares subscribed, and being presnt in person or represented by proxy, shall be a quorum of a meeting of the stockholders. Stockholders may vote in person or by proxy, and the form of proxies may be prescribed by the by-laws. Less than a quorum of the stockholders may adjourn a meeting from time to time.

SEC. 6. That the board of directors shall have the power to make assessments from time to time on the capital stock until the same shall be paid up; and upon default in the payment of any sum assessed and due upon said stock, the stock may be forfeited and sold for the payment thereof, with interest and expenses, under such regulations as the by-laws shall prescribe, or the corporation may by suit recover the same from the holder of the stock at the time of the assessment thereof.

SEC. 7. That said corporation shall have authority to construct, maintain, and work the railroad mentioned in the first section of this act, and such branches or lateral railroads from its main line as Congress may hereafter grant authority.

SEC. 8. That the said railroad may be constructed with double tracks or single tracks, as the said corporation shall deem proper; and said corporation may construct and maintain all bridges and other structures and works which it shall deem necessary for the purpose of its incorporation; but the land which it shall have the right to acquire for the construction of such road and works shall not exceed an amount to be hereafter agreed on between said corporation and the commissioners of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 9. That said Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railroad and Street Railway Company be, and they are hereby, authorized to issue their bonds to aid in the construction and equipment of its railroad and street railway to the extent of $16,000 per mile for each and every mile or fraction thereof, and to secure the same mortgage on its property, rights of way, and all property whatsoever, real, personal, and mixed, including its franchise as a corporation; and as proof and notice of its legal execution and effectual delivery said mortgage shall be filed and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the District of Columbia.

SEC. 10. That when the road shall be completed to Boundary street and put in operation the said corporation shall have the right to run its own street cars over the tracks of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home road, on New York avenue, for the purpose only of transferring its passengers between Seventh street northwest and Boundary street, on such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon by the two companies; and if they can not agree the supreme court of the District of Columbia, upon the petition of either company and reasonable notice to the other, shall fix the terms and conditions upon which the tracks shall be so used; and if the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railroad Company shall have failed to construct its line of road on New York avenue from Seventh street northwest to Boundary street by the time that the Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge road is completed from Sandy Spring to Boundary street, the said Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railway Company shall have the right to construct a street railway on New York avenue from Boundary street to Seventh street northwest, on the same terms and conditions that are granted to the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railroad Company; and the said Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railroad Company shall have the right to run its cars over the tracks of said road between Seventh street northwest and Boundary street, upon terms and conditions to be agreed upon by the two companies, and in the event of their failure to agree, the supreme court of the District of Columbia shall fix the terms and conditions upon which the said tracks shall be so used.

SEC. 11. That if the corporation can not agree with the owner for the purchase, use, or occupation, of land, gravel, earth, timber, or other material required for the construction, enlargement, or repair of any of its works, or if the owner be a married woman, infant, non compos mentis, or out of the District, the said corporation may apply to the marshal of the District of Columbia, and he shall issue his warrant or summons for a jury to meet on the land at a day therein specified, and being not more than ten nor less than five days thereafter.

SEC. 12. That the said United States marshal shall accordingly summon eighteen disinterested men, not related to either party; and if any of them refuse to attend, he may then summon or call others immediately to make up the number of eighteen. Each party have the right, in person or by attorney or agent, if present at the time, to strike off three, and the marshal shall strike off such as shall not be so stricken off by the parties, until the number shall be reduced to twelve, who shall be a jury.

SEC. 13. That the marshal shall then administer an oath or affirmation to every person of the jury that he will impartially and to the best of his skill and judgment value the land or other property required by the corporation, and also, if the same be land required for the construction of the said railroad or work, the damage which the owner will sustain, if any, by the taking of the land for such use. The jury shall accordingly inquire of such value and damage, and make report thereof in writing, to be signed by them all, and setting forth in case of land the boundaries of the land and the estate, interest, or use to be taken by the corporation. Such inquisition and report shall be returned by the marshal to the clerk of the circuit court of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 14. That such inquisition and report shall be confirmed by such court unless good cause be shown to the contrary, and when confirmed shall be recorded by the clerk of said court; but for cause the court may set it aside and order another inquisition, or more than one from time to time, to be conducted in like manner as the first and with like effect, until an inquisition and report shall be confirmed by the court. Upon such confirmation of the first or any subsequent inquisition and report, and upon payment or tender of the amount fixed in the inquisition to be paid by the corporation, either to the owner or in court, as the court shall order, the said corporation shall be entitled to the property absolutely, or for such estate, interest, or use as shall have been valued and described in the inquisition and report, as fully as the same could be vested in the corporation by a valid conveyance from the owner, and the corporation shall have the right to take away any material so valued.

SEC. 15. That Congress reserves to itself the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act.

The committee propose to amend the bill by striking out the words "and Street Railway" in the title and wherever they occur in the bill; strike out section 10 of the bill and insert in lieu thereof the following, to be known as section 10:

The railroad herein authorized to be built shall be completed and in operation within three years from March 1, 1889, and in default of such completion within the time in this section specified, all rights, franchises, and privileges granted by this act shall immediately determine.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendments reported by the committee.

Mr. SOWDEN. I hope the gentleman in charge of this bill will allow the matter to go over, because it is of too much importance to be passed upon when so few members are present. I observe that a good many amendments to this measure have been stricken out by the Senate.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that this is——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will inform the gentleman from South Carolina that this bill is in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I move to discharge the Committee of the Whole from the further consideration of the bill, and that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HEMPHILL. This is simply a bill to permit the running of a narrow-gauge road out into a certain section of Maryland, so far as giving them a charter to come through the District and allow the people to get into the city. That portion which allowed them to come into the city has been stricken out. They come up to New York avenue, up to the new depot that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company is building. It is only a road running out into the country 22 miles. It has passed the Senate without objection, and I have never heard a single objection to it, and there has been no protest entered against it.

Mr. SOWDEN. I see, Mr. Speaker, in line 75, on page 4, section 1, a provision for the payment of 5 per cent. of the subscription. It strikes me that this is a less amount than has ever been fixed in any charter for the organization of any railroad company; and I find that in another section they are authorized to issue their bonds to aid in the construction and equipment of the road to the extent of $16,000 per mile mortgage security to a construction company.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will state to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that this is a railroad where there is no money to be paid out. It simply gives the people living out in that neighborhood who are anxious to get to the city an opportunity to bring their farm products here by a narrow-gauge road.

Mr. SOWDEN. How have they been getting to the city for the last hundred years?

Mr. HEMPHILL. By hauling their produce in wagons twenty miles over country roads.

Mr. ROWELL. This road penetrates twenty-odd miles into the State of Maryland, in which country a large portion of the hay and other products and truck for this city is produced. The people have to haul their hay for as great a distance as 22 miles; and it is to enable them to get the benefit of railroad communication that this bill is proposed. It allows them to come three or four miles into the District, to where the Baltimore and Ohio road is building its new depot.

Mr. SOWDEN. Are they to run their hay-wagons on the narrow-gauge road, or is it for passengers also?

Mr. ROWELL. It is to carry passengers also.

Mr. HEMPHILL. It is to allow the country people to get into the city.

Mr. SOWDEN. I would like to know whether the cars are to be propelled by steam power, by horse power, or by what kind of power—electricity?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Of course in the country the cars are to run by steam. It is an ordinary narrow-gauge road. They have got a Maryland charter, and all they ask is to get a charter to come through a portion of the city.

Mr. SOWDEN. Where does the railroad begin?

Mr. HEMPHILL. It begins at the boundary, on New York avenue, at the new depot of the Baltimore and Ohio road, and runs out to this town of Sandy Springs, about 22 miles.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendments.

Mr. BUCKALEW. I believe there is a uniform provision in all organizations of companies of this sort that the stock shall be transferable only on the books of the company. Besides, ordinarily the books of a company are to be kept at a known office of the company, where stockholders, creditors, and all who are interested therein shall have access to information they contain at all times. Instead of that this bill provides that the stock shall be transferred as the corporation may please to direct. I suggest to the gentleman from South Carolina that he should make provision that the stock should be transferred only on the books of the company and at their office. We know how these charters are drawn. You get a form drawn up for one company and that charter governs future charters. That form is copied, and so it passes for a precedent.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will state to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that this is a poor little road which the people out there are trying to build for their own benefit. There is no speculation in it for anybody. Not a soul will ever make a dollar out of it by speculation, certainly not in the gentleman's time or mine, and it is hardly worth our while to be as stringent as if we were chartering some great big company.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is upon the amendments reported by the committee.

Mr. SOWDEN. I call for the reading of the amendments separately.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 11, strike out the words "and Street Railway."

Mr. HEARD. I will explain for the benefit of the gentleman from Pennsylvania and other gentlemen who feel an interest in this matter that it was originally contemplated that this road should come into the city, but it has been thought best to have it stop at the boundary, and the idea now is to have the terminus at the head of New York avenue, just where the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has built a new depot on the Metropolitan branch.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, in lines 30, 31 and 32, the following: "And it shall be lawful for said company, in the operation of said street railway, to run its cars at a speed not to exceed 9 miles an hour."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, in lines 48 and 49, the words "and Street Railway."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Section 9, line 2, strike out the words "and Street Railway."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all the tenth section of the bill and insert the following:

"SEC. 10. That the railroad herein authorized to be built shall be completed and in operation within three years from March 1, 1889, and in default of such completion within the time in this section specified, all rights, franchises, and privileges granted by this act shall immediately determine."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUCKALEW. Mr. Speaker, as this bill is amended so that it will have to go back to the Senate, no delay or inconvenience will be caused by making the proper amendment in relation to the transfer of the stocks indicated by me awhile ago. I therefore move to strike out that part of the bill which provides, in substance, that the stock shall be transferable at the pleasure of the company, and to insert a provision that it shall be transferable only on the books of the company, to be kept at its main office.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 35, after the word "transferable," strike out the words "in such manner as the by-laws of said corporation shall provide;" on line 37, page 3, insert the following: "only on the books of the company, to be kept at their principal office;" so that the provision as amended will read: "That the capital stock of said corporation shall consist of three thousand shares at a par of $50 per share each, which shall in all respects be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable only on the books of the company, to be kept at their principal office."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SOWDEN. I now move to amend by striking out "five," in line 57, page 3, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "ten;" so as to read: "a cash payment of 10 per cent. of all subscriptions," etc.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I have no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I move to amend the title by striking out the words "and Street Railway."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HEMPHILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced that that body had agreed to reports of committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on Senate amendments to bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 12383) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 11651) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes.

It also announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of committees of conference on the amendments of the House to bills of the following titles:

A bill (S. 2511) to provide for the disposal of certain public lands of the United States under the provisions of the homestead laws only; and

A bill (S. 2851) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887.

It further announced that the Senate insisted on its amendments disagreed to by the House to the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; disagreed to the amendment of the House to a Senate amendment; agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. HALE, Mr. FARWELL, and Mr. GORMAN.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles, asked a conference with the House on said bills and amendments, and had appointed conferees on its part as indicated below:

A bill (H. R. 12489) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Lyons, Iowa—conferees, Mr. VEST, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. FRYE.

A bill (H. R. 10028) granting to the Wyoming Midland Railway Company the right of way through the Wind River or Shoshone Indian reservation—conferees, Mr. JONES of Arkansas, Mr. SABIN, and Mr. DOLPH.

It also announced the passage without amendment of the bill (H. R. 10319) to authorize the Natchitoches Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Red River in Louisiana.

It also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which concurrence was requested:

A bill (S. 3721) to grant a right of way to the Cherokee Central Railway Company though the Indian Territory, and for other purposes; and

A bill (S. 3923) to authorize the Duluth, Red Wing and Southern Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near the city of Red Wing, in the State of Minnesota, and to establish it as a post-road.

JURY TRIALS IN DISTRICT POLICE COURT.

Mr. HEMPHILL submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3132) to provide for trial by jury in the police court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 1, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its amendment numbered 2.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, so that section 2 will read:

"That if upon the trial of any such cause as aforesaid in the said police court an exception be taken by or in behalf of the defendant to any ruling or instruction of the court on matter of law the same shall be reduced to writing at the time, or it may be entered on the minutes of the judge and afterwards settled in such manner and within such time as now provided by rule by the supreme court of the District of Columbia in cases in that court, and then stated in writing in a bill of exceptions, with so much of the evidence as may be material to the question or questions raised, which said bill of exceptions shall be signed by the judge of the said police court. Any party aggrieved by any order or judgment made or pronounced by said court in a case which, under the law, the accused is entitled to a trial by jury may, if the same involve the merits of the proceeding, appeal therefrom to the general term of the supreme court, and the clerk of the police court shall forthwith send up copies of the information or complaint, with all the proceedings thereon duly certified, and upon such appeal the general term shall review such order or judgment, and affirm or reverse the same as shall be just: Provided, however, That no appeal shall be allowed after thirty days from and after the signing of such bill of exceptions as aforesaid: And provided further, That the judge of the police court may stay execution of the judgment of the said court upon the entering by the defendant into a recognizance with sufficient surety, to be approved by said judge, conditioned for his appearance at the general term of said supreme court then in session, or if no such general term be in session then the next general term, there to prosecute the said writ of error and abide by and perform the judgment of said supreme court in the premises; but nothing contained in this section shall be construed as repealing section 1073 of the Revised Statutes so far as the same relate to cases in which, under the law, the defendant is not entitled to a trial by jury."

And the House agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 4, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 5, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 6, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 7, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 8, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 9, and agree to the same.

JNO. J. HEMPHILL,
BARNES COMPTON,
WILLIAM W. GROUT,
Conferees on the part of the House.
CHAS. J. FAULKNER,
JOHN C. SPOONER,
C. B. FARWELL,
Conferees on the part of the Senate.

The following statement, submitted in accordance with the rule, was read:

The conferees on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 3132) providing for trial by jury in the police court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, respectfully submit the following statement:

1. The effect of the report as agreed to leaves the first House amendment as it passed the House.

2. The House recedes from its second amendment, which extended the right of trial by jury in the police court to all classes of cases; and the effect of this report is to leave the law on that point as it now stands, only providing for an appeal for that class of cases in which, under the law, a person accused of an offense is now entitled to jury trial.

3. The third amendment adopted by the House, which provided for the issuing of a writ of error to the supreme court of the District, is so amended by the conference report as to grant an absolute right of appeal on questions of law, upon proper exceptions taken, the same being much less cumbersome.

4. House amendment No. 4, which provides that the jury in the police court shall be drawn in the same manner as is now provided for juries in the supreme court of the District stands as it passed the House.

5. House amendment No. 6, providing for an increase of two bailiffs, and House amendment No. 7, providing that one or more of said bailiffs may be placed in charge of the police court juries, were agreed to by the conferees, and stand as they passed the House.

6. House amendments 5, 8, and 9 are only formal, transposing the sections of the bill to conform it to the amendment agreed to.

JNO. J. HEMPHILL,
BARNES COMPTON,
WILLIAM W. GROUT,
Conferees on the part of the House.

The report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

Mr. HEMPHILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ECKINGTON AND SOLDIERS' HOME RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I now call up the bill (S. 3877) to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company, and ask for the reading of the bill.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I understand the gentleman from Texas has a conference report to submit on the fortification bill, and as I wish to make some remarks on the bill called up by the gentleman from South Carolina, I will yield the floor to allow the conference report to come in.

Mr. HEMPHILL. It will take but a moment to pass the bill which I have called up.

Mr. SOWDEN. I give notice to the gentleman having this bill in charge that it can not go through unless a quorum is present.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania to make his statement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill has not yet been read.

Mr. SOWDEN. As a quorum is not present it is likely the question of a quorum will be raised on this bill.

Mr. HEMPHILL. It is a bill which should go through, but if the gentleman says positively he will insist on a quorum it is not worth while to take up the time of the House in having the bill read. I want the bill to go through.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I do not think it is likely to go through to-night.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Does the gentleman state positively he will make the point of no quorum?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. In view of the importance of having a sufficient number of cars I think it is proper this bill should lie over for the present.

Mr. HEMPHILL. The question is whether the gentleman is going to insist on a quorum? I object to the bill being considered now. Does the gentleman call for a quorum now?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I do.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I withdraw the bill.

FORTIFICATIONS BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. I submit the following conference report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments, numbered 8, 9, and 10.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 5, 6, 11, and 12, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out from the said amendment the words "to be available until expended, and;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment, insert the following: "For the purchase of movable submarine torpedoes in the discretion of the Board on Ordnance and Fortifications, $50,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

JOSEPH D. SAYERS,
SAMUEL J. RANDALL,
BENJAMIN BUTTERWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

H. L. DAWES,
P. B. PLUMB,
A. P. GORMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The following is the statement accompanying the report on the part of the House managers:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, submit the following written statement in explanation of the action recommended on each of said amendments by the conference committee:

On amendment numbered 1: Strikes out the provision making the appropriations contained in the act available until expended.

On amendments 4, 5, 6, and 7: Relating to torpedoes for harbor defense, appropriates as follows: For the purchase of submarine mines and necessary appliances to operate them for closing the channels leading to our principal ports, $250,000; for needful casemates and cable galleries to render it possible to operate submarine mines, $250,000; for continuing torpedo experiments and for practical instruction of engineer troops in the details of the service, $30,000; and for the purchase of movable submarine torpedoes in the discretion of the Board on Ordnance and Fortifications, $50,000.

On amendments 8, 9, and 10: Restores the provision for testing experimental guns procured under the act of September 22, 1888, at a cost of $39,500, and strikes out the appropriation of $20,000 for purchase of machine-guns.

On amendment 11: Appropriates $43,274 for the manufacture of forty caissons and ten combined wagons and forges for field guns.

On amendment 12: Appropriates $20,000 for procuring the necessary instruments and other materials, and for the proper installation of instruments for conducting the annual artillery practice of the Army.

The bill as agreed upon appropriates $1,205,594, being $290,274 more than as it passed the House, and $130,500 less than as it passed the Senate.

JOSEPH D. SAYERS,
SAM. J. RANDALL,
BENJ. BUTTERWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I wish to ask the gentleman from Texas a question. I understand from the reading it appropriates $1,200,000 more than was agreed upon by the House.

Mr. SAYERS. No, sir; your hearing was defective.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I want to know what the increase is for.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. What is the appropriation for controllable torpedoes?

Mr. SAYERS. Fifty thousand dollars.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. How much for submarine mines?

Mr. SAYERS. Submarine mines and necessary appliances to operate them, $250,000, and for casemates and cable galleries, $250,000.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. In all?

Mr. SAYERS. Five hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. How many ports does that protect?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have the floor.

Mr. SAYERS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have been convinced by my study of the nature of the controllable torpedo it is one of the indispensable means necessary to protect submarine mines. The best authorities have insisted that without protection from other sources, such as high-power guns or use of torpedoes or guns throwing high explosives, they are useless. I therefore insist that it is necessary to furnish other means, such as high-power long-range guns, controllable torpedoes, or dynamite guns, to protect these mines.

The Committee on Military Affairs inserted in the Army appropriation bill $500,000 for that purpose, but, as the House is aware, the appropriation was ruled out on a point of order. I deeply regret that this action was taken.

That bill, as well as the fortifications bill, went to the Senate, and the Senate inserted in the fortifications bill an item of $200,000. That appropriation ought to have gone in the Army appropriation bill. I find now by the statement of the gentleman from Texas that the Senate has increased the appropriation for submarine mines, and reduced the appropriation for movable torpedoes from $200,000 to $50,000, which is entirely too small. I am fully convinced of the fact that it is useless to make a large appropriation for submarine mines unless it is intended to supplement that with a suitable appropriation for means to protect them.

But it is not my purpose to raise any controversy now with the gentleman from Texas, it being too near the end of the session to return this bill to another conference committee. The Senate having yielded to the House conferees and reduced the appropriation to the small sum of $50,000, and the gentleman from Texas having told us that the conference had completed its labors, it is useless for me now to contend for a larger appropriation for this purpose. I again express my deep regret that the gentleman from Texas and the House conferees did not yield to the appropriation originally inserted in the bill by the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, no matter how severely political adversaries of the present Administration may criticise some of its acts, yet, sir, I do not believe any one who has proper regard for his own reputation will permit his partisan feeling to carry him so far as to deny the high praise due to it because of its efforts to rebuild our once powerful Navy, which before the advent of the present Administration had fallen into such decay as to become a humiliation to the citizens of the Republic, and to excite the derision of foreign governments.

History will vindicate the wisdom of the naval policy of Mr. Cleveland's Administration, and posterity will manifest its gratitude to the present Secretary of the Navy, who has successfully laid the foundation for a new Navy, which is destined to become strong enough to cope without fear on any sea with any naval power on the globe. But the genius and work of Whitney would have gone for naught if Congress had not liberally responded to his recommendations for appropriations. I regret, sir, that when we shall surrender the control of the Government next month we shall be unable to boast with equal pride of our achievements in providing for the defense of our long line of exposed seacoast and the protection of the vast wealth, population, and commerce of our seaboard cities.

I shall not begrudge the incoming administration the glory it may achieve, if it shall quickly avail itself of the means at hand to put our harbors in a state of defense, but shall congratulate it upon the golden opportunity we have left them. I shall, however, painfully regret that my party, which has been in power here during the past four years under a Democratic President, has been deaf to the appeals of its own Administration; has neglected its duty to the country; has been unmindful of the interest of the party by refusing to provide out of our enormous surplus the comparatively small sums needed to protect our defenseless coast. The failure to provide for coast defenses and the armament of the country can not be charged against the administration of the War Department. Congress, in which each party controlled a branch, is responsible for this dereliction.

If the recommendations of the War Department had been as quickly and liberally responded to as in the case of the Navy Department, we might to-day rejoice, as we did years ago under Democratic administrations, when the skill of General Totten with liberal appropriations gave to the country, as General H. L. Abbot says, "what at their date were perhaps the most perfect seacoast fortifications the world has ever seen." From the first to the last year of Mr. Cleveland's Administration the War Department and the President have recommended and urgently asked for adequate appropriations for this purpose, and have repeatedly urged the importance of this subject, but until the last six months those recommendations have been ignored by Congress.

Not only has Congress been deaf to the appeals of the Administration, but, sir, the warning of one of the wisest, most far-seeing, and patriotic statesmen of this century—given to us through our Speaker at the beginning of the Administration—failed to arouse Congress to its duty to the country. I refer to the letter of the lamented Samuel J. Tilden, the sage of Gramercy Park. That letter aroused the country like a bugle blast, and excited anew the admiration of the people for that great statesman.

But, sir, notwithstanding our overflowing Treasury constantly tempted Congress to make extravagant appropriations for unnecessary purposes, yet the statesmen who controlled here ignored the appeals from such high sources, and concluded it best to leave the country defenseless. Can it be true, as said by one of our most eminent officers of the Engineer Corps (Abbot):

I fear we shall never have the coast properly defended until another war like that of 1812 teaches our people that coast defense is a live issue?

I have had no fear of war with Germany growing out of the Samoan complications, because that country can have no motive in seeking a quarrel with us. France stands upon her border, constantly menacing the Fatherland. Germany, therefore, can not afford to go 3,000 miles away for a quarrel with the great Republic. Although she might sweep our Navy from the seas and return with spoils levied upon every American seaboard city, yet not only would she fear the French, who would assail her at home during the war, but she would have still greater fear of us when we shall have learned the necessity for our seacoast defense.

No, sir; I do not fear that we shall have war with Germany, but unless we are prepared for offensive as well as defensive war on shore and on the sea, the first great power that may attempt it may annihilate our Monroe doctrine, and leave us an object of scorn to the southern republics who have trusted our oft-repeated boasts to stay the advancement of European monarchy on the American continent.

England will not fear the loss of Canada as long as she commands every harbor we have on the two oceans, in the Gulf, or on the Lakes. I know that many here who are accredited with wise statesmanship sneer at every apprehension because of our defenseless coast. As I have said, when speaking heretofore, Napoleon III and his advisers had no fears that the capital of the empire could be in danger until Prussia taught France how quickly a nation fully prepared for war can devastate and dictate terms to one, however great, when it is unprepared for war.

I am, sir, in no sense an alarmist, but we should not forget, as said by Burke, "Early and provident fear is the mother of safety;" and also the advice of Washington, that "to be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace." But when I remember that our seacoast cities are absolutely without adequate defense against the navy of any of the great powers, I feel that we should no longer disregard the wise suggestions given us on this subject by Mr. Tilden. What means of defense have we to protect the ten billions of wealth in our seacoast cities?

We have no heavy guns for shore defense, and can not have them inside of three years. We have no armored vessels entirely completed. We only have a few under way. The only means that can be quickly provided for our seacoast defense are torpedoes and guns throwing high explosives. American inventive genius has enabled us to surpass the world in these destructive weapons. I will mention three of this character, which if employed together will comprise the best system of torpedoes on earth. They are the fixed or submarine mines which may be planted on the bottoms of the channels leading into our harbors, or so placed as to obstruct the advance towards our cities of hostile warships to a point within the range of its guns, but they are useless without protection.

The pneumatic dynamite gun can protect these mines. It can throw shells containing 500 pounds or more of high explosive gelatine and dynamite with remarkable accuracy a distance of 2 miles. It is a sort of an aerial torpedo which will attack the enemy's vessels at their most vulnerable parts—on their decks or their hulls below the line of their armor. We also can have the movable fish torpedo, controllable by power transmitted from the shore, which has a range of 2 miles; moves at a speed of from 15 to 18 miles per hour and carries as high as 400 pounds of dynamite or other high explosive. It can meet approaching hostile vessels, intercept them when passing, or follow them and attack them with its powerful projectiles.

The cost of any one of these weapons, when compared with that of the enemy's ships which they can destroy, is very small—but a trifle. A projectile of 500 pounds of high explosive, costing less than $1,000, thrown from a pneumatic dynamite gun, or a torpedo costing less than $10,000, fired by the movable torpedo contrivance, will destroy the most powerful ironclad in the world, such as the Trafalgar or the Nile of the British navy, each of which cost $5,000,000. No one can deny the effectiveness of high explosives in warfare.

General Abbot has said that high explosives will doubtless be used with armies in the field, in regular sieges, in naval battles upon the ocean, and in contests between ships and forts. In this statement every student of the art of war will concur. It is mainly due to the efforts and recommendations of General Abbot that our system of submarine mines has been adopted and brought to its present state of efficiency. He was the chief instructor or commander of the School of Engineers at Willets Point, and has, I believe, had supervision ever since its establishment of the instruction of the Army officers in the construction and manipulation of these mines. It is upon his authority—the highest in the world—that I made the statements which I did in debate on the Army appropriation bill that the fixed or submarine mines are useless unless they are protected by high-powered, long-range guns or some such weapons using high explosives, as the dynamite guns and movable torpedoes.

The submarine mines have never yet been brought to a perfect state of efficiency. They are being improved, but much is yet to be done to secure such effectiveness as is required. We have been expending money upon them since 1869; the aggregate appropriations, including those of this session, for these mines will reach nearly $1,600,000. Only $128,000 have so far been applied for the purchase of movable torpedoes and only $400,000 for the purchase of the dynamite guns.

Six miles of English electric cable, purchased at a cost of $300,000 in 1872 to operate them, has so deteriorated by exposure to the atmosphere that notwithstanding it has never been used it is now worthless. Thus over one-half as much has been thrown away on the purchase of cables for these mines as has been expended for all high-explosive weapons. But it will take two years to build the casemates necessary for the protection of the operators of these mines. The dynamite guns and the movable torpedoes can be supplied within a few months. They are effective for harbor defense in the absence of fortifications, as well as a protection to them when existing.

As we have no other means for harbor defenses, and can not have long-range high-power guns or effective submarine mines for several years, we ought to supply all our great seacoast harbors with them. But, sir, this will not be done during this Congress. I will not assail those who refuse these appropriations with such terms as false economy, cheese-paring parsimony, and epithets of that character, for they are doubtless governed by views which they think are wise and patriotic; but, sir, if trouble with any of the great powers should soon befall us, they will realize the fearful responsibility they have assumed by failing to prepare for war in time of peace.

Mr. WHEELER. I would like to be heard for a few moments.

Mr. SAYERS. As we have but a little while this evening to consider these matters, I will yield to my friend from Alabama for two minutes.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to delay the House at this late period of the session, but I can not refrain from expressing my full and hearty approbation of the action of the Senate in increasing this appropriation, and I regret that the House conferees have insisted upon a reduction.

A nation so great as ours, with its immense and rapidly increasing wealth, with its six or seven thousand miles of exposed seacoast, with the honor of a proud and self-reliant people to sustain, with a large number of seacoast cities to defend—many of which in commercial importance rank among the first cities of the world—such a nation, with so many and so vast interests to maintain and defend, certainly ought to have a system of seacoast defenses adequate to its necessities.

Certainly its law-makers should give so vital a matter the consideration which it deserves, and I wish now to give notice that I shall not allow another Congress to expire without doing all in my power to induce this House to grant such appropriations as will enable the distinguished officers who have the matter in charge an opportunity to exercise their genius and ingenuity, and to display their skill in perfecting measures for the defense of our seaboard.

No nation on earth is so neglectful as ours of this and other kindred subjects.

It is true our efficient Secretary of the Navy has done much during the last four years to improve our Navy, but we are still very far behind many other powers. England, France, Germany, and Italy are very far in advance of us, and even Russia, China, Chili, Denmark, Spain, and Brazil have ships and guns much superior to any of which we can boast. And each one of those powers has advanced in the art of coast defense quite as far as she has in the perfection of her naval establishment.

I join heartily with my sanguine friends in the hope that our actual need for a powerful navy may never arise, and that we may never have use for heavy guns or other material for coast defense; but the history of the world shows that the best way to prevent the necessity for the use of armed vessels and reliable coast defenses is to let rival powers see that we stand ready, at a moment's warning, to bring into effective use these evidences of national power.

When the products of American industry compete, as they should, with the products of other peoples, the danger of conflict will begin to be apparent, and I insist that the great work of preparation should not be delayed. It should commence at once.

We are a powerful and a brave people. In the peaceful arts our progress has excited the admiration and the wonder of all other nations.

The courage and soldierly qualities of Americans in war have commanded the plaudits of the world.

Congress must not neglect to give such a people appliances for defense commensurate with their skill and prowess. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SAYERS. I now ask a vote on the adoption of the report.

The report of the conference committee was adopted.

Mr. SAYERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, I wish to submit a conference report on the Army appropriation bill.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12383) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 5.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 21, 23, 24, 25, and 26; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out in line 19, page 13 of the bill, the words "and twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 20: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment, insert the following:

"To enable the Secretary of War to cause examinations and tests to be made in converting the existing cast-iron ordnance of the War Department into the steel-lined, breech-loading torpedo howitzers for throwing high explosives according to the plans heretofore submitted to Congress and to be submitted to the Board of Ordnance and Fortifications, $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 22: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The Board of Ordnance and Fortification is hereby directed to examine and report upon a site or sites for ordnance testing and proving ground to be used in the testing and proving of heavy ordnance, having in view in the selection of said site or sites their accessibility by land and water, means of transportation, and suitability for the purpose intended, and also the actual and reasonable cost and value of the land embraced in said site or sites and the least sum for which the same can be procured. Said board shall report thereon to the Secretary of War, to be submitted to Congress at its next session; and in case the said board shall select a site or sites and recommend their purchase, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to secure written proposals for the sale of the land so recommended, until such time as Congress may act upon the recommendation of said board and of the Secretary of War.

"For the necessary expenses under the foregoing provision, $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 27: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"For the construction of a counterpoise battery to mount a seacoast rifled gun, $40,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, said battery to be located at such point as the Board of Ordnance and Fortification may direct; the erection of such battery shall be by the inventor thereof under the general direction of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, and shall be completed within twelve months from the time this act shall take effect, and the gun to be mounted thereon with its fittings shall be furnished by the Ordnance Department of the Navy."

And the Senate agree to the same.

R. W. TOWNSHEND,
LEVI MAISH,
GEO. W. STEELE,
Managers on the part of the House.

W. B. ALLISON,
P. B. PLUMB,
A. P. GORMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There appears to be no statement accompanying the report.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask unanimous consent to submit a verbal statement.

Mr. TRACEY. I wish to ask before giving my consent what limit is prescribed for the session to-night?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Half past 10 o'clock.

Mr. TRACEY. I would like to hear the statement of the gentleman from Illinois, but at the same time on a bill of this importance there ought to be some formal statement presented. Hence I would not like to bind myself or be restricted in case the statement of the gentleman is not satisfactory.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman from Illinois will make a verbal statement.

There was no objection.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I wish to submit a point of order, Mr. Speaker, or rather a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I wish to ask if this report is permissible under the order for the meeting of the House to-night?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Arkansas that the report is entertained by the express direction of the Speaker, who was consulted upon the subject.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. Because, if the Chair will permit me, I desired that the order should specifically embrace such reports, but was informed by the chairman of the District Committee that it did not. Of course we ought not to trespass upon the authority given to us by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has no doubt whatever as to the propriety of entertaining the conference report at this time.

Mr. TRACEY. There is a matter contained in this report in which I feel a considerable interest, and I do not like to accept the report without knowing what action was taken upon it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. But the gentleman from Illinois has asked permission to make a verbal statement in lieu of the written statement, to which request consent has been given, and it will no doubt cover the point to which the gentleman from New York refers.

Mr. TRACEY. Very well.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, the reason why a written statement has not been presented with this report was because the bill has only been acted upon in the Senate to-night and came in a short time ago, hence I have not had time to prepare a written statement. I think it is entirely unnecessary, however, so far as the differences existing, and which have been adjusted by the conference, are concerned. I believe the report will cover fully all that the written statement could be expected to embody; and I will now only refer specifically to the point which I understand the gentleman from New York to have in mind.

An examination of the report itself will give a minute statement of the various amendments adopted in conference and the action taken by the committee upon them.

As the Army appropriation bill left the House there was an appropriation of $15,000 to enable the Secretary of War to acquire sufficient amount of land adjacent to the Watervliet arsenal to enable the gun factory at that arsenal to make preliminary tests of the guns, not for their range, but for their strength, such as might be needed at the arsenal where the guns are manufactured before testing them for range, accuracy of fire, etc.

The Senate struck that provision out of the bill, and inserted in lieu of it a provision which authorizes the Board of Ordnance, of which General Schofield is chairman, to make an investigation and report. I will say to my friend from New York [Mr. TRACEY] that General Schofield was present with the conferees when this provision was passed upon. He was of the opinion that the Government should acquire, comparatively speaking, a small amount of land—one or two hundred acres—near Watervliet arsenal, to make a sort of preparatory test of the strength of the metal and a certain means of ascertaining the perfection of the guns at the arsenal.

He was of the opinion, further, that it was necessary for the Government to acquire a tract of land which would enable the Department to test the range, etc., of the guns. He insisted that we should have a tract of land that would have a range of at least 10 miles. It was regarded as impracticable at any reasonable price to obtain such an area of ground near Watervliet arsenal, and therefore the suggestion is made for two tracts—one of a small area near Watervliet arsenal, and the second of a large area somewhere on the seacoast. Therefore we have inserted a provision authorizing the Board of Ordnance to investigate the subject and report to the next session of Congress their views with reference to the selection of a site or sites for the testing of these long-range, high-power guns, which have already been authorized to be built.

Mr. SAYERS. Is there anything in the bill as it now stands which binds the Government to purchase any testing ground such as it now has at Sandy Hook?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Nothing. The bill contains a provision simply authorizing the Board of Ordnance to make an investigation, and if they find suitable sites to secure options on the sites so that they may report to the next session of Congress, and that then money may be appropriated if in the discretion of Congress it seems well to do so.

Mr. SAYERS. It contains nothing to authorize them to make any contract which is binding upon the Government?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Nothing whatever.

Mr. SAYERS. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois another question. I am informed that the committee have agreed to the Senate amendment which provides for the purchase of some heavy pieces of artillery to be used on the coast of California. Is that the case?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I will state to my friend from Texas that they have authorized nothing of the kind that I apprehend he imagines. What they have authorized is this: The Senate has inserted in the bill an appropriation of $187,000 for the purchase of pneumatic dynamite guns to be used on the Pacific coast. The appropriation originally asked for in the Senate was $250,000, and has been reduced to $187,000.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I believe this Senate amendment is substantially the same provision which was ruled out of order when the Army bill was under consideration in the House; is it not?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It is the same thing.

Mr. SAYERS. Very well. In view of the present condition of the House, and the circumstances which surround us, I shall not make any objection to the adoption of this report; only saying further that I believe that the House has held that such a provision, if placed upon the bill by the House, would be considered an infringement upon the rules of the House.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I will only say, in reply to my friend from Texas, that at the last session, in the Army bill, these guns which have been placed on the Atlantic coast were authorized, and it was then held by the House in order on this bill. This appropriation is made by the Senate in pursuance of that precedent, which I think is consistent with the jurisdiction of the Military Committee. I ask now that the Clerk read the report.

Mr. TRACEY. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to detain the House, as the hour is growing late; but I do not feel that I should allow this report to be accepted without protesting against the manner in which the conferees on the part of the House have yielded in respect to this amendment appropriating $15,000 for the purchase of land convenient to Watervliet arsenal. There was no occasion for their yielding in this respect. I made an appeal to the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs and to another member of the committee, urging them to insist on this appropriation of $15,000. It has been made subject to the judgment of the Board of Ordnance; and I insist that it should have been retained in the bill.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that it is no easy matter to obtain the consent of the House to an appropriation proposing practically new legislation, and when the House had permitted me to place upon this bill this amendment of $15,000 it appears to me that it would have been only right on the part of the conferees appointed by the House to have insisted upon the amendment.

It is a very unusual course for the Senate to pursue to strike out these appropriations that are made in the House, and in this case it is a great disappointment to me, knowing as I do the immediate necessity there is for this expenditure. The statement has been made that the General of the Army was before the conferees and that he said there was no occasion for using this money within the year. I am surprised to learn that an officer so distinguished in rank and in the position which he occupies should be so ignorant of the affairs of his own department as not to know that the guns are now nearly completed, and are awaiting just such a test as could be made if this land could be purchased within the next two or three months.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I think it is but right that I should call the attention of the House to this matter, and I trust that in the future the representatives of the Senate will not be allowed to persuade our conferees to yield so readily to their views, for, without wishing to reflect at all upon the members of the other body of Congress, I will say that I have been very much disappointed at finding that in all these measures that have come come up relating to the establishment of a gun factory at the Watervliet arsenal, the persons who antagonized that project have succeeded in some way in having stricken out the provisions that were so necessary to carry on this very important work which has been undertaken by the Government.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. One word, Mr. Speaker, in justice to General Schofield, It was the opinion of the Senate conferees that the guns which have been authorized to be manufactured at the Watervliet arsenal would not be prepared for testing for at least a sufficient length of time to allow the next Congress to make appropriation for the purchase of the ground required for that purpose. General Schofield was present at the meeting of the conferees to-day, and, from what he said in reference to this matter, I am thoroughly convinced that he is as earnest as my friend from New York [Mr. TRACEY] can be in his desire to procure sufficient ground near the Watervliet arsenal to make a preliminary test of these guns.

The committee did not act solely upon General Schofield's view that the money could not be made available between now and the next session of Congress, but he did express the opinion that it was necessary to have a testing-ground there and also a long-range proving-ground somewhere else to test the range, etc., of the guns.

I make this statement to relieve the gentleman from New York of the impression which he seems to entertain in regard to General Schofield in connection with this subject.

The report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

Mr. TOWNSHEND moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Then, on motion of Mr. MILLS (at 10 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BOOTHMAN: Petition and resolution of Stout Post, No. 108, Grand Army of the Republic, of Fayette, Ohio, in favor of publication of the official records of the war of the rebellion—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. BYNUM: Petition of Pamelia Lynn, to be granted a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CARUTH: Petition of John A. Dixon, executor of George O. Dixon, deceased, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DUNHAM: Petition of Walter C. Newbury, favoring passage of H. R. 11668—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: Memorial of Grand Army of the Republic, T. J. Stewart, department commander, favoring H. R. 7765, out-pension furlough bill—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HITT: Petition of Pomona Grange, of Winnebago County, Illinois, praying an amendment to the Constitution to make United States Senators elective by a direct vote of the electors—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RANDALL: Petition for protection to agriculture from farmers of Montrose Grange, No. 28, Dinwiddie County, Virginia—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Resolutions from the senate and assembly of New York, relative to the removal of obstructions in the Hudson River, etc.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WALKER: Petition of Frederick Bollenger, praying that his claim be referred to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILBER: Petition to remove obstruction in the Hudson River, etc.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WILKINSON: Petition of Thomas P. Harrison, a citizen of the parish of Morehouse, State of Louisiana, asking that his claim be referred to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. THOMAS WILSON: Joint resolution of Legislature of Minnesota, in favor of pensions—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WARNER: Petition of Mary Drenen, of Jasper County, Missouri, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

The following petitions, praying for a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage, were received and severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. BOOTHMAN: Of 101 citizens of Delta and Yort Tap, Ohio.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Of 111 citizens of Tremont, Mich.

By Mr. DINGLEY: Memorial of National Council of Congregational Churches of the United States; also, of 99 citizens of Farmington, Me.

By Mr. FRENCH (by request): Of 49 citizens of Naugatuck, Conn., and of 93 citizens of Portland, Conn.

By Mr. GIBSON: Of 43 citizens of Kennedyville, Md.

By Mr. GIFFORD: Of 21 citizens of Buffalo; of 38 citizens of Hitchcock; of 121 citizens of Wessington Springs, Dak.

By Mr. GROUT: Of 169 citizens of Barton, Vt.

By Mr. HIRES: Of 66 citizens of Elmer, N. J.

By Mr. JOSEPH: Of the Territory of New Mexico.

By Mr. MILLIKEN: Of 24 citizens of Winthrop, Me.

By Mr. McRAE: Of 28 citizens of Milo, Ark.

By Mr. NELSON: Of 19 citizens of Duluth, Minn.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Of 28 citizens of Tekonsha, Mich.

By Mr. J. E. RUSSELL: Of 24 citizens of Holden, Mass.

By Mr. STONE, of Missouri: Of R. M. Carpenter and others, of St. Clair County, Missouri.

By Mr. WILLIAM WHITING: Of 89 citizens of Westminster, Mass.

By Mr. WILLIAMS: Of 19 citizens of Piqua, Ohio.

The following petitions for a national Sunday-rest law were received and severally referred to the Committee on Labor:

By Mr. GEAR: Of 91 citizens of Iowa.

By Mr. PENINGTON: Of sundry citizens of Delaware.

By Mr. J. D. TAYLOR: Of 40 citizens of Bridgeport, Ohio.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, March 1, 1889.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. FAULKNER presented the credentials of JOHN E. KENNA, chosen by the Legislature of West Virginia a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1889; which were read and ordered to be filed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House of Representatives to the following bills:

A bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa; and

A bill (S. 3132) to provide for trial by jury in the police court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had concurred in the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 6106) for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico;

A bill (H. R. 10832) for the establishment of a light-house and fog-bell on Oyster-Beds Shoal, in the Hudson River, New York;

A bill (H. R. 11678) providing for the erection of sundry light-houses and fog-signals in Lakes Erie, Huron, Michigan, and Superior;

A bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 11970) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 12324) for the establishment of a light-house station on St. Catharine Island, State of Georgia;

A bill (H. R. 12383) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 12430) providing for the establishment of the light and fog-signal at Humboldt, California, upon a more secure site, and for the establishment of a light-ship at or near the wreck of the steam-ship Oregon, in New York Harbor.

The message further announced that the House had concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 12489) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Lyons, Iowa;

A bill (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River in the State of Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 5509) to grant to the Gulf and Chicago Air Line Railway Company the right to construct bridges over navigable water courses;

A bill (H. R. 11573) to authorize the construction of bridges across the Kentucky River;

A bill (H. R. 10319) to authorize the Natchitoches Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Red River in Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 11782) to approve and ratify the construction by the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company of the bridge over the Red River at Shreveport, La., and the bridge over the Ouachita River at Monroe, La., and to authorize said railroad company to maintain said bridges over said water ways, subject to certain stipulations and conditions;

A bill (H. R. 10721) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River at or near Cummings Landing, Lincoln County, Arkansas;

A bill (H. R. 12389) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Osage River, at some accessible point in the county of Benton, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (H. R. 8740) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell to "The Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas" certain lands in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. 7777) to provide for the sale of lands patented to certain members of the Flathead band of Indians in Montana Territory, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 11735) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Fort Smith and Choctaw Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Poteau River, in the Choctaw Nation, near Fort Smith, Ark."

The message also announced that the House had concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8309) to secure for the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 515) for the relief of the trustees of the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary and High School in Virginia; and

A bill (S. 3995) to authorize the Montgomery and Sylacauga Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Tallapoosa River.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9418) to incorporate the Washington and Western Maryland Railroad Company, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HEARD, Mr. COMPTON, and Mr. ROWELL managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12490) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BLOUNT, Mr. DOCKERY, and Mr. BINGHAM managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11634) to provide for allotment of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies in Indian Territory, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate thereon, and had appointed Mr. PEEL, Mr. SHIVELY, and Mr. PERKINS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9268) to punish dealers and pretended dealers in counterfeit money and other fraudulent devices for using the United States mails, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. ROGERS, Mr. ENLOE, and Mr. CASWELL managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (S. 1631) to incorporate the Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railroad and Street Railway Company; and

A bill (S. 2475) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Winona, Minn.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 3737) for the relief of the holders of District of Columbia special-assessment lien certificates, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 11811) to amend "An act to incorporate the Georgetown and Tennallytown Railway Company of the District of Columbia," which was received by the President August 10, A. D. 1888, and became a law without his approval; and

Joint resolution (H. Res. 268) to authorize the printing of the proceedings in Congress in accepting the statue of the late Lewis Cass, an illustrious citizen, presented by the State of Michigan; and the statues of the late Maj. Gen. John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg and Robert Fulton, illustrious citizens, presented by the State of Pennsylvania.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following resolutions; in which the concurrence of the Senate was requested:

Whereas by an act of Congress approved the 2d day of July, 1864, the President of the United States is authorized to invite each and all the States to provide and furnish statues in marble or bronze, not exceeding two in number for each State, of deceased persons who have been citizens thereof and illustrious for their heroic renown or from distinguished civil or military service, such as each State shall determine to be worthy of that national commemoration, and when so furnished the same shall be placed in the old Hall of the House of Representatives in the Capitol of the United States, which is set apart, or so much as may be necessary, as the National Statuary Hall for the purpose therein indicated; and

Whereas the State of Pennsylvania has provided the statues of Robert Fulton and John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg, both natives of the State, and illustrious and distinguished citizens thereof:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the thanks of Congress be presented to the governor and through him to the people of the State of Pennsylvania for said statues.

Resolved, That these works of art are accepted in the name of the nation and assigned a place in the old Hall of the House of Representatives already set aside by act of Congress for statues of eminent citizens; and that a copy of this resolution, signed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, be transmitted to the governor of the State of Pennsylvania.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 19th instant, official reports of special agents relating to sugar investigations made since March 1, 1888; also reports made by special agents or other customs officers respecting improper allowance for damages to imported merchandise, and reports recently received from such officers and others in relation to the undervaluation of woolen or worsted goods, etc.; which the Chief Clerk proceeded to read.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest that the letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, although the usual custom of the Senate is to have letters from heads of Departments at length, be printed in the RECORD as if read, and, with the accompanying papers, be printed, and referred to the Select Committee to Examine into the Condition of the Civil Service, of which the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] is chairman.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the further reading of the communication will be suspended, and, with the accompanying papers, it will be referred to the Select Committee to Examine into the Condition of the Civil Service, and printed.

Mr. HOAR. And the letter of transmittal will be printed in the RECORD, as if read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter of transmittal will be printed in the RECORD, if there be no objection. The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The communication is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 28, 1889.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Senate resolution dated the 19th instant, wherein I am directed to transmit to the Senate copies of official reports of special agents or others relating to sugar investigations made since March 1, 1888; also copies of reports of recent date made by special agents or other customs officers respecting improper allowances for damage to imported merchandise, and of reports recently received from such officers or from any consular officer of the United States in relation to the undervaluation of woolen or worsted goods of any kind.

In reply to this resolution I respectfully transmit herewith copies of reports and other communications relating to investigations of alleged irregularities in the importation and classification of sugars at the ports of New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and San Francisco; also reports respecting improper allowances for damage to imported merchandise at the port of New York, and certain correspondence pertaining to the undervaluation of woolen and worsted goods, which papers are described in accompanying schedule, marked A.

With respect to the general subject of the classification of sugar, from the duties upon which so large a portion of the revenues is collected, it is proper to add that it has been the especial aim of this Department to endeavor to secure in all cases a correct polariscopic test of sugars imported at the different ports, and especially at the port of New York, where the bulk of the importations is made; that all the changes which have been made in the sugar division at that port have had this end in view so far as the action of the Department was concerned; that since the 1st day of April, 1888, about which time the principal changes were made in that division, down to the 23d instant, the collector at New York reports that seventeen hundred and twenty-one entries of sugar have been made, and that in this large number of entries protests and appeals have been filed in only one hundred and thirty-nine cases, being about 8 per cent. of the entire number of entries made, which fact alone would seem to indicate that in the judgment of the importers themselves the classification made by the revenue officers was not regarded as erroneous.

In some of the cases in which protests and appeals have been filed the Department has endeavored to secure from the importers such information as they might have, if any, tending to show that the classification in these cases was erroneous, for the purpose of enabling the Department upon appeal to arrive at a just conclusion in regard to the merits of such case and correct any error which might be found to exist in the action of the customs officers, but with a single exception the importers have declined to produce any evidence tending to show the alleged incorrectness or injustice of the classification made by the collector upon the report of the appraiser. In this connection I invite particular attention to copy of a protest and appeal herewith filed by Messrs. Havemyer & Elder in one of these cases, and I am informed that the protests and appeals in all the other cases are identical in form and substance with this; also to copy of a letter of the Department addressed to Havemyer & Elder, under date of February 13, 1889, requesting them to submit any proofs which they might have tending to sustain their appeal, and to copy of a letter addressed by the appellants to the Department declining to submit any proofs. In the single case in which the appellant complied with the request of the Department all the papers have been retransmitted to the collector with instructions from the Department that he cause a full and exhaustive investigation to be made for the purpose of ascertaining whether the tests made at the appraiser's store were correct or whether those made by the chemists employed by the importers were correct, and to report the result of the investigation to the Department.

I also invite particular attention to the papers herewith relating to the importation of a cargo of sugar by the American Sugar Refinery at the port of San Francisco on December 4, 1888, from which it appears that the revenue officers at that port claim that the cargo was artificially colored in order to reduce the grade of the sugar in color below No. 13 Dutch standard and thus secure its admission at the lower rate of duty; that upon examination and investigation of the cargo it was found that the sugars had been artificially colored for the above purpose and that when the artificial coloring was removed the grade of the sugar was above No. 13 Dutch standard in color; that the sugar was invoiced at a polariscopic test of 88 degrees, but that its actual strength upon examination at the custom-house was from 96 degrees to 98 degrees; that the difference in duties upon the cargo classifying it as below No. 13 would have been over $61,000 less than if classified as above No. 13, which latter classification was adopted by the collector. These papers are of interest as showing the facility with which frauds upon the revenue may be committed in the classification of sugars under existing law and the necessity for great care and vigilance and fidelity to the public interests on the part of those intrusted with the examination and classification of merchandise of this character in order to secure the collection of the revenues to which the Government is entitled from this source.

I take the liberty to transmit to you also the copies of certain official reports and correspondence relating to irregularities in the importation of Sumatra tobacco at the port of New York, specified in Schedule B, herewith, including also printed copy of a communication upon that subject which I addressed to the United States district attorney for the southern district of New York on the 25th instant.

Although these last-mentioned documents are not called for by the resolution, and are not perhaps pertinent thereto, I have nevertheless deemed it advisable to transmit the same, believing that they embody information which should be in the possession of the Senate.

Respectfully, yours,

C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

Hon. JOHN J. INGALLS,
President pro tempore United States Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of State, transmitting a letter from Professor S. P. Langley, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, in reference to the legislative measures necessary to carry into effect the convention between the United States and Belgium, Brazil, Italy, Portugal, Servia, and Spain for the immediate exchange of public documents, concluded at Brussels March 15, 1886; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting for the consideration of Congress a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of deficiency in the appropriation for pay, etc., of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, amounting to $355,888; which was read.

Mr. HALE. I move that that communication, with the accompanying papers, be laid on the table. The deficiency appropriation bill has already been reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion to lay on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 13, 1889, a report from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office relative to the survey and sale of the Klamath Indian reservation in the State of California; which, on motion of Mr. MITCHELL, was, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of December 5, 1888, a report of the governor of Alaska in reference to alleged outrages and restraint of liberty committed in Alaska upon Indian females and other persons; which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

COURT OF CLAIMS REPORT.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Court of Claims, transmitting the conclusions of fact and of law filed by that court in certain French spoliation claims; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Kansas favoring the donation of Fort Hays and Fort Dodge military reservations to the State of Kansas; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution No. 49, relating to the Fort Hays and Fort Dodge military reservations.

Whereas the Fort Dodge military reservation has long since been abandoned by the United States Government as a military post; and

Whereas the Fort Hays military reservation is no longer needed by the United States Government as a military post, and is to be abandoned on the 1st of June, 1889; and

Whereas the State of Kansas is anxious to provide for its indigent old soldiers and sailors proper and suitable homes for their declining years: Now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the State of Kansas (the senate concurring), That our Senators and Representatives in Congress are hereby requested to use their best endeavors to secure the passage of a proper law donating said Fort Hays and Fort Dodge military reservations to the State of Kansas for the purposes aforesaid.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, instructed to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from the State of Kansas.

STATE OF KANSAS, Secretary of State:

I, William Higgins, secretary of state of the State of Kansas, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original resolution now on file in my office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal. Done at Topeka, Kans., this 23d day of February, A. D. 1889.

[SEAL.] WM. HIGGINS, Secretary of State.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a memorial of citizens of Independence, Kans., remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill or any similar legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PASCO presented resolutions of Garfield Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Pensacola, Fla., urging upon Congress the importance of building a road from Pensacola to the national cemetery at Fort Barrancas; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. FRYE presented two memorials of citizens of Maine, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill or any similar legislation; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HOAR presented a petition of 142 citizens of Acton, Mass., praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SAWYER presented a memorial of citizens of Wisconsin, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill and religious instructions in schools; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, presented a petition of citizens of Greenbrier, Ark., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of 42 citizens of Carlisle, Ark., praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MCPHERSON presented a memorial of 50 citizens of Vineland, N. J., remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest law; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. VEST presented a memorial of A. J. Holmes and 120 other citizens of Roscoe, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of 217 citizens of Ohio, and a petition of 51 citizens of Columbiana County, Ohio, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest law; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. DAVIS presented petitions of citizens of St. Paul, Northfield, Wasica, and Welch, in the State of Minnesota, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented petitions of citizens of St. Paul, Duluth, Winnebago, and Wasioja, in the State of Minnesota, praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. EVARTS presented a petition of 213 citizens of New York, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SPOONER presented a petition of 103 citizens of Wisconsin, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SABIN presented two petitions of citizens of Macalister City and St. Anthony City, Minn., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a petition of 719 citizens of the Eighth Congressional district of Iowa, and a petition of 132 members of the congregation of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of Avery, Iowa, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. CHANDLER presented a petition of 1,750 citizens of New Hampshire, and a petition of 200 members of the Episcopal Church of Laconia, N. H., praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of 94 citizens of New Hampshire, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. ALLISON presented a petition of 874 citizens of Iowa, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented the memorial of C. J. Lundt and 24 other citizens of Malcom, Iowa, and the memorial of D. A. Morrison and 38 other citizens of Iowa, remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of 50 citizens of Indiana, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. FARWELL presented a petition of 828 citizens of Illinois, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented a petition of citizens of Blaine and Joyfield, Mich., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, presented a petition of citizens of Kennedysville, Md., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MITCHELL presented the petition of 75 citizens of Farmington, Whitman County, Washington Territory, praying for the passage of House bill now pending in the Senate in aid of the construction of a court-house and jail at Colfax, in that county; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PLUMB presented resolutions adopted by Cedarville Post, No. 99, department of Kansas, Grand Army of the Republic, favoring the erection of suitable granite monuments, with appropriate inscriptions thereon, on such battle-fields of the late war as the Secretary of War may designate; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BLAIR presented a petition of citizens of New Mexico, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. COCKRELL presented resolutions adopted by the Southwestern Lumber Manufacturers' Association, representing the States of Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas, favoring the passage of the bill providing for the opening of the Indian Territory to settlement; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CULLOM presented the petition of 78 citizens of Roscoe, Ill., praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented the memorial of the Peoria Turnverein, of Peoria, Ill., remonstrating against the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

SIOUX INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. DAWES submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11970) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 1.

That the House recede from its disagreement to all the amendments of the Senate excepting those numbered 1 and 2, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Leave in the bill the words proposed to be stricken out, and strike out of the amendment the words proposed to be inserted; and in lines 10, 11, and 12, on page 2 of the bill, strike out the words "the source of the principal branch of Pass Creek; thence due north to the said source of the said principal branch of Pass Creek; thence down Pass Creek to White River," and insert in lieu thereof the words "the mouth of Black Pipe Creek; thence due north to the mouth of Black Pipe Creek;" and the Senate agree to the same.

H. L. DAWES,
JAS. K. JONES,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

S. W. PEEL,
KNUTE NELSON,
JNO. M. ALLEN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to have the Senator from Massachusetts explain the amendments on which the agreement has been reached.

Mr. DAWES. All the amendments except two that were recommended by the Senate have been conceded by the House of Representatives. Amendments numbered 1 and numbered 2 were in reference to the boundaries of two reservations which lay side by side. The boundaries were amended by the Senate, and the Senate and House conferees agreed upon an amendment to the boundaries between those. That is all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I object if it can not be passed at once.

Mr. DAWES. It will only take a minute.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. All right; then I will not object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the report of the committee of conference.

The report was concurred in.

REMOVAL OF CHARGE OF DESERTION.

Mr. COCKRELL submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6106) for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House of Representatives agree to the amendment of the Senate to the said bill with amendment as follows: At the end of section 2 of the amendment add: "Or was prevented from so returning by reason of such wounds, injuries, or diseases before such muster-out or expiration of service.

"3. That such soldier was a minor, and was enlisted without the consent of his parent or guardian and was released or discharged from such service by the order or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction on habeas corpus or other proper judicial proceedings, and in any such case no pay, allowance, bounty, or pension shall be allowed or granted."

Strike out section 5 of the amendment.

Strike out in section 9, line 2 of the amendment, the words "section 7 of."

And the Senate agree to the same.

JOSEPH R. HAWLEY,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

R. W. TOWNSHEND,
GEO. W. STEELE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to have the Senator from Missouri explain to the Senate the substance and the effect of this report, particularly what is the section of our proposition that is entirely stricken out. I do not remember it by the number.

Mr. COCKRELL. The section that is entirely stricken out is really a duplicate of a section that is retained. We had one section that applied to soldiers of the regular and volunteer service in the late war and another section that by its restriction applied only to the soldiers of the Mexican war. The House struck out one of those sections and amended the other section so as to apply to the whole bill. So it does not really change it a particle.

Then, the only difference between the bill as agreed to in conference and the bill as passed by the Senate is that we had one clause providing that minors who were enlisted without the consent of their parents or guardians, upon a writ of habeas corpus or other proper judicial proceeding before a court of competent jurisdiction, were to be discharged from the service.

Mr. EDMUNDS. What, then, is the final effect of the bill as regards minors and the other persons?

Mr. COCKRELL. The final effect is to give the minor an honorable discharge at the time he was discharged by the decree of a court, but no pay, compensation, or anything else.

Mr. EDMUNDS. And as to him and all the others it gives them the right to apply for a pension if they were entitled to it, I suppose?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes.

Mr. CULLOM. May I inquire if the Secretary of War will not have the power to discharge a minor on proof, as is now the case I believe?

Mr. COCKRELL. He has in the regular service. In 1853 Congress passed a law prohibiting the enlistment of minors without the written consent of the parent or guardian, and the Secretary of War could discharge under that act; but in February, 1862, Congress amended that law so as to provide that no minor under eighteen should be enlisted. That was an absolute prohibition. However, a proviso was placed in the act that the affidavit of the soldier at the time of enlistment should be conclusive evidence of his age. As a matter of course every minor took the oath and the Secretary of War could not discharge him.

Mr. CULLOM. So there was no power to discharge left?

Mr. COCKRELL. There was none left.

Mr. HAWLEY. The probability is that in many cases the officers of regiments did not enter up a charge of desertion against the minor thus discharged, but we have found some cases where there have been applications for individual relief, where the minor was discharged at a distance and the officers did not hear of it, or did not hear in time, and they entered up a charge of desertion, properly enough. I think this bill will relieve every case so far as a general bill can reach every man who honorably ought to ask relief from a charge of desertion.

Mr. CULLOM. So there is no way to discharge a minor now except by a proceeding in court?

Mr. HAWLEY. No; this applies to war times, not to any regulation of the regular Army at present.

Mr. COCKRELL. Under the present law any minor, upon the application of the parent or guardian and proof of age, can be discharged from the Army now.

Mr. CULLOM. That is what I thought. I wanted to know whether that provision has been changed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the report of the conference committee.

The report was concurred in.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. From the Committee on Appropriations I report, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 12571) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

I wish to give notice that I shall endeavor to call up the bill as soon as the print comes back from the Printing Office.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Meanwhile the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

FORFEITURE OF UNEARNED RAILROAD LANDS.

Mr. PLUMB submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1430) to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from all after section 1 in the part proposed to be inserted in its amendment.

That the House recede from its disagreement to all after section 1 in the part proposed to be stricken out by its amendment and agree to the same amendment as follows:

"SEC. 2. That in all cases where persons are in possession of any of the lands affected by any such grant and hereby resumed by and restored to the United States, under deed, written contract with, or license from, the State or corporation to which such grant was made, or its assignees, executed in good faith prior to January 1, 1886, they shall be entitled to purchase the same from the United States, in quantities not exceeding 320 acres to any one such person, at the rate of $2.50 per acre, at any time within two years from the passage of this act, and on making requisite proofs and payment to receive patents therefor: Provided, That in all cases where parties, persons, or corporations, with the permission of such State or corporation, or its assignees, are in the possession of, and have made improvements upon, any of the lands hereby resumed and restored, and are not entitled to enter the same under the provisions of this act, such parties, persons, or corporations shall have six months in which to remove any growing crop, and within which time they shall also be entitled to remove all buildings and other movable improvements from said lands: And provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to any lands situate in the State of Iowa, on which any person in good faith has made or asserted the right to make a pre-emption or homestead settlement.

"SEC. 3. That if it shall be found that any lands heretofore granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and so resumed by the United States and restored to the public domain lie north of the line known as the 'Harrison line,' being a line drawn from Wallula, Wash., easterly to the southeast corner of the northeast one-fourth of the southeast quarter of section 27, in township 7 north, of range 37 east, of the Willamette meridian; all persons who had acquired in good faith the title of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to any portion of said lands prior to July 1, 1885, or who at said date were in possession of any portion of lands or had improved the same, claiming the same under written contract with said company, executed in good faith, or their heirs or assigns, as the case may be, shall be entitled to purchase the lands so acquired, possessed, or improved, from the United States, at any time prior to the expiration of one year after it shall be finally determined that such lands are restored to the public domain by the provisions of this act at the rate of $2.50 per acre, and to receive patents therefor upon proof before the proper land office of the fact of such acquisition, possession, or improvement, and payment therefor, without limitation as to quantity: Provided, That the Attorney-General of the United States is hereby directed to cause proper legal proceedings to be instituted and prosecuted to final determination, to determine whether the aforesaid lands are or are not adjacent to constructed road within the meaning of this act, and are or are not hereby restored to the public domain, and such proceedings shall, upon motion of either party, be advanced for hearing in any court in which the same may be pending: Provided further, That the rights of way and riparian rights described in the deed executed by the city of Portland, in the State of Oregon, by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Trust Company of New York, dated August 8, 1886, and which are described as follows: A strip of land 50 feet in width, being 25 feet on each side of the center line of a water-pipe line, as the same is staked out and located, or as it shall be hereafter finally located according to the provisions of an act of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon approved November 25, 1885, providing for the means to supply the city of Portland with an abundance of good, pure, and wholesome water over and across the following described tracts of land: Section 19 and 31, in township 1 south, of range 6 east; sections 25, 31, 33, and 35, in township 1 south, of range 5 east; sections 3 and 5, in township 2 south, of range 5 east; section 1, in township 2 south, of range 4 east; sections 23, 25, and 35, in township 1 south, of range 4 east, of the Willamette meridian, in the State of Oregon, forfeited by this act, are hereby as to such right of way and riparian rights granted and confirmed unto the said city of Portland, in the State of Oregon, its successors and assigns, forever, with the right to enter on the hereinbefore described strip of land, over and across the above-described sections for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and repairing a water-pipe line as aforesaid.

"SEC. 4. That nothing in this act shall be construed as forfeiting any lands that have been heretofore earned by the location and construction of any portion of a railroad under any act of Congress making a grant of public lands in the State of Michigan: Provided, That such lands lie opposite such constructed road, or if indemnity lands are provided in such grants the same shall be selected from the public lands within such indemnity limits lying nearest to such constructed road: And provided further, That this act shall not be construed to prejudice any right of the Portage Lake Canal Company, or the Ontonagon and Brule River Railroad Company, or any person claiming under them, to apply hereafter to the courts or to Congress for any legal or equitable relief to which they may now be entitled, nor to prejudice any right of forfeiture, as hereby declared, or recovery of the United States in respect of any of the lands claimed by said companies, nor to the prejudice of the right of any person claiming adversely to said companies or their assigns, under the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 5. That in all cases where lands included in a grant of land to the State of Mississippi, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad from Brandon to the Gulf of Mexico, commonly known as the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad, have heretofore been sold by the officers of the United States for cash, or with the allowance or approval of such officers have been entered in good faith under the pre-emption or homestead laws, the right and title of the persons holding or claiming any such lands under such sales or entries are hereby confirmed. And on condition that the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad Company within sixty days from the passage of this act shall, by resolution of its board of directors, duly accept the provisions of the same and file with the Secretary of the Interior a valid relinquishment of all said company's interest, right, title, and claim in and to all such lands as have been sold or entered as aforesaid, then the forfeiture declared in the first section of this act shall not apply to or in any wise affect so much and such parts of said grant of lands to the State of Mississippi as lie south of a line drawn east and west through the point where the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad may cross the New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad in said State, until two years after the passage of this act.

"SEC. 6. The price of the even sections of the public lands not reserved within the limits of the portions of the several grants hereby forfeited, and within the limits of all grants or portion of grants heretofore forfeited, and of all lands hereby and heretofore forfeited, is hereby fixed at $1.25 per acre.

"SEC. 7. That section 5 of an act entitled 'An act for a grant of lands to the State of Iowa in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of a railroad in said State,' approved May 12, 1864, and section 7 of an act entitled 'An act extending the time for the completion of certain land-grant railroads in the States of Minnesota and Iowa, and for other purposes,' approved March 3, 1865, and also section 5 of an act entitled 'An act making an additional grant of lands to the State of Minnesota in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of railroads in said State,' approved July 4, 1866, so far as said sections are applicable to lands embraced within the indemnity limits of said grants, be, and the same are hereby, repealed; and so much of the provisions of section 4 of an act approved June 2, 1864, and entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled "An act making a grant of lands to the State of Iowa, in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of certain railroads in said State,"' approved May 15, 1856,' be, and the same are hereby, repealed so far as they require the Secretary of the Interior to reserve any lands but the odd sections within the primary or 6 miles granted limits of the road mentioned in said act of June 2, 1864, or to the act to which the same is amendatory.

"SEC. 8. That all actual settlers on any of the public lands in the State of Florida affected by the grants, who made actual settlement on any of said lands, after the time limited in the granting act for the construction of the said road, and before May 1, 1888, shall have the right to perfect their entries, respectively, under the homestead and pre-emption laws: Provided, That the title to the land described in the act entitled 'An act granting lands to the States of Alabama and Florida to aid in the construction of certain lines of railway in said States,' approved the 17th of May, 1856, which lies adjacent to the part of the lines of railroad built under and in pursuance of the act of the State of Florida entitled 'An act to encourage a liberal system of internal improvements in the State of Florida,' approved January 5, 1855, within the time limited by Congress in the granting act, and which were granted to any of the said companies by the Legislature of the State of Florida in accordance with said act of Congress, and are held by purchase in good faith from said companies, made before the year 1866, are hereby confirmed to such purchasers: Provided, That a mortgage or pledge of said lands by any of said companies shall not be considered as a sale for the purpose of this act.

"SEC. 9. That in all cases when any of the lands forfeited by the first section of this act, or when any lands relinquished to, or for any cause resumed by, the United States from grants for railroad purposes, heretofore made to the State of Michigan, have heretofore been disposed of by the proper officers of the United States or under State selections in Michigan confirmed by the Secretary of the Interior, under color of the public land laws, where the consideration received therefor is still retained by the Government, the right and title of all persons holding or claiming under such disposals shall be, and is hereby, confirmed: Provided, however, That where the original cash purchasers are the present owners this act shall be operative to confirm the title only of such said cash purchasers as the Secretary of the Interior shall be satisfied have purchased without fraud and in the belief that they were thereby obtaining valid title from the United States. That nothing herein contained shall be construed to confirm any sales or entries of lands, or any tract in any such State selection, upon which there were bona fide pre-emption or homestead claims on the 1st day of May, 1888, arising or asserted by actual occupation of the land under color of the laws of the United States, and all such pre-emption and homestead claims are hereby confirmed.

"SEC. 10. That no lands declared forfeited to the United States by this act shall inure to the benefit of any State or corporation to which lands may have been granted by Congress except as herein otherwise provided; nor shall this act be construed to enlarge the area of land originally covered by any such grant, or to waive or release in any way any right of the United States now existing to have any other lands granted by them, as recited in the first section, forfeited for any failure, past or future, to comply with the conditions of the grant. Nor shall the moiety of the lands granted to any railroad company on account of a main and a branch line appertaining to uncompleted road, and hereby forfeited, within the conflicting limits of the grants for such main and branch lines, when but one of such lines has been completed, inure, by virtue of the forfeiture hereby declared, to the benefit of the completed line.

"SEC. 11. That all persons who may have settled upon and are now in possession of any of the lands hereby forfeited, and who may desire to enter the same under the homestead law, shall be allowed, when making final proof, for the time they have already resided upon and cultivated the same."

On so much of the amendment of the House as relates to the first section of the bill the committee are unable to agree.

P. B. PLUMB,
J. N. DOLPH,
E. C. WALTHALL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

WM. S. HOLMAN,
L. E. PAYSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report? The Chair hears none, and the question is, Will the Senate concur in the same?

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is a very important report on a very important subject. The report of the conferees appears to be, as far as I could catch it from the reading, a complete new draught of a bill in substance. I do not mean to say that it is a new arrangement of the whole subject, but only that, read in that form, it makes one consecutive single amendment agreed to, which is all very well, but it requires, for us to understand it in voting upon it, that the members of the conference should explain to us fully exactly what it amounts to.

Mr. PLUMB. The bill so far as it has been agreed upon by the conference committee is in almost the precise shape in which it passed the Senate, and is so in substance, with the qualification that we made a provision in the bill for the entry of lands under the homestead law only in favor of persons who are now settled on the lands which we forfeit. Practically the bill, so far as agreed to, is as it passed the Senate. For the purpose of arrangement, as the Senator from Vermont has already said, the order of the sections was changed, and for the purpose of settling a matter which is required to be settled, the precise method of settlement not having been provided in the Senate bill, a provision is inserted requiring the Attorney-General to bring a suit, which suit is to determine the question as to whether certain lands which were first held by the Land Department to be the property of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company under their grant, and afterwards held to be public land, and which had been sold by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company during the time when the Department held that they belonged to the company, the question as to whether the lands belonged to the Northern Pacific Railroad or were Government lands is to be sent to the courts to be tried. With this exception the bill is in the precise shape for all essential purposes that it was when it passed the Senate.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Will the Senator from Kansas kindly inform us, because it was a long time ago that the bill passed, what is the substance of the provision as regards the point of time when a forfeiture or lapse is provided to have taken place? I remember there was a difference of opinion in the Senate upon that subject before.

Mr. PLUMB. We did not decide that question, and that question is still at issue between the two Houses. The Senate conferees insisted upon the position of the Senate heretofore taken, often in debate and by vote, that the forfeiture should only take effect on lands lying opposite uncompleted portions of the road. All the others are mere matters of detail, but as to the condition of things which was the subject of debate here in the Senate for perhaps two weeks, the Senate conferees stood on the proposition as made in the Senate. Some merely verbal alterations were made, but nothing which in any way changes the relations of the United States as established by the Senate bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair finds upon inquiry that the papers and the bill to which the conference report relates are not in the custody of the clerks of the Senate or on the table.

Mr. PLUMB. The papers will be brought here in a few moments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the question is on concurring in the report of the conference committee.

Mr. MORGAN. I desire to make an inquiry of the Senator from Kansas about the bill. As I understand the Senator from Kansas, he has stated that homestead entries are to be allowed by preference in favor of those persons who may be now occupying the lands that are forfeited under this proposed act. I wish to know whether that provision of the bill includes persons who may have settled elsewhere, who would not be entitled to homesteads if they were to apply for homesteads upon any other part of the public domain.

Mr. PLUMB. The only qualification required for these entries is the fact that the persons are at the time of the passage of this bill occupying the land.

Mr. MORGAN. Without respect to whether they own land elsewhere?

Mr. PLUMB. Entirely so. They are not under the burden of the limitation. I may say that we have already passed, and there is now, I have no doubt, in the hands of the President a bill which affirmatively gives the right to every person who is not now the owner of land which he has acquired by public entry heretofore, to go upon the public lands and make a new entry.

Mr. MORGAN. Without respect to the amount of land he may have in any part of the country?

Mr. PLUMB. No, subject to the general limitation upon a person taking more than 320 acres of land, but without reference to the fact that he has been disqualified by reason of having made a former homestead entry.

Mr. MORGAN. There seems to be some difference between the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH] and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] in their understanding of the provisions of this bill as amended by the committee of conference. I should be very glad to have a distinct understanding as to what has been done. I therefore ask the Senator from Oregon, as he has the report in his hand, to point out the particular provision of the conference report on the subject of the homestead right of entry.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the bill is so important that the report ought to be printed so that we may see it.

Mr. MORGAN. I think so too.

Mr. SHERMAN. It can be printed in an hour or two. I do not wish to delay action upon it.

Mr. MORGAN. I was about to suggest that that course be taken, because I understand that there is a marked difference in the understanding of the conference report.

Mr. DOLPH. I think if the Senate will give me two minutes that request will not be insisted on.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report of the committee of conference? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the Senator from Oregon making his statement, but I think the report ought to be printed before it is acted on.

Mr. DOLPH. The Senate bill was thoroughly considered in the Senate. The House amendment was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert an entire new bill. For convenience, after the conferees had come to a partial agreement, the House conferees receded from all but the first section of the House amendment and receded from is disagreement to all after the first section of the Senate bill, and agreed that the same be amended "to read as follows." That is the reason why all of the bill after the first section of the Senate bill is set out with amendments. It was done as a convenient way of expressing the agreement.

The question as to the extent of the forfeiture is still open, the Senate conferees insisting on the provision of the first section of the bill which passed the Senate, and the House conferees not receding from their disagreement to that section. The only question open is the question as to the extent of the forfeiture, whether it shall extend to all lands adjacent to a road completed since the time limited in the granting act or only, as the Senate contends, to all lands adjacent to uncompleted road.

The amendments to the Senate bill made by this report are very trivial. The one referred to by the Senator from Alabama is one which was insisted on by the House conferees. There is nothing in the bill that gives an additional homestead or pre-emption right.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Does it not say so in one section?

Mr. DOLPH. No; I will read the section. The section in controversy is section 11 of the bill, a new section, which reads as follows:

That all persons who may have settled upon and are now in possession of any of the lands hereby forfeited, and who may desire to enter the same under the homestead law, shall be allowed—

Not a new entry, but simply—shall be allowed, when making final proof, for the time they have already resided upon and cultivated the same.

That is to say, their previous residence upon the lands shall be included and credited as part of the time.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is that all the bill as proposed says about homesteads?

Mr. DOLPH. That is all the bill as proposed says about homesteads. It leaves everybody to take a homestead or pre-emption claim, if he is upon these lands under an agreement with the railroad company, if he is entitled to take them. It does not enlarge the rights of such persons, but provides that they shall have a right to purchase their lands if they are not entitled to them. That is all there is of that provision.

The bill is substantially as it passed the Senate. The most radical provision is the provision in regard to the State of Mississippi, which was agreed upon by the delegation in Congress from that State.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The eleventh section as it stands in the report does not seem to me to be so clearly of the description that my friend from Oregon states as I wish it was:

That all persons who have settled upon and are now in possession of any of the lands hereby forfeited—

So far it does not make any difference whether they settled under a homestead right or were mere squatters, or whatever may have been the nature of their occupation—and who may desire to enter the same under the homestead law, shall be allowed, when making final proof, for the time they have already resided upon—

The land. That would be capable of the construction, I very much fear, that any person on the land who desired, as the phrase of the law is, to take it and call it a homestead, is by the force of this section authorized to do so, and will be allowed (which is perfectly proper if it is right that he shall have it at all) in making his final proof for the time he has already been on the land.

That part of it is clearly right, but the affirmative proposition of the proposed statute, leaving it to the desire of everybody who is on, under whatever color of right or without right, and without any other limitation to decide whether he will take a homestead there, and then going on to provide how he shall take it up by being allowed for the time he has made, would leave it, I am afraid, open to very great questions in the Land Office whether that should not be construed to mean that every person thereon should be entitled to have the land as a homestead if he wanted it that way, and give him the further advantage, which is right in itself, of the time he has already occupied it.

Mr. PLUMB. What is the objection, if the Senator from Vermont will permit me, to that provision if it is as he construes it to be?

Mr. EDMUNDS. Then it comes to the question whether you are to give double homesteads.

Mr. PLUMB. Both Houses of Congress have already passed a provision which authorizes any person who has heretofore had a homestead entry to make another entry.

Mr. EDMUNDS. But if this section would bear the construction I have suggested, it would not only include that class of persons, which is all very well, if we pass the law, but it would include everybody else who has not parted with his old homestead.

Mr. MORGAN. That bill is not a law yet, I understand?

Mr. PLUMB. No, it remains to be signed by the President.

Mr. EDMUNDS. But suppose it is signed before this bill, it would cover that part of the case, and I have no particular objection to it; but the other part, as to those who, by the new proposed law now in the hands of the President, are not entitled to be homestead settlers because they have still got their old homesteads or somebody for them, if the effect of this section is to give them a right to a double homestead as against all other settlers who want to get homesteads and have never had any, I do not think it is right; and I am afraid that the language will be construed in the Land Office that way.

Mr. PLUMB. I want to say that even if that is true, I do not think it is subject to any considerable objection. We had to deal necessarily with a condition of things which seems to be changed by means of the passage of this bill, if it is to pass. It has been common for persons to go upon lands within the limits of railroad grants by an arrangement with the railroad companies who expected in time to acquire the land by reason of building the road. Many of the persons who have gone there and made homes upon those lands are persons who are not qualified as homesteaders, and they have gone upon the lands because they are not qualified as homesteaders; but they have performed that one essential condition which more and more it is a part of the policy of the Government of the United States to attach to the conveying of title to its lands. They have settled upon and improved the land.

While the original policy of the land laws was, and very properly, to limit the acquisition of lands to a single quarter section, or a single quarter section under one form of entry, where the main purpose of the law, to wit, settlement, occupation, the making of a home, has actually taken place and a condition of things has been brought about by law or by other circumstances to which the settler himself has not been a party, whereby he is prevented from making the entry or acquiring the title which he originally designed to acquire, there is no reason, it seems to me, why the Government should not now step in and permit him to have a title.

All along these railroad grants, in anticipation of building the roads, adventurous men who had exercised homestead rights went out and took lands under some sort of license from the railroad company, or under some sort of assurance on their part that whoever might be found there at the time when their rights became fixed should have a title to the land on payment of a price named. That was notably the case in the limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad grant, where the company issued a circular and went on to appraise lands within certain limits, setting a certain price, etc., that when they came to acquire these lands whoever was located upon them might take them. That was to invite people to go there; it was to give assurance that if they did go there, when it came to be settled they should not be caught up to their loss and detriment.

Now we go to work and forfeit these lands. We take away the claim of the railroad company. We are bound to deal with these people upon some basis, either of turning them out or letting them have now the right to go on and prove up under some of the settlement laws of the United States and make title to the land upon which they have already made homes, which, as I said, is the essence of all the conditions which have ever been imposed during the last thirty years for an acquisition of title by individuals from the United States Government.

In addition to that I say that, however objectionable it may be to the Senator from Vermont, those of us who have had that matter in charge have endeavored on all occasions to give a preference right to every bona-fide settler on the public domain wherever we could do so without interfering with the right of some other person, deeming the interest of the Government of the United States to be substantially protected and cared for whenever it had secured the actual presence on a quarter section of land of a home, and in that home the man and the woman who had made it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair again states that the papers to which the report of the committee of conference refers are not in the custody of the Senate.

Mr. PLUMB. The papers are in the room of the Committee on Public Lands. The clerk is temporarily absent. In sending up the reports, which went through some changes this morning, the papers were not sent because of the inconvenience of transfer. They are in the possession of the Senate, I take it, for all practical purposes.

Mr. EDMUNDS. They ought to be here; but never mind that for the moment. It is not objectionable to me that any person who has settled upon and improved public lands should have them according to the provisions of the public-land laws which provide equally for all classes of persons according to their respective rights and modes of entry. I am just as much in favor of it as the Senator from Kansas can possibly be.

Mr. DOLPH. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question? Does the Senator from Vermont believe this would grant an additional homestead right?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I am very much afraid that it will, and I was about to ask the committee what they intended by that eleventh section, what it was understood to mean as it regards granting homestead rights to persons who are not otherwise entitled to them.

Mr. DOLPH. As far as I am concerned the only intention was to give the homestead settlers a credit for residence and cultivation already had.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is that the understanding of the conferees?

Mr. DOLPH. That is the way I understood it, and that is what it was proposed for as I understood.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate agree to the report of the committee of conference?

Mr. MORGAN and Mr. SHERMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama has the floor.

Mr. SHERMAN. I suggest to the Senator from Alabama, if he is willing, that this matter lie over a little while until we transact the morning business, some of which is important to be transacted in order to get bills on their way between the two Houses. In the mean time the report can be printed.

Mr. MORGAN. I should prefer that.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not wish to delay it, and I ask that the morning business may proceed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent that this report be informally laid aside to enable the Chair to call for the remaining orders of morning business.

Mr. MORGAN. And that the report be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. And that the report be printed. Is there objection?

Mr. EDMUNDS. And in the mean time the papers will be found, I hope.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio.

DISPOSITION OF USELESS PAPERS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the act of February 16, 1889, to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the Executive Departments, the Chair appoints as members of the joint committee of the two Houses the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL], to whom will be referred the papers from the head of the War Department communicated on the 22d instant, which now lie on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had directed him to return to the Senate the following bills in compliance with its request:

A bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia; and

A bill (S. 283) to amend sections 2474 and 2475 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, setting apart a certain tract of land lying near the headwaters of the Yellowstone River as a public park.

The message also announced that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 717) granting an increase of pension to Daniel M. Maulding, and agreed to the same.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which the concurrence of the Senate was requested:

A bill (H. R. 2029) granting right of way to the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company through the Sioux Indian reservation; and

A bill (H. R. 2828) granting right of way and other privileges to the Hampton and Old Point Railway Company.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 8309) to secure to the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes.

THE DISTRICT MILITIA.

Mr. HAWLEY. The House of Representatives has just returned a bill at the request of the Senate. The request of the Senate was made at the suggestion of the Military Committee. The hope is that the Senate will recede from its amendment and concur with the House bill. I should be glad to have it taken up now. I ask unanimous consent to do so in order that we may end the matter now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the message from the House of Representatives returning the bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 1, 1889.

Ordered, That the Clerk of the House be directed to return to the Senate House bill 4961, in compliance with the request of the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. If the Senate will permit, I move to reconsider the amendment made by the Senate and concur with the House in the passage of the bill. That is the motion of the Military Committee. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] moved the amendment and authorizes me in writing to speak for him.

Mr. SHERMAN. That involves the reading of the whole bill.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think not. The House bill has been read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Any Senator has a right to call for reading of the bill and amendment.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not think anybody will call for it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood the Senator from Ohio to say that it involved the reading of the bill and amendment.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not see how that can be, because they have both been read in the Senate. There has been no change made in them whatever since they were read in the Senate—not the slightest, not a word.

I will state the case in a second. The other House carefully considered and passed substantially the same bill, and the Senate committee carefully considered it. The House of Representatives passed their bill and sent it over here. Our committee took that and instructed the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] to move our bill as a substitute for the House bill. The House bill has some advantages, and ours has some. The Senate did substitute our bill. Then the bill went back to the House for its consideration, but it is impossible to reach it there, and the Committee on Military Affairs decides that it is just as well to take the House bill, which has some features decidedly better than ours, and it reduces the expense below ours. The Committee on Military Affairs asks us now to take back our amendments and agree to the House bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. Has the House bill been read in the Senate?

Mr. HAWLEY. I suppose the House bill was read when the matter was up before, because that bill was amended by the substitution of the Senate bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first motion must be to reconsider the vote by which the Senate passed the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not object to it in this particular case, because the organization of the militia in this District is not so very important; but certainly it is not the right method to pass a bill which has never been read in this body. The House bill was not read, but the Senate substitute was read. That is ordinarily the case. In the case of this particular bill I do not object, because we are in the hurry of the closing hours of a Congress, and I shall let it go.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think the Senator is entirely safe in that, for these bills have been very carefully considered back and forth. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] has given very careful consideration to the whole matter, and he authorizes me to make this motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut moves that the Senate reconsider the votes by which the bill was passed and ordered to a third reading. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. Those votes being reconsidered, the Senator from Connecticut now moves to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs upon agreeing to the amendment proposed in the Senate.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 0, noes 19, not a quorum voting.

Mr. HAWLEY. I hope Senators will vote upon this question. It is in accordance with the recommendation of the Military Committee. Attention was not attracted to this at all. Nobody voted for the amendment.

Mr. GIBSON. Will the Senator from Connecticut be kind enough to state the question? We do not understand it on this side.

Mr. HAWLEY. The case is just this: Substantially the same bill was carefully considered by the Military Committee in each House. When the House bill came over the Senate substituted its bill for theirs, but there is delay in passing the bill in the other House, and the Senate Military Committee now desire to take back the Senate amendment and concur in the House bill. It is quite as good as ours in many respects, and the Military Committee desire the Senate to vote "nay" on this proposition.

Mr. PLATT. Let the title of the bill be reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title will be read.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HAWLEY. We wish to vote "no" upon our own Senate amendment in order to concur with the House and secure the passage of the House bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This bill passed the Senate with an amendment, and was sent to the House of Representatives. In compliance with a request of the Senate, the bill with the amendment has been returned from the House of Representatives, no action having been taken there on the amendment of the Senate. The Senator from Connecticut has moved that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the bill passed, and also the vote by which it was ordered to a third reading, and he now asks that the question may be taken on the amendment, and that the amendment may be disagreed to. Is the Senate ready for the question on agreeing to the amendment?

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALMON FISHERIES OF ALASKA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Reports of committees are now in order.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am instructed by the Committee on Foreign Relations to report back the bill (S. 3993) to amend section 1963 of the Revised Statutes, and to provide for the better protection of the fur-seals and salmon fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes, with the House amendment, with a recommendation that the House amendment be disagreed to. I ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHACE in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the House amendment to this bill? The Chair hears none.

The title of the bill was read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator wish a conference?

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask that the amendment of the House be disagreed to, and then I shall ask for a committee of conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is moved by the Senator from Ohio that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House of Representatives.

Mr. MORGAN. Has this bill passed the Senate?

Mr. SHERMAN. It is a Senate bill which has passed the House with an amendment. We now report disagreement to the House amendment.

Mr. MORGAN. And the question is on disagreeing to the amendment of the House.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to say just this: That in the report made by the committee the rights of the Government of the United States were not considered and not intended to be considered. We only arrive at the conclusion that the question presented in the amendment of the House is of such a serious and important a character that the Committee on Foreign Relations would not undertake at this time to pronounce that kind of judgment upon it which is due to the magnitude of such a question.

I desire that the bill as it passed the Senate originally should pass, because it protects the salmon and other fisheries in Alaska, about which there is no dispute; but this particular question is one of very great gravity and seriousness, and the Committee on Foreign Relations, or at least a majority of the entire committee, did not feel warranted in undertaking to consider it at this time.

Mr. SHERMAN. I intended, when the amendment was properly before us, to say to the Senate that the Committee on Foreign Relations were of the opinion that while there was no objection at all to the Senate bill as it passed, it being for a clear and plain purpose, the question proposed by the House in the form of an amendment was a grave one and had no relation to the subject-matter of the bill, and ought not to be connected with it, had no connection really with it, and involved serious matters of international law, perhaps, and of public policy, and therefore it ought to be considered by itself.

I was directed by the committee to state that the subject-matter, the merits of the proposition proposed by the House, were not before us and not considered by us, and we are not at all committed for or against the proposition made by the House. We make this report simply because it has no connection with the bill itself, and it ought to be disagreed to and abandoned and considered more carefully hereafter. I therefore ask for a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the House of Representatives.

The amendment was not concurred in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio now moves that the Senate ask for a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. SHERMAN, Mr. EDMUNDS, and Mr. MORGAN were appointed.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON PACIFIC RAILROADS.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, reported with an amendment the following resolution, submitted by Mr. STEWART February 20:

Resolved, That the Select Committee on the President's Message transmitting the Report of the Pacific Railway Commission be continued until the indebtedness of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as the successor to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, and the Western Pacific Railroad Company, to which the subsidy bonds of the United States were advanced in aid of the construction of the roads of said companies, shall be adjusted by Congress; and that said committee be instructed to personally examine during the recess of Congress preceding the meeting thereof in December next the roads of said companies and the country through which they pass for the purpose of ascertaining the ability of said companies to pay their indebtedness to the Government, and how the indebtedness of said companies can be so adjusted and paid as to advance the development of the country through which said roads pass and afford to the inhabitants thereof reasonable fares and freights. And the expenses of such examination shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The amendment reported was to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

That the select committee appointed under the resolution of the Senate of January 24, 1888, to which was referred the President's Message transmitting the report of the Pacific Railway Commission, be, and it is hereby, continued, with all the power and authority on it conferred by Senate resolution of February 23, 1888, until the indebtedness of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company as the successor to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California, and the Western Pacific Railroad Company, to which the subsidy bonds of the United States were advanced in aid of the construction of the roads of said companies, shall be adjusted by Congress. And said committee is hereby instructed to personally examine, during any recess of Congress preceding the meeting thereof in December next, the roads of said companies and the country through which they pass or which is immediately contributory to their income, for the purpose of ascertaining the ability of said companies to pay their indebtedness to the Government, and how the indebtedness of said companies can be so adjusted and paid as to advance the development of the country through which said roads pass, and afford to the inhabitants thereof reasonable rates of transportation for passengers and freight. Said committee may hold its sessions at any place in the United States, and the expenses attending its investigation shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Any subcommittee appointed by said committee shall have all the powers of the full committee.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think that had better go over. The whole subject has been once exhausted, and I understand there are eight or ten other similar provisions for the enjoyment of committees during the recess. I think we had better take them all together.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont objects to the consideration of the resolution, and it will go over.

Mr. MITCHELL. I ask that the resolution be printed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes, let it be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be printed.

J. J. FINLEY.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I am instructed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] February 13, 1887, to report it favorably with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendment reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate was, to strike out all of the original resolution and insert:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to J. J. Finley, who was appointed a Senator of the United States by the governor of the State of Florida, the sum of $1,054.80, being an amount equivalent to the salary of a Senator from March 4, 1887, the day of his appointment, to May 19, 1887, the day of the election of a Senator to fill the vacancy to which he was appointed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I have heard this case stated, and I think this gentleman is entitled to his pay, although it is a very curious thing that another gentleman has been paid for precisely the same length of time already by the Senate; but it is clear that this gentleman was lawfully and constitutionally appointed by the governor of the State of Florida a Senator, and was a Senator for that length of time, although he did not qualify, but that was not his fault. We ought, however, to take some order at some time so that we shall not be paying three Senators from the same State during the same period of time; but I think this gentleman is entitled to his money.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

OFFICE OF SUPERVISING ARCHITECT.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I am also directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to report favorably with an amendment the resolution submitted by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] February 27. I ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds is hereby authorized in pursuing the investigation ordered by the resolution of the Senate of December 21, 1888, to employ a stenographer and a messenger, to send for persons and papers, and have leave to sit during any recess of the Senate prior to December next, and to take testimony at any place in the United States.

That all the necessary expenses of said committee or of any subcommittee thereof be paid out, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of said committee or subcommittee, of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The committee is also authorized to cause its proceedings and the testimony taken before it to be printed from time to time as it may see fit.

The amendment reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate was after the date "1888," to insert "in addition to powers conferred by said resolution;" so as to read:

That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds is hereby authorized in pursuance of the investigation ordered by the resolution of the Senate of December 21, 1888, in addition to the powers conferred by said resolution, to employ a stenographer, etc.

Mr. GORMAN. Let the resolution go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the amendment proposed by the committee?

Mr. EDMUNDS. The question first is whether the resolution shall now be considered? I should like to have the Senator reporting the resolution make some statement of what the inquiry is.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator from Nevada will allow me, I will state.

The Senate heretofore passed a resolution instructing the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to investigate, either by itself or by a subcommittee, the conduct of the Supervising Architect's Office with a view of ascertaining and reporting such modifications of existing laws or reorganization of that office as the public interests might require. That committee appointed a subcommittee which, as far as it could give attention to it consistently with the other duties of the subcommittee, called before the committee witnesses from the Supervising Architect's Office and examined them.

It is not proper for me, in view of the fact that the testimony taken by that committee has not yet been laid before the Senate, to refer except in a very cursory way to it. I think every member of the subcommittee, probably every member of the committee, will agree with me that the testimony taken thus far shows conclusively violations of law and irregularities in the conduct of that office which in a small way are not far from scandalous. In saying that, I do not wish to be understood as reflecting at all, either for myself or for any member of the committee, upon the personal or official integrity of the Supervising Architect. Thus far I have discovered nothing in the evidence which would necessarily warrant that imputation.

It is important to the public interests that that investigation should be extended. I have in my possession, received within the last forty-eight hours, charges which I will not say show, if true, corruption, but charges in connection with the selection and purchase of sites for public buildings throughout the country which, in my opinion, ought to be investigated.

It is very evident, I think, to every member of the committee that a different system for the selection and purchase of sites should be adopted, and there are many respects in which that office ought to be reorganized and the laws controlling it amended.

I hope that this resolution will be permitted to pass. It simply provides for continuing the investigation during the vacation. It has no partisan purpose whatever.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is the investigation in progress?

Mr. SPOONER. That investigation is in progress and unfinished. Of course if the resolution is not adopted to-day, probably the result will be its defeat.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I beg pardon, but I did not hear distinctly what the Senator said about this investigation. I suppose he might as well state it in open session as in executive session.

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the Senator from Virginia does not mean to suggest that I say anything in one capacity that I am not willing to say openly. I do not belong to that class.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Wisconsin will pardon the Chair one moment, the Chair is advised that the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] objected to the present consideration of the resolution. The Chair did not hear the objection.

Mr. VEST. Let the resolution be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be again read. Is the Chair correctly informed that the Senator from Maryland objected?

Mr. GORMAN. I withhold the objection until the resolution is read.

The Secretary read the resolution as proposed to be amended.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] has the floor.

Mr. VEST. I beg pardon.

Mr. SPOONER. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. VEST. I simply wanted to say this, Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds: If that resolution is confined to an examination simply and purely into the manner of conducting the business in the Supervising Architect's Office it has my hearty support and approval. When the resolution was originally adopted it grew out of certain publications in the newspapers charging that there had been improper, if not corrupt, methods adopted

Supervising Architect's Bureau, especially as to plans, specifications, and contracts for public buildings.

I was not a member of the subcommittee of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds which had the charge of the examination; but it has been [illegible] I may say without violating any rule of the Senate, because it has been [illegible] the course of this investigation questions were asked which involved the consideration of a partisan examination, not as to the manner of conducting business in the Supervising Architect's Office as to the matters of which I have spoken, but as to the collection of campaign funds during the recent canvass.

It was never my understanding, and I am very sure it was not the understanding of any member of the committee, and I may say even of the Senate, that the scope of that investigation was intended to go that far. There was at that very time, at the time of the creation of this committee as one of investigation, another committee of the Senate engaged in the examination of these partisan questions.

Now, I want to say to the Senator from Wisconsin and to the Senate that if the scope of the resolution is confined simply to what I believe to have been its original intention, an examination of the manner of conducting business in the Supervising Architect's Office, it has my approval and I hope the examination will be extended, because I believe the whole system upon which the Supervising Architect's Office is to-day conducted is wrong in principle and in practice.

During the ten years I have been a member of the Senate and of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I have again and again called attention and introduced bills here to correct as far as I could the manner of conducting business in that bureau. It is vicious in the very inception, and from year to year it has become worse.

Some Senator asks me in what respect. I have stated that over and over again. But one principal objection to it is the manner of giving out the contracts for the erection of public buildings. I will not go into details, but am prepared to do so at any appropriate time.

Now, Mr. President, if the resolution is confined to the object which I have stated, and does not include any political purpose, I hope that it will be adopted. I think the examination ought to be made.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr SPOONER] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. SPOONER. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I did not think the Senator from Wisconsin had the right to the floor. I thought I had the floor.

Mr. SPOONER. That is a question for the Chair to decide.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin has the floor. The Chair now understands that he yields to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That motion is not in order at the present time. The Senator from Wisconsin is entitled to the floor.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

Mr. BUTLER. I simply want to give notice that I shall object to the consideration of the pending resolution to-day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator object now?

Mr. BUTLER. I do not desire to take the Senator from Wisconsin off the floor or to prevent his making any remarks he chooses, but I shall object to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. SPOONER. I desire to say one word in reply to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST].

The pending resolution does not change in any manner the scope of the original resolution. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I think unanimously, decided that the subject to which the Senator from Missouri referred was under the resolution within the jurisdiction of the committee.

I have no hesitation in saying to that Senator that at the time the resolution was adopted I had no thought of an investigation in that direction. It was, as I have explained to the Senator from Missouri before, accidental, and I have no desire to pursue it. As one member of that committee I simply desire that the conduct of the office with reference to the transaction of public business, with a view to correcting defects in the existing law and changing the organization of the office, shall be further investigated in order that Congress may have the necessary information upon which intelligently to act. I have no partisan purpose in the world in proposing a continuance of the investigation and I state frankly that I have discovered nothing so far which involves the integrity of the present incumbent of this office.

I hope the Senator from South Carolina will not object to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. With that explanation by the Senator from Wisconsin, which is entirely satisfactory to me, I withdraw my objection to the present consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection to the present consideration of the resolution, the question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker had announced the appointment of Mr. THOMAS, of Illinois, who declines of Mr. [illegible]s on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing [illegible]s of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 10319) to authorize the Natchitoches Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Red River, in Louisiana; and

A bill (H. R. 11782) to approve and ratify the construction by the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific Railroad Company of the bridge over the Red River at Shreveport, La., and the bridge over the Ouachita River at Monroe, La., and to authorize said railroad company to maintain said bridges over said water ways, subject to certain stipulations and conditions.

FISHING GROUNDS OF ALASKA.

Mr. GORMAN. I am instructed by the Committee on Printing to report a joint resolution for which I ask present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the joint resolution (S. R. 144) authorizing the printing of 11,000 copies of the special report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries on the explorations of the fishing grounds of Alaska, Washington Territory, and Oregon, by the United States Fish Commission steamer Albatross during the summer of 1888, was read three times and passed.

COMMITTEE ON MINES AND MINING.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHACE in the chair). The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, being the resolution submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] authorizing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate alleged election outrages in certain States.

Mr. STEWART. The morning business is not through. I ask unanimous consent to lay that resolution aside in order to continue morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent that the regular order be temporarily laid aside in order to proceed with the consideration of morning business. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. STEWART submitted the following resolution; which was read:

Resolved, That the authority given to the Committee on Mines and Mining by resolution of the Senate of February 7, 1889, to examine into the facts and circumstances connected with certain suits brought by the United States against persons for cutting timber for mining and domestic purposes in the State of Nevada, be, and it is hereby, continued to include the period of the extra session of the Senate called for the approaching 4th of March by proclamation of the President of the United States; and that the expenses of the investigation be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. STEWART. There are two witnesses more to be examined. One is here and the other is on his way, and it can not be done now. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution may pass, so that we may finish up the report.

Mr. HARRIS. The resolution has to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. STEWART. Very well, let it go there.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution at the present time?

Mr. HARRIS. The rule requires its reference to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Mr. STEWART. Very well, let it be referred to that committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so referred.

ESTATE OF JOHN W. WHITFIELD.

Mr. REAGAN. I ask unanimous consent that the regular order be temporarily laid aside in order to consider the bill (H. R. 4624) for the relief of the estate of John W. Whitfield, which has been favorably reported from the Committee on Claims.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator that the regular order has been laid aside in order to proceed with the business of the morning hour, which now stands at reports from committees. Are there further reports from committees?

Mr. REAGAN. I move then to postpone the morning-hour business until this bill can be considered. While it is not an important public matter, it is important to the interests of the persons concerned. It will lead to no debate; it has been favorably reported from the Committee on Claims, and is a House bill.

Mr. BUTLER. I have no desire whatever to antagonize the bill of the Senator from Texas, and I was going to suggest to him by way of facilitating the public business that we proceed with the Calendar under Rule VIII and consider unobjected House bills.

Mr. COCKRELL. That will include the pension bills.

Mr. BUTLER. That will include the pension bills, about which my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. SAWYER] is so anxious, and all Senators will have an opportunity to secure the passage of bills in which they feel an interest.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the Chair understands, the regular order was suspended in order to proceed with morning business.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Reports of committees are in order. When those are completed, or when the Senate orders otherwise, it will be in order to hear the Senator from Texas.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4554) for the relief of the heirs of Preston Beck, jr., reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4856) for the relief of D. M. Sprague and William Tilton, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2070) for the relief of the widow of Arno Voss, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. DOLPH. By direction of the Committee on Foreign Relations I report back favorably with amendments the bill (S. 2632) to amend and enlarge the act approved June 18, 1878, entitled "An act to provide for the distribution of the awards made under the convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Mexico, concluded on the 4th day of July, 1868, together with the testimony taken by the subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations under the provisions of a Senate resolution of August 30, 1886, the testimony to be printed as an appendix to the report of the committee. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN] desires leave to submit the views of the minority, to be printed with the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the order desired by the Senator from Oregon will be made. The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

Mr. CHANDLER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1156) for the relief of Miles F. West, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the bill (H. R. 1156) entitled "An act for the relief of Miles F. Nash," now pending in the Senate, and the claim included therein, be referred to the Court of Claims, and that the same, with all the papers and documents before the Senate relating and pertaining thereto, be transmitted to the said court, to be proceeded with according to its rules, in accordance with the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," and the act approved March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for bringing suits against the Government of the United States," so that its findings may be reported to the Senate as provided in said acts.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. QUAY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

COMMITTEE ON MINES AND MINING.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution this day submitted by Mr. STEWART, reported it without amendment; and the resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the authority given to the Committee on Mines and Mining by resolution of the Senate of February 7, 1889, to examine into the facts and circumstances connected with certain suits brought by the United States against persons for cutting timber for mining and domestic purposes in the State of Nevada, be, and it is hereby, continued to include the period of the extra session of the Senate called for the approaching 4th of March, by proclamation of the President of the United States; and that the expenses of the investigation be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I am instructed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] January 7, 1889, to report it favorably with an amendment. I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendment reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate was, in line 7, after the word "next," to insert "and that during such recess it may;" so as to read:

That it be, and is hereby, authorized to sit during any recess of the Senate until the first Monday in December next, and that during such recess it may employ a clerk, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the private pension bills unobjected to on the Calendar.

Mr. STEWART. Let the morning business be first concluded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of private pension bills on the Calendar.

Mr. STEWART. I object at present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada objects.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to ask unanimous consent of the Senate to devote one hour to the disposition of House bills favorably reported, upon the Calendar, which are unobjected to, including pension bills both of the House and the Senate. We last reached upon the Calendar No. 2723 in the order of business. There is no pension case ahead of that. The pension cases are all behind that; and I include in my request the consideration of all the pension bills whether of the House or Senate subsequent to that order of business.

Mr. SAWYER. Let me suggest that we begin the consideration of the Calendar where we left off. The pension bills are scattered all through the Calendar, and if we do not get them to the other House to-day there will be no use in sending them there.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then I will modify my request.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator modify it so as to provide that we shall commence with the House pension bills?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is business on the table which is to be laid before the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Very well.

WASHINGTON AND SANDY SPRING RAILROAD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1631) to incorporate the Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railroad and Street Railway Company.

The amendments of the House of Representatives were read, as follows:

Page 1, line 8, after the word "Railroad," strike out "and Street Railway."
Page 1, line 25, strike out all after the word "Columbia" down to and including the word "hour" in line 27.
Page 2, line 2, strike out all after the word "transferable" down to and including the word "provide" in line 3, and insert "only on the books of the company to be kept at their principal office."
Page 2, line 14, after the word "Railroad," strike out "and Street Railway."
Page 2, line 23, after the word "of" where it first occurs, strike out the word "five" and insert "ten."
Page 5, line 5, after word "railroad," strike out "and street railway."
Page 5, line 20, after the word "Railroad," strike out "and Street Railway."
Page 5, line 23, strike out the words "and street railway."
Page 6, line 1, strike out all after "section 10" down to and including the word "used" in line 28 and insert:
"That the railroad herein authorized to be built shall be completed and in operation within three years from March 1, 1889, and in default of such completion within the time in this section specified, all rights, franchises, and privileges granted by this act shall immediately determine."
Amend the title so as to read: "An act to incorporate the Washington and Sandy Spring Narrow Gauge Railroad Company."

Mr. DANIEL. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives to this bill. I have examined them very carefully and there is nothing in them to which there can be objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Virginia that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The amendments were concurred in.

CONSIDERATION OF PENSION BILLS.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of private pension bills unobjected to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That requires unanimous consent.

Mr. DAVIS. Then I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HARRIS. We can not hear the proposition. What is the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS] asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed now to the consideration of private pension bills on the Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. STEWART. And after that let the agreement be that we shall proceed to the consideration of House bills on the Calendar which are not objected to, and continue their consideration one hour, if that much time shall be necessary.

Mr. CULLOM. I object to that last clause.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator from Nevada will withhold his request a little while until we can conclude the consideration of the pension bills, which I think will not take thirty minutes, and then perhaps we may assist him in accomplishing what he wishes.

Mr. STEWART. I want that understanding now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the proposition of the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Pending that proposition, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Virginia is in order. The question is on that motion.

Mr. BLAIR. I appeal to the Senator from Virginia to withhold that motion until we can obtain the unanimous consent asked for by the Senator from Minnesota. It will not take more than half an hour to dispose of the pension bills, and it is a question as to whether these poor men and women are to have their pensions.

Mr. SAWYER. I guaranty that it will not take over twenty minutes to pass the pension bills. I merely ask for that length of time.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I have moved twice to take up the Calendar, and yet I could not get the consent of the Senator from New Hampshire or the Senator from Wisconsin. I am willing now to go on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator withdraw his motion?

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I will if the pension cases are not to take more than twenty minutes.

Mr. SAWYER. I guaranty that the pension bills will not take over twenty minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CALL. I wish to say——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida object?

Mr. CALL. I wish to say to the Senator from Minnesota that I shall not object to his proposition, provided he includes the unanimous consent which has been repeatedly given and continued for the consideration of the bill (S. 746) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to settle and pay the claim of the State of Florida on account of expenditures made in suppressing Indian hostilities, and for other purposes.

Mr. DAVIS. I regret very much that I can not for my part entertain the request of the Senator from Florida. I have asked the Senate to proceed to the consideration of private pension bills on the Calendar which are not objected to, and it will not take twenty-five minutes to dispose of those bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be informally laid aside to enable him to move the consideration of private pension bills on the Calendar favorably reported.

Mr. CALL. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Minnesota to the fact that unanimous consent has been given that when the Calendar is taken up after its expiration yesterday this bill should come up for consideration. I am willing to give place to him for his pension bills, provided that consent is continued to take effect when the Calendar shall be again taken up.

Mr. DAVIS. I have no objection to that as far as I am concerned, but I want the pension bills disposed of at once. The first order is 2736.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota? The Chair hears none. If there be no objection, the first private pension bill favorably reported on the Calendar will be stated.

MRS. MARY T. BARNES.

The bill (S. 3942) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary T. Barnes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary T. Barnes, widow of the late Brig. and Bvt. Maj. Gen. Joseph K. Barnes, Surgeon-General of the Army, at $100 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY ELLEN FITZGERALD.

The bill (S. 3860) granting a pension to Mary Ellen Fitzgerald was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, after the words "rate of," to strike out "seventy-two" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary Ellen Fitzgerald, invalid daughter of Michael Fitzgerald, late a soldier in Company G, Sixth United States Infantry, at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH L. SNELL.

The bill (H. R. 12482) to increase the pension of Elizabeth L. Snell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth L. Snell, dependent mother of the late Alfred T. Snell, a commander in the Navy, to $40 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FARAN & M'LEAN.

Mr. PAYNE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives be requested to return to the Senate the bill (S. 308) for the relief of Faran & McLean.

WILLIAM A. TAYLOR.

The bill (H. R. 9159) granting a pension to William A. Taylor was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William A. Taylor, late of Company M, Sixth Regiment Kentucky Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANK M. MARTIN.

The bill (H. R. 9113) granting a pension to Frank M. Martin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Frank M. Martin, late of Company H, Sixth Regiment Kentucky Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROPOSED EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I now move that the doors of the Senate be closed and the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia moves that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. SAWYER. Is that in order when we are proceeding under unanimous consent for pension bills?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is in order. The Chair has no power to enforce a unanimous consent. It is an obligation resting only on the honor of Senators. The Senator from Virginia moves that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I wish the Senate would get through with these pension bills at some time.

Mr. MITCHELL. We are getting along very rapidly.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. If I can be recognized afterwards, I will withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can make no contract to recognize Senators upon the floor.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Then I insist upon the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Virginia that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The question being again put, there were on a division—ayes 8, noes 15—not a quorum voting.

Mr. PLATT. Does the disclosing of the want of a quorum upon a division make it proper to order a roll-call of the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It renders it the duty of the Chair to order the roll-call to proceed.

Mr. PLATT. Let us have a call of the Senate.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I wish to say that I am willing to withdraw the motion for an executive session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can entertain no motion or business until the presence of a quorum is ascertained.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I will not withdraw it, then.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Berry,	Dolph,	Hoar,	Ransom,
Blair,	Edmunds,	Ingalls,	Riddleberger,
Bowen,	Evarts,	Jones of Arkansas,	Sawyer,
Brown,	Farwell,	McPherson,	Sherman,
Butler,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Spooner,
Call,	Frye,	Morgan,	Stewart,
Cameron,	Gibson,	Morrill,	Stockbridge,
Cockrell,	Gorman,	Palmer,	Turpie,
Coke,	Hale,	Pasco,	Vance,
Colquitt,	Hampton,	Payne,	Vest,
Cullom,	Harris,	Platt,	Walthall,
Daniel,	Hawley,	Pugh,	Wilson of Iowa.
Davis,	Hiscock,	Quay,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-one Senators have answered to their names; a quorum is present. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I withdraw the motion for an executive session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia withdraws his motion. The next Order of Business on the Calendar will be reported.

ANNA KRUMPHOLZ.

The bill (H. R. 2737) granting a pension to Anna Krumpholz was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Anna Krumpholz, widow of Herman Krumpholz, late a private of Company F, Fifteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN MANN.

The bill (H. R. 6763) granting a pension to John Mann was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John Mann, late private in Company D, First Regiment United States Infantry, at $8 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM S. KELLINGTON.

The bill (H. R. 8225) for the relief of William S. Kellington was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William S. Kellington, late of the Fifth Independent Battery, New York Light Artillery, at $40 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WIDOW OF ADAM SHRAKE.

The bill (H. R. 4203) granting a pension to the widow of Adam Shrake was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Elizabeth Shrake, widow of Adam Shrake, late a private in Company C, Forty-eighth Regiment of Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GERTRUDE NORTHROP.

The bill (H. R. 11707) granting a pension to Gertrude Northrop was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Gertrude Northrop, minor child of Marshall A. Northrop, late a captain of Company G, Sixth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers, at $18 per month hereafter.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LUCINDA MEWMAN.

The bill (H. R. 12491) granting a pension to Lucinda Mewman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Lucinda Mewman, of Payson, Ill., sister of John W. Mewman, late private in Company K, Seventy-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, at $18 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BENNETT COOPER.

The bill (H. R. 12403) granting a pension to Bennett Cooper was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Bennett Cooper, who served in Captain Cammel's company, from the State of Alabama, Indian war, 1836, at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE HUNTER.

The bill (H. R. 12510) granting a pension to George Hunter, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George Hunter, late captain Company A, Dayton Volunteers, of Washington Territory, who was severely wounded in the shoulder and neck in a battle with the Indians in the war with the Nez Percés.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JESSIE ISHERWOOD.

The bill (H. R. 11184) for the relief of Jessie Isherwood was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Jessie Isherwood, daughter of James R. Isherwood, deceased, late private Company G, Seventh New York Heavy Artillery, at $18 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF NOAH W. YODER.

The bill (H. R. 12542) for the relief of the heirs of Noah W. Yoder was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to direct the adjudication of the pension claim of Catharine Z. Yoder, late widow of Noah W. Yoder, second lieutenant of Company G, Fifty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteers, as though the death of the officer had been directly chargeable to his military service, and to pay to the surviving children of Yoder a pension at the rate provided by the general pension laws from the date of his death until they severally arrive at the age of sixteen years.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. HELEN SUTHERLAND.

The bill (H. R. 11984) granting a pension to Mrs. Helen Sutherland was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Helen Sutherland, dependent mother of Andrew Sutherland, late private Company H, First Regiment Michigan Light Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH PETERSON.

The bill (H. R. 10644) granting a pension to Elizabeth Peterson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Elizabeth Peterson, widow of Andrew Peterson, alias Peters, deceased, late of Company F, Sixty-fourth Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NEWTON C. RIDENOUR.

The bill (H. R. 12273) for the relief of Newton C. Ridenour was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The preamble recites that by an error committed by the adjudicating officers of the Pension Bureau Newton C. Ridenour, late second lieutenant Company F, Twenty-third Regiment Iowa Infantry, was not placed on the pension-roll as a second lieutenant upon the allowance of a pension to him; and that by act of Congress a bill was passed for his relief in this regard and to rate him in accordance with his rank and with the intention only of correcting this error, but which contained the words that it should "be in lieu of all other pensions;" and that he now claims to be entitled to an increase of pension on account of disabilities for which he was originally pensioned and to pension for additional disabilities, but the Pension Bureau and the Department of the Interior construe the language of the act of Congress as barring his rights thereto, regardless of the merits. The bill therefore provides that the act of Congress for the relief of Newton C. Ridenour shall be construed as only correcting the error of the adjudicating officers of the Pension Bureau as to the rank of Ridenour and his proper rating by reason thereof, and that his right to increase of pension and to additional pension for other disabilities shall not be affected thereby.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

W. W. WILSON.

The bill (H. R. 8429) granting a pension to W. W. Wilson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of W. W. Wilson, late in Company H, Eighteenth Regiment Missouri Volunteers, with the same rate of pension to which a private soldier would be entitled for like disabilities.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARTHA RHODES.

The bill (H. R. 12428) for the relief of Martha Rhodes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll at $12 per month the name of Martha Rhodes, mother of Joseph Rhodes, late a member of Company G, Second Iowa Infantry Volunteers, and who was killed in the line of duty at the battle of Fort Donelson, in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNA J. WEAVER.

The bill (H. R. 8100) granting a pension to Anna J. Weaver was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Anna J. Weaver, imbecile daughter of Julius G. Weaver, late private of Company K, One hundred and fifty-first Regiment New York Volunteers, and to pay to her legally constituted guardian, for her use and benefit, a pension at the rate of $18 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN LIMERIC.

A bill (H. R. 5390) granting a pension to John Limeric was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John Limeric, late of the Sixth Ohio Battery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THEODORE WHITE.

The bill (H. R. 12540) to increase the pension of Theodore White was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Theodore White, formerly a corporal in Company M, Seventh New York Heavy Artillery Volunteers, for disease of the lungs, in addition to the pension he now receives for gunshot wound.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CATHERINE HAYS.

The bill (H. R. 5398) granting a pension to Catherine Hays was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Catherine Hays, widow of Stephen Hays, late first lieutenant in Company G, Sixty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANK WOLFORD.

The bill (H. R. 12062) granting an increase of pension to Frank Wolford was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Frank Wolford, late colonel of the First Kentucky Volunteer Calvary, at $50 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY HORNING.

The bill (H. R. 11627) granting a pension to Mary Horning was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Horning, widow of John F. Horning, late a private in Company B, One hundred and seventeenth Regiment New York State Volunteers, at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM HAWKINS.

The bill (H. R. 11884) to grant a pension to William Hawkins was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of William Hawkins, who was a private in Capt. Alexander M. Houston's company of Illinois Mounted Volunteers in the Black Hawk war, at $20 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB WOLF.

The bill (H. R. 3916) granting a pension to Jacob Wolf was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Jacob Wolf, late of Company H, One hundred and sixty-second Regiment Ohio Infantry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LUCY, WIDOW OF MUCK-A-PEC-WAH-KEN-ZAH.

The bill (H. R. 12420) granting a pension to Lucy, widow of Muck-a-pec-wah-ken-zah, or "John," an Indian who served the United States and saved the lives of many white persons in the Indian outbreak or war of 1862, and died from the effects of wounds received therein, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll, at the rate of $12 per month, the name of Lucy Muck-a-pec-wah-ken-zah, widow of Muck-a-pec-wah-ken-zah, or "John," an Indian who aided in saving the lives of many white people, and rendered valuable services in behalf of the white settlers during the Sioux outbreak and Indian war in the State of Minnesota, in the year 1862, and who then served the United States as a scout.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

M. JOSIE M'CLAIN.

The bill (H. R. 11663) granting a pension to M. Josie McClain was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of M. Josie McClain, widow of the late Ensign Charles Sumner McClain, United States Navy, at $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB S. SHUMAN.

The bill (H. R. 12446) granting an increase of pension to Jacob S. Shuman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Jacob S. Shuman, late captain of Company H, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, at $72 per month instead of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATHANIEL CRAIN.

The bill (H. R. 10167) increasing the pension of Nathaniel Crain was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay Nathaniel Crain, of Capt. Robert McAfey's company, of Col. Richard M. Johnson's regiment, in the war of 1813, a pension of $30 per month, in lieu of $8 per month as now allowed by law.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM J. MARTIN.

The bill (H. R. 12608) to pension William J. Martin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William J. Martin, survivor of Captain John Sconce's company, of Ray County, Missouri Volunteers, of Lieutenant-Colonel Morgan's Spy Battalion, Brigadier-General Zachary Taylor, general commanding, Florida war, and who was severely wounded at the battle of Lake Okachuba December 25, 1837, and who was also the lieutenant-colonel of the Second Regiment Oregon Mounted Volunteers in the Oregon Indian war of 1855 and 1856, at $25 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH LAWLESS.

The bill (H. R. 8327) for the relief of Joseph Lawless, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Joseph Lawless, late private Company I, Fifth Kentucky Cavalry Volunteers, on the pension-rolls.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LITTLEBERRY W. BAKER.

The bill (H. R. 12619) granting a pension to Littleberry W. Baker was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Littleberry W. Baker, who served in Capt. Abram Miles's company, from the State of Georgia, Indian war, 1836, at $20 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT W. ANDREWS.

The bill (H. R. 12404) granting a pension to Robert W. Andrews was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Robert W. Andrews, who served in Captaid Richburge's company, from the State of Alabama, Indian war, 1836, at $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH A. HARRISON.

The bill (H. R. 8580) granting a pension to Sarah A. Harrison was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah A. Harrison, widow of John Harrison, deceased, late second lieutenant of Company G, Seventy-ninth Regiment of Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANN E. MUSSMAN.

The bill (H. R. 2157) granting a pension to Ann E. Mussman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ann E. Mussman, widow of William Mussman, deceased, late a member of the Sixth Indiana Light Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. SMITH.

The bill (H. R. 12275) to increase the pension of John W. Smith was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of John W. Smith, formerly a private of Company F, First United States Dragoons, Mexican war; also lieutenant First Indiana Cavalry and private Company D, One hundred and fifty-sixth Indiana Volunteers, in the war of the rebellion, at $25 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CATHARINE BUCHANAN.

The bill (H. R. 11043) to restore to the pension-roll the name of Catharine Buchanan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to restore the name of Catharine Buchanan, widow of William Buchanan, late a private in Company L, Fourth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, to the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOVINA WRIGHT.

The bill (H. R. 5758) granting a pension to Lovina Wright was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Lovina Wright, of Maquoketa, Jackson County, Iowa, widow of John J. Wright, late of Company L, Second Regiment of Iowa Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

IRA WELLS.

The bill (H. R. 12607) to grant a pension to Ira Wells was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Ira Wells, who was a private in Captain Kinney's company of Illinois Mounted Volunteers in the Black Hawk war, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. BARRETT.

The bill (H. R. 12575) to increase the pension of James M. Barrett was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James M. Barrett, late a private in Company K, Twenty-sixth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, at $36 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANTONIA WIENER.

The bill (H. R. 8995) for the relief of Antonia Wiener was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of Antonia Wiener, of the District of Columbia, widow of Jacob Wiener, private of Company A, Forty-first New York Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM FORD.

The bill (H. R. 2862) granting a pension to William Ford was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Ford, late a private in Company H, One hundred and thirty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH M. ALLEN.

The bill (H. R. 10725) to increase the pension of Elizabeth M. Allen was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Elizabeth M. Allen, widow of John Allen, late a private of the Forty-third Regiment United States Infantry, war of 1812, from $12 to $20 per month, on account of her old age and extreme poverty.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANN G. BARKER.

The bill (H. R. 12604) to restore the pension of Ann G. Barker was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to construe the act entitled "An act to restore pensions in certain cases," approved June 9, 1880, so as to include within its provisions Ann G. Barker, widow of Thomas Barker, deceased, late a captain in the United States Army.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY B. HUNT.

The bill (S. 3960) granting a pension to Mary B. Hunt was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "one hundred" and insert "fifty;" so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary B. Hunt, widow of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Henry J. Hunt, deceased, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month from and after the passage of this act.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am profoundly sorry that the Committee on Pensions did not deem it consistent with their duty to report the bill as it was referred to them. However, I shall not contend with the committee now, and will not detain the Senate by going into the merits of the case, but will accept whatever may be got for the widow, who is in immediate need.

Mr. SAWYER. I will say to the Senator from Connecticut that $50 is the highest pension we pay to the widows of officers of that grade, and if we should go over it we should have trouble and there would be no end to the number of applications for increase of pension. So we felt compelled to amend the bill so as to conform to the rule.

Mr. VOORHEES. I did not hear the Senator from Wisconsin, but if the Senator from Wisconsin wants to stand in the way, of course I shall not raise any point with regard to the payment of $100. Otherwise I shall.

Mr. SAWYER. It is utterly impossible to make the rate for the widows of that grade of officers any higher than $50. The other House has universally stricken the amount down to $50.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the amendment be stated again.

The SECRETARY. In line 7 it is proposed to strike out "$100" and insert "$50."

Mr. SAWYER. Fifty dollars is the highest rate we pay to the widows of that grade of officers. That is the highest rate the other House has consented to pay, and if we raise it in this case we shall only get into trouble and not get the bill through at all.

Mr. VOORHEES. What was General Hunt's rank? He is spoken of in the bill as a major-general.

Mr. SAWYER. The bill states the rank he held.

Mr. COCKRELL. He was a brevet major-general.

Mr. SAWYER. He was only a colonel, I think.

Mr. COCKRELL. He was a colonel and brevet major-general.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Committee on Pensions.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DANIEL H. KENT.

Mr. BROWN. I wish to call attention to a reconsidered pension case.

Mr. SAWYER. There is but one more pension bill to be passed, if the Senator will just wait.

Mr. BROWN. Very well.

The bill (S. 3192) granting increase of pension to Daniel H. Kent was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll, at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of his present pension of $24 per month, the name of Daniel H. Kent, late captain Company F and brevet major and lieutenant-colonel of the Fourth Regiment Delaware Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2511) to provide for the disposal of certain public lands of the United States under the provisions of the homestead laws only.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to the bill (S. 3993) to provide for the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska, disagreed to by the Senate, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. DUNN, Mr. MCMILLIN, and Mr. FELTON managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3653) to authorize the sale of a tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. Res. 129) to promote commercial union with Canada; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 8740) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell to "The Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas" certain lands in Kansas; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. KENNA submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PADDOCK submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

MARY NEWTON.

Mr. BROWN and others addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Georgia rise to a pension bill?

Mr. BROWN. Yes; a pension case that has been reconsidered and is standing on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator give the order of business?

Mr. BROWN. It is Order of Business 2089, on page 5, under Rule IX. It is the bill (H. R. 9227) for the relief of Mary Newton, which was passed by the Senate on the 21st of August last and reconsidered. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill having once passed the Senate, the vote by which it was passed was reconsidered and the bill placed on the Calendar. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire simply to record my opposition to the bill and to the principle involved in it. The bill proposes to pension an aged and infirm child of a said-to-be Revolutionary soldier; and I think that is carrying pensions beyond anything that has ever been done heretofore.

Mr. BROWN. I do not desire to make any speech, but I ask to have the report, which is a very short one, read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. FAULKNER August 13, 1888:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9227) granting a pension to Mary Newton, have examined the same, and report:

Upon an examination of the evidence in this case the committee find that the facts are fairly presented in the report of the Committee on Pensions of the House of Representatives made the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, which facts, in the opinion of the committee, are sufficient to entitle the claimant to the relief granted by the bill.

The committee, therefore, adopt said report, and recommend the passage of the bill.

The report is as follows:

"That the claimant, Mrs. Mary Newton, is the only surviving child of John

Jordan, who was a soldier for three years in the war of the Revolution. She is now in her eighty-fifth year, having been born, as shown by the family record before your committee, on the 2d day of July, 1804, and in her old age applies to Congress for relief.

"It is shown by the records of the soldiers who served in the Virginia Continental Line that John Jordan served as bombardier in Colonel Harrison's regiment of artillery (Virginia quota) for three years from and after the 20th of December, 1776. A land-warrant was issued to him by the State of Virginia in November, 1783. It appears that during his term of service he was captured by the British and confined on board a prison-ship for over three months.

"The identity of the soldier who rendered the above-mentioned service with the father of the applicant is fully established by the testimony of very estimable people, whose affidavits were filed in the pension claim of the widow of the soldier more than forty years ago. One of these witnesses, Jincey Riddle, testified that when she was a small child she well remembers John Jordan came to her father's house in Greenville County, Virginia, having just been released from a British prison-ship, and that there was a great stir among the women of the settlement to have some clothes made for the soldier before he went back again to join the Army.

"The death of the mother of the applicant occurred on the 6th day of July, 1847.

"Your committee return the bill to the House, with the recommendation that it do pass."

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to hear the bill itself read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read at length.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Mary Newton, the daughter and only surviving heir of John Jordan, of the Continental Line, in the war of the Revolution, and to pay her at the rate of $12 per month from and after the passage of this act.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not yet understand the just ground upon which this particular bill should receive the assent of the Senate. Our forefathers after the Revolutionary war provided for the payment of pensions to all the soldiers of the Continental Line under the circumstances and subject to the limitations that the men who were engaged in the then rebellion and final revolution thought was fit for the time and the occasion. In the absence of an exhaustive and careful investigation, I feel safe in saying that the chances are a million to one that the ancestor of this claimant received what, according to the laws or Congress and what everybody agreed upon then, was just and right, and all that he was entitled to. Now, after a hundred years, we take one case, because there is some descendant who presents it, and provide for a pension for her, worthy personally, as undoubtedly she is.

I have had within the last five years probably twenty applications from the descendants of Revolutionary soldiers in the State in which I have the great honor to live of precisely this character—special circumstances, no recompense that ever they heard of, and all that sort of thing. I have uniformly replied that provision had been made for their ancestors, for everybody whom Congress thought to be entitled at the time, and that it would be impossible after this lapse of time for the Senate of the United States to undertake to review those subjects; and there the matter has ended.

But if it be proper to do this thing, then it is proper to do it in respect of all the descendants of those people, or who are said to be descendants, in the same way. So I must vote against the bill, with the greatest possible respect for the very worthy person, I dare say, who makes this application.

Mr. BROWN. This lady, as the report recites, is eighty-five years of age, and very feeble.

Mr. EDMUNDS. What does that prove?

Mr. BROWN. It recites that her father received no pension. There was pending at the time——

Mr. COCKRELL. I must say that if the bill is going to lead to discussion I shall be compelled to object to it. If we can have a vote upon it I am willing that a vote shall be taken. The report has been read and the statement of the case made.

Mr. BROWN. I only want to make a short statement of the facts.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not object to the Senator making a statement.

Mr. BROWN. So I understand. The report recites that the mother of this lady had an application pending for a pension at the time of her death. She died forty-odd years ago, and nothing has been done with it since. The soldier, Mr. Jordan, never received a pension, nor has any member of his family ever received a pension. Now, in her old age and her very feeble condition she asks for a little help for the remainder of her days, which, probably, will be very few.

Mr. BLAIR. Let the report be read again.

Mr. BROWN. It has been read, but it can be read again. There is certainly as much merit in it as any case could possess of that class of cases.

I am informed by a member of the other House from the district in which she lives, who introduced the bill, that he has a number of precedents where the Congress of the United States has passed acts within the last session or two granting pensions in just such cases.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to see those precedents. But in the last three days of any session of Congress there are a good many bad precedents. I am only speaking in the interest of equal fair play to everybody in the United States. If I have been mistaken in telling so many of my constituents whose ancestors were known to be reputable and meritorious soldiers in the war of the Revolution, and for whom, so far as Congress thought it fit to provide, provision had been made, that it was too late now, after a century, to undertake to revive and recall such questions, in the loss of papers and everything to be able to be sure that their particular ancestor did not get the pension he might have been entitled to, through his neglect to apply, or whatever—if I have been wrong in that and the Senate sets this precedent, then we must have a general provision for a board, or for the Pension Office, or somebody, to inquire into the case of all the descendants (I mean merely by representation) as to the right to the pension to which their ancestor would have been entitled by the laws of our fathers at the end of the Revolution.

But I do not think we can proceed upon such principles. The danger of misunderstanding, the danger of a double payment in the loss of papers, and all that, is of course very great. When we know that the Congress made a definite rule, just as we do now, and applied a definite definition as to who were entitled to these pensions, and forty years go by, it is rather too late for public safety, and in the interest of those people who we do know are entitled to our consideration out of the public Treasury, to revive such questions.

I remember very well one case here which illustrates what I am now saying. It was reported from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims. I think the name of the claimant was Wheaton; it was certainly the name of the original claimant; and it came up on a House report, as this does, not investigated de novo, as I am afraid this has not been investigated de novo.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no report from the War Department as to the military record in this case.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Exactly. With no report from a Senate committee on an investigation of its own, but invading the real independence of the two Houses as we are in the habit of doing, by taking for granted what one House does in its investigations, a report was made in favor of the descendants of this Mr. Wheaton from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims; and it seemed to be a case quite as clear as or clearer than this. I happened to have here at my desk the printed list of private claims that had been published by Congress. I turned to it (giving for a moment attention to the business of the Senate, as I do not do as much as I ought, I admit), and turned in the alphabetical index to that letter and to that case, and then on referring to the Journals I found that twice that very claim had already been paid by Congress; and it was extremely doubtful whether originally it was a just one or not.

Our Committee on Revolutionary Claims had taken for granted, in the innocence of their hearts, that the investigation at the other end of the Capitol had been a thorough and an exhaustive one, and that everything was known about it that could be known about it; and yet in the printed records of both Houses was the clear proof, on referring to the papers, that the claim had been paid twice.

I do not mean to say that I think there was any fraud about that claim. It was paid originally, as this may have been to this original soldier. He died, and his descendants, not knowing that he had got his money, made a claim. They found among his papers the fact that he did this and that for the United States in the Revolutionary war, and in perfect innocence they presented their claim. The papers seemed to show that it was all right; the committees of Congress at that time did not send to the Departments to hunt up and find out about it, and Congress passed an act to pay it. Then those claimants who had received their pay died, and they left descendants, who after a period of years had never heard of the fact that their fathers and mothers had been paid, and they found the old family papers, which showed that here was an ancient service in the war of the Revolution, and they presented another claim, in perfect good faith, I have no doubt, and Congress, without investigating the thing at the bottom, passed another law and paid it again; and the third time it would have been paid in perfect innocence again when presented by the great-grandchildren of this Revolutionary claimant if it had not been for the simple accident that just at hand was the printed book, which enabled some Senator to see that the thing had been twice paid already; and that ended that case.

I do not say that that is the case; I do not know how it is; and because I do not know, and because the Senate committee has not exhausted all its sources of information, I do not think it safe in public justice or in the public interest to pass bills of this kind; and I say it with the greatest respect to this lady. It is not an imputation against the claimant at all, as my friend from Georgia will understand—not in the least.

Mr. BROWN. I ask that the report be read again, and I respectfully ask the attention of Senators to the reading of the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read, if there be no objection.

The Chief Clerk read the report submitted by Mr. FAULKNER August 13, 1888, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9227) granting a pension to Mary Newton, have examined the same, and report:

Upon an examination of the evidence in this case the committee find that the facts are fairly presented in the report of the Committee on Pensions of the House of Representatives made the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, which facts, in the opinion of the committee, are sufficient to entitle the claimant to the relief granted by the bill.

The committee, therefore, adopt said report, and recommend the passage of the bill.

The report is as follows:

"That the claimant, Mrs. Mary Newton, is the only surviving child of John Jordan, who was a soldier for three years in the war of the Revolution. She is now in her eighty-fifth year, having been born, as shown by the family record before your committee, on the 2d day of July, 1804, and in her old age applies to Congress for relief.

"It is shown by the records of the soldiers who served in the Virginia Continental Line that John Jordan served as bombardier in Colonel Harrison's regiment of artillery (Virginia quota) for three years from and after the 20th of December, 1776. A land-warrant was issued to him by the State of Virginia in November, 1783. It appears that during his term of service he was captured by the British and confined on board a prison-ship for over three months.

"The identity of the soldier who rendered the above-mentioned service with the father of the applicant is fully established by the testimony of very estimable people, whose affidavits were filed in the pension claim of the widow of the soldier more than forty years ago. One of these witnesses, Jincey Riddle, testified that when she was a small child she well remembers John Jordan came to her father's house in Greenville County, Virginia, having just been released from a British prison-ship, and that there was a great stir among the women of the settlement to have some clothes made for the soldier before he went back again to join the Army.

"The death of the mother of the applicant occurred on the 6th day of July, 1847.

"Your committee return the bill to the House with the recommendation that it do pass."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill having once passed, the vote by which it was passed having been reconsidered, and the bill placed on the Calendar, the question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. EDMUNDS. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHACE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator with Georgia [Mr. COLQUITT].

Mr. HEARST (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague [Mr. STANFORD].

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. BOWEN].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. PASCO. I am paired with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. FARWELL], and in his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Has the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SAWYER] voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He is not recorded.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I withhold my vote.

Mr. KENNA. I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN].

Mr. PADDOCK. I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS], who is absent from the Chamber to-day, confined to his room by sickness.

The result was announced—yeas 26, nays 15; as follows:

YEAS—26.

Blair,	Cullom,	Mitchell,	Stockbridge,
Brown,	Davis,	Morgan,	Teller,
Butler,	Dolph,	Palmer,	Voorhees,
Call,	Faulkner,	Pugh,	Walthall,
Cameron,	Hampton,	Ransom,	Wilson of Iowa.
Chandler,	Ingalls,	Spooner,
Colquitt,	Jones of Nevada,	Stewart,

NAYS—15.

Bate,	Daniel,	Gray,	Morrill,
Berry,	Edmunds,	Harris,	Reagan,
Cockrell,	Frye,	Hoar,	Vance.
Coke,	George,	Jones of Arkansas,

ABSENT—35.

Aldrich,	Evarts,	McPherson,	Sabin,
Allison,	Farwell,	Manderson,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Gibson,	Paddock,	Sawyer,
Blackburn,	Gorman,	Pasco,	Sherman,
Blodgett,	Hale,	Payne,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Hawley,	Platt,	Turpie,
Chace,	Hearst,	Plumb,	Vest,
Dawes,	Hiscock,	Quay,	Wilson of Md.
Eustis,	Kenna,	Riddleberger,

So the bill was passed.

HOUR OF RECESS.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate at half past 5 take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the Senate take a recess from 5.30 until 8 o'clock this evening. Is there objection? [A pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT WINONA, MINN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2475) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Winona, Minn.

The amendment of the House of Representatives was to strike out the word "for" where it first occurs.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

The amendment was concurred in.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 129) to promote commercial union with Canada was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT DETROIT, MICH.

On motion of Mr. PALMER, it was Ordered, That the Secretary request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 2442) to increase the appropriation for the public building at Detroit, Mich.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 12) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States in relation to the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of alcoholic liquors. I ask that it be taken up and the report read, which is very brief, and then I desire a vote of the Senate upon it. I do not ask the Senate to debate the question at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the pending unfinished business may be informally laid aside for the purpose of enabling him to move the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 12) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States in relation to the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of alcoholic liquors.

Mr. HARRIS. I object.

Mr. BLAIR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is not debatable.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not propose to debate it, but I ask unanimous consent to make a statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BUTLER. There was an implied understanding when the pension bills were taken up that on disposing of them we should proceed for a reasonable time to consider the unobjected House bills on the Calendar. I trust the Senator from New Hampshire will not interfere with that understanding. My recollection is that there was unanimous consent for that purpose.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I can not hear the Senator from South Carolina. What is his proposition?

Mr. BUTLER. My proposition is to proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills on the Calendar.

Mr. PLATT. For how long?

Mr. BUTLER. For one hour.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Pending that I move——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can not recognize the Senator from Virginia while the Senator from South Carolina is on the floor. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed for one hour to the consideration of House bills favorably reported on the Calendar, to which there is no objection, under Rule VIII. Is there objection to the proposition?

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senator from South Carolina will modify his request so as to have the consideration extend until half past 5 o'clock. We are then to take a recess which has just been ordered, and at the expiration of an hour we would have the scrap of half an hour before the recess when nobody knows what would come up.

Mr. BUTLER. I will modify the request accordingly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent——

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. One moment.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Pending that I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator from Virginia withhold his observation until the Chair states the request of the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I say pending that request——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia will pause. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed until 5.30 o'clock with the consideration of House bills favorably reported upon the Calendar under Rule VIII. Is there objection?

Mr. DOLPH. I object if——

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I move, pending that motion, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5716) for establishing a light at the mouth of Otter Creek, Lake Champlain, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CLARDY, Mr. DAVIS, and Mr. ANDERSON of Kansas managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1939) providing in certain cases for the forfeiture of wagon-road grants in the State of Oregon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 717) granting an increase of pension to Daniel M. Maulding;

A bill (H. R. 4961) to amend the act entitled "An act more effectually to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia," passed March 3, 1883;

A bill (H. R. 7777) to provide for the sale of lands patented to certain members of the Flathead band of Indians, in Montana Territory, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River, in the State of Louisiana;

A bill (H. R. 10721) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River at or near Cumming's Landing, Lincoln County, Arkansas;

A bill (H. R. 11735) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Fort Smith and Choctaw Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Poteau River, in the Choctaw Nation, near Fort Smith, Ark.;"

A bill (H. R. 12389) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Osage River at some accessible point in the county of Benton, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (H. R. 12524) to authorize the construction of bridges over Green and Barren Rivers, in the State of Kentucky, by the Henderson State Line Railroad Company;

A bill (S. 515) for the relief of the trustees of the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary and High School, in Virginia;

A bill (S. 3132) to provide for trial by jury in the police court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 2029) granting right of way to the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company through the Sioux Indian reservation;

A bill (S. 3995) to authorize the Montgomery and Sylacauga Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Tallapoosa River; and

A bill (S. 2475) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Winona, Minn.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. [Putting the question.] By the sound the noes have it.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. BOWEN].

Mr. PADDOCK (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS], who is detained from the Chamber by sickness.

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SAWYER], and I withhold my vote.

Mr. TELLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. EVARTS. I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], and withhold my vote.

Mr. PASCO. I am paired with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. FARWELL]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. CHANDLER. I am paired with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BLODGETT].

Mr. HISCOCK. Has the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He is not recorded.

Mr. HISCOCK. I withhold my vote.

Mr. PADDOCK. My colleague [Mr. MANDERSON] is detained from the Chamber by illness, and is paired with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN].

Mr. COCKRELL (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], who is detained in conference on one of the leading appropriation bills, and I therefore withdraw my vote. He would vote "nay" if present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri withdraws his vote.

Mr. SAWYER. I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY].

Mr. PASCO. I understand that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. PAYNE] is absent without a pair. I transfer the pair I have with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. FARWELL] to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. PAYNE] and vote "yea."

Mr. DOLPH (after having voted in the negative). I inquire if the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He is not recorded.

Mr. DOLPH. Then I withdraw my vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon withdraws his vote.

Mr. FAULKNER. As the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] with whom I have been paired has just entered the Chamber, I vote yea.

Mr. QUAY. I vote nay; but after the disposition of the unobjected bills on the Calendar I will vote with the Senator from West Virginia on this question.

The result was announced—yeas 24, nays 20; as follows:

YEAS—24.

Bate,	Faulkner,	Hoar,	Riddleberger,
Berry,	George,	Kenna,	Turpie,
Butler,	Gorman,	Pasco,	Vance,
Call,	Gray,	Pugh,	Voorhees,
Coke,	Hampton,	Ransom,	Walthall,
Colquitt,	Harris,	Reagan,	Wilson of Md.

NAYS—20.

Blair,	Edmunds,	Morrill,	Sherman,
Cameron,	Frye,	Palmer,	Spooner,
Chace,	Hawley,	Platt,	Stewart,
Cullom,	Ingalls,	Quay,	Stockbridge,
Davis,	Mitchell,	Sabin,	Wilson of Iowa.

ABSENT—32.

Aldrich,	Cockrell,	Hale,	Paddock,
Allison,	Daniel,	Hearst,	Payne,
Beck,	Dawes,	Hiscock,	Plumb.
Blackburn,	Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Saulsbury,
Blodgett,	Eustis,	Jones of Nevada,	Sawyer,
Bowen,	Evarts,	Manderson,	Stanford,
Brown,	Farwell,	McPherson,	Teller,
Chandler,	Gibson,	Morgan,	Vest.

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and ten minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

FORFEITURE OF UNEARNED RAILROAD LANDS.

Mr. PLUMB. I move the adoption of the conference report on the bill (S. 1430) to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas moves that the report of the committee of conference, which has been read, on Senate bill 1430 be concurred in.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that as to the points of difference still remaining the Senate insist on its disagreement to the further amendment of the House to the bill and request a further conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the managers at the further conference on the part of the Senate, and Mr. PLUMB, Mr. DOLPH, and Mr. WALTHALL were appointed.

WASHINGTON AND WESTERN MARYLAND RAILROAD.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask the Senator from Kansas to withhold that motion for a moment, that I may submit a conference report of only a few lines.

Mr. PLUMB. I will yield, with the consent of that side of the Chamber.

Mr. FAULKNER. It will only take a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request can only be entertained by unanimous consent. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. FAULKNER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9418) to incorporate the Washington and Western Maryland Railroad Company, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate, and agree to the same with the following amendment: Page 6, line 24, strike out, after the word "full," where it occurs in line 3 of the Senate amendment to section 10, all the remaining words of section 10 and insert instead: "Provided further, That the construction of said road shall be commenced in one year and completed within three years from the passage of this act."

JOHN C. SPOONER,
C. B. FARWELL,
CHAS. J. FAULKNER,
Conferees on the part of the Senate.

JOHN T. HEARD,
BARNES COMPTON,
J. H. ROWELL,
Conferees on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not object; I merely wish it to be explained.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the question is, Will the Senate concur in the report of the committee of conference?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask my honorable friend from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], the first signer of the report, to explain how it changes the bill as it was agreed to in the Senate.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will state to the Senator from Vermont that the only change the conferees of the two Houses made in reference to the amendments of the Senate was to adopt a proviso in lieu of the provision suggested by the Senate committee and adopted by the Senate. The provision which is amended by the conference report is as follows:

That the whole amount of capital stock and bonds issued by said company shall not exceed the actual cost of construction and equipment of said road more than 5 per cent.

That provision is stricken out and the section amended by providing that the road shall be commenced within one year and completed within three years. The reason why the proviso was sticken out is simply this: If, for example, the road should cost $100,000, $50,000 being required to be paid in cash, and bonds to be issued for the remainder, and if the amount had to be raised through the sale of bonds it would have been necessary, if there had been any depreciation in those bonds, that the stockholders should pay the amount of the deficiency out of their pockets to complete the road and to discharge the indebtedness; and yet under this provision the stockholders would not even have been permitted to receive stock for this payment. It was entirely a mistake.

RECESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 5 o'clock and 30 minutes having arrived, the Senate takes a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m.

WASHINGTON AND WESTERN MARYLAND RAILROAD.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. President, I ask that the consideration of the conference report on House bill 9418 be proceeded with.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It is obvious that there is no quorum present, and I object to doing any business without a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators responded to their names:

Allison,	Colquitt,	Hampton,	Ransom,
Bate,	Cullom,	Harris,	Spooner,
Berry,	Davis,	Ingalls,	Teller,
Blodgett,	Edmunds,	Jones of Arkansas,	Turpie,
Brown,	Farwell,	McPherson,	Walthall,
Chandler,	Faulkner,	Paddock,	Wilson of Iowa.
Cockrell,	Gorman,	Pasco,
Coke,	Hale,	Quay,

Mr. PADDOCK. I desire to say that my colleague [Mr. MANDERSON] is detained at home by serious illness.

After a little delay, the following Senators entered the Chamber and responded to their names: Messrs. BUTLER, FRYE, BLAIR, GEORGE, STEWART, GRAY, WILSON of Maryland, VOORHEES, HOAR, STOCKBRIDGE, CAMERON, and PAYNE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Forty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum being present the Senator from West Virginia will proceed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Will the Chair be kind enough to state the pending question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the report of the committee of conference on the bill (H. R. 9418) to incorporate the Washington and Western Maryland Railroad Company.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] is entitled to the floor in explanation of the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia was interrupted by the recess, and is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can not recognize the Senator from Maine except by consent of the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will yield to the Senator from Maine for an inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia yields for an inquiry.

Mr. HALE. I rose to ask the Senator from West Virginia to yield that I might call up the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will yield with the understanding that the conference report is informally laid aside and will take its place as the business of the Senate when the deficiency bill is through with.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think we had better go on with the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Vermont desire to have the report of the committee of conference read?

Mr. EDMUNDS. No, sir; only to hear the explanation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the report of the committee of conference, on which the Senator from West Virginia is entitled to the floor.

Mr. FAULKNER. If my suggestion is not satisfactory, of course we shall then go on with the matter now before the Senate.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator will yield I will make a motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill. I have no feeling myself about it. I fancy that I am representing the wishes of the Senate in the desire to pass the appropriation bills. This is the first opportunity the Senate has had for taking up the deficiency appropriation bill, which is a most important and a long bill. The Senator from West Virginia, I know, is very courteous about it, and is willing to yield.

Mr. FAULKNER. I feel that it is incumbent upon me that I should yield to the Senator from Maine to make the motion he suggests. The deficiency appropriation bill is a very important bill and one of general interest, and particularly now, the close of the session being so near, I feel that I ought to yield, although I should like to have the conference report informally laid aside for that purpose.

Mr. HALE. Of course the Senator will see that he can call up his conference report at any time.

Mr. FAULKNER. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Has the deficiency appropriation bill been reported to-day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was reported to-day.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I object for the present.

Mr. HALE. The deficiency appropriation bill came from the other House three days ago. Since that time the Committee on Appropriations has been working day and night to report it to the Senate. It reported it this morning early, and that was the first opportunity for making the report. It was printed at once and came back to the Senate, and I gave notice before the recess that I would try to call it up, by the leave of the Senate, when the body came together in the evening. A single Senator can by his objection carry the bill over until to-morrow morning, when the Senate is now here and ready to proceed with its consideration.

Mr. BUTLER. Was it not agreed this morning by unanimous consent that the deficiency appropriation bill should be taken up at the first convenient moment? I so understood it.

Mr. HALE. I gave notice that I would make the motion to take it up, having no doubt that the Senate would adopt that motion.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I said that for the time being I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No such agreement was made.

Mr. BUTLER. There was no such agreement made? I certainly understood it so.

Mr. HALE. I appeal to the Senator from Vermont in the interest of public business, as the bill has been printed and is before the Senate, and as the hours are rapidly waning, that he withdraw his objection and allow the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill, or at any rate that the motion may be put and the will of the Senate be manifested, if it so desires to proceed with this business, and that he will not interpose his single objection against this course.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The will of the Senate is found in its rules for the safety of legislation. The report of the deficiency appropriation bill has been just made and laid on our desks. No Senator has had any opportunity to study it at all. We have a conference report which is of the highest privilege before the Senate now. I do not mean to say by any means that when this matter is finished I shall interpose an objection, but until we can have time for a few minutes to see what this report is, and then consider it subject to objection, I think we had better finish the conference report, which is a matter of the highest privilege.

I have no more disposition than anybody else to delay the public business, but if the two Houses of Congress, after having been in session for two months and more, now find it necessary through their committees to ask us in the last moment of time to consider a bill that we have not had an opportunity to read, I think it fair and right to stand by the law of the Senate for half an hour at least, until we can look at it.

Mr. HALE. Of course the Senator can have his way. I can only say that the bill has been before the Senate ever since about 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on agreeing to the report of the committee of conference.

Mr. HOAR. I do not ask to have the report read again, but I desire to know what the subject is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title of the bill on which the report is made will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 9418) to incorporate the Washington and Western Maryland Railroad Company.

Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] prior to the taking of the recess called for an explanation of the conference report.

The House conferees agreed to all of the amendments made to the bill by the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia and adopted subsequently by the Senate. There was only one change in an amendment that was made by the Senate, which the Senate conferees receded from upon objection made by the House conferees.

That amendment provided that the whole amount of stock and bonds issued should not exceed the actual cost of the construction and equipment of the road more than 5 per cent. of that cost. When the conferees met they became satisfied that that was not a practical provision.

That provision was stricken out and there was substituted for it a provision that the road should be commenced within one year and completed within three years.

Any Senator on a moment's reflection will see the impracticability of the provision that was inserted by the Senate, and it is clearly upon its face a manifest error. If the road would cost in its construction say $500,000, and $250,000 in stock had been subscribed and paid up, and bonds to the amount of $250,000 had been issued and those bonds upon the market were depreciated in value 20 per cent., it would then leave the company $50,000 in debt on the actual construction of the road according to the assets fixed by the bill, and the stockholders of that company under the provisions of the bill would not even be permitted to take the money out of their pockets and pay it into the treasury of the corporation and receive certificates of stock for the amount paid in in order to discharge the bona fide legitimate obligations of the corporation.

Consequently that portion of the amendment of the Senate was receded from and the other provision was substituted. That is the only change made in the bill by the conference report.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I shall be glad to ask my honorable friend from West Virginia, if he will give me his attention, to explain to the Senate what is to be the effect of the bill as it regards the line of the Potomac River between Georgetown and the boundary of the District as it respects the amount of land that this railway company is to take between the present canal and its right of way, and its property interest in the canal lands and the stream, and what effect, if this grant be made, it is to have upon the power of Congress or the District authorities or anybody to control the water-front from Georgetown to the boundary of the District. That is a very large and important subject, which I should be glad to have my friend explain in regard to the effect of the bill upon that question.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. President, I have assumed that when a bill had been reported from a standing committee of the House of Representatives, passed that body, had been referred to a standing committee of this body, and had been reported favorably after due and full consideration, the only question involved in reference to the subject now before the Senate would be any amendment or difference between the conference report and the bill as it passed this body.

I desire frankly to say to the Senator from Vermont that I was not on the subcommittee in charge of the bill when it was referred to a subcommittee of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and therefore have not given that attention to the details and particulars of the bill that the subcommittee necessarily gave in ascertaining whether it was a proper bill to report favorably. So I can not answer the question of the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from West Virginia will allow me I will state that I raised precisely the question the Senator from Vermont asked when the bill was pending in the District Committee, and suspended action upon it for a week; but the explanation was made that the purpose of the company was to construct a retaining-wall and fill in so as to give an ample area between the canal and the river for the railroad and the tow-path of the canal.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is satisfactory as far as it goes; but I should be glad to be informed by somebody what is the width of land between the present canal property and the river that is to be taken by this railroad, and how near it will come to the banks of the river going up to the District line.

Mr. HARRIS. That I do not suppose any Senator here can answer accurately. It varies.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] can answer it.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Maryland can answer it.

Mr. GORMAN. This charter permits the road to be constructed from the free bridge that crosses the Potomac at Georgetown to the end of the District line, about 3 miles above, commencing at the bridge. There are probably 75 or 80 feet that could be utilized for the tracks of the road, running up to the old powder mill at Powder Mill Branch, and above there the flat widens out to possibly a quarter of a mile in width, which is private property. So to get the right of way it would be necessary to condemn part of the canal bank by putting up a retaining wall, and then it would run through private property beyond.

Mr. EDMUNDS. May I ask the Senator from Maryland a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is there anything in this charter which provides the width of land that may be taken by the company as a limit, or is it all that they may choose to take between the canal and the river?

Mr. GORMAN. My impression is that it is simply for two tracks. That is my impression, although I am not positive about it. I did not draw the charter. But there is no difficulty, let me say to the Senator from Vermont, upon that score. There is a very limited space at the lower end. There is not a great deal that can be acquired. I think the charter is in the usual form, so far as I can see. The bill came here from the other House.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not see, if my friend will allow me to interrupt him, that there is any limit to the width of this line that may be taken, and the railway company may therefore take all the ground between the present canal property and the river itself. Ordinarily, in the States, I am sure there is a limit of 4 rods, or 6 rods, or 100 feet, or 200 feet, or whatever it may be.

Mr. GORMAN. In the District when a road passes through streets I think the universal rule is, and this charter so provides, that it shall be subject to the approval of the District commissioners. It practically means only two tracks. I think there is no trouble on that score, and there is no interest to be affected adversely. The truth is, I suppose, that what these gentlemen are looking at is that the canal which runs from here to Cumberland is getting to that point where it is not profitable in pushing the canal south, and the old property will be abandoned except for the water right there, and they are looking for another connection with Washington and the West. I have no doubt that is what it means.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the report of the committee of conference.

The report was concurred in.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 1384) granting a pension to Margaret J. Cash;

A bill (S. 1719) granting a pension to Levi B. Smith;

A bill (S. 2549) for the relief of Mary Isabella R. Clements;

A bill (S. 2977) granting a pension to Henrietta Brown;

A bill (H. R. 3453) granting an increase of pension to Alfred T. McKinsey; and

A bill (H. R. 3713) granting an increase of pension to Maria A. Rousseau.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2886) granting increase of pension to Joseph B. Sellers with an amendment in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I renew my request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside to enable him to move the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. What is the unfinished business?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] authorizing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate alleged election outrages in certain States.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12571) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. HALE. I move that the formal reading be dispensed with and that the bill be read for action on the amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read at length as in Committee of the Whole, and if there be no objection the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations will be acted upon as they are reached in the text of the bill. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Subject to any reservation on any particular amendment, as the usual course is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Subject to the reservation indicated by the Senator from Vermont.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Commitee on Appropriations was, under the head of "State Department," on page 2, after line 20, to insert:

Reimbursement of Bywater, Tanqueray & Co., of London: To enable the Secretary of State to reimburse Messrs. Bywater, Tanqueray & Co., of London, for losses sustained through the payment of certain drafts drawn on the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Treasury by Julius L. Hudson, of Saint Paul de Loando, while improperly placed in charge of the United States consulate at that place, $446.76.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 4, to insert:

Payment to the widow of Moses A. Hopkins, late minister to Liberia: For payment to the widow of Moses A. Hopkins, late minister and consul-general to Liberia, the amount of six months' salary of said officer, $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 5, to insert:

Contingent expenses, foreign missions: To enable the proper accounting officers without the payment of any money from the Treasury to settle the accounts of United States ministers and others on account of the appropriation for "contingent expenses of foreign missions" for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, by means of utilizing the entire appropriation under that head generally, and, without regard to the division of the amount between specified and unspecified objects, authority is hereby granted for that purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, after line 5, to insert:

Procuring evidence relating to French spoliation claims: To supply a deficiency of $699.20 in the appropriation for procuring evidence relative to French spoliation claims, being the amount necessary to complete payments recommended by the Secretary of State in House Executive Document No. 310, Fiftieth Congress, first session, $699.20.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Treasury Department," in the appropriations for "Coast and Geodetic Survey," on page 7, after line 8, to insert:

For copper plates, chart paper, printer's ink, copper, zinc, and chemicals for electrotyping and photographing; engraving, printing, photographing, and electrotyping supplies; for extra drawing and engraving and photolithographing charts and printing from stone for immediate use, $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the same head, on page 8, line 1, to increase the appropriation "for transfer of Coast and Geodetic Survey steamer Gedney from New York to San Francisco, Cal.," from $5,000 to $6,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 21, to insert:

INTERNAL REVENUE.

For salaries and expenses of agents and subordinate officers of internal revenue, $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, under the head of "Repairs of light-houses," to increase the appropriation "for repairing, rebuilding, and improving light-houses and buildings," etc., from $30,000 to $60,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 5, to insert:

For post-office and custom-house at Atlanta, Ga.: For paving streets around said building, being for one-third the cost thereof, $1,747.56.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 9, to insert:

Public building at Portland, Oregon: For the payment of assessments for the improvements of streets abutting on block 172, in the city of Portland, Oregon, being the custom-house block, assessed to the United States and unpaid, $1,271.82.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, after line 2, to insert:

Contingent expenses, Utah Commission:
For expenses of the Utah Commission, namely, for traveling expenses, printing, stationery, clerk-hire, office rent, gas, fuel, janitor, postage stamps, and other necessary expenses, being for the service of the fiscal year 1889, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, after line 18, to insert:

National Museum:
Heating and lighting National Museum: For expenses of heating the United States National Museum for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, in the appropriations for "Expenses of collecting revenue from customs," after line 6, to strike out:

Relief of William Caldwell: To reimburse William Caldwell as custodian of the custom-house at Cincinnati, Ohio, the amount of a certified check, drawn by Sol P. Kineon, in his favor, on the Fidelity National Bank of Cincinnati, which failed before the presentation of said check, for payment, as a guaranty for the faithful performance by Kineon of his contract for furnishing coal to the Government: Provided, That any dividends that have been or may be declared on this account shall be covered in the Treasury, $1,811.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, line 2, to increase the appropriation "to supply a deficiency in the appropriation for fuel, lights, and water for public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department" from $20,000 to $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TURPIE. I offer the following amendment on page 17——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PALMER in the chair). The Chair suggests to the Senator from Indiana that it might be as well to have the committee amendments disposed of first, as was suggested when the reading of the bill was commenced, and then other amendments can be offered.

Mr. HALE. That was the order of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that was the order.

Mr. HARRIS. That is the uniform practice.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 17, after line 16, to strike out:

Fifth Auditor's Office: That for clerk-hire and other expenses of auditing the accounts under the appropriations to enable the several Executive Departments of the Government to participate in the Centennial Exposition of the Ohio Valley and Central States, there may be paid out of the unexpended balance of said appropriation to employés in the office of the Fifth Auditor for work done out of office hours, not exceeding $750, and to Henry W. Coffin, for service in and about the preparation of the Government exhibits, not exceeding $150.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, after line 12, to strike out:

Payment to Alabama: For payment to the State of Alabama on account of 2 and 3 per cent. fund arising from the sale of public land in said State from July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1886, $4,235.21.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, after line 18, to strike out:

That the Attorney-General be authorized and requested to report to the Fifty-first Congress the legal status of what is known as the 2-per cent. claim of the States of Illinois and Indiana, under the acts of April 18, 1818, and April 19, 1816, March 2, 1855, and March 3, 1857; and also in connection therewith what legal claims or off-sets, if any, the United States has against said States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 2, to strike out:

Payment to State of Louisiana: To refund the State of Louisiana the amount of overpayments of interest to June 13, 1888, on the bonds of the State held as Indian trust funds by the United States, $13,602.71.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 7, to insert:

Credit in certain accounts of the Treasurer of the United States: That the Secretary of the Treasury and the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of the Treasurer of the United States the sum of $24,016.43, now carried in the accounts of the office of assistant treasurer of the United States at New York and in the general account of the Treasurer of the United States as "unavailable funds," and representing losses incurred in said office without default or negligence on the part of the assistant treasurer at New York, said sum being the total of the amounts carried in the statement of the Treasurer of the United States in his annual report for the year 1888 as unavailable funds, office of assistant treasurer at New York. And for this purpose the said sum of $24,016.43 is hereby appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the beginning of page 20, to insert:

National Board of Health: To pay for transportation and storage of books, records, and furniture of the National Board of Health from September 1, 1886, to March 4, 1889, and the transportation of the same to the office of the Surgeon-General of the Army, where they shall be hereafter stored, $1,004.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 7, to insert:

To pay the members of the Treasury and War Department Commissions selected by the Secretaries, respectively, in pursuance of the recommendation of the Senate Select Committee to Inquire into the Methods of Business in the Executive Departments, etc., each the sum of $400, and to pay to E. J. Redmond and H. P. Chenoweth, stenographers to the Treasury Commission, each the sum of $200; in all, $3,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 16, to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to transfer and deliver to the Secretary of War, from time to time, as may be necessary, the pay-rolls of the volunteer forces during the late war, now on file in the office of the Second Auditor, in order to enable the Secretary of War to have the card-index records of the volunteer forces in the late war made complete from all rolls, pay, muster, and detached, morning and all other reports containing any information as to such soldiers, as to service, pay, bounty, and allowances of all kinds, said rolls to be returned to the Treasury Department in the like condition in which received, unavoidable wear excepted.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, after line 3, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay James H. Gilbert balance due him as salary as deputy collector and clerk in charge of inspectors at the Chicago custom-house, from February 1 to April 24, 1883, $408.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, after line 8, to insert:

For properly decorating the public buildings in the city of New York on the occasion of celebrating the centennial anniversary of the inauguration of the first President of the United States, on the 30th of April, 1889, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, after line 13, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to James O. Clephane $229.38; to E. D. Easton, $36.25; and to R. S. Boswell, $164.37; in all, $430, for services rendered in reporting stenographically the several trials of the case of Hallett Kilbourn vs. John G. Thompson, late Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, under the head of "Police court," after line 8, to insert:

For the payment of jurors in the police court of the District of Columbia for the fiscal years 1889 and 1890, as per act of Congress approved, $7,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the same head, on page 22, after line 12, to insert:

For pay of bailiffs in charge of said jurors for said periods, $2,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, under the head of "Water department," to increase the appropriation "for pumping expenses and pipe distribution; to pay-roll of employés for extra services," from $150 to $238.99.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, under the head of "War Department," after line 6, to strike out:

To enable the Secretary of War to pay the claim of John McGill, jr., numbered 78063, allowed and certified to be due by the accounting officers of the Government and appropriated for by Congress in the act approved February 20, 1886, but erroneously paid to another person, $150.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, under the same head, after line 13, to strike out:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to issue to William Gray, late a private in Company D, First Regiment of New York (Lincoln) Cavalry, a warrant for the sum of $174.43, in full for his claim heretofore allowed by the Treasury Department, and for which claim the said Department issued to said William Gray Treasury pay warrant No. 3960, dated September 20, 1865, which warrant was paid on a forged indorsement of the name of said claimant, without his authority or knowledge, and for which he has never received any benefit whatever, and to pay said reissued warrant out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, after line 2, to insert:

Water supply, District of Columbia: To enable the Secretary of War to cause to be constructed and put in operation a 48-inch cast-iron main from the present distributing reservoir above Georgetown, easterly to Rock Creek at M street, and thence along M street to New Hampshire avenue; thence northeasterly along New Hampshire avenue to R street north; thence along R street, to connect with the present 48-inch main from the new reservoir at R and Fourth streets, and to make the necessary connections and to provide the necessary apparatus for thereby specially supplying the present deficiencies of water at the higher levels of the city, and in general to increase the water supply, $575,000. The said work shall be done under the direction of the Chief of Engineers, in the shortest practicable time. If it shall appear to the Secretary of War, on the report of the Chief of Engineers, that for any cause the work can not be carried on, or material therefor can not be obtained as rapidly as is necessary for the best and most vigorous prosecution of it, he is authorized to provide material by purchase in open market or by special contract for the fabrication thereof, and to carry on the work by days' work or otherwise, as it may seem to him expedient. This appropriation shall be charged against the revenues applicable to the expenses of carrying on the government of the District of Columbia, so that one-half will be paid from the Treasury of the United States and the other half from moneys derived from taxation in the District.

For the survey of a line for a substantially surface gravity conduit from the present distributing reservoir above Georgetown to the new reservoir in the city of Washington, to be made by the Chief of Engineers under the direction of the Secretary of War, $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary. This survey when made shall be reported to Congress, together with detailed plans and drawings, showing its location, character, and statement of the length of time required for its construction, with a detailed estimate of its cost, including land damages, and all other things pertaining thereto, for the information and consideration of Congress.

This appropriation shall be charged against the revenues applicable to the expenses of carrying on the government of the District of Columbia, so that one-half will be paid from the Treasury of the United States and the other half from moneys derived from taxation in the District.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 31, after line 23, to insert:

Signal Service, contingent expenses: For contingent expenses of the Signal Bureau; repairs to furniture, matting, oil-cloth, shelving, file-cases, and heating apparatus for and repairs to building No. 2416 M street, northwest, occupied by the Signal Office; for fencing, grading, paving, concreting, and for other absolutely necessary expenses, being for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, $4,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, after line 7, to insert:

For drainage and alterations in the shops and storage-rooms of the office of the Chief Signal Officer, corner of Twenty-fourth and M streets, northwest, Washington, D. C., $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, under the head of "War, miscellaneous," after line 2, to insert:

To reimburse and pay the sum of $12,412 to each of the following named companies, to wit: The Chicago and Atchison Bridge Company, the Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs Railroad Company, the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company, the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company, and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad Company for moneys expended by said companies in the construction of works at Winthrop, Mo., for the protection of the shores of the Missouri River and necessary to preserve navigation at said point; in all, $62,060.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 34, line 8, after the word "authority," to strike out "$10,000," and insert "$15,138.84;" so as to read:

Telegraph to connect the Capitol with the Departments and Government Printing Office: To pay the Standard Under-ground Cable Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in full, for under-ground electric cables laid in the city of Washington, D. C., in October, 1883, connecting the Capitol, Executive Mansion, State, War, and Navy Departments, and other Government offices, and the Smithsonian Institution, under terms of permit of War Department, dated October 3, 1883, approved October 9, 1883, by H. G. Wright, Chief of Engineers, or other authority, $15,138.84, which said sum shall be in full payment for the purchase of said cables and for all demands or equities of said Standard Under-ground Cable Company against the Government for under-ground electric cables laid as aforesaid in the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 34, after line 15, to insert:

Contingent expenses, Navy Department: To pay bill of Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict for indelible ribbons, $45; to pay bill of E. Morrison for stationery, $120.23; in all, $165.23, being for the fiscal year 1888.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 41, after line 13, to insert:

Transportation and recruiting, Marine Corps: For expenses of transportation and recruiting, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, after line 2, to insert:

To defray the expenses of observing a total eclipse of the sun, and which, by reason of the delay in the passage of said act, was not expended, is hereby reappropriated, and the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to use the said $5,000 to defray the expense of sending a scientific expedition to the west coast of Africa to observe the total eclipse of the sun which will occur on the 22d day of December, 1889; said sum to be expended under the direction of a joint committee of the National Academy of Sciences and the United States Naval Observatory.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Interior Department," on page 45, after line 11, to insert:

For the payment to the legal representative of the late Richard Joseph for services as disbursing clerk of the Census Office, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 48, after line 20, to insert:

Expenses of commission to negotiate with Ute Indians in Southern Colorado: For an additional amount to pay the necessary expenses incurred by the Southern Ute Commission under the act of May 1, 1888, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Post-Office Department," on page 50, to strike out the clause from line 16 to line 24, inclusive, as follows:

To enable the Postmaster-General to pay to the employés and late employés of the Post-Office Department additional compensation for services rendered by such employés as were embraced in orders of the Postmaster-General, dated April 11 and June 18, 1885, requiring extra hours of labor, said additional compensation to be regulated by the extra time said employés were actually engaged in rendering service under said orders, $13,089.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, to strike out the clause from line 1 to line 6, inclusive, as follows:

To enable the Postmaster-General to pay the employés and late employés in the office of the general superintendent of the railway mail service additional compensation for extra hours of labor from April 11 to November 18, 1885, inclusive, $258.75.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, after line 10, to insert:

To enable the Postmaster-General to pay to Heman D. Walbridge and Reginald Fendall, trustees, rent of the post-office at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, at the rate of $750 per annum from the 1st day of July, 1885, to the 30th day of June, 1888, being the rent agreed upon between the Postmaster-General and the said trustees by the lease entered into between them and him on the 1st day of July, 1884, for the term of four years, $2,250.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, after line 20, to insert:

To pay the rent of the city post-office in Washington, District of Columbia, from July 1, 1888, to June 30, 1889, $10,000, said sum to be in full payment for the rent for the time specified.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Now that we have finished the paragraphs in regard to the Post-Office affairs, I shall be glad to have the Senator in charge of this bill explain to the Senate how it happens that some millions of dollars appear to be a deficiency for the current fiscal year in the Post-Office Department, why the money needed was not appropriated in the regular way? I dare say there is a good explanation, but the public ought to know it, and the records of the Senate ought to show it. I notice on page 49 there are certainly, I think, at least $2,000,000 provided for as deficiency.

Mr. HALE. The most direct reason that can be given for the deficiencies in the Post-Office Department is the constantly increasing work of that Department. It has been very large during the last year; new routes have been put on railroads, and the service of the railway mail transportation has been largely increased, and it is undoubtedly the fact that in making estimates for the current year the Postmaster-General did not make his estimates high enough. I will say here to the Senator from Vermont and to the Senate generally that the experience of the Committee on Appropriations is that every year there will be found deficiencies in that Department.

Mr. EDMUNDS. And it amounts to about $3,000,000.

Mr. HALE. It amounts to between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 of deficiencies, and I do not expect to see the day when there will not be deficiencies there to a considerable amount. I shall be glad if hereafter the Postmaster-General will take the future squarely in hand and make his estimates what he believes will be large enough to cover the the year, so that we shall have no deficiencies. But even then the chances are that the growth of the country and of the railway mail service will be so large that the estimates made even under such conditions will not equal what will need to be expended.

Mr. EDMUNDS. How did these estimates fall nearly $4,000,000 short?

Mr. HALE. The entire appropriations for the Post-Office Department are something colossal. I remember very well that twelve or thirteen years ago I had my attention called to the entire expenditures of that Department, then about $16,000,000 annually, and they have now run up to beyond $60,000,000. This year the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads tells me they will amount to $66,000,000, more than the entire Government spent thirty-five years ago, and at the rate it is going on men who are here may be in the Senate at the time when a hundred million dollars will be expended in a year by the Post-Office Department.

The growth is marvelous, and is of a kind that perhaps no Postmaster-General can keep up with in his estimates. The expenditure is a large sum, but the committee found that it was needed and would be spent, and I am by no means certain that, even with this, another winter there will not be a further deficiency of a few hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the Senator please tell us how much the expenditures exceed the postal revenues?

Mr. HALE. About $4,000,000.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think that is doing very well indeed.

Mr. HALE. The Department is paying up to within about $4,000,000. This can be said for it that while the expenditures are quadruple what they were twelve years ago, the deficiency that has to be supplied by Congress from other revenues of the Government is smaller than it was at that time. It used to be six, seven, or eight million dollars a year when the expenditures were not more than a quarter of what they are now. The growth is immense, and the revenues are immense.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator tell us the deficiency for the last fiscal year?

Mr. HALE. Four million dollars.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I have noticed that although there is probably, of course, no possible connection between the two circumstances, that preceding a Presidential election the appropriations and the estimates run down, and succeeding a Presidential election the deficiency bills run up. Whether there is any connection between the two circumstances I am altogether too modest to suggest.

Mr. HALE. This is a very large deficiency, undoubtedly.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for "United States courts," on page 53, line 2, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one hundred and twenty-four" and insert "two hundred and forty;" so as to read:

Fees and expenses of marshals: For payment of special deputy marshals at Congressional elections, $240,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, line 11, after the word "follows," to insert "1877, $993.70;" and in line 15, after the word "all," to strike out "one thousand and forty-five dollars and sixty" and insert "two thousand and thirty-nine dollars and thirty;" so as to make the clause read:

Fees of jurors: For fees of jurors United States courts, being for deficiencies on account of fiscal years, as follows: 1887, $993.70; 1886, $730.60; 1885, $315; in all, $2,039.30.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, line 19, after the word "follows," to insert "1887, $4,306.46;" and on page 55, line 6, after the word "all," to strike out "two thousand six hundred and twenty-two dollars and twenty" and insert "six thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight dollars and sixty-six;" so as to make the clause read:

Fees of witnesses: For fees of witnesses United States courts, being for deficiencies on account of fiscal years as follows: 1887, $4,306.46; 1886, $1,373.60; 1885, $175; 1884, $232; 1883, $800; 1880, $2.05; 1879, $29.25; 1877, $10.30; in all, $6,928.66.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 55, line 12, after the word "cents," to insert "for the fiscal year 1886, $1,090; in all, $1,151.78;" so as to make the clause read:

Miscellaneous expenses: For payment of miscellaneous expenses of the United States courts, being on account of fiscal year 1887, $61.78; for the fiscal year 1886, $1,090; in all, $1,151.78.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 55, after line 15, to insert:

For payment of miscellaneous expenses of United States courts, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "fees of district attorneys," to strike out the clauses beginning on line 13, page 56, and ending on line 22, page 57, as follows:

To compensate A. L. Rhodes, special counsel in the Mare Island case, being the remaining portion of his fee of $6,000, fiscal year 1888, $1,000.

To compensate A. J. Fountain for services while special assistant to United States attorney for Territory of New Mexico, eleven cases for perjury and conspiracy, fiscal year 1887, $500.

To compensate J. C. Baird for services as assistant to United States attorney for the Territory of Wyoming during June term, 1888, at Buffalo, Wyo., fiscal year 1888, $134.

To compensate Solomon Claypool for services as assistant to the United States attorney for the district of Indiana, in tally-sheet cases vs. Simon Coy and others, fiscal year 1888, $2,250.

For compensation of S. G. Hilborn for services in the Mare Island case, in association with A. L. Rhodes, and expenses, $3,750.

For compensation of D. H. Murphy for services under order of court as assistant to district attorney for Alaska, from October 9, 1886, to October 13, 1887: Fiscal year 1887, $750; fiscal year 1888, $250; in all, $1,000.

For compensation of J. E. Bruce, assistant to district attorney for southern district of Ohio, to reimburse him for the unpaid portion of the 20 per cent. reduction of his salary during the fiscal year 1888, $94.66.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For payment of United States district attorneys for unofficial fees, as set forth in House Executive Document No. 56, Fiftieth Congress, second session, as follows: Fiscal year 1882, $344.97; fiscal year 1885, $31.50; fiscal year 1886, $500; fiscal year 1887, $1,545.15; fiscal year 1888, $3,720.10; in all, $6,141.72.

For payment of special counsel on behalf of the United States, as set forth in House Executive Document No. 56, Fiftieth Congress, second session, as follows: Fiscal year 1883, $1,000; fiscal year 1884, $1,000; fiscal year 1885, $1,000; fiscal year 1886, $2,000; fiscal year 1887, $1,250; fiscal year 1888, $4,308.65; fiscal year 1889, $240; in all, $10,798.66.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask the attention of the Senator from Maine and request him to state the reason for the amendment, on page 57, striking out the clause from line 3 to line 7, inclusive. The services in that case were rendered to my personal knowledge.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator will look a little further on he will find that instead of appropriating piecemeal for these special items we have taken the document the Department sent to us and included the whole amount in one item, including the specification to which the Senator refers, which is a much better way of appropriating.

Mr. MITCHELL. That explanation refers I suppose to all the items on that page?

Mr. HALE. Yes; to all the items there.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 59, after line 7, to insert:

For payment to William G. Ewing, United States district attorney for the northern district of Illinois, for services rendered in the matter of the final report of the assignee of the estate of John McArthur, bankrupt, $300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 59, after line 11, to insert:

For the payment to Graham H. Harris, of Chicago, Ill., for services rendered in the prosecution at Auburn, N. Y., in November, 1888, of E. A. Gardner and others for smuggling, $325.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 59, after line 16, to insert:

For salary of the judge of the United States court in the Indian Territory for the balance of the current fiscal year and for the fiscal year 1890, $4,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 60, after line 12, to insert:

For payment of the final judgment and decrees which have been rendered under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States" as per letter of the Attorney-General of February 21, 1889, being Senate Executive Document No. 129, Fiftieth Congress, second session, $16,304.88, and such additional sum as may be necessary to pay such costs of suit as have been adjudged in each case, and also interest on the respective judgments at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum from the date thereof until the time this appropriation is made.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 61, after line 2, to insert:

To pay Jacob W. Jacobs, late sheriff of Keokuk County, Iowa, special deputy marshal, in full for expenses in the apprehension of certain persons concerned in the burglary of the post-office at Webster, Iowa, as shown by House Executive Document No. 59, Forty-ninth Congress, second session, $341.35.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Public printing," on page 62, after line 2, to insert:

For printing and binding for the Department of the Interior, to be executed under the direction of the Public Printer, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 62, after line 5, to insert:

For publishing such volumes of nautical instructions as are of the most value to the Navy and merchant marine, $8,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 62, line 23, before the word "press-feeders," to insert "messengers;" and on page 63, line 3, before the word "thousand," to strike out "ten" and insert "fifteen;" so as to make the clause read:

To pay 15 per cent. in addition to the amount paid for day labor to the employés of the Government Printing Office, such as compositors, pressmen, stereotypers, laborers, messengers, press-feeders, RECORD folders, counters, engineers, machinists, firemen; and proof-readers, revisers, copy-holders, make-up, and imposer of the bill force, who were and are exclusively employed on the night forces of the Government Printing Office during the second session of the Fiftieth Congress, $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary: Provided, That in estimating the said 15 per cent. credit shall be given to the Government for whatever has been paid or is now being paid the said employés above the rates for day work.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 63, after line 7, to insert:

To enable the Public Printer to pay for extra hours performed in mailing the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during the first and second sessions of the Fiftieth Congress, $530.18.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 63, after line 11, to insert:

SENATE.

For salaries of officers, clerks, and employés, Senate, for the fiscal year 1889, $11,656.

For maintaining horses and wagons, $1,500.

For cleaning and varnishing furniture, $84.66.

For purchase of furniture, $1,000.

For materials for repairs of furniture, $500.

For pay of upholsterer for upholstering sofas in committee-room on Naval Affairs, $44.

For miscellaneous items, exclusive of labor, $5,000.

For expenses of inquiries and investigations ordered by the Senate, $20,000.

For maintaining horses and wagons for the fiscal year 1888, $10.50.

For fuel, oil, and cotton-waste for heating apparatus, $92.12.

For miscellaneous items, exclusive of labor, $118.75.

To pay Benjamin Durfee (in addition to his annual salary as clerk to the Committee on Finance) for additional services to the subcommittee on the tariff and for preparing tariff testimony and indexes thereto, $2,000.

To pay for clerical work performed and incidental expenses incurred in the investigation ordered by the Senate under resolution of October 10, 1888, and authorized by the Committee on the Improvement of the Mississippi River and its Tributaries, such investigation having been made during the last recess of the Senate by direction of said committee, $283.85.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 64, after line 20, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay J. J. Finley, who was appointed a Senator of the United States by the governor of the State of Florida, a sum equivalent to the salary of a Senator from March 4, 1887, the day of his appointment, to May 20, 1887, the day of the election of a Senator to fill the vacancy to which he was appointed, $1,054.80.

Mr. HALE. The necessity for that appropriation has passed away because a resolution has been passed covering the subject, and I ask that it be disagreed to.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was continued. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 65, after line 3, to insert:

Bust of the late Chief-Justice Waite: To procure and place in the room of the Supreme Court of the United States a bust of the late Chief-Justice Morrison Remick Waite, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "House of Representatives," on page 65, line 8, to strike out the name "Burns," and insert "Burnes;" so as to make the clause read:

To pay the widow of the late James N. Burnes the amount of salary for the unexpired term of his service as a member of the Fiftieth Congress, $545.51.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 66, to strike out the clause from line 10 to line 17, inclusive, as follows:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives to pay to the officers and employés of the Senate and House borne on the annual and session rolls on the 20th day of October, 1888, including the Capitol police, for extra services during the Fiftieth Congress, a sum equal to one month's pay, at the compensation then paid them by law, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Senate will not agree to that amendment.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. HARRIS. Certainly; I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HALE. This is one of the items on which there will be a contest, and I ask, as the reading is progressing rapidly, that it be passed over.

Mr. HARRIS. I acquiesce in that suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no objection, the amendment will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 66, line 18, to strike out the name "Gormon" and insert "Gorman;" so as to read:

To pay Frank B. Gorman $75 for the month of November, 1888, extra work as mail page.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Judgments Court of Claims," on page 74, after line 10, to insert:

Joseph McDonald, $74, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum from February 16, 1888, until paid, under section 1090, Revised Statutes;
Simon Cook, $1,000, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum from June 20, 1888, until paid, under section 1090, Revised Statutes;
Seth N. Kimball, $3,736;
Patrick J. Kennedy, $26,379;
Charles W. A. Cartlidge, $200.74;
John T. Green, $255;
Madison J. Julian, $1,074;
James H. Dennis, $17;
Hans Hanson, $757;
Marius Duvall, $6,731.87;
W. H. Grider, $106.68;
J. C. Irwin & Co., $9,735;
Charles A. Perry & Co., $5,325;
Alden L. Roadarmour, $24;
Sampson Williams $801;
William G. Crockett, $120;
Harry J. Milligan, $146;
William N. Heyward, $48;
Frederick Parsons, $26;
Alfred T. Dillard, $33;
G. G. Eaves, $157;
J. W. Lingenfelter, $79;
Thomas B. Ford, $26;
Ebenezer N. O. Clough, $394;
Lenoir M. Erwin, $42;
Joseph M. Stafford, $127.10;
John W. Calder, $35;
G. L. Ogden, $1,396.00;
To pay interest at 5 per cent. per annum from September 8, 1888, to February 27, 1889, under section 1090, Revised Statutes, on a judgment for $2,256.75, rendered by the Court of Claims in case No. 12487, of George H. Palmer, already provided for in the principal sum, $391.98.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 76, line 17, after the word "all," to strike out "two hundred and forty-eight thousand eight hundred and seventy-one dollars and six," and insert "three hundred and eight thousand one hundred and sixty-three dollars and forty-three;" so as to make the clause read:

In all, $308,163.43: Provided, That none of the judgments herein provided for shall be paid until the right of appeal shall have expired.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, on page 83, under the head of "Navy Department claims allowed by the Fourth Auditor and Second Comptroller," in line 16, after the words "for pay of the Navy," to strike out "$256,948.65."

Mr. HALE. The words proposed to be stricken out should be restored, with the proviso I send to the desk added.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine asks the Senate to disagree to the amendment of the committee striking out, and to insert a proviso which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Provided, That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition in the Court of Claims upon which the judgment was rendered, which being affirmed by the Supreme Court has been adopted by the accounting officers as the basis for the allowance of said claim.

Mr. VOORHEES. I only partially heard the amendment, and as it is an important one I take the liberty to ask that it be read again.

The Secretary again read the proviso.

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not want to embarrass the progress of the bill, but I desire either now or at some other time to take the sense of the Senate upon the proposition to make a statute of limitations retroactive upon claims of the same character that elsewhere in this bill reach back for twenty and thirty years. I know no reason why this class of claims should be discriminated against by a proviso of that kind; but if the Senator will allow, when the bill is read through, the right to discuss the amendment he proposes to be reserved, I will let the matter pass now and go back to it when we reach the end of the bill.

Mr. HALE. That may be done, Mr. President.

Mr. HARRIS. Let it be left open until the rest of the amendments are acted upon.

Mr. VOORHEES. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be passed over, and the reading of the bill will proceed.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in section 2, page 84, to strike out the clause from line 17 to line 20, inclusive, as follows:

To enable the Public Printer to pay for extra hours performed in mailing the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during the first and second sessions of the Fiftieth Congress, $530.18.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 3. That for the payment of the following claims certified to be due by the several accounting officers of the Treasury Department under appropriations the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, and under appropriations heretofore treated as permanent, being for the service of the fiscal year 1886 and prior years, unless otherwise stated, and which have been certified to Congress under section 2 of the act of July 7, 1884, as fully set forth in Senate Executive Document No. 132, Fiftieth Congress, second session, except such as may be in favor of the several bonded Pacific railroads, and such others as are specially excepted, there is appropriated as follows:

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE FIRST COMPTROLLER.

State Department:
Foreign intercourse: For loss on bills of exchange, diplomatic service, $8.38.
Treasury Department:
Internal revenue: For drawback on stills exported (act March 1, 1879), $40.
For refunding taxes illegally collected, $3,661.82: "Provided, That if it appear by legal proof, to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, that any of the corporations named in said executive document as paying said tax never deducted or withheld the same from the alien holders of such stock or bonds and that the same is not due to said aliens, payment may be made to the corporation."
Miscellaneous:
For post-office and subtreasury building at Boston, Mass., $4,879.81.
For custom-house building at Cleveland, Ohio, $2,711.84.
For post-office and court-house building at Philadelphia, Pa., $4,234.15.
For court-house and post-office building at Jefferson City, Mo., $49.45.
Interior Department:
For investigation of pension cases, special examiners, Pension Office, $36.50.
For contingent expenses of land offices, $4.33.
For protecting the public lands, $5.25.
For surveying the public lands, $56.22.
For reimbursement to receivers of public moneys for excess of deposits, $246.41.
Department of Justice:
Judicial expenses: For fees and expenses of marshals, United States courts, $784.99.
For fees of commissioners, United States courts, $35.40.
For fees of witnesses, United States courts, $720.90.
For support of prisoners, United States courts, $387.30.
For expenses of United States courts, 1879 and prior years, $15.
For salaries, district marshals, $394.73.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE FIRST AUDITOR AND COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS.

For expenses of collecting the revenue from customs, $8,324.60.
For repayment to importers excess of deposits for unascertained duties, act of August 5, 1882, $423.67.
For Light-House Establishment, 1861 and 1862, $261.96.

WAR DEPARTMENT CLAIMS ALLOWED BY SECOND AUDITOR AND SECOND COMPTROLLER.

For pay for two and three years volunteers, $71,387.46.
For bounty to volunteers and their widows and legal heirs, $72,875.61.
For bounty, act of July 28, 1866, $10,663.28.
For pay, etc., of the Army, 1886 and prior years, $2,094.52.
For pay, etc., of the Army, 1887, $7,377.30.
For pay, etc., of the Army, 1888, $2,531.55.
For expenses of recruiting, $30.78.
For contingencies of the Army, $105.
For artificial limbs, $75.
For reimbursing Massachusetts for expenses incurred and paid in protecting the harbors and strengthening the fortifications on the coast (act of July 7, 1884), $94,934.16.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT (INDIAN) CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE SECOND AUDITOR AND COMPTROLLER.

For pay of Indian agents, $331.37.
For incidental expenses of Indian service in Dakota, $22.88.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THIRD AUDITOR AND SECOND COMPTROLLER.

War Department:

For subsistence of the Army, $62.

For regular supplies, Quartermaster's Department, except the claims of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, $201.20.

For incidental expenses, Quartermaster's Department, except the claim of the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky and the claim of the Union Pacific Railway Company, $175.31.

For transportation of the Army and its supplies, 1887, $62.25.

For transportation of the Army and its supplies, 1886 and prior years, except the claims of the Central Pacific and the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Companies, $4,159.44.

For barracks and quarters, $1,015.52.

For horses for cavalry and artillery, $918.84.

For Signal Service, transportation, except the claims of the Union Pacific Railway Company, $4.45.

For contingencies of fortifications, $4,203.60.

For reimbursement to certain States and Territories (State of Oregon) expenses incurred in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities, act of June 27, 1882, $38,132.98.

For pay, transportation, services, and supplies of Oregon and Washington volunteers in 1855 and 1856, $906.22.

For Rogue River Indian war of 1854, $47.18.

For keeping, supplying, and transporting prisoners of war, $143.

For 20 per cent. additional compensation, $175.23.

For bridge trains and equipage, $30.

For commutation of rations to prisoners of war in rebel States and to soldiers on furlough, $9,394.12.

For horses and other property lost in the military service, $24,708.66.

NAVY DEPARTMENT CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE FOURTH AUDITOR AND SECOND COMPTROLLER.

For pay of the Navy, —— dollars.

For pay, miscellaneous, $10.25.

For contingent, Marine Corps, except the claim of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, $3.43.

For contingent, Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, $25.74.

For provisions, Navy, Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, $18,843.68.

For construction and repair, Bureau of Construction and Repair, $388.

For payments on account of clothing or bedding destroyed by order, for sanitary purposes, in preventing the spread of contagious diseases, $364.75.

For indemnity for lost clothing, $60.

For enlistment bounties to seamen, $208.67.

For bounty for the destruction of enemies' vessels, $28.10.

For the payment of claims for difference between actual expenses and mileage allowed under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Graham vs. The United States, $1,568.12.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE SIXTH AUDITOR.

For deficiency in the postal revenue, 1866 and prior years, except the claims of the Central Branch, Union Pacific Railroad, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, $13,912.05.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert, after line 6, on page 93, the following additional section:

FRENCH SPOLIATION CLAIMS.

SEC. 4. To pay the findings of the Court of Claims on the following claims for indemnity for spoliations by the French prior to July 31, 1801, under the act entitled "An act to provide for the ascertainment of claims of American citizens for spoliations committed by the French prior to the 31st day of July, 1801," namely:

On the schooner Industry, Benjamin Hawkes, master, namely:

Thomas Cushing, administrator of Marston Watson, $6,555;

Charles F. Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, $3,000;

William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $1,000;

H. W. Blagge, administrator, and Susan B. Samuels, administratrix of Crowell Hatch, $1,000;

On schooner Delight, Stephen Curtis, master, namely:

George Holbrook, administrator of Edward Holbrook, $6,302;

Charles F. Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, $4,000;

Ebenezer Gay, administrator of executor of the assignee in bankruptcy of Thomas English, $500;

Charles F. Hunt, administrator of Joseph Russell, $1,000;

H. W. Blagge, administrator, and Susan B. Samuels, administratrix of Crowell Hatch, $1,000;

On schooner Little Peg, William Auld, master, namely: Francis King Carey, administrator of Samuel Hollingsworth, $5,960.50;

On ship Theresa, James Brown, master, namely: R. Stewart Strobel and Henry L. Bruns, administrators of Thomas Stewart, $6,350;

On the ship Eliza, John Borrowdale, master, namely: The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $4,900;

On the schooner Industry, Joseph J. Knapp, master, namely: William Gray, administrator de bonis non of William Gray, jr., $5,882.67.

On the schooner John, John C. Blackler, master, namely:

William Gray, administrator of William Gray, deceased, $9,152.90;

William R. Hooper, administrator of William Blackler, deceased, $3,741.70;

On the brig Eliza, Daniel Francis, master, namely:

John K. Myers, administrator de bonis non of Nathaniel Eaton, deceased, $7,008.15;

Thomas J. Boardman, administrator de bonis non of Daniel Francis, deceased, $325.75;

On the schooner Industry, Benjamin Hawkes, master, namely: The New York Insurance Company, by T. B. Bleecker, jr., and Charles C. Leary, receivers, appointed February 19, 1887, in place of former receivers, deceased, $7,000;

On the brig Anna, Peter Bingham, master, namely: The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $14,700;

On the brig Dolley, Arnold Higgins, master, namely: The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $6,031.51;

On the ship John, Levi Putnam, master, namely: William Gray, administrator de bonis non of William Gray, jr., deceased, $45,318.66;

Fisher Ames, administrator de bonis non of Fisher Ames, deceased, $3,500;

Fisher Ames, administrator de bonis non of John Worthington, deceased, $1,993;

On the brig Volante, Thomas Barker, master, namely: William Gray, administrator with the will annexed of the estate of William Gray, jr., of Massachusetts, $11,356.65;

On the schooner The Helen Plumsted, Thomas Corry, master, namely: The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $9,506;

On the schooner Sallie, Benjamin Russell, master, namely:

William Gray, administrator, etc., $8,597.08;

Benjamin Russell, administrator, etc., $869.95;

On the ship Accepted Mason, Eph. Delano, master, namely:

John P. Delano, administrator of Eph. Delano, $8,017;

Richard H. T. Taylor, administrator of Joshua Hilton, $8,017;

Thomas H. Perkins, administrator of John C. Jones, $640;

William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $700;

On the schooner Nancy, Augustus Black, master, namely:

Francis King Carey, administrator de bonis non of the estate of Samuel Hollingsworth, $1,961.12;

Sands Smith, administrator of William Respass, $2,210;

On the schooner Two Brothers, H. Fry, master, namely: Francis King Carey, administrator de bonis non of the estate of Samuel Hollingsworth, $2,384.57;

On the brig Fortune, William Tuck, master, namely:

Thomas H. Perkins, administrator of John C. Jones, $1,500;

Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, assignee of Boardman, Gorham, and Homer, $2,000;

Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, $1,000;

William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $1,000;

Francis M. Boutwell, administrator of Benjamin Cobb, $1,000;

William Vernon, administrator of Samuel Brown, $1,000;

On the schooner Expedite, Samuel Clapp, master, namely: The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $7,519.66;

On the brig Mary, John Choate, master, namely:

Charles Francis Adams, administrator, etc., of Peter Chardon Brooks, assignee of William Smith, $500;

Charles Francis Adams, administrator, etc., of Peter Chardon Brooks, assignee of Stephen Gorham, $500;

Charles Francis Adams, administrator, etc., of Peter Chardon Brooks, assignee of Daniel Sargent, $500;

Charles Francis Adams, administrator, etc., of Peter Chardon Brooks, assignee of Isaac Rands, administrator of Caleb Hopkins, $500;

Charles Francis Adams, administrator, etc., of Peter Chardon Books, assignee of John Brazer, $500;

Charles Francis Adams, administrator, etc., of Peter Chardon Brooks, assignee of Tuthill Hubbart, $500;

Thomas H. Perkins, administrator of John C. Jones, $500;

Robert C. Mackay, executor of William Mackay, $500;

Ebenezer Gay, the younger, executor of Ebenezer Gay, the older, assignee of Thomas English, $500;

William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $500;

The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $9,310;

Napoleon Harvey, as administrator of the estate of Samuel Welch, $1,368.05;

Napoleon Harvey, as administrator of the estate of Ezra Welsh, $1,368.05;

On the schooner James, Hugh Gemmill, master, namely:

William E. Woodyear, administrator de bonis non of Jeremiah Yellott, deceased, $7,176.34;

The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $11,760;

On the ship Hope, John Rogers, master, namely:

Susan Buchanan Shaeffer, administratrix with the will, etc., of James Buchanan, $22,262;

George M. Gill, administrator of Gabriel Wood, $19,766;

David Stewart, administrator of Henry Lee, $2,432;

On the schooner Bethia, John Lanier, master, namely:

John O. G. Allmand, administrator, $3,113.33;

R. Manson Smith, administrator of Francis Smith, $6,233.33;

Gilbert R. Fox, jr., administrator de bonis non of Thomas Willock, $6,233.33;

The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $3,920;

On the schooner Neutrality, Thomas Grey, master, namely:

Charles Francis Adams, administrator de bonis non of Peter C. Brooks, deceased, assignee of Tuthill Hubbart, $600;

Charles Francis Adams, as assignee of Isaac Rands, administrator of Caleb Hopkins, $600;

William Sohier, administrator de bonis non of Nathaniel Fellowes, deceased, $600;

Pelham Holmes, administrator de bonis non of Ebenezer Lobdell, deceased, $5,058.34;

On the brig Marcus, Isaac Miles, master, namely:

Charles F. Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, assignee of Tuthill Hubbard, William Smith, David Green, and Caleb Hopkins, $1,201;

William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $210;

Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, $300;

On the schooner Phœnix, Solomon Babson, master, namely:

Thomas Cushing, administrator of Marston Watson, $10,846.57;

William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $2,000;

Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, assignee of Stephen Gorham, David Greene, and William Smith, $2,500;

Thomas H. Perkins, administrator of J. C. Jones, $1,000;

Charles F. Hunt, administrator of Joseph Russell, surviving partner of Jeffrey & Russell, $1,000;

Francis M. Boutwell, administrator of Benjamin Cobb, $1,000;

Frederick O. Prince, administrator of James Prince, $500;

James C. Davis, administrator of Cornelius Durant, $300;

On the brig Mary, Alexander Ross, master, namely:

Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, assignee of William Smith, Daniel D. Rogers, David Greene, Benjamin Bussey, Benjamin Homer, and Tuthill Hubbard, $5,460;

Francis M. Boutwell, administrator of Samuel Cobb, $840;

William Vernon, administrator of Samuel Brown, $2,100;

H. Burr Crandall, administrator of Thomas Dickason, $1,050;

Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, $1,050;

William S. Bowden, administrator of James Scobie, $5,271.76;

On the ship Hannah, Richard Fryer, master, namely:

George H. Gorman, administrator of John Cox, deceased, $14,465;

John A. Brimmer, administrator of John Gilliat, deceased, $35,840.44;

On the ship John of Richmond, Edward Watson, master, namely: Robert M. Banks, administrator de bonis non of John Banks, deceased, $28,349.83;

On the ship Triumph, Thomas McConnell, master, namely:

Safe Deposit and Trust Company, of Baltimore, administrator of Alexander Mactier, $2,300;

Henry L. Dashiel and David Steuart, administrators of James Corrie, the older, $2,300;

On the ship Catharine, John Farraday, master, namely:

Charles Biddle, administrator of John Craig, $5,565;

The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $14,373.34;

On the schooner Betsey, William Dennis, master, namely: William B. Ropes, administrator de bonis non of Hardy Ropes, $6,334;

On the ship Louisa, Holden Tallman, master, namely: Samuel Wells, administrator of John Clarke, $15,650;

On the ship Joanna, Philip Fosdick, at first, afterward Zebdiel Coffin, master, namely:

Gardner S. Lamson, administrator de bonis non of Paul Gardner, George Gardner, Lubni Gardner, and Zenas Gardner, $19,746.62;

Philip Macy, administrator de bonis non of Obed Macy, $4,936.65;
David P. Eldridge, administrator de bonis non of Sylvanus Macy, $4,936.65;
Robert F. Gardner, administrator de bonis non of Prince Gardner, $9,873.31;
T. B. Bleeker, jr., Charles C. Leary, receivers of the New York Insurance Company, $2,940;
On the brig Sally, James Crowdhill, master, namely: Cassius E. Lee, jr., administrator of William Hodgson, $8,926;
On the brig Betsey, John Cushing, master, namely: James F. Breuil, administrator of Francis Breuil, deceased, $11,941.76;
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $28,420;
The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $19,600;
On the brig Amelia, Benjamin Houston, master, namely:
Richard C. McMurtrie, administrator of John Bohlen, deceased, surviving assignee in bankruptcy of Ross & Simson, $5,475.08;
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $12,740;
The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $2,450;
On the ship Raven, Thomas Reilly, master, namely:
D. Fitzhugh Savage, administrator of John Savage, deceased, $9,494;
Henry Lisle Waln, surviving executor of Jacob S. Waln, deceased, surviving assignee in bankruptcy of Thomas Murgatroyd, $9,298;
Henry Pettit, administrator of Andrew Pettit, deceased, surviving assignee of Ambrose Vasse, $784;
J. Bayard Henry, administrator of Andrew Bayard, deceased, surviving assignee of Pragers & Co., $784;
James Crawford Dawes, administrator of Abijah Dawes, deceased, $784;
M. H. Messchert, administrator of Jacob Garard Koch, deceased, $980;
James Crawford Dawes, administrator of James Crawford, deceased, surviving partner of James Crawford & Co., $784;
Richard C. McMurtrie, administrator of John Bohlen, deceased, surviving assignee of Ross & Simson, $784;
George Blight, administrator of Peter Blight, deceased, $539;
William A. M. Fuller, administrator of John Leamy, deceased, $539;
D. Fitzhugh Savage, administrator of John Savage, deceased, surviving assignee of Rundle & Leech, $784;
George W. Guthrie, administrator of Alexander Murray, deceased, surviving partner of Miller & Murray, $784;
Francis A. Lewis, administrator of John Miller, jr., deceased, $784;
Henry Pratt McKean, surviving executor of Henry Pratt, deceased, surviving partner of Pratt and Knitzing, $784;
James S. Cox, administrator of James S. Cox, deceased, $688;
The Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, administrator of Thomas M. Willing, deceased, surviving partner of Willing Francis, $784;
William Rumford Howell, administrator of Samuel Howell, deceased, $490;
Samuel Bell, administrator of John G. Wacksmuth, deceased, $980;
Francis R. Pemberton, administrator of John Clifford, deceased, surviving partner of Thomas and John Clifford, $490;
On the brig Pratt, Joseph Hawkins, master, namely:
Joseph T. Brobson, administrator of James Brobson, deceased, $3,777.50;
Joseph T. Brobson, administrator of Isaac Starr, junior, deceased, surviving partner of the firm of Starr & Pritchett, $3,777.50;
Craig D. Ritchie, administrator of Joseph Summerl, deceased, surviving partner of the firm of Summerl & Brown, $3,777.50;
Sidney J. Rumford, administrator of Isaac Hendrickson, deceased, $3,777.50;
On the brig Susan, Major Lines, master, namely:
Jeremiah A. Bishop, administrator of Richard Cutler, deceased, $1,827.48;
Jeremiah A. Bishop, administrator of Jeremiah Atwater, deceased, $628.72½;
Jeremiah A. Bishop, administrator of Jeremiah Townsend, second, deceased, $628.72½;
Jeremiah A. Bishop, administrator of Major Lines, deceased, $628.72½;
Jeremiah A. Bishop, administrator of Andrew Hull, deceased, $628.72½;
Jeremiah A. Bishop, administrator of Seth De Wolf, deceased, $314.10;
The New Haven Insurance Company, $3,822;
On the brig Hope, Richard Toppan, master, namely:
James G. Freeman, receiver of the Boston Marine Insurance Company, $3,465;
Catharine C. Woodside, administratrix of William Stanwood, deceased, $2,785.11;
Francis A. McKeen, special administratrix of Richard Toppan, deceased, $4,654.11;
David D. Gilman, administrator de bonis non, will annexed, of estate of John Dunlap, deceased, $1,856.74;
On the brig George Washington, John Devereaux, master, namely:
S. Kingston McCay, administrator de bonis non cum testamento annexo of Stephen Kingston, deceased, $5,462.48;
The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $7,840;
On the schooner Mary, John Douglass, master, namely:
George G. Sill, administrator of Daniel Douglass, $2,202.98;
George G. Sill, administrator of Josiah Douglass, $2,202.98;
The Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company, $3,300;
On the brig Sally, John Craft, master, namely:
Charles F. Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, deceased, $9,900;
Henry W. Blagge and S. B. Samuels, administrators of C. Hatch, $2,000;
Francis M. Boutwell, administrator of Mungo Mackay, deceased, $600;
David Greene Haskins, jr., administrator of D. Greene, deceased, $500;
John C. Ropes, administrator of Thomas Amory, deceased, $300;
John H. Moriarity, administrator of James Scott, deceased, $200;
Thomas H. Perkins, administrator of John C. Jones, deceased, $500;
William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, deceased, $3,000;
On the sloop Farmer, Samuel Freeman, master, namely:
Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, $1,850;
David Greene Haskins, jr., administrator of David Greene, $3,638;
Blagge and Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, $1,100;
On the ship Speculator, John S. Billings, master, namely:
Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, deceased, $867.50;
Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, deceased, $433.75;
William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, deceased, $1,433.75;
John W. Apthorp, administrator of Caleb Hopkins, deceased, $1,000;
William S. Carter, administrator of William Smith, deceased, $1,000;
Daniel D. Slade, administrator of Daniel D. Rogers, deceased, $500;
Robert Grant, administrator of William H. Boardman, deceased, $400;
Frank Dabney, administrator of Samuel W. Pomeroy, deceased, $600;
On the schooner Elizabeth, Thomas Trott, master, namely:
Frederick J. Huntington, as administrator de bonis non of the estate of Jabez Huntington, deceased, $3,583.09;
Charles Francis Adams, jr., as administrator as aforesaid, $1,600;
Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, as administrators as aforesaid, $800;
On the brig Anthony, John Garrett, master, namely:
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $15,461;
James Crawford Dawes, administrator of James Crawford, surviving partner of James Crawford & Co., $3,796.32;
On the ship Arethusa, Robert McKown, master, namely:
William Keith and Ormus B. Keith, surviving executors of Samuel Keith, $4,212;
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $10,780;
The Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, $1,764;
On the brig Clarissa, Alexander Thomas, master, namely:
The Insurance Company of Pennsylvania, $11,363.13;
On the ship Confederacy, Scott Jenckes, master, namely:
Henry E. Pierrepont, executor of the will of Hezekiah B. Pierrepont, the late surviving partner (deceased) of the firm of Leffingwell & Pierrepont, $160,478.29;
T. B. Bleecker, jr., and Charles C. Leary, receivers of the New York Insurance Company, $12,000;
On the schooner Isabella, Robert Mercer, master, namely:
M. H. Messchert, administrator of Jacob Gerard Koch, deceased, $4,034.54;
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $9,900;
On the brig Maria, Samuel Taylor, master, namely:
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $5,880;
Horace B. Sargent, jr., administrator of Daniel Sargent, deceased, $14,916.93;
On the scow Polly, Anthony Sankey, master, namely:
James F. Brueil, administrator of Francis Brueil, deceased, $2,968.19;
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $62,228.94;
On the ship William, Richard Barker, master, namely:
William F. Gardner, administrator with the will annexed of Caleb Gardner, deceased, $41,578;
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $2,940;
William Vernon, administrator of Samuel Brown, deceased, $10,394.50;
Philip Harwood Vernon, administrator de bonis non estate of William Vernon, deceased, $31,183.50;
On the schooner Alert, Jacob Oliver, master, namely:
William Gray, administrator of William Gray, jr., $2,852.66;
On the ship Betsy, Josiah Obear, master, namely:
William Gray, administrator of William Gray, jr., $14,141.13;
Francis A. Gray, administrator of Samuel Gray, $7,214.08;
On the brig Alert, Robert Gray, master, namely:
William Gray, administrator with the will annexed of the estate not administered of William Gray, deceased, $1,500;
On the schooner Elizabeth, Thomas Trott, master, namely:
John Wetherbee, administrator of the estate of James Tisdale, deceased, $600;
On the schooner Frederick, John Gilbert Clark, master, namely:
Marion Adeline Caverly, administratrix cum testamento annexo estate of John Gilbert Clark, deceased, $43,660;
The Union Trust Company of New York, administrator of Jacob Doty, deceased, $21,830;
William Milligan, administrator of George Wattles, deceased, $21,830;
On the brig Ruby, William Bartlett, master, namely:
Jeremiah Nelson, administrator of Jeremiah Nelson, deceased, $2,692.22;
Charles Savory, administrator of Moses Savory, $2,674.22;
Charles G. Wood, administrator of Abner Wood, $2,150.79;
Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks, assignee of William Smith and David Green, $2,000;
Charles H. Ladd, surviving executor of Nathaniel A. Haven, $400;
Amos Noyes, administrator of Zebudee Cook, $100;
William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellows, $1,000;
Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, $1,000;
On the ship Light Horse, John Hoff, master, namely:
Julia M. Sands, administratrix of Comfort Sands, $7,318.66;
On the ship Eliza, James Odell, master, namely:
Wilmon W. Blackmar, administrator de bonis non cum testamento annexo estate of Francis Amory, deceased, $12,341.40;
Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter Charden Brooks, assignee, $2,739;
William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $664;
William Vernon, administrator of Samuel Brown, $498;
Francis M. Boutwell, administrator of Benjamin Cobb, $166;
Abel H. Bellows, administrator of Fred. W. Geyer, $166;
Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, $166;
Francis M. Boutwell, administrator of Joseph Blake, $166;
William Gray, administrator of William Gray, $332;
William G. Perry, administrator of Nicholas Gilman, $332;
Charles K. Cobb, administrator of John Codman, $166;
John H. Moriarty, administrator of James Scott, $83;
Edward I. Browne, administrator of Israel Thorndike, $83;
John C. Ropes, administrator of Thomas Amory, $664;
Thomas Cushing, administrator of Marston Watson, $332;
Robert Grant, administrator of William H. Boardman, $166;
David G. Haskins, administrator of David Greene, $166;
Horatio H. Hunnewell, executor of John Welles, $166;
William Powell Perkins, administrator of Thomas Perkins, $166;
Horace B. Sargent, jr., administrator of Daniel Sargent, $83;
Horatio H. Hunnewell, administrator of Arnold Welles, jr., $116.20;
Horatio H. Hunnewell, administrator of Arnold Welles, $332;
Edward I. Browne, administrator of Moses Brown, $66.40;
Frank Dabney, administrator of Samuel Wyllys Pomeroy, $166;
Lawrence Bond, administrator of Nathan Bond, $83;
Edward Hooper, administrator of Benjamin Bussey, $332;
On the ship Rosanna, John Pollard, master, namely: James S. Humbird, trustee, etc., $66,560;
On the ship Rebecca, Daniel Brazier, master, namely:
Stephen L. Stephenson, administrator of Samuel Stephenson, deceased, $2,176.21;
William Gray, administrator of the estate of William Gray, deceased, $2,000;
On the brig Mary, Thomas Boyle, master, namely:
John Mervin Carrere and David Stewart, administrators de bonis non of John Carrere, deceased, $2,207;
John Stewart, receiver of the Baltimore Insurance Company, $11,000;
On the brig Two Sisters, Joseph Hubbert, master, namely:
Sarah S. Owings and Francis R. Griffith, administrators de bonis non of Nicholas Owings, surviving partner of Rogers & Owings, $5,638.25;
William E. Woodyear, administrator de bonis non of Jeremiah Yellott, deceased, $5,638.25;
John Stewart, receiver of the Baltimore Insurance Company, $10,000;
On the ship Friendship, John Rodgers, master, namely:
Mary Ann B. Smith, administratrix de bonis non of John Smith, jr., $13,519;
John Stewart, receiver of the Maryland Insurance Company, $24,566;
On ship Port Mary, Thomas Hewitt, master, namely:
Alexander Maitland, administrator de bonis non of Robert Lenox, $6,833;
James K. Gracie, administrator de bonis non of Archibald Gracie, $6,833;
John N. A. Griswold, trustee of the United Insurance Company of New York, $35,280;

On the brig Virginia, Mark Butts, master, namely:
Samuel R. Adams, administrator of Richard Veitch, surviving partner of Thompson & Veitch, $19,762;
E. Francis Riggs, administrator of James Laurason, surviving partner of Shreve & Laurason, $3,934.33;
Anthony Hyde and Charles M. Mathews, executors of W. W. Corcoran, $79.09;
James M. Johnston, administrator de bonis non of George W. Riggs, $79.09;
Robert I. Chew, administrator of Richard Smith, $79.09;
On the schooner Hero, Thomas Hammett, master, namely:
Ann Elizabeth Marshall, administratrix de bonis non of William Robb, $3,475;
On the sloop Endeavor, James Miller, master, namely:
Henry J. Gardner, administrator of Matthew Cobb, $5,452.39;
On the schooner Eliza, William Cheever, master, namely:
William Gray, administrator of William Gray, jr., $6,000;
William P. Andrews, administrator of Samuel Page, $5,651.50;
On the schooner Trial, Daniel Ropes, jr., master, namely:
George M. Whipple, administrator de bonis non of John Norris, $11,867;
On the schooner Richard and Edward, Ebenezer Giles Evans, master, namely:
William Gray, administrator of William Gray, jr., $3,430;
Richardson Knowland, administrator of E. G. Evans, $3,139;
On the schooner Eutaw, William Smith, master, namely:
John Merven Carrere and David Stuart, administrators of John Carrere, $1,344.50;
The president and directors of the Insurance Company of North America, $11,760;
John Stewart, receiver of the Baltimore Insurance Company, $10,000;
On the schooner Sisters, John Bradish, master, namely:
Robert S. O. Griffith, administrator of Nicholas Owings, surviving partner of the firm of Rogers & Owings, $682.50;
Henry W. Rogers, administrator of John Bradish, $3,414.50;
John Stewart, receiver of the Baltimore Insurance Company, $4,410;
On the ship Lydia, John Moore, master, namely:
Augusta H. Chapman, administratrix of Reuben Shapley, $8,270;
James W. Emery, administrator of Thomas Manning, $100;
J. Hamilton Shapley, administrator of Edward Cutts, $100;
George W. Haven, administrator of Moses Woodward, $100;
Stephen Decatur, administrator of Samuel Stover, $100;
Francis E. Langdon, administrator of Clement Stover, $100;
Fred. P. Jones, administrator of Martin Parry, $100;
On the brig Minerva, Samuel Endicott, master, namely:
William Gray, administrator of William Gray, $10,419.28;
On the schooner Emily, William Emerson, master, namely:
John Stewart, receiver of the Baltimore Insurance Company, $12,860;
Robert T. Owings Griffith, administrator of Beale Owings, $3,822.12;
On the schooner Lucretia, John Grant, master, namely:
William B. Lee, Thomas D. Lee, Henry A. Lee, Joseph A. Lee, and Virginia Waters, administrators de bonis non estate of William Duncan, $10,407.27;
John Stewart, receiver of the Maryland Insurance Company, $8,000;
On the brig General Wayne, William Allen, master, namely:
Charles Francis Adams, administrator estate of Peter Chardon Brooks, $3,465.40;
Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch, $1,018.80;
Thomas H. Perkins, administrator of John C. Jones, $509.40;
William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes, $1,018.80;
Francis M. Boutwell, administrator of Benjamin Cobb, $509.40;
On the sloop Cicero, Thomas Faggart, master, namely:
Mary T. Latrobe, administratrix of Thomas Tenant, $8,953.80;
John Stewart, receiver of the Maryland Insurance Company, $20,000;
On the schooner Sally, Gideon Rea, master, namely:
William Gray, administrator with the will annexed of the estate not already administered of William Gray, deceased, testate, $2,000;
William P. Andrews, administrator with the will annexed of the estate not already administered of Samuel Page, deceased, testate, $6,593; in all, $1,651,439.05.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER. I offer an amendment which I send to the desk, to come in at the end of the bill.

Mr. HALE. There are some committee amendments that I wish to offer first.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There are also two that were passed over.

Mr. HALE. Yes, sir; there were two that were passed over. On page 44, line 3, after the amendment of the committee, I send to the desk a line and a half to precede the amendment already adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert, before the amendment agreed to, on page 44, the following:

That the sum of $5,000, appropriated by the act of Congress approved December 22, 1888.

So as to read:

That the sum of $5,000, appropriated by the act of Congress approved December 22, 1888, to defray the expenses of observing a total eclipse of the sun, and which, by reason of the delay in the passage of said act, was not expended, is hereby reappropriated.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 483) granting an increase of pension to General S. W. Price;
A bill (S. 1144) granting a pension to Francis H. L. Prescott;
A bill (S. 2363) for the relief of John W. Combs;
A bill (S. 2677) granting a pension to Jane Reilly;
A bill (S. 2683) granting a pension to Andrew J. Foust;
A bill (S. 3047) granting increase of pension to William Bittinger;
A bill (S. 3137) granting a pension to Ruth Ames;
A bill (S. 3183) granting a pension to James Parker; and
A bill (S. 3429) granting a pension to Maria N. Abbey.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 382) granting a pension to Catharine G. Bodfish;
A bill (H. R. 1168) for the relief of William Crudgenton;
A bill (H. R. 5793) granting a pension to Eliza Campbell;
A bill (H. R. 9394) for the relief of Catharine Quigley; and A bill (H. R. 9455) granting a pension to Benjamin F. Clayton.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DAWES. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back, with sundry amendments, the bill (H. R. 12578) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes. I ask that the bill be printed and placed upon the Calendar, and I desire to say that I shall call it up at the earliest possible moment to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar and printed.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12571) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. On page 52, line 10, and also in line 14, there is a mistake in the spelling. The name "Coleman" should be "Colman."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That change will be made, if there be no objection.

Mr. HALE. On page 19, at the end of the amendment, in line 25, there was omitted by mistake the following:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to George W. Bishop, assistant treasurer of the United States at Baltimore, Md., out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,243, the said sum of money representing a loss in the office of said assistant treasurer without default or negligence on his part, and made good to the Government by him out of his own private funds.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VOORHEES. What official was that?

Mr. HALE. The assistant treasurer at Baltimore.

Mr. VOORHEES. It is simply a credit that you give him?

Mr. HARRIS. It is refunding moneys that he has paid out of his own private means.

Mr. VOORHEES. That means a credit in his settlement. I do not object to it, but I want to know what it is for certain reasons.

Mr. HALE. I did not understand the Senator. It is of the same nature as the amendment already agreed to by the Senate, but it was neglected to be put in the print. This was a loss that occurred in the subtreasury without the fault of the subtreasurer, and allows him the amount lost.

Mr. VOORHEES. All right; I have no objection to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. HALE. On page 83 an amendment was reserved.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reserved amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. Add the following proviso:

Provided, That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition in the Court of Claims upon which the judgment was rendered, which, being affirmed by the Supreme Court, has been adopted by the accounting officers as the basis for the allowance of said claim.

Mr. HARRIS. What is to be inserted in lieu of the language to be stricken out?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What the Chief Clerk has just read.

Mr. HARRIS. What amount of money is appropriated by it? I should like the Senator from Maine to explain.

Mr. HALE. Two hundred and fifty-six thousand nine hundred and forty-eight dollars and sixty-five cents.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to strike out the amount has been disagreed to.

Mr. HALE. I stated when it was up before—and I supposed the Secretary had made that change—that that amount is to be restored with the proviso.

Mr. HARRIS. I now apprehend.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I should like to ask the member of the committee in charge of the bill if it be the intent of the proviso or if it will have the effect of cutting off these naval officers who were practically turned out of the Navy and deprived of their rank in 1882 and restored by the judgment of the court. I wish to know if there is included in this appropriation a sufficient sum of money to pay them, and whether the amendment now offered would have the effect of making an appropriation to pay them.

Mr. HALE. It does not touch this case. This is the whole case, Mr. President. Senators will remember that this subject was debated at considerable length on a resolution submitted by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], and an amendment was sent by him to the Committee on Appropriations proposing that a statute of limitations should be enforced as to these claims.

The Committee on Appropriations hesitated about doing that because it believed that the subject might more fittingly be taken up by one of the other committees of the Senate dealing with the general question of a statute of limitations; but I will explain what the committee has done.

Take these claims, for instance. The Senator from New Jersey refers to the claims of old receiving-ship officers arising twenty-five or thirty years ago and running down to the present time for duty upon receiving-ships lying at a wharf on which they served under the orders of the Navy Department. That is not considered sea-duty.

It is not considered that the man who does that service on a receiving-ship at the wharf of a great city should receive the same pay as the officer who goes abroad and faces the sea and all the perils of storm and wreck. It is not thought advisable and has not been for thirty years, under the rules of the Department, that he should have the same pay as the one who is exposed.

Therefore the Committee on Appropriations, in considering this subject, took the decision of the Court of Claims as affirmed by the Supreme Court in a case that was taken up, and that decision comprehends this result, that for six years previous to the action being brought in which the case was determined the officer is entitled to his extra pay, just as if he had been at sea. So he can not go back under the law beyond six years, because the law declares that in considering cases which go before the Court of Claims which are started for the purpose of trying just such cases, no claimant shall recover for beyond six years.

These claims can not be opened without the action of the Court of Claims. The Department has decided against them. No claimant could get a dollar without a decision of the Court of Claims. The committee determined that it would not put a general statute of limitations upon it; and the committee determined further that it would not oblige every claimant to bring his suit in the Court of Claims, but would give every claimant the benefit of a suit brought by another in a test case, which authorizes the payment to him of all his claim within six years.

It recommended, in order that all might be put upon the same footing, that the auditing officers in making up these claims should not go back beyond six years; otherwise there would be this discrimination, that a man who brings a suit can only recover for six years and the man who does not bring a suit can recover for thirty years.

Therefore the committee has recommended, in the interest of fairness and justice, that all be treated alike, and that the proposition of law which was embodied in the structure of the statute that created the Court of Claims shall be observed in all these claims, and that the auditing officers hereafter shall not certify or that the amount of money which is appropriated here shall not be paid to any of these claims that are more than six years old. That is all there is of it.

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not think that is quite all there is of it. I may be dull of comprehension, but it is quite difficult for me to conceive of any fairness in enacting a statute of limitations on claims that have been adjusted on suits that have been brought—a statute of limitations acting backwards instead of forwards.

Here are claimants who have had their rights determined. There is not one of these claims that has not been covered by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. I do not mean that every one of the claims has been in court, but claims of exactly similar character have been there on which decisions have been rendered which make the authority for these allowances, and I repeat, there is not a single claim contemplated here but what comes within the scope and the exact words of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Now, Mr. President, I have no objection, as I said some days ago in a discussion of this question, to a statute of limitations looking forward, but I challenge the attention of lawyers to the fact that this is a statute of limitations looking backward upon matters that are already settled and determined, a statute of limitations rooting up vested rights, declaring that what has been allowed shall extend only to six years and cutting off the balance.

There are claims which have been determined by the Supreme Court of the United States to have been just and payable since 1835, and by that decision the Departments in their adjustment and ruling were held to have been wrong and to have been robbing these men, who deserve well of their country, and at least deserve their legal rights for that period of time; and yet we are asked to stand here and vote arbitrarily, without any reference to equity, and I think with very little reference to law, that we shall apply chop-logic and cut off just so much. Why not cut off all except one year as well as six?

There is no reason about this. It is the exercise of arbitrary power, and now the Senator from Maine, whose intelligence on this subject as well as on all others I have the highest respect for, says that under the order of the Secretary of the Navy service on a receiving-ship was not sea-service.

Well, I know there were such orders of the Secretary of the Navy, but I know at the same time that the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Strong vs. The United States, decided that service on a receiving-ship was sea-service and not shore-duty, and all those claims are covered by that decision absolutely.

Mr. HALE. How far back did that decision allow the claimant in that suit to collect the debt from the Department?

Mr. VOORHEES. I have not looked at the date, but I have plenty of cases here. I will come to that point presently.

Mr. HALE. I think it was only six years.

Mr. VOORHEES. I have plenty of cases here in this bill where allowances are made for more than twenty years. I have here Army claims amounting to over $250,000 that are in this bill allowed by the Second Auditor and Second Comptroller and appropriated for, every one of which runs far back of six years. Here is over half a million——

Mr. HALE. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator, but if he will allow me he can find no claim in any Department that depends upon the decision of a suit brought before a court where the statute of six years' limitation is enforced where the committee has put on anything beyond six years.

Mr. VOORHEES. I can. The ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States which uprooted the rulings and decisions of the Departments and the Auditors for more than forty years and decided that the claimants were entitled to their rights running back that far.

I repeat there are over a half million of claims in this bill that are Army claims allowed by the Third Auditor and the Second Comptroller, nearly all of which are more than six years old. Will any Senator rise in his place and move to strike out those allowances for Army officers because they went back beyond six years? I apprehend not, and there is no reason in equity or in law why they should stand if naval officers' claims are not to be allowed the same rights.

Many of these Navy claims, like the Army claims, are those of volunteer officers. They stand upon the same footing, and I can see no reason at all except an arbitrary one why this class of Government officers should be discriminated against. I have taxed my perception as far as I have been able to do for some weeks past to get at a just comprehension of these questions, and for the life of me I can see no reason why this raid is made against naval officers claiming their rights under the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States made over and over again, and under which decisions the Auditors and Comptrollers made allowances in their favor just as they have made allowances in favor of Army officers.

I say to Senators here if you strike out every allowance made here reaching back beyond six years you will strip your bill of nearly everything that is in it. You will leave it a mere shell of allowances for present and passing necessities.

Why, Mr. President, this question might be put upon a still higher plane. I repeat that these claims are entrenched in the laws of your country and in the decisions of the courts, and I might say with propriety that they constitute a part of the debt that is made sacred by the Constitution incurred in the suppression of the rebellion; for what is the national debt except that which is described by the Constitution itself as recognized by law? If I remember the phraseology of the constitutional amendment which provides against a repudiation of the national debt, it recognizes as the debt that which is recognized by law. I therefore say, Mr. President, that this is in no small degree a measure of repudiation.

In the fourteenth article of the amendments to the Constitution, section 4, we find this clause, which seems to me cogent on this question:

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned.

What is a debt of the United States recognized by law, if a debt determined by a decision of the Supreme Court is not? I repeat that the attempt to cut off all except six years of legitimate pay, determined to be legitimate, lawful, and equitable by the Supreme Court of the United States, is a repudiation of this clause of the Constitution.

Mr. President, as the Senate knows, I do not often participate in a discussion of a question on an appropriation bill. I have looked into this matter, however, and I am impressed with the spirit of inequity that prevails against these naval officers. He who rules the storm knows that they are not too well paid and never have been. I know it, and so do gentlemen who are familiar with the naval history of this country that they have written. I will not make comparisons, but no other branch of the public service has written brighter or better pages, or pages more glorious in history than theirs.

I can see no reason at all for this narrow and, as it were, intolerant, proscriptive, and unjust spirit that is apparent here against those officers. They are under the law. I believe it is a maxim of the English Government that sailors are peculiarly the wards of the court, as it were.

They are understood not to be legally wise, not to be world wise. It seems that for nearly a half century naval officers went along in a slipshod way without their rights being well determined, but they have been now determined, and for one I insist that these rights shall be protected and cared for in appropriations.

I will be in favor of a statute of limitations for the future, but I appeal to better lawyers than myself here upon this floor whether it is not true that it has been held in the courts that a statute of limitations can not be enacted so as to deprive a class of claimants of any chance to proceed in regard to that statute of limitations.

In other words, what chance have these claimants had to know anything about whether they were to have a limitation upon their right of action until now, when their claims are to be preferred to an arbitrary statute of limitations that heretofore they could know nothing of, that they could not plead with reference to, that they could not act with reference to. Standing blind so far as any statute of limitation is concerned, now to have such a measure thrust upon them is to my mind the very acme of injustice.

I trust in all kindness and respect to the Senator from Maine that he will see his way to recede from this proviso; and if we want a statute of limitations hereafter, so that people will know what they are to do, I will help to make it; I will help to put the law up so that people can read it; but I never will enact a law on people, and on their rights, who have no chance to see or know of such a law in the assertion of their rights.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, this question need not be invested with any imagination or romance. The power that rides on the whirlwind and directs the storm has very little interest in the naval officer who has a snug and comfortable berth in a receiving-ship, upon which no storm ever beats.

He is a favored officer in the Navy. He does not go to sea; he does not face the tempest; and the officer who does, and who makes his record upon shipboard, is not affected by this amendment in the least; nor is the common sailor, whom the Senator from Indiana has praised, interested in this amendment.

The man who sleeps on the high and giddy mast and has his eyes high up in the topmost height of the tempest will not get a dollar out of this appropriation. Neither does the officer of the Navy generally have any interest in this appropriation. The claim on which it is based never was urged by the naval officers.

For thirty years the officer, who by dint of persuasion and influence succeeded in getting an order to go to a receiving-ship was glad to take that service and get his pay on a reduced basis as compared with the man who went out upon all the waters of the globe and faced the storm and carried the flag into foreign ports.

He never thought of a claim that he should have the same pay that the officer did who went abroad and who did what the Navy did in battle or in facing the tempest.

But after years of acquiescing in this just and strictly fair order of the Navy Department certain claim agents in Washington dug out this claim and beset the Department year after year to decide in favor, not of the naval officer generally, not of the sailor who ships and does the manning and sailing of the ship and the fighting of our battles, but in favor of a few men who had got this duty desired by naval officers who will not go to sea.

They dug out this claim, and said to the Navy Department: "The man who goes to a receiving-ship and has a snug berth in the harbors, by the wharves, and every day and every hour can step on shore, should have the same pay that the naval officer does who goes to sea." The Department put down its foot and said: "No; that is not right."

The order of the Department has been right; but the claim agents did not rest there. After dogging the steps of the officials of the Department and being continually met and defeated, they went into the Court of Claims and there they managed to get a decision from the Court of Claims that these few officers should have the same pay with the officer who goes to sea.

Upon appeal that decision went to the Supreme Court, and upon the technicalities of the case the Supreme Court decided that they were entitled to the same pay. But accompanying that decision is the certification of the Court of Claims, approved by the Supreme Court, that these claims shall not go back more than six years. That is enough in all conscience for these men to have.

These claim agents were not content with that. We had their papers in here the other day. We saw how the accounting officers of the Treasury indorsed these claim agents, allowing them to refer to them, giving them the facilities of looking up cases in the Departments, until claims for hundreds of thousands of dollars were presented to Congress, not for the six years that the decisions covered, not for the six years that the law declares the decisions shall not go beyond, but running back thirty years.

The Committee on Appropriations has decided that that is unfair to the rest of the Navy, to the officers of the Navy who do not get these allowances, and that these few men who are favored by this technical decision shall not be allowed to go back beyond the six years.

Mr. President, that is everything that there is provided in the amendment, for bear in mind, Senators, that not one dollar of these claims could have been paid unless they had gone to the Court of Claims. Over and over again the accounting officers had decided against these claims and against these claim agents, and had declared that not a dollar should be taken from the Treasury, because the orders of the Department were right as to the discrimination in favor of a man who goes to sea against the man who lies upon the shore.

Not a dollar could have been gotten unless they had gone to the Court of Claims. They go to the Court of Claims; they get a decision. A part of that decision is that they shall only recover under the law for the six years preceding the time when they brought their suit.

What was the intention of Congress when they made the law to create the Court of Claims and said that they should not go back beyond six years if it was not that all claims beyond six years should be barred, and that that court should not consider them, and that, so far as that goes, there should be a statute of limitations? That is all that the Committee on Appropriations is seeking to do here. Not a dollar could have been gotten except by invoking the Court of Claims.

Now, the Court of Claims has settled it, and the Supreme Court has followed that, and not an inch further, that these claims, unjust in themselves, irksome, not meritorious, an invidious discrimination in favor of these officers, shall only be six years old; and the Committee on Appropriations, instead of striking it all out, has declared that all the claimants shall follow the rule of the claimant who goes to the Court of Claims, and that they shall have their claims certified for six years and no more.

The Senator from Indiana can make the argument of the claim agents in this case, and he has done it eloquently and well. I have heard it from their own lips. They are interested in this proceeding. They have worked up these claims; they have dug them out from the recesses of the Navy Department and the Fourth Auditor's office, and brought them into the light.

There are a hundred and more of them in Washington whose only business is to rake up and scratch out and dig out these claims against the United States Government. They are interested in these cases.

Over and over again I have heard the arguments of the claim agent upon these cases, and that is all that will be heard.

The Senator with all his eloquence, which is very great in this case, undertook to say that the Committee on Appropriations here is acting against the Navy, and is discriminating against the sailor, and is discriminating against naval officers. He knows better. He knows that the discrimination is in favor of these men who have had the best and most desirable service for the last thirty years in the Navy Department.

I have had some experience, sir, in dealing with naval questions, and I say here and now that the man who does the most to reform the Navy, next to giving it ships in which to fight its battles and to sail over the seas of the globe, is to infuse into the Navy the spirit to go to sea and not to stay at home.

I say that every Secretary of the Navy in the last thirty years has had the doors of his Department beaten against by the clamorous supplications of men who demand that they shall not be sent to sea, and that they shall be given easy berths at home; and that whenever there has been a receiving-ship in New York, or Boston, or Norfolk, or wherever it may be, for every place upon that ship a dozen officers have demanded that they be sent there, and political influence has been arrayed for them time and again.

I have been beset in this way, so has the Senator from Indiana, so have you, sir, so has every Senator, by friends to get these orders to stay in these easy and comfortable places at the reduced pay.

Now, when we are asked to discriminate in favor of these claimants against all the rest of the naval officers, it is said to be a discrimination, it is said to be wrong, and in no degree right.

Sir, the Navy is not interested in this matter; the Navy is interested the other way. Thanks to the way things have been managed, and thanks to the good conduct of the brave officers in the Navy, the majority of them, when these men at home have been drawing their pay on receiving-ships, have been facing the storm on the sea thousands of miles away.

Now, it is asked that we encourage everything that will give the men at home as great a pay as these abroad. There is to be no premium on service at sea if you reject the amendment. There is to be a premium in favor of the man who importunes in season and out to stay at home and get comfortable duty whenever you increase his allowances.

If the Senate believes in the provision that was made a part of the construction of the Court of Claims that these suits shall not be allowed more than six years' time, then put it on here, and do not be deluded by any of the seductive talk of the Senator from Indiana that we are discriminating against naval officers.

We are discriminating, sir, against nobody, but are protecting the Treasury, and are saying that the man who renders meritorious and dangerous service shall be preferred against him who renders the ignoble service of staying at home.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, it has been a great many years since I first put my foot in one of the branches of Congress, and I have been here pretty much ever since. The cheapest and to me the least effective part of an argument is that which a man falls back on when he says that some Senator or Member is advocating the cause of claim agents. Sir, I never had anything to explain when I went back to my constituents. No charge ever followed me of an impropriety in the interest of anybody. But if a claim agent should present a sound argument and advocate a righteous cause, I have no cowardly spirit in me to shrink from it on that account. That is all the weight there is in the sneer of the Senator from Maine that I am advocating the cause of claim agents.

I advocate a cause in which I see the name of Admiral Temple as a pioneer in the courts in settling the rights of naval officers. Temple vs. The United States in the Supreme Court of the United States, I believe, is one of the first, if not the very first of the actions brought of this kind. If the Senator from Maine thinks that Admiral Temple was induced by claim agents and seduced into an ignoble pursuit of what was not right, let him say so plainly. There is an officer now looking after American rights in the waters of Samoa who was another party in another suit involving these questions. I am perfectly willing to meet naval officers and leave it to them as between the Senator from Maine and myself who is interested in the cause of justice and right on this subject.

Sir, a single word more. The Senator from Maine insists that the rule of law now is, and has been so determined by the courts, that you can not go back of six years in making a demand. I do not understand the Supreme Court to have decided anything of the kind, but I make this proposition: If it has, and the Senator from Maine says it has, his proviso is no more needed than his breath is to make a cyclone. If the Supreme Court of the United States, as he says, has decided, and if the Court of Claims has decided, that you can not go back of six years, and there is already a six years' statute of limitations, what are we talking about here to-night?

Mr. HALE. Does not the Senator understand that the decision of the Court of Claims, which is affirmed by the Supreme Court, is only in a given case that was made? It only applies to that case. That decision is good for nothing if we allow the Treasury officers to certify up other claims for thirty years and we pay them, and this is only to place them all on a par with the man who brings his suit where both the Court of Claims and the Supreme Court have declared that he shall not go back. That is all.

Mr. VOORHEES. I had thought that Government officers were governed by general rules laid down in the decisions of the courts. The Senator's statement reminds me of the case before a justice of the peace where a decision exactly in point, so far as the principle was concerned, was read, but the justice said that that case did not suit; that it was a cow case he was trying. The Senator says that the Supreme Court has not rendered a decision in each one of these cases, but I say he will not deny that the Supreme Court has rendered a decision which governs all of these cases as absolutely as if all the cases had been before the Supreme Court.

Mr. HALE. All I ask is that in certifying these accounts the Treasury officers shall be governed by the same rules that the courts laid down in their decision, and that is for six years. That is all I ask; and the Senator, however he may put it, is seeking to have all these accounts certified up and paid when the cases that have gone to law are limited to six years. He is lawyer enough to see that dilemma, and I should like to know his answer in regard to it.

Mr. VOORHEES. If the Senator had waited a moment he would not have needed to ask any such question. I submit to him that if he is correct, his proviso is not needed. I am perfectly willing to leave this question where it has been all the time, where the House of Representatives left it, where the courts left it, and without any necessity whatever for his proviso.

Mr. HALE. That is the very trouble. The accounting officers have been certifying up other claims where suits have not been brought, not for six years, but for twenty and thirty years.

Mr. VOORHEES. They have done it, however, under the rulings of the Supreme Court and in the direct line of its decision.

Mr. HALE. No, begging the Senator's pardon, they have done it precisely in contravention of the principles the Supreme Court and the Court of Claims have laid down in these very cases where actions have been brought. That is what we want to stop, and that is all we want to stop. Make them all alike, give them their six years just as the man who brought the suit, and as the Supreme Court declares he should be given.

Mr. VOORHEES. The Supreme Court made no such ruling so far as the statute of limitations is concerned.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator deny that in the suit which was brought to test these cases a part of the judgment of the Court of Claims which was affirmed by the Supreme Court was that only six years should be allowed under the statute? Does he affirm that that is not a part of the decision?

Mr. VOORHEES. I have not the decision before me.

Mr. HALE. I have read it very carefully, and the committee examined it very carefully.

Mr. VOORHEES. If that be true, then still further there is no necessity for this proviso.

Mr. HALE. There would not be if the accounting officers were not under the impulsion from the claim agents, continually certifying claims twenty-five and thirty years back.

Mr. MITCHELL. Did the court hold in that case that it applied some existing statute of limitations?

Mr. HALE. The court held that under the act which created the Court of Claims it could not go back beyond six years, and that the judgment of the court should be rendered for six years.

Mr. MITCHELL. The court held that they could not go back of a certain existing statute?

Mr. HALE. Yes; by reason of the statute, which is very express and specific. That is all that Kimberly and Temple got, who brought the suit the Senator talked about. Every man who brought his suit got his six years and no more.

Mr. GRAY. I should like to understand this matter before the Senator from Maine leaves the question. I have been interested in his account of the way in which this question arose. I quite agree with him that it would be very well for Congress by general legislation to remedy what seems to be an incongruity that has been produced by the ruling of the Supreme Court, and that service upon a receiving-ship should be taken out of the category of sea-service. It differs from sea-service in many very important particulars. It differs from shore-service in very many important particulars. The officer who is ordered to a receiving-ship must pack his kit and go on board ship; he must pay a mess bill separate from his family, and two mess bills if he is a man of family, and be put to all the expense that an officer doing real sea-duty is put to, although he is not exposed to the hardship or the peril which an officer who is actually sailing upon the main is put to.

Mr. HALE. Now, let me ask the Senator right there——

Mr. GRAY. I am not quite through.

Mr. HALE. Very well; I will not interrupt the Senator.

Mr. GRAY. I agree with the Senator from Maine so far, and I should be quite willing to vote for a bill that should meet this decision of the Supreme Court and place service upon receiving-ships in some category different from regular sea-service. But that does not seem to me to be quite the question in this case. As far as I could understand the statement of the Senator from Maine, and what was said by the Senator from Indiana, the question seems to be that the Department had ruled for many successive years that service on board a receiving-ship should not be counted sea-service so far as regulating the rate of pay was concerned, and that officers of the Navy, as in duty bound, acquiesced in those decisions of the Department, but a claim being brought in the Court of Claims and afterwards taken to the Supreme Court of the United States disclosed that this ruling of the Department all these years was erroneous, and that while these officers were only to be paid under the law for shore-duty, whether you consider the decision a technical one or not, they were under the terms of that law entitled to sea-pay; and therefore, after that decision and not before, it seems to me in equity the cause of action accrued to these officers.

They were not in one sense or in any equitable sense entitled to bring a suit until they had discovered by the decision of the Supreme Court that they were entitled to sea-pay; but that question having been determined by the Supreme Court it seems to me that it would be a discrimination of the grossest kind to say that a certain number of these officers should receive the difference between shore-pay and sea-pay, and that a large number of them should be excluded from the benefits of that decision simply by the arbitrary effect of a statute of limitations. It would be a discrimination, it seems to me, of the grossest kind between a class of officers all of whom stood upon the same footing.

Mr. HALE. Right there let me ask what is the discrimination that the Senator has in his mind?

Mr. GRAY. The discrimination I am alluding to, which seems to me to be made by the contention of the Senator from Maine, is that those officers who were fortunate enough to have brought their suits in the Court of Claims should receive this difference, and those whose terms of service on receiving-ships occurred within six years of the present time, say, should receive this difference, while all others who had been forbidden by the Department from receiving this difference, who had been forbidden to receive their just rights, should be excluded from the benefit of that decision.

Mr. HALE. The Senator has got it just wrong.

Mr. GRAY. Not at all, I think. I should be glad then to hear the Senator state it.

Mr. HALE. All that this amendment does, and all that is sought to be done in this bill, is to give the naval officer who did not bring his suit, who did not know that he had a right until another man brought his suit, the same pay exactly as the man gets who brought his suit, and no more.

Mr. GRAY. All of them?

Mr. HALE. All of them; every one.

Mr. GRAY. No matter whether he brought suit?

Mr. HALE. No matter whether he brought suit, no matter what he is or where he is. The Treasury Department is engaged night and day——

Mr. GRAY. I beg the Senator's pardon, no matter whether the service on a receiving-ship took place more than six years from the present time?

Mr. HALE. No; but he shall have the same right to go back for six years that the man has who brought his action.

Mr. GRAY. Oh, I understand that; I have not misunderstood the Senator from Maine. Then the man whose service on board the receiving-ship occurred, say, at five years and eleven months ago, may receive this difference in pay, but the one whose service on the receiving-ship took place seven years ago is excluded. Is that the difference?

Mr. HALE. The man who brings his suit can only go back and get his claim paid for six years.

Mr. GRAY. I understand that.

Mr. HALE. He can not get pay for anything beyond six years. Why should the man who does not bring his suit get more than six years for what he did?

Mr. GRAY. I will tell the Senator from Maine. Perhaps I have been unfortunate so far in making my point clear.

Mr. HOAR. I think the Senators do not state the amendment clearly to the Senate. The Senators will pardon me. I do not wish to interpose any amendment, but I am informed that the amendment, as proposed, does not limit the present claimant to six years in bringing the suit now or six years hereafter, but to six years back of the time when the old suit on which the judgment was rendered was brought. I should like to have the amendment read again.

Mr. GRAY. So, too, I should like to have the amendment read again.

Mr. HALE. That is the provision undoubtedly.

Mr. HOAR. Let the amendment be read again.

Mr. HALE. He shall have the benefit of the time at which the test case was brought.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Massachusetts asks that the amendment be read again, and I unite with him in that request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment will be read by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. After the word "Navy," on page 83, line 16, it is proposed to strike out "$256,948.65" and to add the following proviso:

Provided, That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition in the Court of Claims upon which the judgment was rendered which, being affirmed by the Supreme Court, has been adopted by the accounting officers as the basis for the allowance of said claim.

Mr. GRAY. Now, Mr. President, I think I understand the purport of the amendment; and if these claims were precisely upon the ground of ordinary claims against the Government I think the argument of the Senator from Maine would be irrefragable, but we must recollect that these officers of the Navy, subject to military discipline, controlled by the Department and the Secretary of the Navy, who is at its head, have been compelled to receive shore-pay for receiving-ship duty, and they were bound to accept that finding of the Department as the law governing their rate of pay until it was discovered by some more enterprising officer than the majority of them, who brought the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, that this ruling of the Department was erroneous, and that under the terms of the law which regulated their pay they were really entitled to sea-pay instead of shore-pay.

It seems to me that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine is inequitable in this, that those officers who abided by the rulings of the Department and accepted the orders of the Secretary of the Navy as the proper construction of the law are to be excluded from the effect of this decision of the Supreme Court which says those rulings were erroneous, and that an arbitrary line is to be drawn, and that those on one side shall be paid while others equally meritorious on the other side of that line shall be excluded. That does not seem to me to be just or fair or equitable. It is not a proper measure of administration of a law that is meant to compensate these gallant and meritorious men who are in the service of their country. If a part of these receiving-ship officers are to be paid for sea-service and a part only for shore duty, I say such an arbitrary line must be inequitable and unjust.

That is the real question, it seems to me, and not any technical argument upon the effect of the statute of limitations. As to its propriety, I will say that I should gladly vote for a statute of limitations that should apply in the future and not be retroactive in that respect; but we are dealing here upon broader lines than are laid down in the adjudication of a claim by the Court of Claims. This is the Government itself that is dealing with these officers when we are making laws. We are not litigants in a court. We are the paymaster and the employer of these officers, and they appeal to us for justice, and we are to say upon higher principles and upon broader lines what is just than any mere arbitrary exclusion by a statute of limitations can bring about.

It is manifestly unjust that the man whose claim accrued December 31 of one year should be put into one class, and the one whose claim accrued on January 1, the next day, should be included in another and more favored class. I think we should deal justly with these men, many of them at sea, many of them away from the places where they could conveniently attend to their rights, and all of them, I believe, were only dutiful in accepting the orders of the Department under which they served.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to ask the Senator why his argument would not be equally applicable upon the statute of limitations operating in the future?

Mr. GRAY. That would be notice to all officers. If a law in regard to claims of naval officers were passed, if it was thought necessary to enact one prescribing that claims for adjustment of accounts should be brought within six years, they would be bound to take notice of it. I presume they make themselves acquainted with the rules, laws, and regulations governing the Navy.

Mr. HOAR. Then why were they not bound to take notice of the statute of limitations in the constitution of the Court of Claims?

Mr. GRAY. I grant you they were bound to know the law in the sense that no one is excused by ignorance of the law, and if we were arguing this case in the Court of Claims, I grant you that the statute as it exists in the Revised Statutes would absolutely determine this case; but we are dealing with these cases from a very different point of view, on a very different basis. We are trying to do, or ought to be trying to do, what is just and equitable to this class of meritorious officers who are included in this measure, and it seems to me, as I said at the outset, that it would be discrimination of the grossest kind between a certain portion of those who served on receiving-ships and others who had also performed the same service.

Mr. DOLPH. Mr. President, some of the discussion has indicated that Senators thought the statute of limitations in some manner entered into and formed a part of this claim against the Government. The statute of limitations goes only to the remedy. The rights of these claimants arose under the law which provided what their compensation should be. If their claims were not allowed for what they were entitled to under the statute they had the right from the time of the disallowance to proceed against the Government in the Court of Claims, and if the Government had not provided a court in which they might bring suit they could not have sued the United States even up to this time. That is, it is for the Government to say when it will be sued by its own citizens. In creating the Court of Claims the act provided, as I understand, that no recovery should be had upon a claim against the United States unless it had accrued within six years from the time the suit was brought. When a party comes to Congress there is no statute of limitations that governs Congress in determining whether his claim shall be paid or not.

As was said by the Senator from Delaware, Congress is now appealed to to do what is right and just in the case, and it is simply a question whether, if we are going to pay these claims at all, we shall apply a statute of limitations to them, whether we are to say that we will not pay what is a legal claim (whether it is an equitable claim or not) against the Government because we did not deal with it within six years after it accrued. That is all there is of the case.

The fact that the parties can not recover in the Court of Claims for any portion of their claim except that which accrued within six years has nothing to do with the equity of the case. They were limited to that because the law which created the court was made to apply to all classes of claims, and simply provided that no recovery should be had where six years had expired after the claim had accrued before suit was brought.

Mr. BLAIR. I should like to ask the Senator a question. I understand the Senator's point to be this, that this matter of limitation applies only to the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims.

Mr. DOLPH. That is all.

Mr. BLAIR. Nothing further.

Mr. DOLPH. It does not apply to Congress nor to the merits of the case.

Mr. BLAIR. And it is for that reason and that reason alone that the Supreme Court in reaffirming the decision of the Court of Claims held that in a judgment by the Court of Claims they could go back only six years.

Mr. DOLPH. They did not pay the portion of the claim which accrued prior to that time.

Mr. BLAIR. And that limitation applies to the decision of the Court of Claims; but when you get outside of the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims and come inside the jurisdiction of Congress, it is just the same as though there had been no Court of Claims created at all, and therefore the very fact that these are ancient claims, and we have had the use of this money all these years, and the parties have had no interest on it, is an additional reason why we should pay the principal.

It seems to me it is the very height of meanness now to come forward, when we will not permit any statute of limitations to be pleaded against us, and undertake to enforce a statute of limitations against these men, to make the very prolongation of the evil or the wrong which we have been doing to them the justification of our robbing them of the whole debt. If I owed a man $100 one hundred years ago and I have the use of that money for the whole hundred years, the argument of the Senator from Maine is that from the very fact that I have had it for one hundred years and the use of it all that length of time and wronged the man out of it for that length of time, I am justified in keeping him from it altogether. That is the argument, as it seems to me.

This idea of limitation comes only from the fact that in creating this special tribunal, the Court of Claims, it was thought proper to limit their jurisdiction in matter of time, but it left these claims directly against the Government still open and to be paid by the sense of equity of the Government upon petition and application as it has always been heretofore and as it would have been to-day had there been no Court of Claims created. Is not that the true view of it?

Mr. DOLPH. That is the correct view of it, I think. I should be very glad to have some statute of limitations upon claims paid by Congress, but we have none, and we are constantly paying claims that are very old, without reference to any such statute, and I do not know why these naval officers should be discriminated against.

Mr. CALL. There is not only no statute of limitations against these claims, but the statute of the United States expressly provides that there shall be no such bar against them. The law of March 3, 1883, is in the following words:

And all officers of the Navy shall be credited with the actual time they may have served as officers or enlisted men in the regular or volunteer Army or

Navy, or both, and shall receive all the benefits of such actual service in all respects in the same manner as if said service had been continuous and in the regular Navy in the lowest grade having graduated pay held by such officer since last entering the service.

Here is a statute of the United States requiring that all the benefits of the lowest grade in which an officer or enlisted man has served at any time, in all kinds of service and for all lengths of time, and covering the period of the war between the States shall be given him. It provides in express terms that not for six years but for sixty years, if necessary, the right shall exist. He shall have all the benefits of all his actual service, whether sea-service or on a receiving-ship or on land or anywhere else, and he shall be paid according to actual length of service.

Now, the Senator from Maine undertakes to say that a statute limiting the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims annuls this positive provision of law extending over all time that the service of these men who were engaged in the war shall be held to be continuous, including the lowest grade which they held at any time, whether in the regular or volunteer Navy or the regular or volunteer Army, whether one kind of service or another, although the term is used that all the benefits of that actual service shall be allowed and paid to them.

The Supreme Court has decided that service on board a receiving-ship was the same as sea-service, and it was one of the benefits of that grade of service, whether of enlisted men or officers. What has the provision in the organization of the Court of Claims as to the jurisdiction of that particular tribunal, as stated clearly by the Senator from Oregon, to do with this positive mandatory provision of the statute that a man shall be paid for all his service of all kinds that he has rendered for sixty years? The Supreme Court decided that that was the positive meaning of that law and its language; and can not anybody see that it is?

How can a man receive continuously from the period of his first service all the pay and all the benefits of the lowest grade in which he has served, whether in one branch of the service or another, for any length of time, if he had served for sixty years, and yet be restricted to six years, as this amendment provides? Why, Mr. President, that is to say that this provision limiting the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims for all kinds of claims annuls and destroys that specific provision giving longevity pay and giving all the benefits of the service of every kind, whether on receiving-ships, or on land, or on sea.

There is nothing in the idea. There is no logic, no force, no reason in it. It is entirely unreasonable and without foundation.

The law is clear. The Supreme Court said it gives pay from the first period of entering the service and for all the time engaged in actual service in the lowest grade continuously; and it was meant, said the court, to cover not six years, but the whole period of time and expressly contemplates more than six years in this act of 1883, of necessity.

Suppose this case, which is only one of a great majority of like cases covered by this amendment: An enlisted soldier in 1861 serves through the war and he is promoted for gallantry in battle to a captaincy or other commissioned officer. He now applies after the act of 1883 for his pay as captain from that time to this. He claims this to be a debt of the United States, and a part of it a payment or bounty given him for service in the civil war between the States. The Senator from Maine says you can only be paid for six years before the filing of a petition, because Congress in creating a Court of Claims having no reference to your case, limited the jurisdiction of the court to six years.

What relation has this answer of the Senator from Maine to the soldier's demand that the law of 1883 in express terms gives him this pay from the date of enlistment, and that the Supreme Court has so declared. And the amendment to the Constitution declared that this should be a debt of the United States, and Congress should never invalidate it. The war between the States was more than six years before the act of 1883 was passed, and the enlisted men and the officers of the Army, of course, in large numbers existed, and these claims existed with them, and this act was passed in reference to service more than six years previous to 1883, as everybody knows. How then can the mere restriction of the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims affect the provisions of this act of 1883, as the Supreme Court has expressly decided in giving longevity pay? Of course that act might not be held to have increased the jurisdiction of that court and enlarged it, although I think when Congress sent cases to that court of this description it did enlarge the jurisdiction pro hoc vice; but the Supreme Court might have said that this act did not enlarge the jurisdiction of that court so that it might render a judgment, but unquestionably nobody will say that the restriction of the jurisdiction of that court annulled and destroyed the mandatory force of a law which said that an enlisted man or an officer should have all the pay continuously of the lowest grade of the service in which he had entered for all the time of his actual service, when this actual service was during the war from 1861 to the present time. In addition to this, to show more conclusively the manifest unreason of this proposition to impose a statute of limitations in this soldiers' claim, six years have not passed since 1883, when this act was passed, and the amendment proposes to bar the right under the act of 1883 by a limitation in the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims before the six years have expired. If the amendment should be adopted I am satisfied that any intelligent court would decide it to be unconstitutional as to this class of cases.

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to ask the Senator a question for my own information, because I do not know how I shall vote on this measure, though I am inclined to vote with the committee from what I have heard. I want to know what the date of the act of Congress is, or if there is more than one act to be construed in determining the matter under which the accounting officers of the Treasury prior to these decisions of the court held that those officers serving on receiving-ships were not entitled to the same amount that other naval officers were entitled to receive?

Mr. CALL. I do not suppose there was any act of Congress on that point.

Mr. BLAIR. On that I understand the debate goes on the assumption that this was an old original law thirty years old or more.

Mr. MITCHELL. It must have a date ten years ago, or twenty years ago, or five or six years ago.

Mr. VOORHEES. It was simply an order of the Secretary of the Navy. I do not understand that the practice arose by any statute or by the words of any statute, but, as stated by the Senator from Maine, it was by executive order, the order of the Navy Department, that the ruling prevailed denying that service on a receiving-ship was sea-service—an arbitrary rule—and the Supreme Court reversed that.

Mr. BLAIR. And held that service on a receiving-ship was to be paid as sea-service, and that that always had been the law in all the years previous.

Mr. VOORHEES. Yes; and that that had always been the legal right of the parties.

Mr. MITCHELL. The Supreme Court in doing that had to take up some statute or some order of the Navy Department or some basis of legislation upon which to give a construction.

Mr. VOORHEES. On the contrary, they took the common-sense view——

Mr. BLAIR. And the common law.

Mr. VOORHEES. That service on a ship of war was sea-service. If a man was serving on it he had to pay two mess bills. The Senator from Maine smiles, but that is the effect; and if I could turn to the speech I made here two or three weeks ago, which I can not now, I could find in the decision that I cited the very language of the Supreme Court to that effect, giving the reasons why it was to be regarded as sea-service and giving amongst other reasons the fact that it cost a man more to live, that he had to pay a mess bill on ship-board and pay for the support of his family on shore.

Mr. MITCHELL. I know, but the Senator must agree that this question arose out of some law. Now, the Senator has stated in one breath that it was an order of the Navy Department and in the next breath that it was under the common law, and in another breath under some statute.

Mr. VOORHEES. No; I said the common-sense view of it. There are a great many things that arise out of no express statute. The Secretaries of the Navy without any statute construed this service to suit themselves and issued orders accordingly, which afterwards came before the Supreme Court and the court said they had no right to issue them.

Mr. MITCHELL. Is there no statute regulating it?

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not understand that there is.

Mr. HALE. There is a general statute.

Mr. BUTLER. The statute out of which the controversy arose must have been the statute allowing the naval officer so much pay for sea-service and so much pay for land-service.

Mr. BLAIR. So much for land-service and more for sea-service than for land-service. It has been held, as I understand the Department's decision, that service on a receiving-ship shall be paid the same as land-service, and they paid those who served on receiving-ships a smaller amount during these thirty years. Then a case arose in the Court of Claims, and the Court of Claims decided that service on a receiving-ship was sea-service and had attached to it a higher pay. They took that case to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court said that service on a receiving-ship was sea-service and entitled to higher pay, but the Court of Claims could give its judgment for only six years prior to the date of the action by virtue of the statute creating the Court of Claims. The Supreme Court has decided the main question, that service on a receiving-ship is sea-service and that attached to it is a higher rate of pay.

Mr. MITCHELL. Is there not some law which provides how much a man shall receive for sea-service?

Mr. BLAIR. Certainly. That is a law which has been in existence for years and years and right along there always has been a distinction between land and sea service. Sea service is paid higher. Then the question arose whether these lubbers on receiving-ships were doing service on land or water. The question was whether the men who served on receiving-ships were land-lubbers or not. The Department held "Yes, these old admirals who have served their country on the sea and are now serving their country on receiving-ships are land-lubbers and are to be paid for land-service." They carried it to the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court decided the other way. The court said receiving-ship service is sea-service and entitled to a higher rate of pay from the beginning and all the way back.

Mr. MITCHELL. There is an act of Congress, as I suppose, passed some time or other, perhaps a good while ago——

Mr. BLAIR. When they made the Navy probably.

Mr. MITCHELL. There is an act passed at some time which entitles naval officers or persons engaged in certain service to a certain rate of sea-pay.

Mr. BLAIR. And higher than land-pay.

Mr. MITCHELL. So the only question remaining is whether or not these persons on the receiving-ships should be entitled to sea-pay?

Mr. BLAIR. That is all. The Department has held for years that the receiving-ship service was land-service and has paid those on receiving-ships a lower rate accordingly.

Mr. MITCHELL. I understand it now.

Mr. BLAIR. Take the case of a man who has served thirty years in succession down to the present date. Under the law, if he goes to the Court of Claims to recover his rights, the thirty years' difference of pay between land-service and sea-service being due him, and if in the Court of Claims he establishes his right they give him judgment for six years back; in other words, leaving due him twenty-four years' service that he is not paid for. The Court of Claims can give no judgment for those twenty-four years, because in farming out our jurisdiction to the Court of Claims we authorized the Court of Claims to take cognizance of certain cases and to reach back in judgment six years. But we reserved to ourselves the right and the duty also to do justice in all cases of claims that arise reaching back beyond the six years. So now for the twenty-four years' service in the case I am supposing the parties come now to Congress and ask for their pay; and upon the very principle on which the six years have been paid we ought to pay the other twenty-four. The courts have decided that receiving-ship service is held to be sea-service. The law we made gave them the right to the pay for sea-service during all those thirty years, the legal right, not the equitable right, but the legal right against the country; and we failed to give them any remedy except to come to Congress and petition for this difference in their pay.

Then we created the Court of Claims. Now, the Court of Claims has jurisdiction to pay them for six years prior to the date of filing their petition in the court; but we did not authorize them to go back and pay the other twenty-four years; and yet the equity, and not the equity alone, but the strict moral right, remains the same under the law as the Supreme Court has decided that it would have been if the Court of Claims had been authorized to go back the whole thirty years and render judgment back to the beginning of the thirty years' service. It is just exactly the same. The court has said in express law we have given them the right to sea-pay when they were rendering service on receiving-ships, not a matter of equity, but a matter of law, and the failure has been in not giving them the right to go to court and to have sued us under the law for what we owed them.

We might just as well have refused to pay anything for the service on a receiving-ship at all as to have refused to pay the portion that is still due, the difference between land-service pay and sea-service pay, because it is under the same general law, the whole of it, and we have withheld so much, two or three or five hundred dollars of every man's earnings every year, when all that time the law provided for it just exactly as though my pay of $5,000 a year had not been paid me in full for ten or fifteen or twenty years. My pay as a Senator being $5,000 a year by statute, I have no right to sue the United States for it covering all that time. Suppose that under some construction of the Comptroller of the Treasury only $4,000 a year is paid me. My legal right all the time is for the other $1,000. Congress creates a court of claims and authorizes a member of Congress to sue for his claim in the Court of Claims, and the court goes back six years. I sue in the Court of Claims and I recover the other $1,000 for six years; but the United States owes me for ten, fifteen, or twenty years, and it has withheld all those years $1,000 annually. That, under the law, is exactly as much mine by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States as the $4,000 which have been paid me. It is as right and just for us to have never paid these men a cent for any of the services they rendered on land or sea up to the present time. It is as just to withhold the whole of it as to withhold any portion of it. It is only a question as to the extent of the robbery. That is the way it appears to me.

Mr. CALL. If the Senator is through, I will conclude what I have to say.

Mr. BLAIR. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not know I was taking the floor from him.

Mr. CALL. That is all right. I only wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the act of March 3, 1883, was mandatory in its provisions and that it required that the officer or enlisted man should be paid continuously for the whole period of his actual service, whether in one branch or another, using the words "all the benefits" of that grade of service, being the lowest grade in which he had served for his whole lifetime. That is the act of Congress. That is what the Supreme Court decided when it gave longevity pay, gave pay according to the length of time and made the service continuous.

How can there be a statute of limitation against a matter of that kind? The law says there shall not be a statute of limitations, and the argument is that because somewhere at some time a court was created, being a court of claims, to which every person might have access, and that court was limited to six years, that act having no connection with the acts of 1882 and 1883, and because some persons entitled to the benefits of this act of 1883 went into that court and the jurisdiction of that court was not adequate to cover the whole period of the claim and the whole amount due, therefore this act of Congress is limited, and the statute of limitations may be imposed against its express provisions. That is the argument, and that is all I want to say. The proposition is so manifestly unreasonable, and even without plausible ground to stand upon, that I will not further consider it.

Mr. HALE. I am very desirous of getting this bill to a vote. I do not want to take up any more time of the Senate. Let us have a vote on this question and settle it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If it be agreeable to the Senate to have both the amendments treated as one question, on disagreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee and inserting what has been read by the Secretary——

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not rise to discuss that, but I want to put the proposition correctly before the Senate. There is a part of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine that is desirable; that is, to strike out the proposition made by the committee. Then the rest of his amendment, the proviso, is the point of antagonism.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question, then, will first be taken on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee, to strike out, in lines 16 and 17, after the word "Navy," on page 83——

Mr. HALE. Practically we can get at it by taking a vote on the committee's amendment, because if that carries that ends it, and if it does not carry the other will be restored as a matter of course.

Mr. VOORHEES. That is all right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The part proposed to be stricken out by the committee will be read by the Secretary.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will say to the Senator from Maine that the amendment, so far as striking out the proposition reported by the committee is concerned, may be made by unanimous consent, if the Senator desires it that way, and then we can take a vote on the rest of the proposition.

Mr. HALE. That is just as well. Let unanimous consent be given that the part stricken out be restored and then the vote can be taken on the proviso.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine asks that the part proposed to be stricken out be read. It will be read by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out, on page 83, line 16, after the word "Navy," the words "two hundred and fifty-six thousand nine hundred and forty-eight dollars and sixty-five cents."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is the amendment proposed by the committee.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to have the Senator explain what that means. Is the committee in error about it? How does it happen? Why are these words to be restored?

Mr. HALE. They were stricken out because we did not have the correct amount at the time to put in. Now we find the amount here is correct, and the words should be restored at any rate, because that is the amount certified, and if the proviso is put on, then the clause is subject to the proviso.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I have no objection if the committee wishes to have the Senate disagree to the amendment just read. I should like to understand how that is.

Mr. HALE. The amendment that has just been read, the technical amendment, is the amendment to strike out the whole appropriation. Nobody desires to do that. It was left in that way in order that the proper amount might be inserted. If that is disagreed to, the amount is inserted as originally contained in the bill. Then the question will come on the proviso offered by the committee.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I understand, then, that the committee are willing and desirous that this particular technical amendment, as it is called, shall be disagreed to.

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Then the question will be upon the proviso.

Mr. HALE. Yes; on the proviso.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, then, the amendment proposed by the committee to strike out in lines 16 and 17 the words read by the Secretary after the word "Navy" will be disagreed to, and the words will stand in the bill as reported from the House. The question now recurs upon agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine that has been read.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let that be again read.

Mr. HARRIS. That is the committee amendment, is it not?

Mr. HALE. That is the committee amendment.

The Secretary read as follows:

Provided, That no part of any one of the claims to which this appropriation is applicable shall be paid therefrom which accrued more than six years prior to the date of the filing of the petition in the Court of Claims upon which the judgment was rendered, which being affirmed by the Supreme Court has been adopted by the accounting officers as the basis for the allowance of said claim.

Mr. BLAIR. I would inquire the date of the decision.

Mr. HALE. It is not the date of the decision, but the date of the filing of the petition.

Mr. BLAIR. The date of the filing of that petition, since 1883?

Mr. HALE. Oh, yes.

Mr. BLAIR. And most of these claims accrued during the war for service on the receiving-ships.

Mr. HALE. A large part have already been paid.

Mr. BLAIR. This would cut off the difference between sea-service and land-service when rendered on receiving-ships during the war and down to about 1883.

Mr. HALE. There are none of the cases that go back to the war. They run along for the last fifteen or twenty years. Most of the old cases have been paid, I am sorry to say.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not see that the Senator has any right to be.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HALE. Let us have a standing vote.

Mr. VOORHEES. Very well.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think this is a very important matter. There is a great deal of money in it. I think we ought to have the yeas and nays.

Mr. HALE. I am afraid a roll-call may develop the lack of a quorum.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Very well, then we ought not to go on at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont on this question asks for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HALE. Then I hope—and I will make the suggestion, as this is not a party question in any degree—that Senators will vote without regard to political pairs. It is not a party question.

Mr. PASCO. Did I understand the Senator from Maine to say that most of these claims had already been allowed and paid?

Mr. HALE. I did not mean to say that the most of them had been.

Mr. PASCO. That fact would have very great weight with me in casting my vote.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PASCO. I would be pleased if the Senator from Maine would state what the facts are as to the payments already made, because that has great weight with me and with others.

Mr. HALE. Some portion of these claims have been paid. The amount that is involved here is much larger than I supposed until I looked at it. It is about $400,000. I should say that of the claims which have been paid there are probably $200,000 or $300,000 paid and perhaps $700,000 or $800,000 still unpaid.

Mr. PASCO. Then why is this amount limited to $256,948.65?

Mr. HALE. That is only the proportion that is certified. It is not intended to close the matter up with this sum.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BLACKBURN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], who is absent, but as I am informed that I am at liberty to vote notwithstanding the pair, I shall vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS. I have a standing pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], but I reserved the right to vote on amendments to this bill. I vote "yea."

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 29, nays 16, as follows:

YEAS—29.

Allison,	Edmunds,	Ingalls,	Sabin,
Berry,	Farwell,	Jones of Arkansas,	Teller,
Blackburn,	Frye,	Jones of Nevada,	Vest,
Chandler,	Hale,	McPherson,	Walthall,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Mitchell,	Wilson of Iowa.
Coke,	Hawley,	Platt,
Colquitt,	Hearst,	Ransom,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Reagan,

NAYS—16.

Bate,	Call,	Faulkner,	Pasco,
Blair,	Daniel,	Gorman,	Pugh,
Brown,	Davis,	Gray,	Stockbridge,
Butler,	Dolph,	Hampton,	Voorhees.

ABSENT—31.

Aldrich,	Evarts,	Paddock,	Sherman,
Beck,	George,	Palmer,	Spooner,
Blodgett,	Gibson,	Payne,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Hiscock,	Plumb,	Stewart,
Cameron,	Kenna,	Quay,	Turpie,
Chace,	Manderson,	Riddleberger,	Vance,
Dawes,	Morgan,	Saulsbury,	Wilson of Md.
Eustis,	Morrill,	Sawyer,

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RANSOM. I should have stated that my colleague [Mr. VANCE] is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH].

Mr. HALE. On page 91, at the bottom of the page, I ask unanimous consent to fill the blank by inserting, in line 24, after the word "Navy," "$201,443.71," with the same amendment just agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Now, I understand the next matter reserved is on page 66.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. HALE. It is the month's extra pay.

The CHIEF CLERK. The next reserved amendment is the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, on page 66, to strike out the clause from line 10 to line 17, inclusive.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate understands the amendment. It need not be read again.

Mr. HALE. Perhaps some Senators were not here when it was reserved.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the following words:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives to pay to the officers and employés of the Senate and House borne on the annual and session rolls on the 20th day of October, 1888, including the Capitol police, for extra services during the Fiftieth Congress, a sum equal to one month's pay, at the compensation then paid them by law, the same to be immediately available.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is to strike out what has just been read by the Secretary.

Mr. CULLOM. A vote "nay" will keep in the clause.

Mr. HARRIS. Allowances such as this have been very often made. There has never been a Congress where so much has been exacted and so many duties performed by the employés as the Fiftieth Congress, in view of which fact I do not think a word more need be said. This amendment ought not to be agreed to, and I hope the Senate will disagree to the amendment as reported by the committee.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, I shall certainly vote to disagree with the amendment, but at the same time I desire to give notice that if it is disagreed to I shall move to amend the section by inserting "the employés of the Library of Congress." They have been harder worked than any employés of the Government in this Capitol.

Mr. HALE. And besides that, if the amendment is disagreed to, the Reporters of the Senate should be added.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am perfectly willing to add them.

Mr. HARRIS. Necessarily, if disagreed to, the paragraph will be open to amendment. Let us dispose of one thing at a time.

Mr. VOORHEES. I want to impress the Senate with this fact: Mr. Spofford has less force than he needs by a great many, and the consequence is he overworks necessarily the force he has. I repeat what I have said, that there are no employés under this roof who are harder worked than the employés of the Library.

Mr. HALE. I have very decided convictions upon this matter. I believe that the best paid employés in the Government are those who are about the Senate and the House of Representatives. It was a hard session, but it was no harder for the employés than for Senators and Members. The Senate, a few years ago, took this matter in hand and directed that the extra month's pay should be cut off, and that has been observed as the rule since. But I am so desirous of getting the bill through—this, I hope, is the last matter that will give rise to any controversy—that I am entirely willing that the Senate now should vote upon the question and settle it at once without further discussion.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, as I shall vote to sustain the amendment I desire to say a word upon the subject. I recognize, of course, as others do, the efficiency and faithfulness of the employés of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and I recognize the further fact that they have places which others can not get; that they receive pay better than most people in like employments elsewhere get; that they get pay for the full time when they are not required to serve much over half their time so far as annual clerks are concerned; that many of the employés here get pay larger than the governors of States or the judges of the supreme courts of the States; that they have made a contract with the Government. They have agreed to accept the salary, which the law provides for, which is ample and just, and a full remuneration for their services. Now, it is said that the Reporters of the House are to be embraced. One of them gets $6,000. The others get $5,000, I believe. They get as much as Senators and Representatives get. The Secretaries of the two Houses, the Doorkeepers, the other officers get large pay.

I know, Mr. President, how easy it is to be liberal with other people's money. I know, I believe at least, that no man making a contract for himself would do any such thing. Has any Senator here ever heard of an employer of persons having stipulated a price for their services, when they had completed their services, proposing to give them a month's additional pay? Men do not do that because it would come out of their own pockets, but this comes out of other people's pockets, and it is very easy to be liberal and generous with other people's money.

Mr. President, there is another feature about this. We ought not to teach the employés of the two Houses of Congress to plunder the Treasury without consideration. We ought not to teach them to be beggars upon public bounty. Who is it that has not been mortified for the last several days to here the appeals for this allowance? Why is it done? In the first place the House of Representatives proposed some years ago a month's extra pay to its employés because the employes of the House were paid less than the employés of the Senate, but the Senate was not willing to be left behind and it added a month's pay to the employés of the Senate. So the habit will run, starting first for the purpose of equalizing the pay of the employés of the two Houses. That made a precedent a year ago. Do we remember that we represent millions of people who struggle from one end of the year to the other for the means of living for the support of their families and are scarce able to do it? Do we remember that we are taxing them to give away money in very considerable amounts? This amendment does not state the amount here involved. I do not know how much it is. I do not suppose that there is a Senator here or a Representative in the other end of the Capitol who can tell you how much money this amendment will appropriate.

Men engaged in the private pursuits of life do not get such pay as the employés of this body. Our pages get between $2 and $3 a day. They do in the other House; I suppose they do here. Men work hard at home for 75 cents and a dollar a day who are glad to get it—grown men working in sunshine and in storm.

Mr. BLAIR. May I ask the Senator a question? If that is true, does it not seem almost too much for the Government to give us $5,000 a year?

Mr. REAGAN. The Senator from New Hampshire is prolific in questions. I do not know that I am so prolific in answers. The man who has capacity enough to represent a great State, the man who has devoted a life of labor and study and perhaps a fortune to qualify himself for a position to serve a great State and a great nation, I would suppose the Senator from New Hampshire would not be disposed to put upon the level of a man who works for a dollar a day in the field or in the forest. I am surprised that the Senator should ask such a question. I am dealing with practical facts. We come here not as representing ourselves, but as representing the people who send us here, as representing their States. Who, I ask, believes that if you go to them they will say you shall give several thousand dollars away to persons receiving higher pay than any of them can get at home?

Mr. President, at this time I do not wish to occupy the Senate further by the discussion of this or any other question, but I do wish to enter my earnest protest against this business of plundering the Treasury to gratify our friends who have been amply paid according to contract.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, the Senator from Texas having had the pleasure of entering his earnest protest, I ask that the Senate come to a vote upon this question.

Mr. HALE. I hope that will be done.

Mr. HARRIS. I am content with the judgment of the Senate in view of the facts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the Senate ready for the question on agreeing to the amendment?

Mr. REAGAN. I ask for the yeas and nays upon that question.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HALE. Let it be understood that a yea vote strikes out the provision and a nay vote keeps it in.

Mr. HARRIS. Those who favor giving the extra pay to the employés will vote "nay."

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BERRY (when his name was called). Upon this question I am paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON]. If he were present, I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay."

Mr. BLAIR (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If his colleague [Mr. WALTHALL] assents that I may vote, I shall vote.

Mr. HALE and others. Let us all vote.

Mr. BLAIR. I shall not vote without the consent of the colleague of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If his colleague says I can vote, I shall vote; otherwise not.

Mr. WALTHALL. I have no means of knowing how my colleague would vote on this particular amendment.

Mr. COLQUITT (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHACE], and unless it is generally understood that pairs shall not be observed I shall withhold my vote.

Mr. HEARST (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague [Mr. STANFORD].

Mr. PADDOCK (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS]. I think, in fact I know, that he would vote "nay." I will therefore vote. I vote "nay."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK], but as this is in no sense a party question I have taken the liberty to vote. I have no doubt he would approve of my action if he were present. I shall let my vote stand.

Mr. HEARST. This not being a political contest, I think I am at liberty to vote, though my colleague [Mr. STANFORD] is not present. I vote "nay."

Mr. CHANDLER. I am paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BLODGETT], but I feel at liberty to vote on this question. I vote "yea."

Mr. BLAIR. I ought perhaps to say that my pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] is such that I do not feel at liberty to vote on any question, whether political or otherwise, where I have reason to think that he might desire a pair, and I think he would in this case. I should vote "nay" if I were not paired.

The result was announced—yeas 15, nays 35; as follows:

YEAS—15.

Allison,	Coke,	Hale,	Reagan,
Brown,	Edmunds,	Hawley,	Vest,
Chandler,	Farwell,	Ingalls,	Walthall.
Cockrell,	Frye,	Platt,

NAYS—35.

Bate,	Faulkner,	Kenna,	Sabin,
Blackburn,	Gorman,	McPherson,	Spooner,
Bowen,	Gray,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Butler,	Hampton,	Paddock,	Stockbridge,
Call,	Harris,	Palmer,	Teller,
Cullom,	Hearst,	Pasco,	Turpie,
Daniel,	Hoar,	Pugh,	Voorhees,
Davis,	Jones of Arkansas,	Quay,	Wilson of Iowa,
Dolph,	Jones of Nevada,	Ransom,

ABSENT—26.

Aldrich,	Colquitt,	Manderson,	Sawyer,
Beck,	Dawes,	Morgan,	Sherman,
Berry,	Eustis,	Morrill,	Stanford,
Blair,	Evarts,	Payne,	Vance,
Blodgett,	George,	Plumb,	Wilson of Md.
Cameron,	Gibson,	Riddleberger,
Chace,	Hiscock,	Saulsbury,

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HALE. I have one or two further committee amendments to offer. This clause having been retained, I move to add, after the word "police," in line 14, on page 66, the words:

The employés of the Congressional Library and the Senate reporters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 14 on page 66, after the word "police," it is proposed to insert the words:

The employés of the Congressional Library and the Senate reporters.

So as to read:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives to pay to the officers and employés of the Senate and House borne on the annual and session rolls on the 20th day of October, 1888, including the Capitol police, the employés of the Congressional Library, and the Senate Reporters, for extra services during the Fiftieth Congress, a sum equal to one month's pay, at the compensation then paid them by law, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to understand the effect of the phrase "the Senate Reporters." Are they paid by the month; if not, what does the phrase "one month's pay" mean?

Mr. HALE. It would be one-twelfth of the amount the Reporter now receives annually by contract.

Mr. HOAR. It does not seem to me that that would be the effect of the language, unless it has been somewhere settled.

Mr. HALE. We have given it several times.

Mr. HOAR. We have a contract with the person to do a particular service, it may last six months and it may last three months. It is proposed to give one month's extra pay. I do not understand that the service is measured by the day, but I understand is measured by the amount of work, the number of pages.

Mr. HALE. I understand that it has been put in this way heretofore.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I have one more amendment, and after that I shall have nothing more to offer. On page 29, after line 20, I move to insert:

Pay of the Army: For pay of enlisted men, $220,000; service-pay, enlisted men, $34,000; pay of hospital corps, $15,000; for allowances for travel, retained pay, clothing not drawn, and interest on deposits, $86,888; in all, $355,888.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I desire merely to have a little amendment of mere form made, if the Senator from Maine will allow me. On page 35, I see two persons spoken of therein have the title of "honorable" prefixed, "Honorable W. E. Chandler" and "Honorable W. C. Whitney." I think as a matter of taste that word should be stricken out.

Mr. HALE. And in the preceding paragraph, instead of "ex-Secretary Chandler" it should read "William E. Chandler."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 7, on page 35, it is proposed to strike out the word "honorable," and in line 14, to strike out the word "honorable."

Mr. HALE. And in lines 6 and 7, strike out "ex-Secretary" and insert "William E." before the name "Chandler."

Mr. HOAR. Yes, let that also be included in the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER. I move to insert at the end of the bill—

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to PHILIP S. POST, out of any money not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,668.40, in reimbursement of expenses necessarily incurred in defense of his title to his seat as a member of the Fiftieth Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin. [Putting the question.] By the sound the noes have it.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the demand for the yeas and nays seconded?

Mr. CULLOM. A standing vote will do just as well.

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the amendment may be adopted.

Mr. STEWART. Let the amendment be read again. It is not understood.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to make a statement in justice to the Committee on Appropriations, as I see the distinguished Senators who are in charge of the bill do not make it as I hoped they would. It has been a universal rule of the Committee on Appropriations not to interfere in House matters. The House has had an opportunity to provide compensation to Mr. POST for this contest and has refused it. Now his friends come to the Senate to get the Senate to assume the responsibility of giving him more than the law allows and more than his own confrères in the House would give him. I say it is an imposition upon the Senate, and that it is not right.

Mr. SPOONER. I have only this to say about the amendment: The appropriate committee in the House of Representatives reported in favor of this proposition; but it did not find its way, for certain reasons, into the appropriation bill.

I see no reason upon the merits of the proposition why it should not be adopted. If it is important that the will of the people in any election should triumph, and that an election should be contested where the certificate awarded to a member turns out to be only prima facie evidence of his right to the seat, Congress ought to cover the necessary expense of making that contest.

This gentleman contested his seat in Congress. It required a lengthy examination, the examination of a great many witnesses and the employment of counsel, and every dollar provided for by the amendment was necessarily expended by him in making that contest.

Mr. CULLOM. And he has all the vouchers to show that the money was expended.

Mr. SPOONER. He exhibited the vouchers, and the House committee reported in favor of the proposition. If the House does not agree to this amendment it can be stricken out in conference.

Mr. GORMAN. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin a question if he will yield.

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. GORMAN. Has not the matter of payment to contestants been under discussion for a great many years, and has not Congress by a law fixed the amount in each of these cases to which a contestant is entitled?

Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly; $3,000.

Mr. SPOONER. Congress did fix an amount.

Mr. GORMAN. Congress has fixed the amount, and there is now in every contest in Congress a sum allowed, although it is true it may not be sufficient to pay the expenses of contest in more than half the cases.

Mr. SPOONER. The appropriation ought to be sufficient, if there is any principle in making an appropriation at all, to cover the necessary expenses in making the contest.

Mr. GORMAN. That is very true.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Wisconsin will allow me to say that when the contest in this case was over the testimony was so complete that the whole House unanimously voted to give this gentleman his seat. The fact is that he is a poor man. As has been stated, he did not spend a single dollar contrary to law, and he has the vouchers and receipts for every cent that was paid out according to law.

It would seem, as has already been said, that if there is anything in making the contest to get at the truth and the right, it ought not to result in breaking the man up who does pay. It seems to me that the claim ought to be allowed. As the Senator from Wisconsin said, if the House of Representatives, where this gentleman is a member, decline to entertain the amendment, it will go out of the bill in conference.

Mr. COCKRELL. I make a point of order that the amendment is not in order.

Mr. CULLOM. It is too late to make the point of order after we have been discussing it.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is not too late to raise a point of order at any time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Upon what rule does the Senator from Missouri raise the point of order?

Mr. COCKRELL. This is a pure claim. It is moved upon an appropriation bill. It is not recommended by any committee of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has no information on that subject.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Missouri is mistaken in his last statement. This amendment was reported from a standing committee of the Senate and was referred in due season, under the rules, to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. COCKRELL. That still does not make it in order, it being purely a claim.

Mr. SPOONER. It answers the proposition that it has not been reported by a committee, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question as to the amendment being reported from——

Mr. COCKRELL. And there is no deficiency. It is not a deficiency, and it is not pertinent to this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will excuse the Chair. That does not go to the question of order, but as to whether the amendment is germane or relevant. The point of order is not sustained if the statement of the Senator from Wisconsin, which the Chair supposes to be true, is correct. The Senator from Missouri does not dispute that statement.

Mr. CULLOM. I will state that I introduced the amendment and it was referred to the Committee on Claims, acted upon favorably by that committee, and then referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. COCKRELL. It was acted upon by what committee?

Mr. CULLOM. By the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COCKRELL. If it was acted upon by the Committee on Claims, then I want to appeal to the Chair to know whether every claim recommended by the Committee on Claims goes upon an appropriation bill notwithstanding the rules of the Senate. I make the point of order that the amendment is not in order, being a claim, and that it is not germane to this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator will pardon the Chair, the question of relevancy must be decided by the Senate and not by the Chair; it is not a question of order. The rule provides that when the question of relevancy is raised as to whether an amendment is germane or not, it shall be decided by the Senate without debate, and not by the Chair.

Mr. COCKRELL. Do I understand that the Chair has decided that every claim which has been reported by the Committee on Claims and referred to the Committee on Appropriations is in order to be offered in the Senate to an appropriation bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is in order so far as that part of the rule is concerned. It may or may not be germane or relevant.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is then in order, notwithstanding it is a private claim, which the rules expressly say shall not go on an appropriation bill?

Mr. HOAR. I desire leave to observe that, as far as my memory goes, such provisions for the compensation of members or contestants have been put on appropriation bills ever since I have been in either House of Congress, for more than twenty years.

Mr. COCKRELL. But it must be put on in the House, not in the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. They have always been considered as appropriate; they are treated as a matter of public expenditure. Wherever there is a fair question as to who is entitled to a seat, it is not the private interest of the contestant in this body or the other; it is a matter of public interest, and the investigation is made in the interest of the people, in order that their will may be carried out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would hold that this is not a private claim, and that the question of relevancy under the third paragraph of Rule XVI, if the Senator from Missouri desires to raise that point, must be decided by the Senate:

> All questions of relevancy of amendments under this rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Chair decides that it is not a private claim when clause 4 of Rule XVI provides that—

> No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill.

Will the Chair please inform the Senate why, if this is not a private claim, it was referred to the Committee on Claims?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair declines to enter upon any discussion of that question. The Chair holds that this is not a private claim, subject to the right of appeal by the Senator from Missouri. If the Senator desires to appeal, it will be entertained.

Mr. HARRIS. Upon the question of relevancy?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator raises the question of relevancy, it will be submitted to the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. I shall not raise the question of relevancy at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question then recurs on agreeing to the amendment moved by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER].

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COLQUITT (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHACE].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. HALE. I hope Senators will vote on this question so as to make a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum is recorded.

Mr. BLAIR. On this question I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 23, nays 20; as follows:

YEAS—23.

Bowen,	Hawley,	Paddock,	Spooner,
Cullom,	Hearst,	Palmer,	Stewart,
Davis,	Hoar,	Platt,	Stockbridge,
Dolph,	Ingalls,	Plumb,	Teller,
Farwell,	Jones of Nevada,	Quay,	Wilson of Iowa.
Frye,	Mitchell,	Sabin,

NAYS—20.

Allison,	Coke,	Hampton,	Ransom,
Bate,	Daniel,	Harris,	Reagan,
Berry,	Gorman,	McPherson,	Vest,
Brown,	Gray,	Pasco,	Voorhees,
Cockrell,	Hale,	Pugh,	Walthall.

ABSENT—33.

Aldrich,	Chandler,	Hiscock,	Sawyer,
Beck,	Colquitt,	Jones of Arkansas,	Sherman,
Blackburn,	Dawes,	Kenna,	Stanford,
Blair,	Edmunds,	Manderson,	Turpie,
Blodgett,	Eustis,	Morgan,	Vance,
Butler,	Evarts,	Morrill,	Wilson of Md.
Call,	Faulkner,	Payne,
Cameron,	George,	Riddleberger,
Chace,	Gibson,	Saulsbury,

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PASCO. I move the amendment I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment moved by the Senator from Florida will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add to the bill the following:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to settle and adjust the claim of the State of Florida as found and reported in the letter of the Secretary of War, dated March 22, 1882, and under previous acts of Congress, and to pay to the said State such sum of money as he may find to be due the said State; and in making such settlement he shall retain the whole, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of said allowance or settlement and apply the same to the payment of the principal and interest, or either, of said bonds of the State of Florida held by the Treasurer of the United States in trust for the Indian trust fund or to the reimbursement of the United States of moneys advanced by the United States on account of interest due on such bonds, and shall demand of said State, and allow to it, upon said claim or claims for the purpose of such settlement, the rate of interest stipulated in said bonds, apply the same to the payment of the balance due of the principal and interest, or either, of said bonds of the State of Florida, held as aforesaid, after a proper credit is given for such sums as may have been retained by the Secretary of the Treasury under section 3481 of the Revised Statutes, or to the reimbursement of the United States of moneys advanced by the United States on account of interest due on such bonds, and shall demand of such State, and allow to it, upon said claim or claims for the purpose of such settlement, the rate of interest stipulated in said bonds: Provided, That in computing the interest on said advances, the Secretary of the Treasury shall apply the rule applied by act of Congress approved March 3, 1857, to the claim of the State of Maryland. And there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, so much money as may be necessary to carry out the above provision.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Does that come from any committee?

Mr. PASCO. It comes from the Committee on Claims.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The amendment was referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed February 19. It was reported from that committee February 21, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HALE. It is clearly a claim, nothing but a claim, a very old one at that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Maine to raise a point of order?

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Upon the ground that this is a private claim?

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. DOLPH. I raise the further point of order that it contains legislation which is not in order on an appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that the only legislation is that which provides a distribution of the money that is appropriated.

Mr. HALE. Would it be possible, does the Chair think, to get a yea-and-nay vote upon it?

Mr. DOLPH. It authorizes the adjustment of a claim.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will hear the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO], who had not yielded the floor.

Mr. PASCO. I understand that the point of order is overruled and that the amendment is properly before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So the Chair holds.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, this claim referred to in this amendment originated during the Seminole war of 1856 or 1857, and it has been before Congress from time to time nearly ever since that date. On the 3d of March, 1881, by a joint resolution of the two Houses of Congress the claim was referred to the Secretary of War for investigation. The amount of the principal was ascertained and the contest came up simply as to the interest.

The claim has been before the Senate from time to time since then, and during the present session of Congress it has had a very exhaustive examination by the Committee on Claims. It has been passed upon by that committee, but my colleague and myself have failed in our efforts to get the bill for its payment before the Senate so that action might be taken upon it.

I do not propose now to go into the merits of the claim. The report in which they are set forth has been in the hands of members of the Senate ever since the 25th of January.

But the special reason for urging the matter with the earnestness that my colleague and myself have done during the present session has been on the ground of the necessities of our State. The people of the country have been generous to the people of Florida during the past year, and now we ask the Senate to be just towards our State and to settle this claim which has been so long outstanding. The exigencies of the State require it. The State treasury has been exhausted by the numerous drains upon it in connection with the epidemic which was raging in the State during the past summer. During the past month a special session of the Legislature has been necessary in consequence of this epidemic, a board of health has been provided for, and all this will require a very large outlay of money.

It is for this reason that the people of our State, acting through their Legislature, have urged upon Congress and urged upon their Senators and Representatives here that this claim should be brought forward and an effort made to settle it now. The resolutions of our State Legislature were read to the Senate only yesterday. If this claim is to be settled there is no better time and no time more opportune for our people than the present, so that the extraordinary expenditures of the State may be provided for out of this fund, which justly belongs to her, the payment of which has been so long delayed.

Unless the merits of the case are brought up in the discussion I shall not go further into them myself at the present time. The hour is late, and I desire to bring this matter as speedily as possible to a vote. I ask that the amendment be adopted.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, this claim on the part of the State of Florida has been adjudicated at various times and a bill for its payment passed the House of Representatives in the former Congress two years ago.

There is no doubt that the money was honestly expended by the State for the suppression of Indian hostilities. The facts are undisputed. The necessities of the State at this time are very great and this money will be expended not only in the interests of the State of Florida, but of the whole country in preventing the reappearance of the epidemic which prevailed in that State and its communication to other States.

In consequence of the great loss imposed upon the State by the epidemic last year the State finances have become very much reduced and the State is in very great need of this money at this time for the purpose I have mentioned. Inasmuch as there is no dispute whatever in regard to the fact of the money having been honestly expended by the State and the debt has been recognized by a committee of this body and by a bill passing the other House, I think that the amendment ought to be allowed to go upon the bill.

Mr. HALE. Let us have a vote, Mr. President.

Mr. PASCO. I have been asked by several Senators what the amount of the principal of this claim is. It is found upon page 8 of the report of the Committee on Claims:

Amount due Florida, as per report of Secretary of War, $224,648.09.

That was when it was examined by the Secretary of War, Mr. Lincoln.

Bonds due the Indian trust fund, $132,000. Leaving a balance of $92,648.09.

That is the principal of the debt.

Mr. HAMPTON. I ask the Senator from Florida if the amendment is not predicated on the report that was made by the Committee on Military Affairs a year or two ago.

Mr. PASCO. It is the substance of the report of the Committee on Military Affairs then made, and recommending the payment of the principal of this debt is embraced in the report now before the Senate.

Mr. DOLPH. I hold in my hand a report made by the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES], from the Committee on Claims, on the 26th of February, 1887, which seems to have been the report of the committee with only one dissenting member, Senator WHITTHORNE, in which this claim, being, as I understand it, the same claim, is found to be without merit.

Mr. HALE. The committee reported against it.

Mr. DOLPH. The committee reported against it. I ask to have the report read.

Mr. HALE and others. Oh, no.

Mr. PASCO. It would take up the rest of the night to read the report. There are at least fifty pages in the report which the Senator proposes to read.

Mr. DOLPH. Very well; I will withdraw the request.

Mr. PASCO. I will state that this matter was acted upon by the Committee on Claims during the latter part of the last Congress and an unfavorable report was then made; but it had been previously passed upon favorably, so far as the principal is concerned, on several former occasions. There was a report from the Military Committee in the Forty-sixth Congress made by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] in favor of it. There are reports from the same committee in the Forty-seventh and again in the Forty-ninth Congress, made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HAMPTON], in favor of it. There was a report from the other House in the last Congress in favor of the claim as it now stands, and the bill for its payment was there passed. It has again been there favorably reported at the present Congress, but no final action has been taken.

When the matter was examined before the committee at the close of the last Congress, perhaps hurriedly, the report to which the Senator from Oregon refers was made. The report was unfavorable, and it caused the claim to be arrested at that time, but it has been thoroughly examined at the present session of Congress before the same committee which made the former report, and the present chairman of the committee, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], and others who joined in that adverse report, are now joining in the report which is before the Senate.

I trust the Senate will view the case as presented in the report made at the present session rather than as presented in the report which was made at the last Congress.

Mr. HAMPTON. I did not know that this matter was to be brought up, and I have not before me the report which I made at the time, but the recommendation made by the Military Committee was based upon a calculation furnished to us by the Department. We went through it and examined it with great care, and the result of the deliberations of the committee was that the State of Florida was entitled, as I now remember, to about $92,000.

Mr. PASCO. That is the amount.

Mr. HAMPTON. After deducting what was due by Florida, though the claim was much larger than that. I think the claim is an eminently just one, and I hope the amendment will be sustained.

Mr. HALE. Let us have a vote, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I did not call for the yeas and nays on the amendment, because I am desirous of getting through with the bill.

Mr. DANIEL. I offer an amendment to come in on page 89 of the bill, after line 12.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 89, after line 12, it is proposed to insert:

That the accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to examine the accounts between the United States and each of the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, South Carolina, and the city of Baltimore, adjusted under previous acts of Congress; and on such examinations to assume the sums expended by each State aforesaid and the said city of Baltimore, for the use and benefit of the United States in the war of 1812 to 1815 with Great Britain, and the sums refunded and repaid by the United States to each of the aforesaid States and to the said city of Baltimore, and the times of such payments, as being correctly stated in the accounts, as the same have been passed at the Treasury Department, but in the calculation of interests due to the said States aforesaid, and to the said city of Baltimore, under previous acts of Congress, the following rules shall be observed, namely: Interest shall be calculated up to the time of any payment made. To this interest the payment shall first be applied, and if it exceed the interest due, the balance shall be applied to diminish the principal. If the payment falls short of the interest, the balance of interest shall not be added to the principal so as to produce interest. Second, interest shall be allowed to each of the said States and city of Baltimore on such sums only on which the said States and city either paid interest or lost interest by transfer of an interest-bearing fund. That if upon such re-examination of the accounts and applications of the above rules any money shall be found due to either of said States or to the said city of Baltimore, the same shall be applied first to the payment of principal and interest of any bonds of the said States, matured or unmatured, held by the United States in trust or otherwise, and after the payment of said principal and interest on the bonds of either of said States or city, the balance, if any, shall be paid to the constituted authorities of said States, respectively, and to those of said city, and for any sums found due and remaining after payment of said bonds there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, so much money as may be necessary, and the same shall be immediately available.

Mr. HALE. This is unlike the other claims which have been presented. I raise the point of order upon it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. What point does the Senator raise? This is just as much in order as the others.

Mr. HALE. I raise the point of order that it has not been reported from any standing or select committee of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order raised by the Senator from Maine to the effect that this proposed amendment has not been reported from any standing or select committee of the Senate, and is therefore not to be received, is sustained.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, I only wish that the matter may be thoroughly understood. This same proposition has been reported favorably by the Committee on Claims and has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and that, as I was informed awhile ago was the view of the Chair, made the amendment in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It does not appear from the print the Chair has examined that the amendment was reported from any standing or select committee of the Senate.

Mr. HALE. No, it was not. The amendment has not been reported from any committee, and by the Senate referred to the Committee on Appropriations as an amendment to the appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Therefore it is not in order under the rule.

Mr. DANIEL. I thought it would be in order if the same proposition had been reported favorably by a committee in the form of a bill. This is the identical text of the proposition reported by the Committee on Claims.

Mr. FRYE. That does not answer.

Mr. HARRIS. Is the matter determined as to the amendment of the Senator from Virginia?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is, unless an appeal is taken from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. DANIEL. I do not appeal from the decision of the Chair, but may I be permitted one moment? This was the exact proposition the Chair passed on a little while ago in the case of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO].

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I am a member of the Committee on Claims, and will state that the difference between the two propositions is that the other was an amendment proposed by the Committee on Claims and sent here to be referred to the Committee on Appropriations. In the amendment the Senator from Virginia presents that was not the case; it was simply a bill favorably reported from the committee.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is a technical difference. We ought not to stand on that.

Mr. HARRIS. On page 45, at the end of line 18, I move to insert:

To pay S. M. Stockslager the difference between the salary of Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office from November 17, 1887, to March 26, 1888, both inclusive, being the period of service of said S. M. Stockslager as Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office from the date of the resignation of William A. J. Sparks, Commissioner, to the qualification of his successor, $358.48.

Mr. HALE. I raise the point of order upon that amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. I have nothing to say if the Senator raises a point of order until the Chair disposes of it.

Mr. HALE. I raise the point of order. I do not know whether this has been referred by a committee to the Committee on Appropriations, but even if it has been, it seems to me a clear case of a claim.

Mr. HARRIS. Upon the contrary, it is a matter estimated for. It has not been reported by any committee so far as I know, but it has been offered in the Senate and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Was it estimated for by the head of a Department?

Mr. HARRIS. It was.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator refer the Chair to the Book of Estimates?

Mr. HARRIS. I have not the estimates before me.

Mr. HALE. If estimated at all, it is only estimated in the sense of submitted items that are sent in not as estimates proper but only as submitted. It is a clear case of an addition to the salary of an official who has for a time served in a higher grade in the same office.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Maine allow me to correct his facts? It is a clear case of a very different character.

Mr. HALE. Then I am mistaken in the case.

Mr. HARRIS. I suppose the Senator is.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator not state what the case is?

Mr. HARRIS. The facts are exactly these: When the Commissioner of the General Land Office resigned his position Mr. Stockslager, as the Deputy Commissioner, performed the duty of Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner for some three months.

Mr. HALE. Yes; that is as I understand it.

Mr. HARRIS. He was then appointed Commissioner and became Commissioner, but for the three months or more that he performed the duties of both positions he received only the lower salary of the lower position.

Mr. HALE. But that was before he was appointed Commissioner.

Mr. HARRIS. It was; but it is not the ordinary case where the superior officer is absent and the subordinate acts instead of the superior. There was no salary being paid to a Commissioner during that period; the office was vacant; and in that respect it is exceptional.

Mr. HALE. But it is just like a lieutenant performing the duty of captain if the captain is dead. Nobody would claim that the lieutenant could get the pay of a captain.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator from Tennessee refer the Chair to the estimate?

Mr. HARRIS. I chance not to have it before me.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In the absence of evidence that this item was estimated for by the head of a Department, the Chair will be compelled to sustain the point of order.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Chair will hear the Senator from Iowa. I do not know what statement he is going to make.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not care to make any statement now.

Mr. PALMER. On page 9, after line 22, I move to insert:

Duluth Harbor, Minnesota:
For establishing range lights at Duluth Harbor, $3,284.12.

I will state that the bill creating this light-house was passed last year. I am informed by the clerk of the Committee on Commerce that it was omitted inadvertently from the sundry civil appropriation bill by the House. Therefore I think it should go in here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. I have a couple of amendments here from the Committee on Public Lands which I desire to offer. After line 5, on page 47, I move to add:

For payment to the State of Kansas, on account of 5 per cent. fund arising from the sale of public lands in said State from July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1885, as per decision of the First Comptroller of the Treasury, of date May 6, 1880, and as stated by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, $43,790.32.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to hear that explained.

Mr. TELLER. That is for the 5 per cent. due the State of Kansas for land that was within Indian reservations which all the States have had except the States of Colorado and Kansas and Nebraska.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Land not sold?

Mr. TELLER. Land sold; the Indian land when that was sold.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us divide.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont asks for a division.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to say a word about that. I do not suppose there is any use at this time of night in trying to stop anything that is to be ridden onto this bill; but the law of the United States has only pledged, as I understand it, to the States that come in 5 per cent. on the proceeds of sales of the public lands, and not lands that belong to somebody else. The States of Ohio and Iowa and Michigan, and I do not know how many others, have tried over and over again for the last forty years to get something more out of the lands that were appropriated to other uses and that belonged to the Indians, and so on, and so on. If we go into it in fair detail, it would take an hour or two to explain the whole thing. Now, to put on an appropriation bill without investigation and without the report of a committee telling us exactly what the facts are, a provision that we are to pay to these States the money that has been got from the sales of lands that belonged to the Indians and were only sold on account of a contract and agreement with the Indians, appears to me to be entirely wrong. I do not suppose it is possible to stop it, but I should like to have the yeas and nays on it all the same.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont asks for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. TELLER. I want to say to the Senator from Vermont that the States of Mississippi, Louisiana, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, and Florida have all had this money, and I say to the Senator that this case has never been presented to the Senate before, and the cases that he refers to as to land warrants have nothing to do with this question. The Comptroller has decided that we are entitled to this money, but it can not be paid except by an appropriation.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to hear the decision of the Comptroller read, and if he has decided as wisely about this as he did about the paper used in the circuit court of the United States in New York, perhaps we should all agree to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays having been ordered, the roll will be called.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK]. If he were present I should vote "yea." I withhold my vote unless it be necessary to make a quorum.

Mr. PADDOCK (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS].

Mr. PASCO. I am paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. FARWELL]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. Is there a quorum recorded?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is not.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. Then I vote "yea."

Mr. BLAIR. I vote "yea."

Mr. PADDOCK. I am paired, but am at liberty to vote to make a quorum. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 14; as follows:

YEAS—28.

Berry,	Colquitt,	Jones of Arkansas,	Stewart,
Blair,	Daniel,	Jones of Nevada,	Stockbridge,
Bowen,	Davis,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Brown,	Dolph,	Paddock,	Turpie,
Butler,	Frye,	Palmer,	Voorhees,
Call,	Hoar,	Pugh,	Walthall,
Coke,	Ingalls,	Quay,	Wilson of Iowa.

NAYS—14.

Allison,	Gorman,	Harris,	Reagan,
Bate,	Gray,	Hawley,	Vest.
Cockrell,	Hale,	Hearst,
Edmunds,	Hampton,	Ransom,

ABSENT—34.

Aldrich,	Eustis,	Manderson,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Evarts,	Morgan,	Sawyer,
Blackburn,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Sherman,
Blodgett,	Faulkner,	Pasco,	Spooner,
Cameron,	George,	Payne,	Stanford,
Chace,	Gibson,	Platt,	Vance,
Chandler,	Hiscock,	Plumb,	Wilson of Md.
Cullom,	Kenna,	Riddleberger,
Dawes,	McPherson,	Sabin,

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. I have another amendment for the State of Colorado, exactly like that for the State of Kansas, only for a smaller sum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The Secretary read as follows:

For payment to the State of Colorado, on account of 5 per cent. fund arising from the sale of public lands in said State prior to June 30, 1888, as provided by the act of admission, $16,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask for the yeas and nays on that.

Mr. DANIEL. Is the amendment reported by a committee?

Mr. TELLER. It is reported by the Committee on Public Lands in the same way and audited by the Department.

Mr. BERRY. I do not remember that this amendment was submitted to the members of the Committee on Public Lands. The amendment which has just been agreed to was submitted to me as a member of the Committee on Public Lands by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]. As I understood the proposition at that time, it did not refer to or make any claim except the same claim which has been allowed all the other land States; that is, 5 per cent. upon the lands sold.

Mr. TELLER. That is it exactly.

Mr. BERRY. The other States have received 5 per cent., but for some reason in the act of admission of these States they did not receive the 5 per cent. which had continuously been received by all the other land States, and therefore I agreed to support the other amendment, and I voted for it. The pending amendment I know nothing about. I do not know how it comes here or why it was not put in with the other amendment.

Mr. TELLER. I will say to the Senator that it was presented to him at the same time the other amendment was. The two were together.

Mr. BERRY. The other case was to pay the 5 per cent., which all the land States were entitled to and which all the others were receiving; and that being the fact, as a matter of course I thought it was a just claim. The pending one I do not understand, and I should like the Senator to explain why it is in a separate amendment and not included in the other.

Mr. TELLER. I will say to the Senator that the reason is that one is for the State of Kansas and the other for Colorado. This is for Colorado. One was for $43,000 and this is for $16,000.

Mr. BERRY. Is the claim of Colorado the same as that of Kansas?

Mr. TELLER. The same precisely, and audited and allowed upon the books of the General Land Office.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the question of agreeing to the amendment the Senator from Vermont asks that the yeas and nays may be entered on the Journal.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PASCO (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. FARWELL], and withhold my vote.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. BLAIR. I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE].

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 11; as follows:

YEAS—29.

Berry,	Dolph,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Bowen,	Frye,	Palmer,	Turpie,
Brown,	Gray,	Platt,	Voorhees,
Butler,	Hampton,	Pugh,	Walthall,
Call,	Hearst,	Quay,	Wilson of Iowa.
Coke,	Hoar,	Spooner,
Daniel,	Ingalls,	Stewart,
Davis,	Jones of Nevada,	Stockbridge,

NAYS—11.

Allison,	Cockrell,	Hale,	Ransom,
Bate,	Edmunds,	Harris,	Reagan.
Chandler,	Gorman,	Hawley,

ABSENT—36.

Aldrich,	Dawes,	Kenna,	Riddleberger,
Beck,	Eustis,	McPherson,	Sabin,
Blackburn,	Evarts,	Manderson,	Saulsbury,
Blair,	Farwell,	Morgan,	Sawyer,
Blodgett,	Faulkner,	Morrill,	Sherman,
Cameron,	George,	Paddock,	Stanford,
Chace,	Gibson,	Pasco,	Vance,
Colquitt,	Hiscock,	Payne,	Vest,
Cullom,	Jones of Arkansas,	Plumb,	Wilson of Md.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I offer an amendment to come in immediately after the amendment which was offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] and adopted by the Senate some time since.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert as a new section the following:

To pay W. Jasper Blackburn the sum of $5,417, the remainder of salary due him and unpaid as a member of the House of Representatives of the United States for the Fortieth Congress.

Mr. HALE. I raise the point of order on that.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. If the Senator from Maine will allow me a moment I will explain the matter.

I offered this amendment and sent it to the Committee on Appropriations some time since, but I understand they did not have time to consider it and it was not inserted on that account.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Was the amendment reported by any standing or select committee of the body?

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. It was not, but I ask indulgence to make a word of explanation.

Mr. Blackburn was a member of the delegation from Louisiana which was admitted in the midst of the Fortieth Congress. At first the members of that delegation were paid for only the time they actually served. Subsequently the other members of that delegation were paid for the balance of their term, as he states in his petition, which has been presented frequently, but he, never having been a member of Congress subsequently, was never paid for the remainder of his term.

I think there is no question that Mr. Blackburn is entitled to this amount under the precedents which have been established. I have two or three times introduced bills for his relief, but they have failed to be finally enacted into law. I think this gentleman should be allowed the balance of pay due him. He is an old and a poor man and entitled, in my judgment, to the amount named in the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I did not understand the Senator from Maine to insist on the point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood the Senator from Maine to raise the point of order.

Mr. HALE. I made the point of order, and I do not withdraw it. I wish I could do so consistently.

Mr. EDMUNDS. But this is such an old claim.

Mr. HALE. Yes, this is an old matter.

Mr. COCKRELL. Not as old as the Seminole war.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. HARRIS. I offered an amendment to pay Mr. Stockslager the difference between the salary of Assistant or Deputy Commissioner of the General Land Office and Commissioner, but I was ruled out of order because I was not able to show the estimate. I have exhibited the estimate to the Chair since that time, and I now renew the amendment.

Mr. HOAR. Let the estimate be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will first be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add as a new section—

To pay S. M. Stockslager the difference between the salary of Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office from November 17, 1887, to March 26, 1888, both inclusive, being the period of service of said S. M. Stockslager as Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office from the date of the resignation of William A. J. Sparks, Commissioner, to the qualification of his successor, $358.48.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The estimate will now be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 15 of House Executive Document No. 376, Fiftieth Congress, first session:

Salaries, General Land Office: To pay S. M. Stockslager the difference between the salary of Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office from November 17, 1887, to March 26, 1888, both inclusive, being the period of service of said S. M. Stockslager as Acting Commissioner of the General Land Office from the date of the resignation of William A. J. Sparks, Commissioner, to the qualification of his successor, $358.48.

Mr. HALE. Is not that a submitted item?

Mr. EDMUNDS. Does it not say "submitted" there?

Mr. HALE. There are two classes of estimates, one made according to existing law, to carry out existing laws, and there are others that are called suggestive items that are simply "submitted" by the Department.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is "submitted," but the Chair holds that the question of the propriety of adopting the amendment is with the Senate, and the amendment plainly is admissible, having been estimated for by the head of a Department in accordance with the rules.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us have the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. EDMUNDS. This is a very small matter of itself, but the standing laws of the United States in force for a great many years have provided that no inferior officer shall be paid anything extra for performing the services of some other superior officer whose place he takes for the time being; and if some other officer than this had been nominated for the principal office it would have been contrary to all that Congress has done and all that the law has provided to give him extra compensation while he had the honor and while he did the duty of an officer whose duties he was carrying on. The only distinction is that he happened to be nominated himself instead of somebody else for the higher place, and it involved therefore a principle that will cover, if you do not stand on the statute of limitations, as we are not inclined to do to-night, more than $5,000,000 in my belief—certainly three millions—to pay away back the people like the old case we have had in the Senate for years and years, until at last it has gone—but it will come up again, I suppose—to pay Asbury Dickins, so long Secretary of the Senate, and before that an Assistant Secretary of State, I believe, for performing the duties of Secretary of State when there was not any or while that Secretary was sick or away. It involves a great deal in point of principle, and if we are going to do it for one man, if we are fair and just, we must do it for all. Therefore it is an important matter, and so I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HARRIS. I want to say to the Senator from Vermont and to the Senate that he does not conceive the facts exactly as they are in this case, and his argument is not applicable to the case presented. I have myself seen since I have been a member of this body more reports than one on the claims of subordinate officers for increased pay when they were acting for the chief in the temporary absence of the chief. In those cases the salary of the chief was being paid day by day and month by month, and the salary of the subordinate officer also paid, and his acting as chief was one of the incidents of the position that he held. To that extent I quite agree with the Senator from Vermont, and have in every instance reported against paying the larger salary to the subordinate officer in such cases. But in this case the office of Commissioner was vacant, there was no Commissioner being paid; there were duties devolving upon both the Commissioner and deputy commissioner, and Mr. Stockslager performed both.

Whether he had been nominated and confirmed as Commissioner or some other person had been nominated and confirmed as Commissioner I should have favored paying him the difference between the salary of deputy and the salary of Commissioner from the time the office of Commissioner was vacated up to the time that a Commissioner was appointed.

That is the whole case, and I am quite content to allow the Senate to determine the question.

Mr. EDMUNDS. So am I, after we understand it. Every deputy of every officer when he is doing the duties of his chief and there is not a subdeputy to take the place of the deputy, performs the duties of both officers; but the deputy is merely an assistant to his chief, and if his chief is gone away or is dead or anything else, he becomes the head for the time being and the master of the situation, so to speak, but the law has said by a standing statute that in such a case extra pay shall not be allowed. That is all there is of this case. This gentleman did do the duties of chief and deputy in the same sense that every other deputy does the duties of chief and deputy when the chief is not doing his duty and the deputy comes to be the head of the office.

Therefore this is in the face of the standing statutes of the United States, and involves the principle and the duty, if it be right to pay this gentleman, of paying thousands and tens of thousands if we do not stand on the statute of limitations as we have said to-night we will not—of gentlemen who for fifty years have done the same thing. It may be right, but if it is you had better change your standing statutes.

Mr. HARRIS. The only thing I desire to say is that I do not quite agree with the Senator from Vermont that this amendment is in the face of any statute, and to follow his view he goes directly in the face of every principle of justice and right. That is all I care to say about it.

Mr. BERRY. I desire to ask the Senator a question because it will determine my vote. Does the present statute prohibit the payment of extra pay where there is a vacancy in the chief office or only where the chief is temporarily incapacitated and still draws the salary? If the law says in neither case shall it be paid, then I will not vote to pay it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I will try to find the statute, as we have plenty of time to-night or this morning, whatever it may be.

Mr. STEWART. While that law is being looked up we might offer further amendments. I suggest to the Senator from Vermont and the Senator from Tennessee that we might dispose of some other matters while they are looking up the law.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to that course being pursued.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let this question be laid aside temporarily.

Mr. STEWART. I offer the following amendment, to come in on page 50, after line 6:

To reimburse the estate of D. O. Adkison, late postmaster at Virginia City, Nev., for moneys paid by him on money-orders on October 25, 1875, and not credited in the settlement of his accounts by reason of the destruction of the vouchers for said payments by fire, the sum of $174.95, to be paid to Lucy A. Adkison, the only surviving heir of D. O. Adkison.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think I have found the statute now that relates to the amendment of my friend from Tennessee. The law in the first place, that I need not refer to now, because this gentleman was not a clerk, says that no clerk shall receive any extra compensation for doing any other duty than that which belongs to a clerk; but this gentleman is not a clerk, and he is not within that literally. Now I come to section 1763:

SEC. 1763. No person who holds an office the salary or annual compensation attached to which amounts to the sum of $2,500 shall receive compensation for discharging the duties of any other office unless expressly authorized by law.

I do not know what the compensation of this gentleman was as Deputy Commissioner of the Land Office. If it was above $2,500, then that hits it. Now comes the next section:

SEC. 1764. No allowance or compensation shall be made to any officer or clerk by reason of the discharge of duties which belong to any other officer or clerk in the same or any other Department; and no allowance or compensation shall be made for any extra services whatever which any officer or clerk may be required to perform unless expressly authorized by law.

That is all I have to say.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the Senate ready for the question on the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS]?

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. McPHERSON. I offer an amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I would ask what amendment it was that was disagreed to?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS].

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope action will not be had upon that. The Senator from Tennessee just stepped out. He will be back in a moment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I hope so, too. Let it be reconsidered and laid aside until the Senator from Tennessee comes in.

Mr. McPHERSON. On page 86, after line 6, I move to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to allow and pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay the claims for interest of the North German Lloyd Steam-ship Company of Bremen, the Hamburg-American Packet Company of Hamburg, and the Norse American Line of Sweden a sufficient sum to pay said lines interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum on such moneys as were exacted from such companies in contravention of treaty provisions and heretofore refunded under the act of June 19, 1878, said payments to be made to the duly accredited ministers of the German and Swedish Governments at Washington.

Mr. HALE. Does this come from a committee?

Mr. McPHERSON. I understand that there has been a recommendation by the Committee on Claims in favor of this measure, and it has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask leave to say about this amendment that a bill was reported at the last Congress favorably by the Committee on Claims. The payment of these sums was recommended by the President in his message, and there came to the Committee on Claims from the Secretary of State a communication in which he advised the payment of these claims, suggesting that we had exacted from other governments interest under similar circumstances, and that it would embarrass us——

Mr. McPHERSON. It has been recommended by the President, by the State Department, and by the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SPOONER. I had not finished my sentence. And at this session the Committee on Claims instructed me to report the item as an amendment intended to be offered to this bill, and it was referred in time, under the rule, to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HOAR. I would like to be informed, to govern my vote, what earthly reason there is why this claim should not be paid. We promised a foreign government we would not exact these sums, and by a mistake our officers exacted them from a foreign steamer. We never have made a claim against a foreign government under the circumstances on the face of the earth, in my opinion, where we did not demand, and if we were able, compel the payment of interest in like circumstances. Now the German Government make this demand upon us. I do not mean a formal demand, but makes the representation to our State Department. The President of the United States thinks we are bound in honor to pay it, and sends in a message recommending its payment. The Secretary of State says that he will be exceedingly embarrassed in our foreign relations if it is not paid, and he writes a letter on the subject to Congress.

The only doubt I have is whether we ought not to pay what was the current rate of interest which such companies had to pay at the time, which would be 6 or 7 per cent., and I consented in the committee to reduce it to the sum of 4 per cent., understanding that the agents of these steam-ship companies had said that they would be content with that rather that have any further delay.

Mr. McPHERSON. In regard to the Alabama claims the Government of the United States demanded and received interest. This was a matter which was governed and controlled by treaty stipulations. The Government of the United States did pay back the amount of the tonnage dues, but without interest. It is claimed by the German Government that there has been no whole indemnification of the German Government without the payment of interest, and I quite agree with the Senator from Massachusetts that the full measure of interest ought to have been paid instead of the reduced rate before the Senate. Certainly there is no ground in the world, I think, on which opposition to this payment can be based.

Mr. HOAR. I may add that, as that Senator is not present, the former Secretary of State, Mr. EVARTS, also very urgently pressed this claim upon the attention of the committee.

Mr. HALE. I hope we may settle this without the yeas and nays.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We can not settle it without the yeas and nays, if we can get them, for I wish to have the recorded judgment of the Senate upon this question. The United States has never engaged to pay interest upon claims to foreigners any more than it has to its own citizens in respect of their claims. I suspect that it will be found as in respect to some other very large cases that have been sent to the Committee on Foreign Relations, of which I happen to be a member, and so know about them, of similar exactions as is alleged of tonnage dues imposed, as it is claimed, contrary to treaty stipulations, that the United States is under no obligation whatever, moral or legal, to do to the foreigner who does business in our ports any other kind or sort of justice than it does to its own citizens doing business in our ports and owning ships that come in in the same way; and therefore it is that such matters, which ought to be considered as separate and independent ones upon bills that could be fairly considered in time enough to do it, and to endeavor to do right, but, when they are ridden in upon appropriation bills in the last days of the session, I simply wish to get the recorded vote of Senators to stand as a precedent, right or wrong—right, of course, if the majority think so—for governing everybody else in like cases.

I myself am not able to see any distinction between exactions that are made illegally or contrary to law and treaty from a man who owns a ship that sails under the American flag trading in our ports, and a man who owns a ship sailing under the British or German or any other flag that sails to our ports. It is all the same, and I can not see any distinction. Therefore it is that I wish to have the yeas and nays upon this amendment, because there is no time to explore it now and get the messages and papers so that we may know whether the exaction in the first instance was legal or illegal. We only take the statements of gentlemen that are intended to be correct; possibly they are; I make no question about that, but it is quite impossible to understand the case fully in all its bearings on amendments sprung at a time when no one of us wishes to take up time to explore these things; and so it is that I simply wish to say "nay," even without prejudice to the matter being considered by itself. So it is that I ask the yeas and nays.

Mr. BUTLER. Let us have a vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont asks for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PASCO (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. FARWELL]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 30, nays 11; as follows:

YEAS—30.

Brown,	Davis,	Ingalls,	Spooner,
Bowen,	Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Stewart,
Butler,	Gorman,	Jones of Nevada,	Stockbridge,
Call,	Gray,	McPherson,	Teller,
Chandler,	Hampton,	Mitchell,	Vest,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Palmer,	Wilson of Iowa.
Coke,	Hearst,	Pugh,
Daniel,	Hoar,	Quay,

NAYS—11.

Allison,	Edmunds,	Platt,	Voorhees,
Bate,	Hale,	Reagan,	Walthall.
Berry,	Harris,	Turpie,

ABSENT—35.

Aldrich,	Dawes,	Kenna,	Riddleberger,
Beck,	Eustis,	Manderson,	Sabin,
Blackburn,	Evarts,	Morgan,	Saulsbury,
Blair,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Sawyer,
Blodgett,	Faulkner,	Paddock,	Sherman,
Cameron,	Frye,	Pasco,	Stanford,
Chace,	George,	Payne,	Vance,
Colquitt,	Gibson,	Plumb,	Wilson of Md.
Cullom,	Hiscock,	Ransom,

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PADDOCK. I offer an amendment to come in after the last amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield to me to say that after looking at the statute referred to by the Senator from Vermont, I shall not press my amendment that remains pending to pay Mr. Stockslager.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be disagreed to, if there be no objection.

Mr. PADDOCK. I offer an amendment to come in after the last amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]. It is on all fours with the two amendments he offered, one as to Colorado and one as to Kansas, and stands in the same relation, and is the last of the States which are entitled to the 5 per cent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The Secretary read as follows:

For payment to the State of Nebraska, on account of 5 per cent. fund arising from the sale of public lands in said State prior to June 30, 1888, as per decision of the First Comptroller of the Treasury, and as stated by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, $35,500.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask for the yeas and nays on that.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. REAGAN. I want to say that I voted "nay" upon several of these claims simply because they are not deficiencies, but they are brought in here as claims on a deficiency bill. I wish to be understood as voting without prejudice against the merits, but because I do not believe it is right to load down a deficiency appropriation bill with all sorts of claims.

The yeas and nays were taken.

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 27, nays 13; as follows:

YEAS—27.

Berry,	Davis,	Mitchell,	Stockbridge,
Bowen,	Hampton,	Paddock,	Teller,
Brown,	Hawley,	Pugh,	Turpie,
Butler,	Hearst,	Quay,	Voorhees,
Call,	Hoar,	Sabin,	Walthall,
Coke,	Ingalls,	Spooner,	Wilson of Iowa.
Daniel,	Jones of Nevada,	Stewart,

NAYS—13.

Allison,	Edmunds,	Harris,	Vest.
Bate,	Gorman,	Platt,
Chandler,	Gray,	Ransom,
Cockrell,	Hale,	Reagan,

ABSENT—36.

Aldrich,	Dawes,	Hiscock,	Payne,
Beck,	Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Plumb,
Blackburn,	Eustis,	Kenna,	Riddleberger,
Blair,	Evarts,	McPherson,	Saulsbury,
Blodgett,	Farwell,	Manderson,	Sawyer,
Cameron,	Faulkner,	Morgan,	Sherman,
Chace,	Frye,	Morrill,	Stanford,
Colquitt,	George,	Palmer,	Vance,
Cullom,	Gibson,	Pasco,	Wilson of Md.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER. By direction of the Committee on Naval Affairs I offer the following amendment to come in, on page 40, after line 18:

To pay the difference between the pay of cadet-engineers and assistant engineers of the United States Navy in second five years from July 1, 1883, and July 1, 1884, to August 9, 1888, $58,403.32.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to have the Senator explain that if he will. Of course it is a very small sum, but it might be explained.

Mr. CHANDLER. It is a very large sum, but it is easy of explanation. These cadet-engineers were refused admission into the naval service as assistant engineers and afterwards went to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Supreme Court decided that they should have been appointed as assistant engineers. Thereupon the Secretary of the Navy appointed them as assistant engineers, but did not then give them the rank to which they were entitled; that is, did not give them the rank as of the date when they should have been appointed. Then they came to the Congress of the United States, and on the 9th of August, 1888, an act was passed directing the Secretary of the Navy to put them upon the register in their appropriate order of rank and to give them their commissions as of the date when they should have received them under the decision of the Supreme Court; and under the decision of the court and the act of Congress they are as much entitled to this compensation as any creditors of the United States.

I offer the amendment by direction of the Committee on Naval Affairs because I was instrumental in keeping these young men out of the service; but the Supreme Court having decided that they were entitled to their commission and Congress having further ratified that decision by giving the specific directions to the Secretary of the Navy, there is no propriety and no fairness in withholding from them the money to which they are entitled.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON] introduced the bill to which I have referred and gave attention to its passage through Congress, and he can make a further statement on this subject if it is necessary.

The Senator from Vermont has asked me where the decision of the Supreme Court is to be found. I do not have it now before me, but there is no mistake about the decision, first, of the Court of Claims, and secondly, of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to ask my friend from New Hampshire how anybody could make a claim in the Court of Claims or in the Supreme Court of the United States or anywhere else in a judicial court for payment or any other thing because he had not been appointed to an office. I can not understand what the decision could have meant, and I should like very much to see it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I did not understand it myself, but like the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES] in reference to the receiving-ship claims I was overruled by the Supreme Court of the United States. I resisted it, but Congress at a later period and within the last year decided that the present Secretary of the Navy was not only bound to give these young men their commissions but that he was bound to give them their commissions according to the dates when they would have been promoted if they had not been wrongfully dismissed the service.

A suit was brought in the Court of Claims for the difference in pay, to answer the Senator specifically, between that of a cadet-engineer and assistant engineer; or rather, a suit was brought for the pay of assistant engineers, and the Court of Claims and the Supreme Court decided that they were in the service and entitled to their money and were wrongfully dismissed or attempted to be dismissed by the Secretary of the Navy.

The Supreme Court decided that they were never out of the Navy. If we do not give this money, a large sum as it is, in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court and in accordance with our own decision in a recent act, we shall simply send these young men into the hands of claim agents who will charge them 20 per cent. or 40 per cent. of the amount of the claim, and in the course of two or three years later the money will be appropriated and the claim agents will get a large part of it and the young men will get the balance.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, there is no doubt that if there is a color or a pretext for getting money from the Treasury the claim agents will be on hand and will get their 30, or 40, or 50 per cent., and Congress at last will very likely be badgered and seduced into giving everybody everything that he wants. That is what we are for, but I should like to have somebody show me that decision, and I should like to have my friend, as he does not know where the decision is, tell me where the act of Congress is that has recognized the propriety of this claim, so that we can see that.

Mr. CHANDLER. I told the Senator that that was the act of August 9, 1888.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Have you a copy of it there?

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator has the laws at his desk.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Will the Senator from Vermont yield to me for a moment?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think we had better finish this just now.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I wish to make an explanation to him on this subject.

Mr. EDMUNDS. While my friend from New Hampshire is looking for the law we can go on with the debate just the same. Of course the most appropriate time to settle these private claims is on a deficiency bill. That we have agreed upon, and the Chair has ruled that the only really proper time to dispose of a private claim is in the next to the last day of the sitting of Congress and on a deficiency bill, because there is ample time then to consider each claim by itself carefully and act upon each claim independently and on its own merits.

Mr. BLAIR. I understood the ruling of the Chair would include the last day of the session as well as next to the last day. Was I not correct? The Senator intimated that the ruling of the Chair was for next to the last day of the session.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I only referred to the ruling of the Chair (which I suppose has been entirely correct) in a jocose way, and I beg pardon of the Chair if he understood it in any other sense. This is supposed to be the act of Congress:

That for the purpose of placing certain cadet-engineers (graduates) in their proper grade and rank in the Navy, the President of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, commission as assistant engineers in the Navy the cadet-engineers of the classes of 1881 and 1882 now in the Navy: Provided, That the commissions of the class of 1881 be dated from July 1, 1883—

Two years afterwards instead of two years backwards to rectify an injustice, as it is suggested!

and their names be placed on the Navy Register immediately after the name of William D. Weaver, and that they take precedence in their grade and corps according to their proficiency as shown by their order of merit at the date of graduation; and that the commissions of the class of 1882 be dated from July 1, 1884—

Two years afterwards—

and their names be placed on the Navy Register immediately after the name of Charles E. Rommell, and that they take precedence in their grade and corps according to their proficiency as shown by their order of merit at the date of graduation: Provided, That any of such cadet-engineers who failed to pass the physical examination at the Naval Academy made at the time of their graduation shall be subjected, etc.

Very likely I am wrong, as this is an appropriation bill—everybody is wrong who is against any amendment to it—but I do not see how this act of Congress has any tendency to prove that the United States owes these young gentlemen anything at all, and we have not here this supposed decision of the Supreme Court that we do owe them anything. Therefore it is, as my friend from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] very well said a few moments ago, that holding in reserve the question of what may be the ultimate merit of this thing it is not right to ride it on an appropriation bill at the end of a session when it can not be carefully considered and examined so that we may know all the facts about it and the considerations that led the Supreme Court to decide whatever question they did decide. We do not know precisely for what that decision was; we have not got it before us now. And so holding in reserve what may be the ultimate merit of this thing it does not appear to me that it is right to put it on this bill.

Mr. BROWN. I desire to make an inquiry of the Senator who has charge of this bill. Some of us have remained here about as long as we have the physical endurance to remain, and it is now about half after 2 o'clock, and I doubt if there is a quorum present. If it is not disagreeable to the Senator in charge of the bill, I will move to adjourn.

Mr. HALE. I appreciate the force of the appeal of the Senator from Georgia, and I appreciate the fact that the Senate has staid here very indulgently, because I think that everybody has felt that it is of great importance to close this bill to-night. The Indian appropriation bill has been reported and will come up in the morning, and if this bill goes over until morning no one can tell how long it will take then.

I will say to the Senator from Georgia that I am going to try to finish this bill to-night, and I hope this will be the last amendment that will be offered. If I find that others in any number come in that can not be kept off on points of order, I shall not ask Senators to stay, but I hope we shall finish the bill in the next fifteen minutes.

Mr. BROWN. You have not much of a margin now on a quorum.

Mr. HALE. No, but I hope we shall finish the bill in a few minutes.

Mr. BUTLER. Let us have a vote on the pending amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. I am not very familiar with the rules, and I desire to ask if it is not necessary that this amendment should have been reported from the Naval Committee and referred to the Committee on Appropriations?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It should have been referred one day before it is offered for consideration.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I make that point of order.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator not to make the point of order. The amendment was reported from the Naval Committee and was sent to the Committee on Appropriations. It is now half past 2 o'clock. It was sent there yesterday about the middle of the day and the twenty-four hours will soon be up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It must have been sent prior to the last adjournment, which marks the legislative day.

Mr. HOAR. I desire, with great respect, to call attention especially to the fact that the language of the rule, as I understand, is not "one day" beforehand, but twenty-four hours, making a distinction between the two.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The rule provides that—

All amendments to general appropriation bills moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, proposing to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add new items of appropriation, shall, at least one day before they are considered, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HALE. Now, I appeal to Senators to allow us to have a vote on the bill. The Senate has remained here very patiently.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have remained here patiently to get an amendment in.

Mr. HALE. I will make the point of order on it beforehand.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to say to the Chair that that which he read must have been a change by a later edition of the rules, for I looked at the rule within three days in relation to that very question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The last edition of the rules is the one by which the Chair is governed.

Mr. HOAR. Undoubtedly.

Mr. McPHERSON. Is the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire ruled out of order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MITCHELL. On page 5, after line 5, I move to insert:

For the purpose of reimbursing B. F. Bonham, United States consul-general at Calcutta, India, for transit pay for twenty days' unavoidable detention at San Francisco, by sickness, on his way from his home at Salem, Oregon, to his post of duty at Calcutta in December, 1885, $271.74.

Mr. HALE. That is a clear case of a private claim.

Mr. MITCHELL. He is entitled to this amount, and it is reported from a committee.

Mr. HALE. It is a private claim, whether reported from a committee or not, if anything is a private claim.

Mr. MITCHELL. I think it is rather late in the night to make that point now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has the proposed amendment been reported from any standing or select committee?

Mr. MITCHELL. This amendment was referred to the Committee on Commerce on the 10th day of January last, and was reported back from that committee favorably and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HALE. Notwithstanding that, is it not a clear case of a private claim, not offered, under the language of the rule, to carry out any "existing law or treaty stipulation?"

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to know the distinction between this claim and at least a baker's dozen of others that have been placed on the bill to-night?

Mr. EDMUNDS. This is small, and the others were big.

Mr. MITCHELL. That is a fact.

Mr. HALE. Clause 4 of Rule XVI provides that—

No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will state in addition that this amendment was put in the last appropriation bill by the same committee and adopted by the Senate, and given away or lost for some reason or other in conference.

Mr. HALE. It was not as late then as it is now, and I desire to get the bill through. If the Senator from Vermont would not call for the yeas and nays on it, I would not make the point of order, but I am constrained to do so after the appeal of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. MITCHELL. I submit to the President of the Senate whether the point of order is good as against this claim in view of the decisions to-night.

Mr. SPOONER. There has been a good deal said to-night about private claims and the impropriety of putting anything in this bill which is not strictly in its nature a deficiency. In this bill I find, as reported from the Committee on Appropriations, items which are neither deficiencies nor anything else, it seems to me, than private claims. Here is the case of Mrs. Hancock or the estate of General Hancock, and there are various other items of the same sort that are in no sense deficiencies.

Mr. HALE. I am doing the best I can to bring the bill to a close.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. TURPIE. I offer an amendment, to come in after line 10 on page 51.

Mr. HALE. I do not know what it is, but I shall raise the point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 51, after line 10, it is proposed to insert:

That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit Aquilla Jones, postmaster at Indianapolis, Ind., in the settlement of his accounts as such postmaster, with the sum of $2,438, being the amount of funds stolen from the money-order department of said office on the 31st of December, 1888.

Mr. TURPIE. That amendment was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and also referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. There is no printed report from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads in reference to it; but the chairman of that committee, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SAWYER], informed me this evening that it was reported back and recommended to be passed by that committee the day before yesterday, and the payment of this sum is recommended by the Postmaster-General. It represents the amount of a loss by theft last December in the post-office at Indianapolis. There is no dispute about the facts, but merely about the allowance. It is not a private claim at all.

Mr. HALE. It is purely a claim.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment does not appear to have been reported from any standing or select committee.

Mr. TURPIE. I asked the chairman of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and he said he did not have it reported to save the expense of reprinting it. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SAWYER] made this statement to me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. HALE. Now let us have a vote on the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further amendments to this bill?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, sir.

Mr. TURPIE. I move to add to the bill the following paragraph:

Soldiers and sailors who were honorably discharged from the military and naval service of the United States of the war of the rebellion and the widows and children of deceased soldiers and sailors shall be eligible to appointment, transfer, and promotion, subject only to such examination as may be prescribed by the heads of Departments, and without competitive examination.

Mr. HALE. That is general legislation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think it is special legislation instead of general.

Mr. TURPIE. What is the point of order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That it is general legislation, which can not be received upon an appropriation bill.

Mr. TURPIE. I move to add to the bill a new section, as follows:

SEC. —. For refunding the taxes erroneously collected, as set forth in Senate Executive Document No. 46, Fiftieth Congress, second session, transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury January 2, 1889, the sum of $14,515.01, or so much thereof as shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to have been paid by the firms therein named as tax on distilled spirits in excess of the quantity withdrawn from warehouse.

Mr. HALE. That is a claim, Mr. President.

Mr. TURPIE. It is a claim that is recommended for repayment by the officers of the Treasury.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is it estimated for by the head of a Department?

Mr. TURPIE. I do not think that it is.

Mr. HALE. No, sir; it is not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is it reported from any standing or select committee of the Senate?

Mr. HALE. No.

Mr. TURPIE. No, sir; it is not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the point of order should be sustained.

Mr. MITCHELL. After line 25, on page 48, I move to insert the following paragraph:

To Bartholomew Coffey, for services of farmer in charge of the Umatilla agency in Oregon, from August 6 to 26, 1886, both days inclusive, at the rate of $1,200 per annum, $68.47, and covered by the order of the Secretary of the Interior of July 7, 1887.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MITCHELL. I was requested this evening by a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Ohio, who called in expecting to find one of the Senators from that State in the Chamber, to offer an amendment. I move to insert, after line 17, on page 68:

EXHIBIT A.

To pay Mathew S. Priest $600 for services as engineer on the steamers Silver Wave and Moderator, in running the batteries at Vicksburg and Grand Gulf, Miss., in 1863, under the direction of General Grant.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. ALLISON. I make the point of order on that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the point of order must be sustained.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no amendment reserved for a separate vote, the question will be taken on agreeing in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole in gross.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I wish to reserve the Florida claim amendment.

Mr. WALTHALL. I wish to reserve for a separate vote the amendment for the benefit of Mr. POST, which was moved by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further amendment reserved, the question is on concurring in the remaining amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first reserved amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, agreed to add a new section, as follows:

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to PHILIP S. POST, out of any money not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,668.40, in reimbursement of expenses necessarily incurred in defense of his title to his seat as a member of the Fiftieth Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. DANIEL. Has this gentleman received the $2,000 that is allowed by the act of Congress in such cases?

Mr. SPOONER. I think so.

Mr. DANIEL. He got his seat and the $2,000 allowed by law. It is now proposed by the Senate to give him five thousand and some odd dollars for expenses in the contest for his seat.

Mr. President, I have just a word to say on this proposition. I have a great deal of sympathy with it. That is to say, if that gentleman spent this money in contesting his seat and if I were a member of the House I should feel disposed to vote for it, because I think the policy of the law is to give every one who contests a seat a full and fair allowance; but I think the House, which is the judge of the election and qualification of its members, ought to have control over the matter, and that it is not proper for the Senate in an altogether exceptional case, ignoring the great body of cases of the same nature (and I have personal knowledge of cases in which the same circumstances exist), to override a statute and a fixed policy of law, and to put a special case of this sort on the deficiency appropriation bill. Therefore I can not vote for it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate concur in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole?

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next reserved amendment will be read, or, if there be no objection, the question will be taken without reading it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We all understand the Florida case. I should like to have the yeas and nays, but I think under the circumstances I shall not ask for them, but only state, as it will go in the record, my belief that this claim ought not to go on this bill even if it be a good one, which I very much doubt. But I shall not call for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the reading of the amendment be not called for, the question is, Will the Senate concur in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole?

The amendment was concurred in, there being on a division—ayes 20, noes 19.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I present the conference report on the sundry civil appropriation bill. I shall not ask the Senate to consider it to-night, but I give notice that I shall call it up the first thing in the morning.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Shall it be printed?

Mr. ALLISON. I should be glad to have it printed between now and morning.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes, it must be printed. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. PALMER. Will the Senator from Iowa withhold his motion for a moment?

Mr. EDMUNDS. We can not do that now.

Mr. PALMER. It is a small matter and will not take a moment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It must wait until morning.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 52 minutes a. m., Saturday, March 2) the Senate adjourned until Saturday, March 2, 1889, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, March 1, 1889.

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. GLASS. To ask the consideration of a House bill.

The SPEAKER. That can not be done at this time. The rule of the House provides that after the reading of the Journal the Speaker shall call the names of members alphabetically until 11 o'clock. There is in the hands of the Chair a large number of House bills with Senate amendments, Senate bills, executive communications, and other papers which ought to be laid before the House at this time, or on this day, and, if there be no objection, the Chair will now proceed to lay them before the House.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, there is objection if it is outside of the rule of reference.

The SPEAKER. It is until after 11 o'clock. The Chair thinks that under the permanent rule of the House the Chair is bound to lay them before the House at some time to-day, and what the Chair was desirous of doing was to lay them before the House before 11 o'clock, if there was no objection.

Mr. RANDALL. I am willing to have them laid before the House for reference under the rule; or, if concurrent action be involved, I do not object; but I do not want the hour until 11 o'clock interfered with in this way.

The SPEAKER. From an examination of the special rule made recently by the House, requiring the Chair, immediately after the reading of the Journal, to call the names of members alphabetically until 11 o'clock, the Chair is under the impression that he can not lay these matters before the House until after that hour, except by consent; because the rule says that the Chair shall, after the reading of the Journal, proceed to call the names of members alphabetically; and it then goes on to provide that unanimous consent may be obtained at other times to concur or non-concur in Senate amendments to House bills, or to consider Senate bills when laid before the House by the Chair; which seems to proceed upon the idea that the Chair must lay them before the House at some other time.

Mr. RANDALL. I have no objection at all to the references.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will reserve them until that time, and will then lay them before the House for reference.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT WINONA, MINN.

The SPEAKER. The call rests with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ALLEN]. The bill called up by him—the bill (S. 2455) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Winona, Minn.—was under consideration, and the question was on ordering it to a third reading.

Mr. BLAND. This, I believe, is the bill on which the call rested yesterday and on which I had the report read.

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. BLAND. While I do not know that there is any more merit in this bill than in others which have been passed by the House, especially one that passed yesterday by the vote of a quorum, and while I want to enter my protest against the passage of bills of this character, I presume this will go through as others have done; I am in hopes, however, that this may be the last one called up [laughter], and in order that business of a less objectionable character may be reached, and trusting that this is the last raid on the public Treasury in the way of public-building bills, I propose to give the House an opportunity to consider and pass this bill if it so desires.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ST. LOUIS AND SAN FRANCISCO RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi (when his name was called). I ask unanimous consent to call up and put on its passage the bill (S. 1697) to grant right of way through the Indian Territory to the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company for the purpose of constructing a railway, and for other purposes.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. PERKINS (before the reading of the bill was concluded). Mr. Speaker, this bill contains all the provisions which have been incorporated in bills of like character which have received the consideration of the House. This bill has passed the Senate and been examined by the Committee on Indian Affairs. I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. CHEADLE. I object.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. BYNUM. I object.

COMMERCIAL UNION WITH CANADA.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa (when his name was called). I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 129) to promote commercial union with Canada.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, etc., That whenever it shall be duly certified to the President of the United States that the Government of the Dominion of Canada has declared a desire to establish commercial union with the United States, having a uniform revenue system, like internal taxes to be collected, and like import duties to be imposed on articles brought into either country from other nations, with no duties upon trade between the United States and Canada, he shall appoint three commissioners to meet those who may be likewise designated to represent the Government of Canada, to prepare a plan for the assimilation of the import duties and internal-revenue taxes of the two countries, and an equitable division of receipts, in a commercial union; and said commissioners shall report to the President, who shall lay the report before Congress.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SPRINGER). The question is on ordering this joint resolution to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. BLAND. This resolution is up for consideration, I believe.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.

Mr. BLAND. I think we had better have the report read or some explanation made. This is a very important matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The Clerk proceeded to read the report (by Mr. HITT), which is as follows:

Our commercial relations with Canada have recently awakened a deeper interest and received a more thorough discussion than ever before, on both sides of the border. The tendency of public opinion is plainly towards the enlargement of trade between the two countries. In Canada the movement has advanced from what was a few years ago an effort for partial reciprocity, to a wide expression in favor of unrestricted intercourse and commercial union. The evidence of this fact is abundant.

The Right Honorable Joseph Chamberlain, high commissioner from Her Majesty's Government, is reported to have recently stated in a speech:

"The arrangement between the colonies and Great Britain is essentially a temporary one. It can not remain as it is. * * * Already you have in Canada, the greatest of all the colonies, an agitation for what is called commercial union with the United States. Commercial union with the United States means unrestricted trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada and a protective tariff against the mother country. If Canada desires that Canada can have it."

And speaking of the relation of Canada to the United States and Great Britain on a subsequent occasion the right honorable gentleman further said that—

"Commercial union with the United States meant that Canada was to give preference to every article of manufacture from the United States over manufactures from Great Britain. If the people of Canada desired an arrangement of that kind he did not doubt that they would be able to secure it."

Within a few weeks a conference was held at Quebec of the prime ministers of all the provinces constituting the Dominion of Canada, and after a very full exchange of views these representatives of the executive powers of all portions of the Dominion unanimously adopted the following declaration:

"This conference, comprising all political parties, is of the opinion that a fair measure, provided under proper conditions, for unrestricted trade relations between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, would be of advantage to all the provinces of the Dominion, and would, in connection with an adjustment of the fishery dispute, tend to happily settle the grave difficulties which have from time to time arisen between Great Britain and the United States."

The chambers of commerce and boards of trade of the leading cities of Canada and more than fifty farmers' institutes and conventions have adopted resolutions declaring in favor of commercial union or unrestricted trade between the two countries.

The answer made by their opponents and those most closely attached to English trade and English rule has been that the United States has given no indication that it would receive or even consider any proposal, however friendly in spirit or however favorable to us in its terms it might be.

The joint resolution now submitted does not contemplate any action on our part at present; but whenever the Dominion of Canada shall have declared a desire for commercial union, with a common tariff, like internal-revenue taxes, like duties on articles imported into either country from abroad, and no duties on trade between the United States and Canada, then the President is authorized to appoint three commissioners to meet those who may be designated to represent Canada, in order to prepare a plan for commercial union, by assimilating the tariffs and internal-revenue taxes of the two countries, now not very widely different, and an equitable method of dividing the receipts, which they shall report to the President, who shall lay it before Congress. The whole subject of our relations with Canada is kept under the control of Congress.

It is not deemed necessary to here discuss the great merits of commercial union or the details of arrangement that will be necessary. Your committee believe that the power herein conferred upon the President can do no harm, that it will be wisely used, and will lead to beneficent results, promoting the independence, prosperity, and peace of two great peoples.

The committee therefore recommend the adoption of the joint resolution.

Mr. BLAND (before the reading of the report was concluded). Mr. Speaker, unless some other gentleman desires the further reading of the report, I do not ask that the reading be continued, as I now understand the nature of the proposition.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. HITT. I ask consent of the House that members have leave to print remarks on the resolution just passed, which is one I introduced last March, and which I thank the gentleman for calling up.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection that leave will be granted.

Mr. BYNUM. I hope there will be general leave.

Mr. JACKSON. Yes, I trust such leave will be given. It is in the interest of public business that we should not consume time in discussion now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, general leave to print on the joint resolution just passed will be granted. The Chair hears no objection.

JULIA A. THOMAS, ADMINISTRATRIX.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi (when his name was called). I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution reported from the Committee on War Claims in reference to the claim of Julia A. Thomas, administratrix.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the claim of Julia A. Thomas, administratrix of the estate of I. S. O. G. Greer, deceased, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims under section 14 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1887, to be there proceeded in and reported on as required by said act.

Mr. BLAND. Reserving the right to object, I call for the reading of the report on this matter. I desire to know what this claim is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is of opinion that this claim may be referred to the Court of Claims by the committee without any action of the House.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. No, sir; section 14 of the act of March 3, 1887, requires action by the House in a case of this kind.

Mr. NELSON. This is not a reference under the Bowman act, as it is called; the object is to authorize a regular suit and judgment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then this is under the Tucker act—a subsequent act.

Mr. NELSON. It is under the general law allowing a suit to be commenced and judgment entered in regular form—an entirely different matter from a proceeding under the Bowman act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then the Chair is of opinion that this should be a joint resolution.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. No, sir; section 14 of the act of March 3, 1887, provides that either the House or the Senate may by resolution refer a matter of this kind to the court. It is a case where the party failed to present the claim to the Southern Claims Commission in time. Affidavit is made that the claim was sent to an attorney for presentation, but through his neglect it was not presented. The proof is embraced in the report. The present request is that this claim be referred to the Court of Claims. It is owing to no fault of the claimant that the matter did not go through before, and it is only by the action of the House that the claim can be referred.

Mr. RANDALL. What is the amount involved?

Mr. BLAND. We had better have the report read, or have some explanation.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. I can tell the gentleman in a moment——

Mr. RANDALL. Is this a House resolution?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The fourteenth section of the act approved March 3, 1887, covers this case, which may be referred through the House; and the question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. BLAND. I demand the reading of the resolution, or some explanation of it.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. This claim is for supplies taken by the Federal Army, and comes strictly within the provisions of the Bowman act. It should have been referred to the Southern Claims Commission, because otherwise the Court of Claims would have no jurisdiction; but the beneficiary makes affidavit that she sought through an attorney to bring it before the Court of Claims, but by neglect it was not done until too late. She asks now only to be allowed to go to the Court of Claims. It has been done several times by the House in similar cases.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I understood that the reading of the report was demanded. Now, we have not been able to hear a word that was said here as to the character of this claim.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. I hope the report will be read.

The report (by Mr. STOCKDALE) was read, as follows:

This claim was transmitted by this committee to the Court of Claims on the 10th of February, 1888, and was by that court dismissed for want of jurisdiction, on the ground that the claim did not appear ever to have been submitted to the Southern Claims Commission.

The following affidavits, submitted to your committee since the receipt of the report of the Court of Claims, show that the claimant forwarded her petition and proofs in time for the presentation of the claim to the commission, and its failure to appear on the dockets of the commission can be ascribed only to the misfeasance or negligence of the attorney to whom the petition and proofs were so transmitted:

"THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, County of Scott:

"On this the 4th day of January, 1888, personally appeared before me, the undersigned, clerk of the chancery court in and for said county, Mrs. Julia A.

Thomas, well known to me as a lady of high character and standing in this community, who, after being duly sworn by me as the law directs, upon her oath declares that she is the identical Julia A. Thomas who forwarded to one T. W. Jordan, an attorney and claim agent in Washington, D. C., a certain petition containing an itemized list of a large amount of stores, stock, and army supplies which her husband furnished the United States Army within the month of February, 1864; that said petition and account was made, executed, and attested in accordance with the law, and the testimony of a large number of eye-witnesses taken before a special commissioner of the Southern Claims Commission, then in Washington, D. C., on the 18th day of May, A. D. 1872. She further declares that with said petition, account, and proofs as to the loyalty of her husband, I. S. O. G. Greer, and herself, also abundant evidence of the furnishing of said property, stock, and army supplies to Quartermasters Warner and Williams, of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Army Corps, she sent by the United States mail all of said papers, with the postage prepaid, to the said T. W. Jordan, in Washington, D. C. She further declares that at the same time, but in a different package, with the postage prepaid, she sent to said T. W. Jordan the receipts of the said Quartermasters Warner and Williams, of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Army Corps; also, a letter of General S. A. Hurlbut, who was then a guest at the house of her husband, the said I. S. O. G. Greer; also, sundry papers and permits from General B. F. Butler while commanding in New Orleans. That long before and up to the beginning of the war, and for a few days after the secession of Alabama, her husband, the said Greer, was engaged in the business of cotton factor and commission merchant in the city of Mobile, but, being outspoken as a friend to the Union, he abandoned that avocation and came to his home in the town of Meridian, Miss., near which place he also had extensive farming interests, together with a large amount of live-stock and a large supply of groceries, which he had provided in anticipation of the rebellion.

"She further declares that she never knew that her claim had not been presented to the Commissioners of Southern Claims until after said commission had expired by limitation of the law of March 3, 1871, as passed by the United States Congress for the benefit of loyal citizens in States lately in insurrection.

"JULIA A. THOMAS.

"NOTE.—This claim referred to in the affidavit was presented to Congress in 1881, and a large amount of additional evidence filed with it, both as to the loyalty of I. S. O. G. Greer and Julia A. Thomas, and also to the merits of the case.

"Sworn to and subscribed before me on this the 4th day of January, 1888, and I certify that Mrs. Thomas (Julia A.) came before me in person and read over and commented upon the above and foregoing affidavit before she swore to and subscribed the same.

"Given under my hand and seal this the date above written.

"[SEAL.] N. T. LILES,

"Clerk of the Chancery Court, Scott County, Mississippi.

"THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, County of Scott:

"On this the 6th day of January, 1888, personally appeared before me, the undersigned, clerk of the chancery court in and for said county, Josiah Thomas, also well known to me as being a gentleman of unimpeachable veracity, and who, after being duly sworn as the law requires, upon his oath says: That he has read over the affidavit of Mrs. Julia A. Thomas referring to the execution and forwarding certain papers in the claim of said Mrs. Julia A. Thomas against the United States Government for property, stock, and army supplies furnished the United States Army in 1864, in the month of February, at Meridian, Miss., and that he knows the statements contained in said affidavit to be true; that he was an eye-witness to the taking of the testimony and the execution and forwarding said petition, account, proofs of loyalty and merits, together with vouchers given by Quartermasters Warner and Williams, of Sixteenth and Seventeenth Army Corps, also a letter of General Hurlbut and several permits, passes, etc., given said I. S. O. G. Greer by General B. F. Butler, through the United States mail, and addressed to T. W. Jordan, attorney and claim agent, Washington, D. C., on the 20th day of May, A. D. 1872. He further says that he has no interest whatever in any way in the prosecution or proceeds of the claim of Mrs. Julia A. Thomas.

"JOSIAH THOMAS.

"Sworn to and subscribed before me this the 6th day of January, 1888, and I certify that the foregoing affidavit was read over and commented upon by affiant before swearing and signing. I further certify that I have no interest, neither direct nor indirect, in the prosecution or proceeds of the claim of Mrs, Julia A. Thomas.

"Given under my hand and seal this the date above written.

"[SEAL.] N. T. LILES,

"Clerk of the Chancery Court, Scott County, Mississippi."

In view of the fact that the proper presentation of the claim in the Southern Claims Commission is thus shown by good prima facie evidence to have been due to no fault or negligence on the part of the claimant herself, your committee think that she ought to have the opportunity to establish her claim, and for that purpose your committee report herewith a resolution referring the claim to the Court of Claims, under section 14 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1887, 24 Statutes at Large, page 505, and recommend the passage of said resolution.

Mr. KERR. What evidence has the gentleman to show that this was ever transmitted to the Southern Claims Commission?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. The affidavit of the party herself, and the evidence is satisfactory to the committee that an effort was made to bring it before the commission, but through neglect of an attorney it was not presented in time.

Mr. BLAND. I called for an explanation of the origin of the claim; for what purpose it was presented.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. It was for supplies.

Mr. BLAND. I understood the gentleman to say it was for supplies, but what supplies, when taken, and under what circumstances?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. It was for provisions, corn, stock, and things of that character, taken by the Federal Army. It is one of the usual war claims, and the reference to the Court of Claims is for the purpose of acertaining exactly whether the supplies were actually taken and whether the parties are entitled to compensation.

Mr. BLAND. I have no objection.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi, moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CLAIMS OF ILLINOIS.

The name of Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois, was called.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I ask consideration of the bill (H. R. 8028) to authorize the State of Illinois to commence and prosecute suits against the United States in the Supreme Court of the United States.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. The hour of 11 o'clock having arrived, the time for the consideration of bills by unanimous consent has expired; but the request of the gentleman from Illinois will be pending in the next hour when this character of business is reached.

Mr. KERR. I move to amend this bill——

The SPEAKER. It is not before the House now.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will proceed to lay before the House Senate bills, and also House bills with Senate amendments.

VENEZUELA STEAM TRANSPORTATION COMPANY.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the joint resolution (S. R. 83) for the relief of the Venezuela Steam Transportation Company.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I ask by unanimous consent that this resolution be reported. It will provoke no discussion I am sure, and it is of great importance to the dignity of the United States that action should be taken upon it.

Mr. BLAND. I think this had better be read and let us know what it is.

Mr. HOLMES. I object if there is to be any discussion.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Then I ask that the bill be withheld for the present.

FRAUDULENT USE OF THE MAILS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9268) to punish dealers and pretended dealers in counterfeit money and other fraudulent devices for using the United States mails.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Speaker, that was the bill pending on yesterday morning, to which I had called the attention of the House and asked unanimous consent for action upon it, but objection was made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RANDALL. If this does not occasion any debate I will not object.

Mr. ENLOE. I do not care to discuss it at all. The bill has already been read.

Several MEMBERS. Let us have it read.

Mr. ENLOE. The demand for the reading of the bill will defeat it at this time, and I will request unanimous consent that the Senate amendments be non-concurred in and the request of the Senate for a conference agreed to.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER appointed Mr. SENEY, Mr. ENLOE, and Mr. CASWELL managers at the conference on the part of the House.

PUBLIC LANDS, LOUISIANA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9423) to restore to the public domain and to regulate the sale and disposition of certain lands east of the Mississippi River, in the State of Louisiana.

Mr. GAY. Mr. Speaker, the amendments to this bill have already been read, and I ask unanimous consent now that the action which I have sought heretofore to have taken on the bill may be agreed to. Is it necessary that these amendments should be again reported?

The SPEAKER. Not unless their reading shall be demanded by some member.

Mr. GAY. I move concurrence in the Senate amendments.

Mr. HOLMAN. The only point of disagreement between the two Houses on this subject was as to the right of the State of Louisiana to claim lands under the swamp-land act in lieu of the lands provided for in the bill. That has not been before the Committee on the Public Lands—that amendment of the Senate—but the reservation made by the House is not of special importance, and I do not insist upon it.

Mr. WEAVER. How much land does it cover?

Mr. JACKSON. Let the amendments be read.

Mr. McRAE. It grants no land at all.

Mr. RANDALL. I have no objection to the reading of the bill, but I object to discussion upon it.

The SPEAKER. The amendments will be read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendments.

Mr. JACKSON. I withdraw further request for the reading of the amendments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana to concur in the Senate amendments?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

GULF AND CHICAGO AIR-LINE RAILROAD BRIDGES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following House bill with Senate amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5509) to grant to the Gulf and Chicago Air-Line Railway Company the right to construct bridges over navigable water courses.

Mr. CRISP. I ask, by unanimous consent, to concur in the Senate amendments. They are of a character usually made in these bridge bills, and are formal matters.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT LYONS, IOWA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following House bill with Senate amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 12489) to authorize the construction of a wagon and foot passenger bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Lyons, Iowa.

Mr. CRISP. I ask that the House concur in the amendments to that bill. They are of the same character as in the last bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senate amendments are agreed to.

BRIDGE BILLS WITH SENATE AMENDMENTS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has on his table a number of House bills with Senate amendments authorizing the construction of bridges. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] states that he has examined them, and if there be no objection the Chair will lay them all before the House and gentlemen can make such requests as they think proper.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11735) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Fort Smith and Choctaw Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Poteau River, in the Choctaw Nation, near Fort Smith, Ark.;"

A bill (H. R. 12389) authorizing the construction across the Osage River at some accessible point in the county of Benton, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (H. R. 12524) to authorize the construction of bridges over Green and Barren Rivers, in the State of Kentucky, by the Henderson State Line Railroad Company;

A bill (H. R. 10721) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River at or near Cummings Landing, Lincoln County, Arkansas;

A bill (H. R. 11782) to approve and ratify the construction by the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company of the bridge over the Red River at Shreveport, La., and the bridge over the Ouachita River, at Monroe, La., and to authorize said railroad company to maintain said bridges over said water ways, subject to certain stipulations and conditions;

A bill (H. R. 10319) to authorize the Natchitoches Railroad Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Red River, in Louisiana; and

A bill (H. R. 11573) to authorize the construction of bridges across the Kentucky River.

The SPEAKER. All these bills have Senate amendments.

Mr. CRISP. I ask, by unanimous consent, to concur in the Senate amendments. They are formal in their character. In one or two of them there was some usual provision left out in the House bill. They all look to the protection of the navigation of rivers.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia to concur in the Senate amendments? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH SHOSHONE INDIAN RESERVATION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 10028) granting to the Wyoming Midland Railway Company the right of way through the Wind River or Shoshone Indian reservation, with Senate amendments.

Mr. CAREY. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. PERKINS. I think that bill had better go to the committee.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

LIGHT-HOUSE AT OTTER CREEK, LAKE CHAMPLAIN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 5716) for establishing a light-house at the mouth of Otter Creek, Lake Champlain, with Senate amendments.

Mr. CRISP. Is a conference asked?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. CRISP. Then I ask by unanimous consent to non-concur in the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference requested.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

UNITED PEORIAS AND MIAMIES IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 11634) to provide for the allotment of land in severalty to the United Peorias and Miamies, in Indian Territory, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments.

Mr. PEEL. I ask by unanimous consent to non-concur in the Senate amendments and agree to the conference requested.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER subsequently appointed as conferees Mr. PEEL, Mr. SHIVELY, and Mr. PERKINS.

SALE OF INDIAN LANDS IN MONTANA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 7777) to provide for the sale of lands patented to certain members of the Flathead band of Indians in Montana Territory, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments.

Mr. TOOLE. I ask unanimous consent to agree to the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

FORT DODGE MILITARY RESERVATION, KANSAS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8740) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell to the Methodist College Association of Southwestern Kansas certain lands in Kansas, with Senate amendments.

Mr. PETERS. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. HOLMAN. Let the amendments be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out after the word "to," where it occurs the second time in line 4, down to and including the words "herein set forth," in line 17, and insert the following:

"The State of Kansas the following-described lands, being the remaining portion of the Fort Dodge military reservation in said State, to wit: Lots numbered 3, 5, 6, and 7 of section 3, township 27 south, of range 24 west, on condition that said State shall, within twelve months from the passage of this act, pay or cause to be paid therefor the sum of $1.25 per acre, and shall within three years establish and provide for the maintenance thereon a home in which provision shall be made for the care and maintenance of officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines who have served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States, their dependent parents, widows, or orphans, under such rules and regulations as said State may provide."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS].

Mr. HOLMAN. The bill as it passed the House provided for the sale of this land to the Methodist University. The Senate has amended it so as to sell it to the State of Kansas for the founding of a soldiers' home, as I understand. The amendment of the Senate has not been considered by the House Committee on Public Lands; but I will not oppose the passage of the bill.

Mr. TRACEY. I object.

Mr. PETERS. Then I ask that reference of the bill be withheld by the Speaker.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection it will be withheld.

Mr. PETERS. The gentleman from New York [Mr. TRACEY] now withdraws his objection, and I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas asks to concur in the Senate amendments. If there be no objection that order will be made.

There was no objection.

POLICE FORCE OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 6677) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the police force of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 31, 1883.

The SPEAKER. The House concurred in the Senate amendments to this bill, but afterwards, upon motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE], reconsidered its action and recalled the bill from the Senate.

Mr. RANDALL. I ask that it be referred.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire whether that bill will have privilege if it is reported back from the Committee on the District of Columbia?

The SPEAKER. It will not.

NICHOLAS J. BIGLEY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3074) for the relief of Nicholas J. Bigley.

Mr. HOLMAN. I object to the consideration of that bill.

The SPEAKER. It will be referred to the Committee on War Claims.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, VIRGINIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 515) for the relief of the trustees of the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary and High School, in Virginia.

Mr. WISE. I ask unanimous consent that that bill be now considered and put on its passage.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill, after which the Chair will ask for objections.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $20,000, to be paid to the trustees of the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary and High School, in Virginia, that amount having been found due them by the Court of Claims.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the report of the Court of Claims will be read.

Mr. WISE. I will say to the gentleman from Indiana that this bill has been already discussed and considered and passed by the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. When?

Mr. WISE. More than two months ago.

Mr. HOLMAN. How does it happen, then, that the Senate has passed this bill?

Mr. WISE. I suppose the bill was pending in both Houses.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, if a bill has passed the House in the same terms as this one of course I ought not to object.

Mr. WISE. It has passed the House.

Mr. DORSEY. Of course it has passed the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. In the same terms?

Mr. WISE. Yes, sir.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WISE moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MILITARY RESERVATION, FORT LEAVENWORTH, KANS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3653) to authorize the sale of a tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask unanimous consent that that bill be now considered.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I reserve the right to object.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask unanimous consent to amend by striking out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and inserting the language of the bill on the same subject which has been reported by the House Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER. The bill must be read before the Chair can ascertain whether there is consent to consider it.

The Clerk read the bill.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask to have the House bill read.

The House bill (H. R. 12655) was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to lease to the Leavenworth City and Fort Leavenworth Water Company the following-described tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas: Beginning at the northwest corner of the 20-acre tract of land formerly in said military reservation granted to the Leavenworth Coal Company by the act of Congress approved July 20, 1868; thence north in extension of the west line of said 20-acre tract 500 feet; thence east parallel to the north line of said 20-acre tract 820 feet, more or less, to the railroad right of way; thence southerly on the west line of said right of way 503 feet, more or less, to the north line of the said 20-acre tract; thence west on the said north line to the place of beginning, containing 9¼ acres, more or less, reserving to the United States or assigns the coal, or royalty for the coal, underlying said lands, for the purpose of constructing and maintaining thereon a reservoir and such other works as may be necessary to enable said company to supply the troops at Fort Leavenworth and its other patrons with pure water: Provided, That the company shall have the free and uninterrupted use of said tract of land for the purposes above named, under the direction and control of the Secretary of War, so long as it is so used, and that when they cease to occupy and use it for such purposes the lease shall be null and void.

SEC. 2. That the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the sale of a tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas," approved the 6th day of June, A. D. 1888, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 3. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Mr. HOLMAN. Retaining the right to object, I shall be glad to hear a statement as to the merits of this bill.

Mr. CUTCHEON. This bill simply authorizes the leasing of the property instead of its sale. In June last we passed the act referred to in the second section, authorizing the purchase of this tract by the water company.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, if this leads to debate I shall object.

Mr. CUTCHEON. As I have said, the House bill simply provides for the leasing, instead of the sale, of the land.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas for the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MORRILL] asks unanimous consent to amend the Senate bill by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the language of the bill of the House just read. If there be no objection, that will be done, and the Senate bill will be ordered to a third reading.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The Senate bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MORRILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The title will be amended so as to authorize a lease instead of a sale of this tract of land.

LAND DISTRICTS IN NEBRASKA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3870) to establish two additional land districts in the State of Nebraska.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask by unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill.

Mr. BLAND. Let us have the report read.

Mr. RANDALL. Oh, no; let that bill go to the committee.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask that the bill be retained on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Chair will withhold the bill for the present.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ALLENTOWN, PA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3381) for the erection of a public building at Allentown, Pa.

Mr. BLAND. I call for the reading of the report in this case.

The SPEAKER. No request has thus far been made in regard to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SOWDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask the immediate consideration of this bill. A House bill similar in its terms has been favorably reported.

Mr. BLAND. Reserving the right to object, I call for the reading of the report.

Mr. COX. Is this the bill that was vetoed?

Mr. BLAND. I understand that this is a bill which has been vetoed.

Mr. SOWDEN. This bill is in different form from the one which was vetoed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] asks that the report be read.

The report was read.

Mr. BLAND. I view of the fact that this bill seems to have been framed so as to obviate the objections presented in the veto, I do not object to it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BLANCHARD. What is the bill?

Mr. RANDALL. It is for a public building at Allentown, Pa.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I think it had better be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] objects to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. SOWDEN. I ask that it be retained on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. If there is no objection, the Chair will retain the bill for the present.

RIGHT OF WAY TO DULUTH AND WINNEPEG RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2918) granting to the Duluth and Winnepeg Railway Company the right of way through the Leech Lake and White Earth Indian reservations, in the State of Minnesota.

Mr. NELSON. This bill meets the approval of the Committee on Indian Affairs. It merely grants right of way through a reservation which is in my district. I ask, by unanimous consent, for the immediate consideration of the bill.

Mr. CHEADLE. Let the bill be read.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I hope the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] will not insist on that, but let the bill go through at once.

Mr. NELSON. It is in the usual form, and there is no necessity that it should be read.

By unanimous consent, the reading of the bill was dispensed with; and the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. NELSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE TALLAPOOSA RIVER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3995) to authorize the Montgomery and Sylacauga Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Tallapoosa River.

Mr. CRISP. This is a Senate bill authorizing the construction of a bridge over a navigable stream. It contains all the provisions necessary for the protection of navigation; and I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered now without reading and passed.

There being no objection, the reading of the bill was dispensed with, and the House proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CRISP moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM B. THAYER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2001) for the relief of George F. Roberts, administrator of the estate of William B. Thayer, deceased, surviving partner of Thayer Brothers, and others.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that this bill remain on the Speaker's table for the present.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Chair will withhold the bill.

FOREST CITY AND WATERTOWN RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2029) granting the right of way to the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company through the Sioux Indian reservation.

Mr. GIFFORD. I ask, by unanimous consent, for the present consideration of this bill. It meets the approval of the Indian Committee of the House as well as the Senate.

Mr. MILLS. It grants nothing but right of way; there wil be no discussion in regard to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the bill be read.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Clerk will omit the reading of the merely descriptive part of the bill, and will read only the substantial part.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER (before the reading was concluded). This bill appears to be in the usual form.

Mr. HOLMAN. I only ask the reading of the third section.

The third section was read.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MACDONALD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

COMPENSATION FOR RIGHT OF WAY TO RAILROADS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2805) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to fix the amount of compensation to be paid for the right for railroads through Indian reservations in certain contingencies; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

JAMESTOWN AND NORTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 1228) granting right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railroad Company through the Devil's Lake Indian reservation, in the Territory of Dakota; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

HAMPTON AND OLD POINT RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2828) granting right of way and other privileges to the Hampton and Old Point Railway Company.

Mr. BOWDEN. I ask, by unanimous consent, that this bill be now considered. A bill in similar terms has twice been unanimously reported by the Committee on Military Affairs. This will lead to no discussion.

The bill was read.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I did not understand from the reading of the bill whether it contains any provision with reference to the prior grant to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company. It was stated in the committee that the other bill conflicted with a previous grant.

Mr. BOWDEN. There is no reference to that in this bill. This is in the exact terms of the bill reported by the committee.

The SPEAKER. There is nothing in the bill in regard to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad.

Mr. BOWDEN. This bill is for the construction of a street railroad, and it is in the same terms as the bill reported from the gentleman's committee.

Mr. SPRINGER. I think the bill ought to be amended by striking out "ten cents" and inserting "five cents" as the limit of fare to be charged over this road. It seems to me that 10 cents is a very high rate.

Mr. BOWDEN. It was not considered too high by the committee which unanimously reported the bill containing this rate.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BOWDEN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House joint resolution (S. R. 142) to print 20,000 copies of the special report of the Commissioner of Labor on the statistics of and relative to marriage and divorce; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

INAUGURAL ADDRESSES OF PRESIDENTS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House joint resolution (S. R. 141) to print 10,000 copies of a compilation of the inaugural addresses of the Presidents of the United States, from George Washington to Benjamin Harrison, inclusive, for the first century of Presidential inaugurations, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

ADDITIONAL ASSOCIATE JUSTICE, SUPREME COURT, IDAHO.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3419) providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Idaho, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be referred to the Committee on the Territories and ordered to be printed.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. Speaker, a similar bill has been reported unanimously in this House, and I ask that this bill be put upon its passage.

Mr. SPRINGER. This bill should pass, and unless it is passed now it will fail.

Mr. DUBOIS. The Attorney-General has written a letter in favor of the passage of this bill.

Mr. SCOTT. I object to that bill on the ground that confirmations are now hung up in the Senate.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope the bill will be allowed to remain on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be retained on the Speaker's table.

WARREN HALL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 902) for the relief of Warren Hall; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. HOLMAN. I trust there will be no objection to the passage of that bill. It is in favor of a colored man whose case has been before this House for many years.

Mr TOWNSHEND. Let the bill be read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Court of Claims is hereby given original jurisdiction to hear and adjudicate according to justice and right the case of Warren Hall, as originally tried and reported in the ninth Court of Claims Reports, page 170, and known as "Hall and Roche's case," notwithstanding the former trial; and the bar of limitation is hereby removed. And for this purpose the court shall hear and consider the new testimony and any other proper testimony which may be offered at the trial by the claimant or on the part of the defendant Government; and the testimony considered by the court in the original trial, so far as the same may be applicable to the new trial, shall also be available.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask to submit a single word.

Mr. RANDALL. I object to debate.

Mr. BAYNE. Let it go to the committee.

Mr. HOLMAN. A single word on the bill. I think a colored man is entitled to a fair hearing. [Great laughter.]

Mr. WEAVER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania thought he was a white man. [Renewed laughter.]

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the question will be put on the passage of the bill.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Regular order.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I thought the gentleman merely objected to debate.

Mr. RANDALL. I objected to debate.

Mr. HOLMAN. Only one word.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I object, and shall object to every other bill. [Cries of "Order!"]

Mr. HOLMAN. Let it remain on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. It will be so retained.

ABSENTEE SHAWNEE INDIAN LANDS, KANSAS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2407) to authorize the conveyance of certain Absentee Shawnee Indian lands in Kansas; which was read a first and second time. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. PERKINS. I ask that that bill be allowed to remain on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. It will be so retained.

BRIDGE ACROSS ILLINOIS RIVER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3951) to establish a railway bridge across the Illinois River extending from a point within 5 miles of Columbiana, in Greene County, to a point within 5 miles of Kampsville, in Calhoun County, in the State of Illinois; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I ask, by unanimous consent, that that bill be considered.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I object.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Let it remain on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. It will be so retained, there being no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE EASTERN BRANCH.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3900) to authorize the Secretary of War to make a survey, plan, and estimate of the cost of constructing a bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River, in the District of Columbia; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. RANDALL. Let it go to the District Committee.

The bill was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT RED WING, MINN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3923) to authorize the Duluth, Red Wing and Southern Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near the city of Red Wing, in the State of Minnesota, and to establish it as a post-road; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. MACDONALD. I ask, by unanimous consent, that that bill be considered at the present time. The chairman of the Committee on Commerce approves of it.

The SPEAKER. Is the reading of the bill dispensed with?

Mr. MACDONALD. I move that the reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. LYNCH. I object.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. MACDONALD. I thought objection was made only to the reading of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman object to the reading of the bill, or to its consideration?

Mr. LYNCH. To its consideration.

Mr. MACDONALD. I ask that the bill be retained on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. It will be so retained.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH INDIAN TERRITORY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3721) granting the right of way to the Cherokee Central Railway Company through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask unanimous consent that that bill be also retained upon the Speaker's table.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

MIDLAND RAILROAD COMPANY, ARKANSAS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3728) authorizing the Midland Railroad Company to build a bridge over White River, at Aberdeen, Ark.; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. CRISP. Does the demand for the regular order cut off requests for unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman from Arkansas as objecting to the particular bill.

Mr. CRISP. Then I ask unanimous consent that this Senate bill be considered. I have the bill before me, and it is in the usual form.

Mr. LYNCH and Mr. CHIPMAN demanded the regular order.

Mr. CRISP. Then I ask unanimous consent that it retain its place upon the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

APPOINTMENT OF SENATE CONFEREES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an order of the Senate excusing Mr. PLUMB and Mr. PADDOCK as conferees on the part of the Senate on the bill (S. 2511) to provide for the disposal of certain public lands of the United States under the provisions of the homestead law only, and appointing Mr. DOLPH and Mr. BERRY as conferees in their place.

RETURN OF BILLS TO THE SENATE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an order of the Senate of February 28, requesting the return of the bill (S. 283) to amend sections 2724 and 2725 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, setting apart a certain tract of land lying near the headwaters of the Yellowstone River as a public park.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the Clerk will be directed to return the bill to the Senate.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an order of the Senate of February 28, requesting the House to return to the Senate the bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Without objection this request will also be complied with.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the gentleman from Pennsylvania withdraws his objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia in regard to the Arkansas bridge bill.

The SPEAKER. But several gentlemen demanded the regular order, as the Chair understands; and the Chair is proceeding, for the present, to lay before the House some concurrent resolutions of the Senate.

REPORT ON INDIAN EDUCATION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a concurrent resolution of the Senate providing for the printing of 5,000 copies of the report on Indian education and civilization, by Allen C. Fletcher; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

REPORT OF COMMISSIONER OF FISH AND FISHERIES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a concurrent resolution of the Senate providing for the printing of the report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the year 1887.

Mr. RANDALL. Let that also go to the Committee on Printing. They have the privilege of reporting at any time.

Mr. DUNN. I hope the gentleman will allow that to be taken up and considered. It is quite an important matter.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Besides, the committee would not have the privilege of reporting upon that matter.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not know that it ought to pass anyhow. Let it go to the committee.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Printing.

TITLE TO CERTAIN PROPERTY, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report from the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds in regard to a certain plat of land in the city of Washington, D. C., shown by old records to be the property of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

PENSION EXAMINERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the House, a report from the Commissioner of Pensions showing the special examiners originally appointed under the act of March 3, 1884, and also showing what changes have been made; which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to withdraw papers without leaving copies in the following cases:

To Mr. HOPKINS, of New York, in the case of Romantus Lake;

To Mr. RUSK, papers relating to the bill (H. R. 2441) for the relief of James Hooper; and

To Mr. HALL, papers filed in support of the bill (H. R. 11843) granting a pension to William H. Malorie.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. GRIMES, on account of sickness.

RIGHT OF WAY ACROSS FORT HAYS MILITARY RESERVATION.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, by unanimous consent, the Committee of the Whole House was discharged from the consideration of the bill (S. 3696) granting a right of way across the Fort Hays military reservation; and the same was ordered to remain on the Speaker's table.

WYOMING MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, while it will not enable me to secure the passage of my own bill, yet I wish to withdraw my objection to the bill (H. R. 10028) granting to the Wyoming Midland Railway Company the right of way through the Wind River or Shoshone Indian reservation, and ask that it may remain on the Speaker's table for the present.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I understand the gentleman from Pennsylvania will withdraw his demand for the regular order, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN] withdraws his objection to the bridge bill called up by the gentleman from Georgia.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Pennsylvania has just demanded the regular order.

Mr. RANDALL. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker, to the consideration of the Arkansas bridge bill, provided it does not lead to debate.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3728) authorizing the Midland Railroad Company to build a bridge over White River at Aberdeen, Ark.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. LYNCH. I object.

VETO MESSAGE—GEORGE COLWELL.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President.

The Clerk read as follows:

To the House of Representatives:

I return without approval House bill No. 12047 entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to George Colwell."

The record shows that this beneficiary was enrolled in the military service August 10, 1862, and was mustered out June 1, 1865. There is no record of any disability during the service. He was pensioned at the rate of $2 a month for a dog bite just above the ankle in September, 1865. Three months after his discharge he strained the knee of the leg which had been bitten. In 1887 he applied for an increase of pension, alleging increased disability. This increased disability appears plainly to be the result of the strain or injury to the knee and in no way connected with the bite for which he was pensioned.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 26, 1888.

During the reading,

Mr. MILLS said: I ask by unanimous consent, that these messages of the President be permitted to lie on the table, and we proceed with the matter pending last night.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask the message be read.

The SPEAKER. If the reading is insisted upon, the gentleman has the right to have it read.

The reading of the message was concluded.

Mr. MATSON. I ask, by unanimous consent, that the message lie on the table until the special order is disposed of.

The SPEAKER. There is no special order. There was a matter pending when the House took a recess yesterday evening. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana that the message lie on the table? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MATSON. If there are any other messages of a similar nature I ask unanimous consent that they remain on the Speaker's table until this order has been disposed of.

The SPEAKER. There are other Executive communications which the Chair will lay before House.

MADAGASCAR AFFAIRS AND BARCELONA AND BRUSSELS EXPOSITIONS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following messages from the President; which were severally referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and, with the accompanying papers, ordered to be printed:

To the House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, in response to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 21st of December last, a report of the Secretary of State and accompanying documents touching affairs in Madagascar.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 27, 1889.

To the House of Representatives:

I have the honor to transmit herewith a report of the Secretary of State, respecting the representation of the United States at the Barcelona Exposition of 1888.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
